INVESTIGATION OF WHITEWATER DEVELOPMENT CORPORATION AND RELATED MATTERS

VOLUME XIII

WEDNESDAY, FEBRUARY 14, 1996

U.S. SENATE,
COMMITTEE ON BANKING, HOUSING, AND URBAN AFFAIRS,
SPECIAL COMMITTEE TO INVESTIGATE WHITEWATER
DEVELOPMENT CORPORATION AND RELATED MATTERS,
*Washington, DC.

The Committee met at 10:20 a.m., in room 216 of the Hart Senate Office Building, Senator Alfonse M. D'Amato (Chairman of the Committee) presiding.

OPENING COMMENTS OF CHAIRMAN ALFONSE M. D'AMATO

The CHAIRMAN. The Committee will come to order.

Mr. Jennings, Ms. Dickey, please stand to take the oath.

[Whereupon, Alston Jennings, Sr., Former Partner at the Wright, Lindsey & Jennings Law Firm; and Helen Dickey, Database Administrator at the White House, Former Staff Assistant in the Social Office; were called as witnesses and, having first been duly sworn, were examined and testified as follows:]

The CHAIRMAN. Mr. Jennings, you have a statement that you would like to make to the Committee before we start?

Mr. JENNINGS. Yes, sir, I do.

The CHAIRMAN. We would be pleased to receive that statement.

Mr. JENNINGS. I will make it as brief as possible.

The CHAIRMAN. Take your time.

SWORN TESTIMONY OF ALSTON JENNINGS, SR. FORMER PARTNER, WRIGHT, LINDSEY & JENNINGS

Mr. JENNINGS. I have no firsthand knowledge whatsoever concerning Whitewater. I do not know and have never met or talked to James B. McDougal or Susan McDougal. I have never had any contact or connection whatsoever with Madison Guaranty or Madison Financial before September 2, 1987, when I filed a lawsuit against them on behalf of Seth Ward.

I have no firsthand knowledge of any matters concerning the White House Travel Office, the suicide of Vince Foster, any relationship between any lawyer at the Rose Law Firm and Madison or any billing records with regard to representation of Madison by the Rose Firm.

I had never represented Mr. Ward before he employed me in 1987, to pursue his claim against Madison. I accepted that employment, filed and tried the lawsuit and recovered a judgment in Mr. Ward's favor.

Sometime in 1989, while the judgment in favor of Mr. Ward was being appealed to the Court of Appeals of the State of Arkansas, I cannot fix an exact date from memory, the RTC became a party to the litigation and requested that, since we had represented the FDIC and FSLIC, my firm and I no longer represent Mr. Ward, so I withdrew and have not represented him as his attorney since that time. I have remained a friend of Mr. Ward, and, as such, I give him advice from time to time.

I do not know why I'm here.

The CHAIRMAN. Ms. Dickey, do you have any statement that you would like to make?

SWORN TESTIMONY OF HELEN DICKEY
WHITE HOUSE DATABASE ADMINISTRATOR
FORMER STAFF ASSISTANT IN THE SOCIAL OFFICE

Ms. DICKEY. I do not.

The CHAIRMAN. Mr. Giuffra.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

Good morning, Mr. Jennings.

Mr. JENNINGS. Good morning.

Mr. GIUFFRA. You are a partner at the Wright, Lindsey & Jennings Law Firm?

Mr. JENNINGS. I am not at the present time. I was.

Mr. GIUFFRA. You were.

Mr. JENNINGS. Yes.

Mr. GIUFFRA. You were counsel to Seth Ward in connection with the Ward v. Madison lawsuit?

Mr. JENNINGS. Yes, sir.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Am I correct that Mr. Webster Hubbell recommended that Mr. Ward retain your firm?

Mr. JENNINGS. I believe I've previously testified that that was my impression that he had, although I wasn't sure that was the case.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Mr. Hubbell was Mr. Ward's son-in-law?

Mr. JENNINGS. Yes. Is still.

Mr. GIUFFRA. I think that's right. Do you know why Mr. Ward did not retain the Rose Law Firm?

Mr. JENNINGS. I was told by Mr. Ward that Mr. Hubbell advised him that he had a conflict of interest because of representation of Madison by the Rose Law Firm.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Now, sir, could you briefly describe Seth Ward's claim in the Ward v. Madison case.

Mr. JENNINGS. Mr. Ward had contacted the IDC with regard to certain property. Originally, as I understand it, the contact was to see if the IDC would grant an easement across some of the property so that some property that Madison owned south of there would no longer be landlocked.

After ascertaining that the easement would not be granted but that the property was for sale, Mr. Ward then reported that to Mr.

McDougal. All of this now is what Mr. Ward has told me, you understand. I had nothing to do with any of this. Mr. McDougal asked him what they wanted for it, he said $3 million. And Mr. McDougal said that's too much.

Mr. Ward reported back to the IDC that McDougal wasn't interested at that price. Later, a lesser price was named of $1,750,000, as I recall, which Mr. Ward took to Mr. McDougal and said this is really a good deal, the property is worth more than that, and Mr. McDougal said would you join with me with Madison in buying the property, and Mr. Ward said yes. In fact, he said if you don't want the deal, I'm going to take it myself.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Then did Mr. Ward enter into an agreement with Mr. McDougal with regard to certain commissions that would be payable to Mr. Ward on the land as it was sold?

Mr. JENNINGS. Yes, sir.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Mr. Ward was to receive 10 percent commission on commercial land and 4 percent on sales of residential property?

Mr. JENNINGS. I think that is correct.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Now at some point later, there was a dispute as to how much money Mr. Ward was owed on those commissions; is that correct?

Mr. JENNINGS. That's correct.

Mr. GIUFFRA. I think that both Madison and Ward agreed that Mr. Ward was owed at least $300,000?

Mr. JENNINGS. That was what the testimony reflected.

Mr. GIUFFRA. And the issue in contention was whether Mr. Ward was owed more than $300,000?

Mr. JENNINGS. That's the lawsuit as I presented it.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Madison claimed in its defense that a property called Holman Acres represented Mr. Ward's commission?

Mr. JENNINGS. I don't believe that's accurate, but I think that somebody might interpret some of the testimony of Mr. Latham to be to that effect. I did not so interpret it, but in any event, the jury didn't buy that theory, if that was a theory.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Now during the litigation of the Ward v. Madison case, were you aware as to whether Mrs. Clinton had performed any services in connection with the IDC Castle Grande project?

Mr. JENNINGS. I have no knowledge if—absolutely no knowledge if that was the fact.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Were you aware during the trial that Mrs. Clinton had drafted a May 1, 1986 option agreement giving Madison the right to purchase the so-called Holman Acres parcel?

Mr. JENNINGS. I was not aware of it if it is a fact.

Mr. GIUFFRA. You know Mrs. Clinton reasonably well?

Mr. JENNINGS. Yes, I do.

Mr. GIUFFRA. You have litigated a number of cases with Mrs. Clinton?

Mr. JENNINGS. Three, I believe.

Mr. GIUFFRA. You consider Mrs. Clinton to be a fine attorney?

Mr. JENNINGS. Yes, I do.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Since Mr. Clinton became President in January 1993, you've been to the White House on two occasions; right?

Mr. JENNINGS. Actually, I believe it's three.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Three?

Mr. JENNINGS. Yes.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Were these visits all after the death of Vince Foster, which was July 20, 1993?

Mr. JENNINGS. No, one of them is bound to have been before the death of Vince Foster because I saw Vince Foster at the White House on that occasion.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Then there were two visits after Vince Foster's death?

Mr. JENNINGS. That's correct.

Mr. GIUFFRA. During the second visit and the first after Mr. Foster's death, you met with Mrs. Clinton; is that right?

Mr. JENNINGS. Yes, sir.

Mr. GIUFFRA. And the purpose of that visit was to see the White House?

Mr. JENNINGS. Well, primarily, and say hello to Mrs. Clinton.

Mr. GIUFFRA. During that visit, did you discuss with Mrs. Clinton anything relating to the Ward v. Madison case?

Mr. JENNINGS. I did not.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Later on in August 1995, did you receive a phone call from a man named David Kendall?

Mr. JENNINGS. I can't remember whether I did or one of my partners did.

Mr. GIUFFRA. That would be Mr. Tisdale?

Mr. JENNINGS. That's correct.

Mr. GIUFFRA. But you ended up having a telephone conversation with Mr. Kendall?

Mr. JENNINGS. I am not sure whether I did or not. We may have communicated through Mr. Tisdale. It's possible that I did but I do not specifically recall the conversation.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Did you have an understanding that Mr. Kendall was the Clintons' attorney with regard to the Whitewater/Madison matters?

Mr. JENNINGS. I knew he was an attorney for the Clintons, yes.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Personal attorney for the Clintons?

Mr. JENNINGS. Yes.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Now was it your understanding that Mr. Kendall wished to speak to you about a writing or some book or article that was to be published that claimed that Mrs. Clinton was not a good attorney?

Mr. JENNINGS. That was the general idea, yes.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Mr. Kendall wanted to speak to you to sort of refute the claims that were going to be made in this book?

Mr. JENNINGS. That's my understanding, yes.

Mr. GIUFFRA. And—

Mr. JENNINGS. I didn't know whether it was a book or what it was. He suggested through Mr. Tisdale that they had anticipated some attack on the First Lady concerning her ability as a lawyer, and I, of course, having had experience, said I would be happy to furnish information to them.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Did Mr. Kendall ask you to take any steps in terms of refuting these charges?

Mr. JENNINGS. I don't recall that he asked me to. I did take some.

Mr. GIUFFRA. What steps did you take, sir?

Mr. JENNINGS. I contacted people that I knew that had experience with Mrs. Clinton as a lawyer and people who were very knowledgeable litigators themselves to see what their opinion was of Mrs. Clinton.

Mr. GIUFFRA. During these initial contacts with David Kendall, do you have any understanding as to why Mr. Kendall was the person who was contacting you and not someone from the White House staff?

Mr. JENNINGS. I understood that he was an attorney for the President and the First Lady.

Mr. GIUFFRA. But he was the attorney—did you understand for Whitewater and Madison matters or just—

Mr. JENNINGS. I don't know whether his representation is limited to that or not, I'm sorry.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Did there come a time when Mr. Kendall asked you to come to Washington to meet with the First Lady?

Mr. JENNINGS. Again, I don't know whether he asked me to or whether I volunteered to, but the meeting did come about.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Now on the date that you went to the White House and met with Mrs. Clinton, you first went to Mr. Kendall's office at the law firm of Williams & Connolly?

Mr. JENNINGS. That's correct.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Then you went to the White House to meet with Mrs. Clinton?

Mr. JENNINGS. Mr. Kendall and I went to the White House together, yes.

Mr. GIUFFRA. If we could put up on the Elmo a document we received from the White House, this is S20085. This is something called a Waves Log, White House Visitors Log, and it indicates that Mr. Kendall arrived at the White House on August 9, 1995, at approximately 3:57 p.m. and he was to visit the First Lady. This particular entry indicates that you arrived on the 10th at the same time, 3:57 p.m., to visit with the First Lady.

We received a letter last night, this was to Mr. Dinh of the Special Committee, from Miriam Nimitz. Let's put up on the Elmo the document bearing Bates number S20557. This record indicates that you visited with Mrs. Clinton on the 9th of August and not the 10th of August. We were advised by the White House late last night that the first record we obtained was from the computer database and, in fact, there was a glitch in the electronic record-keeping which resulted in the appearance of the August 10th entry and that the correct inference that should be drawn and the inference that the White House is drawing is that you went with Mr. Kendall on August 9th and you both went to the White House on that date. Do you have any reason to question that?

Mr. JENNINGS. None whatsoever. When they asked me about a visit on the 10th in my deposition, I believe I told them that since they had a record, that I couldn't quarrel with that date, and I certainly don't quarrel with it now, because I have no independent recollection of the date. I recall the visit but I don't recall the date.

Mr. GIUFFRA. The White House, it seem the Committee—everyone seems to be settling on August 9th as the correct time based on the records.

Mr. JENNINGS. That suits me fine.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Now, sir, prior to the meeting, did you prepare a memo discussing certain cases that you had participated in with Mrs. Clinton?

Mr. JENNINGS. I believe that I prepared a memo that listed three cases in which we had been adversaries, two cases in which I had appeared in court while she was also appearing, although we were not adversaries, and I believe I listed three names of individuals, lawyers, and a judge who would state that Mrs. Clinton was a very able trial lawyer.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Where was this meeting held with Mrs. Clinton and Mr. Kendall, where at the White House?

Mr. JENNINGS. The only thing I remember is that the room we were in was identified as either—I thought it was identified as the War Room during the Administration of President Roosevelt. I now have reason to believe that perhaps he really said it was—I was really told it was the Map Room during the World War II. That's the only thing I know about it.

Mr. GIUFFRA. This meeting lasted approximately 20 minutes to a half hour?

Mr. JENNINGS. That's my recollection. I wouldn't want to say that that was not—was entirely—it could have been more or less. I don't remember that.

Mr. GIUFFRA. To the best of your recollection, sir, what do you recall discussing with Mrs. Clinton during this meeting?

Mr. JENNINGS. I remember discussing the cases that we had tried against each other. I remember specifically discussing the period of a week that we took depositions in London. Other than that, I think our discussion was just a social visit.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Was Mr. Kendall taking notes during this meeting?

Mr. JENNINGS. I haven't the slightest idea. I don't think so.

Mr. GIUFFRA. And again, do you have any understanding as to why Mr. Kendall was present at the meeting instead of perhaps a press person from the White House?

Mr. JENNINGS. That was their choice.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Now during the meeting, was there any discussion of Mr. Ward?

Mr. JENNINGS. None whatsoever.

Mr. GIUFFRA. No discussion of the Ward v. Madison case?

Mr. JENNINGS. Not at all.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Do you recall any discussion of Madison Guaranty?

Mr. JENNINGS. None.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Do you recall any discussion of the Whitewater Development Corporation?

Mr. JENNINGS. None.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Do you recall any discussion of an RTC IG report which had been released on August 4, 1995, pertaining to Rose Law Firm's legal work for Madison Guaranty?

Mr. JENNINGS. Absolutely not. The purpose of the visit was to discuss Mrs. Clinton's abilities as a lawyer, and that was what we talked about.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Now do you recall, sir, that in August 1995, there were hearings going on in this room with regard to the Whitewater matter.

Mr. JENNINGS. I'm sure there were but I don't recall it.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Don't recall that. Do you recall any discussion of those hearings during your meeting with Mrs. Clinton?

Mr. JENNINGS. I do not.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Do you recall saying anything to Mrs. Clinton about Whitewater, or this Committee's investigation, or the Independent Counsel?

Mr. JENNINGS. Oh, I am sure I said something to Mrs. Clinton about knowing that she was taking a lot of hits that she didn't deserve and hoping she would keep a stiff upper lip or some words to that effect.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Did Mrs. Clinton say anything to you in reply?

Mr. JENNINGS. She said that she could handle it, something to that effect. I mean, she was—you know, she thanked me for being concerned but she didn't express any concern.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Now after the meeting, did you go back to Mr. Kendall's office?

Mr. JENNINGS. I don't believe so. Well, yeah, I think maybe I did.

Mr. GIUFFRA. During the entire time you were with Mr. Kendall, did he say anything to you about the Madison Guaranty matter?

Mr. JENNINGS. Not that I recall.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Did he ask you any questions about Mr. Ward?

Mr. JENNINGS. Not that I recall.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Now, you're aware, sir, that on January 4, 1996, certain billing records relating to Rose's representation of Madison Guaranty were found in the White House residence?

Mr. JENNINGS. Well, if you mean am I aware, I have seen newspaper stories to that effect, yes.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Following the discovery of those meetings, did Mr. Kendall make efforts to meet with Mr. Ward?

Mr. JENNINGS. You said "those meetings."

Mr. GIUFFRA. Excuse me. Following the discovery of those billing records in January 1996, did Mr. Kendall take steps to visit with Mr. Ward?

Mr. JENNINGS. According to the note, a telephone call from my secretary to Mr. Tisdale's secretary, on January 5, 1996, I advised Mr. Tisdale's secretary, my secretary probably did, that I had a meeting with Mr. Kendall and Mr. Ward on my calendar for January 11.

Mr. GIUFFRA. And Mr. Kendall came to Little Rock to meet with Mr. Ward?

Mr. JENNINGS. He did.

Mr. GIUFFRA. What do you recall about the meeting between Mr. Kendall and Mr. Ward on January 11, 1996?

Mr. JENNINGS. I recall that they discussed the matter of contacts with Mrs. Clinton and asked Mr. Ward about contacts with Mrs. Clinton.

Mr. GIUFFRA. What do you recall Mr. Ward saying to Mr. Kendall about contacts that Mr. Ward had with Mrs. Clinton back in 1985 and 1986?

Mr. JENNINGS. He said he had no recollection.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Did Mr. Kendall show Mr. Ward copies of Rose Law Firm billing records relating to Madison Guaranty?

Mr. JENNINGS. He showed him copies of something. I did not pay much attention to what they were. They very probably were billing records.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Even after seeing those billing records, Mr. Ward did not have any recollection of these conversations?

Mr. JENNINGS. Said he just didn't recall.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Mr. Ward, in all fairness, is an elderly gentleman at this point?

Mr. JENNINGS. We both are.

[Laughter.]

Mr. GIUFFRA. And these matters happened 10 years ago.

Let's put up on the Elmo a document bearing Bates number S 20561. This is another White House entry log. This indicates that Susan Thomases, who has testified previously before the Committee, visited the White House at 3:00 p.m. on August 9th. Do you know Susan Thomases?

Mr. JENNINGS. Yes, I know her. No, wait a minute. No, I don't. Is she from California?

Mr. GIUFFRA. She's from New York City, actually.

Mr. JENNINGS. Yes, I know the Thomases, yes.

Mr. GIUFFRA. She's a lawyer in New York City.

Mr. JENNINGS. Is she? I don't know, go ahead.

Mr. GIUFFRA. But you've met her in the past?

Mr. JENNINGS. I'm sure I have, yes.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Now, you were at the White House at approximately 4:00 p.m. on the 9th and the entry records indicate that Ms. Thomases was there at 3:00 p.m. on the 9th. Do you recall seeing Ms. Thomases at all?

Mr. JENNINGS. No, I do not.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Did Mrs. Clinton mention that Ms. Thomases was at the White House on the 9th?

Mr. JENNINGS. Not to me.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Ms. Dickey, just some questions for you. Now, you lived at the White House in the residence up on the third floor, I believe, from January 1993 until November 1994.

Ms. DICKEY. That's right.

Mr. GIUFFRA. You were working for a time as a Staff Assistant in the Social Office and later you were a Database Administrator?

Ms. DICKEY. That's right.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Would you sometimes use the Exercise Room on the third floor?

Ms. DICKEY. Yes.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Let's put up on the Elmo the map of the third floor of the White House. Room 319 is something called the Book Room?

Ms. DICKEY. That's right.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Could you just describe the Book Room for the Committee.

Ms. DICKEY. To the best of my recollection, the Book Room was used to—it had bookshelves on the walls and it stored books and I know that the videos were stored there. I know there were tables in the center. I don't recall what was on those tables.

Mr. GIUFFRA. In January and February of 1993, you catalogued some of the videos that were in the Book Room?

Ms. DICKEY. That's right.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Who was the person at the White House who primarily used the Book Room?

Ms. DICKEY. I know that Capricia Marshall used it and I know that Carolyn Huber used it.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Do you recall anyone else at the White House using the Book Room?

Ms. DICKEY. I know people had access to the Book Room. I don't know of anyone else that used it on a regular basis.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Mrs. Clinton's office was right next to the Book Room, is that right?

Ms. DICKEY. That's right.

Mr. GIUFFRA. And in order to go to the Exercise Room, you would pass through the Book Room?

Ms. DICKEY. That's right.

Mr. GIUFFRA. In July and August of 1995, I would like to direct your attention to that period because that's the period in which Ms. Huber has testified that—in fact, she found them in August 1995, found the Rose Law Firm billing records, but during the period of July and August 1995, you were frequently on the third floor of the White House residence?

Ms. DICKEY. That's right.

Mr. GIUFFRA. You would sometimes go there in the evenings, on weekdays, and sometimes on weekends during the day?

Ms. DICKEY. That's right.

Mr. GIUFFRA. You were sometimes helping a woman by the name of I think it's Barbara Feinman?

Ms. DICKEY. That's right.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Who was helping Mrs. Clinton with her book?

Ms. DICKEY. Right.

Mr. GIUFFRA. And Ms. Feinman was working out of Mrs. Clinton's office at that point?

Ms. DICKEY. That's right.

Mr. GIUFFRA. You would sometimes enter the residence to visit Chelsea and her friends?

Ms. DICKEY. Yes.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Do you recall entering the Book Room at any time during July and August of 1995?

Ms. DICKEY. I have no independent recollection of that. I think I testified earlier that I did not go in there. However, yesterday April Springfield, who was an Intern for the Social Office, received a subpoena and came up and was a little upset about it, and, you know, started going over in her mind what had happened, and she told me that on her first day, which was August 6, that I—she was a little nervous about being on the third floor and I gave her a tour which included the Exercise Room, but I do not remember that.

Mr. GIUFFRA. You were up on the third floor of the White House in July and August of 1995. Who did you see enter the Book Room during that time?

Ms. DICKEY. No one that I remember.

Mr. GIUFFRA. You've previously seen these Rose Law Firm billing records that were found at the White House?

Ms. DICKEY. Yes, I have.

Mr. GIUFFRA. They were shown to you at your deposition?

Ms. DICKEY. That's right.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Now prior to your deposition, had you ever seen these billing records at the White House?

Ms. DICKEY. Not that I remember.

Mr. GIUFFRA. So you never saw the billing records in the Book Room?

Ms. DICKEY. Not that I remember.

Mr. GIUFFRA. You never saw these billing records anyplace else in the entire White House complex?

Ms. DICKEY. Not that I remember.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Mr. Jennings, when you were at the White House on August 9th, you never saw these billing records; correct?

Mr. JENNINGS. No, sir, I did not.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Mr. Jennings, if we could go back to the Ward v. Madison case, am I correct that there were three agreements that Mr. Ward entered into with Madison, three iterations?

Mr. JENNINGS. There were three separate documents, yes.

Mr. GIUFFRA. The first agreement did not correctly state the oral agreement that had been reached by Mr. McDougal and Mr. Ward; is that right?

Mr. JENNINGS. According to Mr. Ward, they did not.

Mr. GIUFFRA. If we could put up on the Elmo Senate 30383 to 84, this was the second letter agreement, which was dated September 24, 1985. This represents the agreement between McDougal and Ward with regard to the IDC property and what Mr. Ward's compensation would be; correct?

Mr. JENNINGS. I can't tell for sure because I can't read it. If this is the second—

Mr. GIUFFRA. Someone is going to bring you a copy.

Mr. JENNINGS. Thank you.

This appears to me to have been the second agreement and was not the one that we sued on.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Now let's put up the third agreement, which is also dated September 24, 1995. What, sir, was the difference between the two letters?

Mr. JENNINGS. If I may have a copy, I can't read that.

Mr. GIUFFRA. We're having someone bring it right down to you.

Mr. JENNINGS. I understand. Thank you, sir.

It appears at first glance that the principal difference was that it makes reference to the 22½ acres located in the part of the northeast quadrant and so forth.

Mr. GIUFFRA. That's the Holman Acres property?

Mr. JENNINGS. Correct.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Who typed this third agreement, do you know?

Mr. JENNINGS. I do not know. I know from the testimony of Sue Strayhorn that she typed the first one at the request of Mr. Ward and I believe that's Mr. Ward's recollection. I do not know who typed the second or third one. I have information secondhand that this one was probably typed, this one or the second one was probably typed by—excuse me, was probably typed by Mr. Hubbell's secretary.

Mr. GIUFFRA. That was something you'd been told by Mr. Ward?

Mr. JENNINGS. No. I hadn't been told at the time. This is something that I learned within, you know, the last month or so. I didn't have any idea at the time of the lawsuit who had typed the last, the third document.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Let's put the option up on the Elmo, which is S 170 through S 174.

Mr. JENNINGS. I'm fairly familiar with that document.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Were you aware there were two versions of the option agreement, one reflected 6½ acres and then the second version of the option agreement reflected the entirety of the Holman Acres property?

Mr. JENNINGS. I learned that for the first time when my deposition was taken, I was quite surprised by that.

Mr. GIUFFRA. The option was never exercised; correct?

Mr. JENNINGS. Was not.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Did you consider the option to be an important piece of evidence at trial?

Mr. JENNINGS. Absolutely not.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Why did you not consider the option to be an important piece of evidence at trial?

Mr. JENNINGS. I was trying the lawsuit on the basis of a document specifically that had been signed by Seth Ward and Mr. McDougal, and I considered that to set forth the terms of the agreement and was trying the lawsuit to find out how much money Mr. Ward was entitled to on the basis of that agreement.

Mr. GIUFFRA. What do you recall was Mr. Latham's testimony at the trial with regard to the Holman Acres parcel?

Mr. JENNINGS. I think he testified that for some reason, an option that was not ever exercised represented payment to Mr. Ward of his commissions, and I consider that to be patently absurd.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Now isn't the reason the option was important to Latham was because there had been a promissory note that had been entered into by Madison and Mr. Ward for $300,000 with regard to the commissions?

Mr. JENNINGS. I don't know why the option was important to Mr. Latham. I know that there was never any contention at the trial that Mr. Ward was not owed at least $300,000 in commissions.

Mr. GIUFFRA. The question was whether he was also entitled to the land as well as the $300,000.

Mr. JENNINGS. None that I had any—you know, I did not recognize any such contention if it was made.

Mr. GIUFFRA. At the trial, did anyone from Madison put forward any evidence supporting Mr. Latham's theory with regard to the option agreement?

Mr. JENNINGS. No, nobody did.

Mr. GIUFFRA. There was no supporting evidence as to what the intent of the option was?

Mr. JENNINGS. Absolutely none.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Madison did not present any witnesses relevant to this particular theory with regard to the option at trial?

Mr. JENNINGS. Did not.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Mrs. Clinton was never asked to testify; correct?

Mr. JENNINGS. Oh, no. Of course not. That is correct.

Mr. GIUFFRA. No one knew that she was the person who had drafted the option until recently?

Mr. JENNINGS. I had no knowledge at that time who had drafted the option.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Had Seth Ward ever indicated to you that Mrs. Clinton had drafted the option during the trial?

Mr. JENNINGS. No, and he expressed surprise recently when press reported that she had.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Do you recall, during the course of your preparation for trial, investigating who had prepared the option?

Mr. JENNINGS. I'm sorry?

Mr. GIUFFRA. Did you investigate during the trial, in preparing for trial, who had prepared the option?

Mr. JENNINGS. No, sir. The option was not of any importance to me. I was suing on the basis of a document that had been signed by Mr. McDougal and Mr. Ward. Nobody has ever said that that isn't Mr. McDougal's testimony—I mean, signature. In fact, the testimony is that it is his signature and nobody ever contested that.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Was there any discussion of the option during the meeting between Mr. Kendall and Mr. Ward in January 1996?

Mr. JENNINGS. Not to my recollection, no.

Mr. GIUFFRA. There was no discussion of the option when you met with Mrs. Clinton?

Mr. JENNINGS. Absolutely not.

Mr. GIUFFRA. And it's your testimony that the meeting with Mrs. Clinton on August 9th strictly concerned her abilities as a lawyer and was intended to deal with this issue of refuting the claim that somehow her abilities as a lawyer were not up to snuff, the claim that was being made in this book?

Mr. JENNINGS. Obviously, sir, I cannot testify from memory that nothing else was talked about with Mrs. Clinton, but I can tell you that we did not talk in any way about Whitewater or Madison or Mr. Ward's lawsuit or anything of that nature.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Thank you very much, sir.

Mr. JENNINGS. You're welcome, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. Mr. Ben-Veniste.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Good morning, Mr. Jennings. Good morning, Ms. Dickey.

Ms. DICKEY. Hello.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Mr. Jennings, let me go back to the circumstances as you understand them in connection with the acquisition of the IDC property. If I understand your testimony, this property was considered to be extremely valuable and was the subject of hard arm's length bargaining between buyer and seller?

Mr. JENNINGS. Well, even more than that, it was also with the banks that had mortgages on the property. I think there were three different banks who had mortgages on the property in excess of the amount of the sales price.

Mr. GIUFFRA. So that when you say "in excess of the amount of the sales price," the sales price being $1.75 million?

Mr. JENNINGS. Right.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. And the mortgages which had been loaned by various institutions, not Madison Guaranty Savings & Loan but other institutions on this property totaled somewhere in the range of $3 million, if I understood?

Mr. JENNINGS. I believe that's the reason the $3 million figure was first mentioned, they were trying to get the banks out and in the clear, but I do not have actual knowledge of the amount of those loans, but I know they were in excess of $1,750,000.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. So the lenders and possibly the banks which were secured by the property itself took a loss in connection with the sale of this property to Madison?

Mr. JENNINGS. That's certainly my understanding.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Do you have any understanding, did Mr. Ward ever tell you that Mrs. Clinton had anything whatsoever to do with the acquisition of the property?

Mr. JENNINGS. He did not tell me any such thing.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. How was this property referred to by you and Mr. Ward and, indeed, during the trial of the case between Mr. Ward and Madison Guaranty where you represented Mr. Ward? Was it referred to as IDC?

Mr. JENNINGS. Yes, sir.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Was it ever referred to as Castle Grande?

Mr. JENNINGS. Castle Grande was a very small part of the purchase. It is my understanding that it was a trailer park, it was residential, and nobody referred to the entire transaction as Castle Grande.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. In the trial which occurred in 1989, was it?

Mr. JENNINGS. No, sir, it was 1988.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. In August 1988?

Mr. JENNINGS. August 30 and 31, 1988.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Thank you. In the trial of the case, the property which was underlying the dispute between the parties was referred to as IDC; is that correct?

Mr. JENNINGS. That is correct, I have reviewed that transcript. Naturally, I didn't memorize it, but I don't believe there was any reference to Castle Grande, other than that it was a small part of the transaction.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Would you provide us with your understanding of Mr. Ward's participation in the negotiations for the purchase of the property at this bargain price, or what was considered a bargain price at the time, and his subsequent involvement.

Mr. JENNINGS. Well, as I've said, he was asked by Mr. McDougal to see if he could get from the IDC an easement through the property because Madison, or McDougal, owned some property south of there that was landlocked. He went to Mr. Everett Tucker, who was a friend of his, and asked Mr. Tucker if the IDC would give an easement. Mr. Tucker said no, but we will sell you the property. So Mr. Ward said what do you want for it, and Mr. Tucker said $3 million. Mr. Ward went back to Mr. McDougal and said they won't give you an easement but they will sell the property to you for $3 million. Mr. McDougal said that's too much. Not interested.

Mr. Ward reported back to Mr. Tucker and Mr. Tucker said well, maybe we can do better on the price. He finally said we'll sell it for $1.75 million. Mr. Ward went back to Mr. McDougal and said this is a bargain. Since I am an employee and I contacted Mr. Tucker at your request, I feel duty bound to let you buy the property if you want to. If you don't, I'll buy it myself.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. What happened thereafter?

Mr. JENNINGS. Well, Mr. McDougal said he wanted to buy it, and he told Mr. Ward that he couldn't handle the entire transaction and asked Mr. Ward if he would take part of it. Mr. Ward said he would be glad to.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. And that resulted eventually in the agreement that you refer to as between Mr. Ward and Mr. McDougal?

Mr. JENNINGS. Yes, sir. As I recall the documentation, there was a deed to the south half—not exactly half, but the property south of 145th Street, a deed to Mr. Ward for the property north of 145th Street, an option executed between Mr. Ward and Mr. McDougal on behalf of Madison for Madison to buy from Mr. Ward the property that had been deeded to him.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Later, there was an option agreement entered into but not exercised as you've testified?

Mr. JENNINGS. That's correct, sir. That had nothing to do with the original transaction.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Tell us what your understanding of that option was in the context of what had gone on between the parties.

Mr. JENNINGS. I will have to tell you what happened and then if you want to know how I interpret that, I will be happy to do it. What happened was that Mr. Ward, and I believe the exact date was March 31, 1986, borrowed $400,000 from Madison. He had been requesting payment of his commissions and he had been told that Madison didn't have the money to pay them.

He had some need, he had some transaction he wanted to enter into that he needed money for, and also since it was generally agreed that he was entitled to, at least, $300,000 for his commissions, he borrowed $400,000.

The deal that he had planned to make with the $100,000 of that fell through, so he paid them back the $100,000, leaving a balance on the note of $300,000. My best recollection also is that some of the proceeds of that note were used to pay an earlier note that Mr. Ward had given to Madison.

Then later—this would have been according to the date on the option, I believe it was May 1—

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. It was dated May 1st, but if you will—see, it is notarized as of the 5th, I believe.

Mr. JENNINGS. OK. In any event, Mr. McDougal wanted to be in the position to buy that property for $400,000 if—it had been mortgaged to secure the $400,000 loan, which is now $300,000, if Mr. Ward elected to pay off the note and satisfy the mortgage, then Mr. McDougal, as I understand it, still wanted to be in the position to acquire that property for $400,000 if he could get it. That's why he asked for the option.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Now at the trial of Ward v. Madison in which you represented Mr. Ward, the question has come up as to whether this option agreement was somehow an important question in the trial. You have explained the reason why you understood the option was entered into. Was there any interest whatsoever in who drafted that option agreement at the trial?

Mr. JENNINGS. Absolutely not.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. You chuckle. Does the law in Arkansas provide for a Parole Evidence Rule?

Mr. JENNINGS. Yes, sir, it does. When Mr. Latham testified as to his understanding about what the agreement was, I objected on the ground that he was attempting to vary the terms of a written agreement by parole evidence, which is absolutely improper, and the judge, and don't ask me why, he overruled the objection, but in the instructions to the jury by the court, there was never any instruction with regard to any variation of the terms of the written agreement by parole.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. The Parole Evidence Rule applies to an executed document and essentially forecloses oral testimony about the agreement?

Mr. JENNINGS. Any testimony that is designed to question the terms of the agreement or vary the terms of the agreement based upon parole is inadmissible.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. And in that regard, the subject of the court's ruling was with respect to the initial September 24th agreement. I take it no one attempted to advance some parole evidence with respect to the option agreement?

Mr. JENNINGS. They had interpreted Mr. Latham's testimony to the effect, to mean that the agreement with regard to Holman Acres took the place of the agreement with regard to commissions. And that certainly wasn't what the written agreement said, and nobody other than Mr. Latham even suggested that Mr. McDougal and Mr. Ward hadn't agreed to what the written agreement said that they had agreed to.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. This Holman Acres was considered to be the most valuable portion of the IDC property?

Mr. JENNINGS. Well, in the sense that the total transaction was a million and three-quarters, and the parties valued Holman Acres at $400,000, so it's—

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Acre for acre almost?

Mr. JENNINGS. It was what, 23 percent of the value of the entire transaction. That's the only answer I can give you. There was no other single piece of property that I know of that was—oh, yes, I take that back, excuse me. My recollection is bad. The sewer and water system was valued at much higher than $400,000.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Because there was a commercial enterprise on that property?

Mr. JENNINGS. That's correct. My recollection is that it was sold for $1.2 million, just that one piece, and I don't think they ever collected $1.2 million, but that was the sales price.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. So a small portion of the $1.75 total purchase price was sold for $1.2 million?

Mr. JENNINGS. Well, now again, was it a small portion? I don't know how much property it involved, but it was certainly a valuable commercial operation.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. OK. So let's continue on with the option agreement, because much has been made in these proceedings of the option agreement and the fact that Mrs. Clinton apparently spent something under 2 hours in connection with drafting it. If you notice, there are two versions of the option agreement.

Mr. JENNINGS. Well, I didn't realize that until my deposition was taken, but I now know that that's true.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Let me refer, if we could have put before you the deposition of Mr. Ward, which was taken pretrial in the Ward v. Madison case in 1988. At page 83, line 23. Actually go up to 21:

Question: I have two resolutions and two different pieces of property.

Answer: The resolutions they wrote had the wrong legal descriptions. After it was put together, I called that to Don Denton's attention, and he had Document 063 prepared, and it was signed by John Latham.

Mr. JENNINGS. I'm sorry, that is not what I have before me, I do not believe. What page was it?

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. It's page 83.

Mr. JENNINGS. Oh, 83, OK. Let me go back on that.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Again, it would start at line 21, the question.

Mr. JENNINGS. I notice that deposition was apparently attended by Mr. Rowe of my firm. I don't believe I was present.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Right.

So Mr. Ward gave these answers to the following questions at that time.

Question: So what happened was they put the wrong property description in the resolution?

Answer: That's right.

Question: And Mr. Denton substituted the first two pages, which you and somebody initialed. Is that John Latham? I can't tell. Jim McDougal? I see "S.W."; I assume those are your initials?

Answer: It would be John Latham, I guess.

Then it goes on, but the wrong property was designated in the original option agreement, and according to Mr. Ward, Don Denton, prepared the final executed agreement. Do you know who Mr. Don Denton is?

Mr. JENNINGS. I do.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Who is Don Denton?

Mr. JENNINGS. Mr. Don Denton was an employee of the Union National Bank at a time when Mr. Ward was doing business with Union National and Mr. Ward knew him through that relationship, and Mr. Denton was the one who suggested to Mr. Ward that Mr. McDougal might be interested in hiring Mr. Ward.

Mr. Ward at that time was retired and Mr. Denton thought that maybe he would like to get a little additional income, I guess, so Mr. Denton introduced Mr. Ward to Mr. McDougal, who Mr. Ward had never previously met.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. My point in this is that the first draft of this option agreement which bore the designation small "g," which in turn has been identified here as the Rose Firm designation for Mrs. Clinton's then-secretary was the initial draft dated the 1st, then it was superseded by a document apparently prepared by Mr. Denton, and that document was the one that was signed and notarized and was the document that was presented. Mr. Jennings is that consistent with everything you know?

Mr. JENNINGS. Yes, sir, that's consistent.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. So that—

Mr. JENNINGS. Except that I had forgotten about the first one entirely.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. If I understand your testimony, the option agreement itself was not a big issue at the trial, the explanation that Mr. Ward provided was accepted by the jury on the larger issues in the case, the court did not disturb that verdict, I take it?

Mr. JENNINGS. That's correct. Actually, Mr. Ward testified that he was entitled to $391,640, or $840, and the jury returned a verdict for $391,645, or $845, so they gave him $5 more than he said he was entitled to. I don't want to retry that lawsuit. I'm satisfied with the results.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. I imagine. Let me ask you, and this is quite a serious question. Did anything come to your attention during the course of that trial or your representation of Mr. Ward which suggested in any way, shape or form that anyone at the Rose Law Firm, much less Mrs. Clinton, had done anything improper or inappropriate in the representation of Madison?

Mr. JENNINGS. Absolutely not. I was only aware that the Rose Firm in some connection had represented Madison, and that was the reason that Mr. Ward didn't go up to the Rose Firm to file his lawsuit, but any information whatsoever about what they had done in connection with their representation was unknown to me, and I certainly know of nothing that they had done that was improper.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. If I understand your testimony, the question about who drafted the option agreement was completely irrelevant to the issues at trial in Ward v. Madison, and further, that any effort to present evidence, should it have been relevant, regarding the drafting of the agreement would have been barred by the Parole Evidence Rule?

Mr. JENNINGS. Yes, and I would have hoped that the court would have so ruled, but as far as I know, there was never any effort on the part of anybody at the trial itself to present evidence with regard to who drafted the option agreement. This was from a deposition which I didn't attend, but as far as the transcript of the trial is concerned, there was no evidence at any time about who drafted the option agreement so far as I can remember.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Let me turn to the question of your more recent contacts, now we'll zoom fast forward into the 1990's and your visit to the White House in August of last year.

Mr. JENNINGS. Yes, sir.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. There has been a report in The Washington Post with regard to what was said by you in your deposition. Did you discuss your deposition with anyone from the press?

Mr. JENNINGS. I certainly did not, and, in fact, I wrote to Mr. Dinh and expressed shock that the press had information about what I had said in my deposition when I had not yet been furnished a copy of it.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. I don't think—did you copy us in that letter? I don't think we have a copy of it.

Mr. JENNINGS. I'm afraid that I didn't, but I—

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Do you have a copy of that letter?

Mr. JENNINGS. Yes, I do. Just a second.

This was faxed to Mr. Dinh on February 9, 1996, and it does not show that I copied anybody else.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. May we borrow your file copy to make a copy of that?

Mr. JENNINGS. You most certainly can. May I read what I said, very briefly?

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Sure.

Mr. JENNINGS. It said, "Dear Mr. Dinh: Based upon a news story in today's Arkansas Democrat-Gazette," that would have been on the 9th of February, "and a telephone call that I received this morning from a reporter, it is apparent that the press has access to information concerning which I testified in my deposition. Since I do not have a transcript of my deposition, it is shocking to me that the press already has it.

"I respectfully request that I be provided with a copy of the transcript of my deposition in ample time for me to review it before my scheduled appearance before the Committee on Thursday, February 15, 1996. I believe I was advised that I was entitled to have a transcript 4 days before an appearance before the Committee. I could be mistaken about that, but that is certainly my impression."

I received a telephone call from Mr. Dinh apologizing to me for this having been made public before I had a copy and assuring me that I would have a copy promptly and that he would attempt to determine the leak.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. If we may have a copy of that, we would ask that it be made.

Mr. JENNINGS. I might add that I received my copy of the transcript about noon on Saturday, which would have been the 10th, I guess. And that was the first time that I had received it, and I did not discuss—very deliberately did not discuss what I had testified to with anyone.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Mr. Chairman, may we make this letter a part of the record?

The CHAIRMAN. Certainly.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Of importance is the fact that the news story that I referred to, which is dated February 9, 1996, there is a suggestion that your visit to Washington had something to do with the appearance in the first instance of billing records. The article is headlined, "First Lady Met Arkansas Figure's Lawyer," I guess that was you, "In Month That Billing Records Appeared," drawing some sort of connection between the fact that you came up for the purposes you've testified about—

Mr. JENNINGS. I know that's bound to have been Susan Schmidt. Excuse me. Go ahead.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. The connection that is drawn here is because you were in the White House in August, and because Ms. Huber recollected that that's the first time she came in contact with the billing records so far as she recollected in her testimony here, that somehow your appearance at the White House was associated with the initial discovery of those billing records.

Mr. JENNINGS. That is absolutely absurd. That did not happen, had no connection whatsoever.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Now there did come a time when in January 1996, subsequent to the time the billing records were discovered, that Mr. Kendall met with Mr. Ward in Arkansas.

Mr. JENNINGS. Yes, sir.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Was that the first time that you saw these billing records?

Mr. JENNINGS. I am not even sure that I saw the billing records at that time because I didn't examine what Mr. Kendall was showing to Mr. Ward, but I assume that that's what it was. If that's what it was, that's certainly the first time I had ever seen them.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Now, I have not read Mr. Ward's deposition which was taken in Arkansas on Monday of this week, but in that deposition he had very little recollection of conversations with Mrs. Clinton back in 1985 and 1986. In your meeting with Mr. Kendall and Mr. Ward, was Mr. Ward's recollection any clearer?

Mr. JENNINGS. No, sir. That is consistent with what I heard him tell Mr. Kendall.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Ms. Dickey, if I understand your testimony, you saw no billing records at any time, so far as you know, when you were at the West Wing of the White House?

Ms. DICKEY. I was in the East Wing of the White House.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. In the East Wing.

Ms. DICKEY. East Wing. In my office. And I never recall having seen those records.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Thank you.

Senator Simon.

OPENING COMMENTS OF SENATOR PAUL SIMON

Senator SIMON. Yes, I just wanted to get one question to you, Mr. Jennings. First of all, I thought your comment at the end of your statement, "I don't know why I'm here," was significant. Frankly, there are two of us here today who are in that situation.

Senator DODD. Three.

Senator SIMON. Three, all right. Maybe more.

Mr. JENNINGS. If I may interrupt, at least you're being paid for being here, sir.

[Laughter.]

Senator SIMON. My staff did a little biography of you and said you are a highly-respected lawyer in Arkansas, and if you will forgive me, you have a few years on you. Do you have any reflection on what we're doing here?

Mr. JENNINGS. Do I have any—

Senator SIMON. Yeah, reflection, on this whole process.

Mr. JENNINGS. Well, let me say that as the process has been reported, and I'm not talking about what has actually happened, but as it has been reported, there has been a great deal of inaccuracy in the reporting of what is happening here and what has happened with regard to all of this. For one thing, Mr. Seth Ward has been shamefully mistreated in the press. Mr. Seth Ward has not done anything illegal, and according to the jury, he was entitled to every penny that he didn't get, because later the RTC was able to attack collaterally that judgment; it wound up in a settlement by which Mr. Ward paid back some of what he had won in the lawsuit.

It has been published over and over again that Mr. Ward was indebted to Madison, that he didn't pay in amounts over half a million dollars. That is absolutely untrue. He paid every penny that he owed Madison.

In this lawsuit, and I don't know about Illinois, although I went to school at Northwestern, in this lawsuit, if there was any indebtedness of Mr. Ward to Madison, when he sued Madison under Arkansas law, Madison was required to counterclaim for any amount that they claimed that Mr. Ward owed them.

As a matter of fact, in our complaint, we said that Mr. Ward owed Madison $93,000 on a note, plus interest. When the verdict was rendered, it was stipulated that Madison was entitled to collect and have deducted from any judgment in favor of Mr. Ward the $93,000 plus interest, which was done, and that represented full and total payment by Mr. Ward of any amount of money that he owed to Madison.

Likewise, after the RTC collaterally attacked the judgment and finally entered into a settlement, they entered into a release in which the RTC has released Mr. Ward from any claims whatsoever on behalf of Madison, RTC, or anybody else.

Another thing that has greatly distressed me is that it has been reported that Mr. Ward's transaction cost Madison $4½ million and was a factor in Madison becoming insolvent. I would love to see the arithmetic on that, because the evidence in the lawsuit was that property that was purchased for $1,750,000, was sold for $3,600,000 and some. That is the reason that Mr. Ward was entitled to commissions in excess of $300,000. That's repeated, every story says that Mr. Ward broke Madison. The truth of the matter is that in 1986 when Mr. McDougal left, and I presume was asked to leave Madison, the Federal Home Loan Bank, as I understand it, took over the governing of the day-to-day operation, nobody contended that this one particular transaction had broken Madison.

I certainly respect the Senate as a body and I certainly respect the right of the Senate and all of its Members to investigate this matter, I don't question that, and I think it's appropriate, but I do think that this investigation ought to be directed strictly at getting to the truth.

Senator SIMON. I know the light is on, but you mentioned specifically Mr. Ward, his reputation being harmed. Do you think it is possible in the process that we have also harmed the reputation, just as Mr. Ward's reputation has wrongfully been harmed, harmed the reputation of Mrs. Clinton and other people in the process?

Mr. JENNINGS. Yes, that is my opinion. My wife thinks you are harming my reputation by having me here.

Senator SIMON. Well, and your wife may be correct.

Mr. JENNINGS. I realize that.

Senator SIMON. We are taking, and I don't mean to pick on you, Ms. Dickey, but we are bringing in secretaries, we are frightening people, people are piling up big legal bills, and I have to ask myself what is the purpose of it all. And if there is no real national purpose to be served, then it seems to me we ought to close up shop and issue our report to the Senate.

I thank my colleague for yielding.

The CHAIRMAN. Mr. Jennings, first of all, we thank you for your cooperation and we certainly take note for the record of your cooperation. I want to tell you that so we hope that your wife or no one else gets anything other than the fact that your appearance here is in an attempt to give the Committee an opportunity to gain facts so that we can complete a picture, and that's our job. Whatever that picture turns out, we're not in the business of attempting to put up a false picture, but to get the facts so the American people and the Congress have them. That's what our purpose here is.

And let the record reflect that you have been most cooperative at every stage, and we are deeply appreciative.

Mr. JENNINGS. Thank you.

The CHAIRMAN. Let me ask you this because I hear and I respect your views as it relates to the characterizations that do or do not fairly impinge upon Mr. Ward. The fact of the matter is, though, he did come to a settlement with the RTC, is that not correct?

Mr. JENNINGS. Yes, he did.

The CHAIRMAN. And he agreed to pay them back a substantial amount of money; is that correct?

Mr. JENNINGS. $335,000 is my recollection.

The CHAIRMAN. The reason he agreed to pay them back their $335,000 is why?

Mr. JENNINGS. Well, for one thing, Mr. Ward had fallen out of a second-story window when he was trying to fix the downspout on a house and had suffered a very severe injury. He broke several vertebra, he has very serious residual injuries. And he thought and his lawyer then, Tom Ray, thought that not only was this continuing litigation potentially injurious, further injurious to his health, but that before he got through he was going to spend more money on attorney fees than what was in dispute and that the best interest of Mr. Ward was to get the thing behind him.

The CHAIRMAN. Well, OK, but the fact of the matter is that he entered into a settlement and paid back $335,000 and there are those who contend, the RTC and others, that he had no legitimate claim to those moneys.

Now, I understand we work out settlements for different reasons and I understand why people may agree to handle litigation, but that's a substantial sum of money. And the fact remains, and we will demonstrate to you, and I don't think that maybe you had all of this information, we will show you rather quickly and vividly how it is that that entire process, the Castle Grande/IDC process, was estimated to cost the taxpayers $3.8 million.

It doesn't mean that along the way that some people may or may not have made some money and that various processes at that time did not cost money, and let me tell you, that has been very clearly substantiated. Even the RTC Pillsbury Report refers to this in some detail, and you probably don't have all of that, and I understand that.

Let me just assure you of one thing, and I certainly don't think that your appearance at any one place should be characterized as anything other than, for example, your appearance here today, as an effort to be cooperative. And you have never sought to delay, I want the record to indicate that, so if your wife is watching or friends are watching, Mr. Jennings has always been cooperative with this Committee in terms of everything, I've been advised, and we want people to note that.

But why the interest as it relates to your appearance at the White House on or about August 9, I guess, 1995, because that happens to be a day that Mr. Kendall was there, and you have explained and Mr. Kendall is deeply involved in the matter of attempting to gain facts and represent the Clintons as it relates to Whitewater and Whitewater-related matters. That is the same day, so you were there, Mr. Kendall was there. I think it's appropriate for us to ask what the circumstances are and were. And you've testified and you've shed light on that.

Mr. JENNINGS. I agree absolutely. I have no question about that.

The CHAIRMAN. So in other words, when you say you don't know what you're doing here, and let me just add, someone else that we know that was there who was a close adviser in this matter, in the related matters that we're looking at, Susan Thomases was there, and then——

Mr. JENNINGS. May I correct something that I said?

The CHAIRMAN. Yes. I am not saying, by the way, and that's why we asked if you met and you said you did not meet her on that day, and I accept that, but that is why we pursue the line of questions. It's not that we're just drawing it out and we've tried to bring people in to give them a difficult time or to impugn their reputations, and I just want to share that with you. We have an indication that Susan Thomases was there——

Senator, please. I really attempt to accord everybody the right to ask their questions, to make their presentations, as long as we're not abusive of a witness, I have allowed both sides and everyone to try to have a fair berth. I am not trying with exactitude to split hairs and everything. Sometimes people may make reference to one party and a thing that may be off.

I am just trying to say and assure Mr. Jennings and the public that we're not just bringing people in to harass them or to go over old things. We're trying to get the facts.

Mr. Jennings, in your testimony you've helped us.

Mr. JENNINGS. I hope so.

The CHAIRMAN. You have. Some people may have been looking to see what the implications were. I am trying to say, because I think we have a White House record that indicates Ms. Susan Thomases was there on or about that period of time on August 4th, earlier there was an RTC report that came about. Then we had Ms. Huber come in and testify that it was sometime during August, late July or early August, she thought it was in August, that she found the billing records.

And we know that you were there then, and I think it's a logical thing to ask, did these things come up, did you discuss them, et cetera. You have given your testimony. I believe you. I absolutely believe you. I have no reason not to. But I don't think it's fair—and others say this is ridiculous, there's no connection, why should we be bringing witnesses in. There is a reason, and we're attempting to get the facts. And if the facts clearly indicate that there was no connection, then that should be known.

Mr. JENNINGS. I agree.

The CHAIRMAN. We will attempt to do that. I hope we have reassured you and that is why I took the time to go through some of these things with you.

Mr. JENNINGS. I have something that I need to say. It's Patsy Thomasson that I know. If that's somebody different from Susan, I misspoke.

The CHAIRMAN. That is someone different and let the record indicate you did not indicate that you saw Susan Thomases on that day. We have reason to believe she was in the White House and no one says she was at this meeting. That's why we raised it.

Patsy Thomasson is someone that you know back from Arkansas, days in Arkansas?

Mr. JENNINGS. Right. If I had seen Susan Thomases, I wouldn't have known who she was. One other thing I would like to say, with the permission of the Chair.

The CHAIRMAN. Certainly.

Mr. JENNINGS. If indeed Madison lost $3.8 million, and I accept your statement on that, it was not Mr. Ward's fault.

The CHAIRMAN. Well, I think it is the operation of the bank itself and the manner——

Senator DODD. May he explain that a little bit? I was going to raise that issue. I think it is a very, very important point because the implications have been that Mr. Ward was responsible for that. Now, Mr. McDougal, that's another matter, but I would like Mr. Jennings to explain why he believes that to be the case.

Mr. JENNINGS. Well, because the property sold for $3.8 or $3.6 million. It was purchased for $1.75 million. Now, I wouldn't dispute the fact that Mr. McDougal could take those facts and transfer them into a loss, but I don't think Mr. Ward would ever have considered that the transaction would produce any loss. And as a matter of fact, the testimony, undisputed, was that Madison could not have made this purchase except for Mr. Ward, that he had the connections with the banks and with the IDC to bring about this deal.

Second, Mr. Latham testified on cross-examination at the trial that this was obviously a good deal for Madison. And that's why it seems—it's very difficult for me to see that anybody can blame Mr. Ward for any loss that Madison suffered.

Senator DODD. Very important point, Mr. Chairman. I think you will probably agree there is a distinction, I don't think that was drawn very well before, the implications that Mr. Ward was responsible, and I appreciate your response to that question.

The CHAIRMAN. We're not going to get into a back and forth on it but we will put up later on some—I don't even think we have to do that. I think the record as it relates to the manner in which—I have characterized the operation of the bank as a real criminal enterprise and I think at some point in time, that's exactly what it became. Whether it was because McDougal figured out that he couldn't save it and let's do what we have to or whatnot, but it certainly is something that defies, I think, description as to anything less than. It was just run in a blatant manner, without regard for taxpayers.

Senator DODD. I am not arguing that. Mr. Ward, his role, and I think he gets lumped into that everytime.

The CHAIRMAN. Let me say this to my friend and colleague. The repayment of the $335,000, and I heard Mr. Jennings, obviously there was, and I think if you look at the transactions themselves and begin to examine them, there was very real exposure on his part. You don't advise your client to settle for the amount of money that they are looking for, but——

Senator DODD. Could he respond to that a little bit? Is that——

Mr. JENNINGS. Beg your pardon?

The CHAIRMAN. He has, really, he has, and it's on my time. I want to try and move through it.

Ms. Dickey, this is a very delicate area. It concerns the questions with respect to Mr. Foster's death, the Minority and the Majority have agreed, in the interest of attempting to calm down some of the speculation that has taken place, to ask you if in your own words, because there have been statements made and assertions made, and some made publicly, that when you learned of Mr. Foster's death, that you contacted the Governor's Mansion to inform someone of that. I don't know who that was or wasn't. And then came the question of timing, what time you may have done that.

You have advised us as to that. I want people to know that, but in order to put this question as best we can and to get and ascertain the facts, we have decided, Senator Sarbanes and myself, that we would ask you to describe in your own words as best you can how you learned about this, about what time you learned about it, and then if you did make a subsequent notification to somebody, what time did you make that. I hope you don't find that offensive.

Ms. DICKEY. That's fine.

The CHAIRMAN. We want to try to clarify. Would you tell us?

Ms. DICKEY. Certainly.

The CHAIRMAN. Thank you.

Ms. DICKEY. I watched the President on Larry King Live the night of July 20, 1993, in the Solarium of the White House on the third floor. When that program was over, the doorman who works in the Usher's office, whose name is John Fanning, came up to the Solarium and informed me that Vince Foster had in fact committed suicide and his body had been found. To the best of my recollection, that was around 10:00 Eastern Time on the night of July 20.

Vince Foster was very close to our family, lived next door to them in Little Rock. It was a very personal thing for me. I immediately started to cry and became hysterical, went down to the second floor to see if the President was there. He was not there. I made a phone call to my mother, who was in Virginia. I made a phone call to my father, who was in Atlanta, Georgia.

I then went back up to the third floor. I don't know how much time I spent there. I went back down to the second floor, found the President there. He told me that he had shot himself in a park. I went back upstairs to the third floor. I don't know how much time had elapsed. I found out at 10:00 p.m. My best recollection is that I did not make the second series of phone calls until at least 10:20. I then called Ann Stock, who is the Social Secretary and my boss at the time. I called Ann McCoy, who I reported to at the Governor's Mansion, who had been a friend for a long time who also knew Mr. Foster, and lived down the street. And then I did call the Governor's Mansion.

The CHAIRMAN. So it was well after 10:00 p.m.?

Ms. DICKEY. My best estimation that I called the Governor's Mansion was 10:30 p.m.

The CHAIRMAN. I apologize to you for bringing this up, but the Majority and the Minority thought that it was important. We thought it was important to get a clarification and we're not going to go any further.

Senator Sarbanes.

OPENING COMMENTS OF SENATOR PAUL S. SARBANES

Senator SARBANES. Mr. Chairman, I would like to just go one step further.

The CHAIRMAN. Certainly.

Senator SARBANES. It has been asserted by some that when you called the Governor's Mansion in Little Rock, there was a difference in the time and you have now said it was after the Larry King show and, therefore, after 10:00 p.m.

It has also been asserted that you told them that Vince Foster had gone to his car in the parking lot and shot——

Ms. DICKEY. That's absolutely not true.

Senator SARBANES. Not true, OK.

Ms. DICKEY. I never heard that, I never would have said that because that was not the facts as I knew them at that time. I am absolutely positive of the timing of this.

The CHAIRMAN. I think that's the key element, and I don't wish to keep that aspect going any longer, nor did any of us personally want to bring it up but it's the kind of thing that I think we have an obligation, when we have a witness who has testified and who is here to testify and who has given us this information by way of deposition, that it is important to try to clarify that situation as much as possible. So we attempt to deal with some of these rumors that may have been circulating. I think to that extent we have done that.

I thank you, Ms. Dickey.

Ms. DICKEY. Thank you.

The CHAIRMAN. Senator Sarbanes.

Senator SARBANES. If Senator Dodd would indulge me for just a moment.

Senator DODD. Certainly.

Senator SARBANES. Mr. Chairman, I'm concerned about this assertion that Susan Thomases was there that day. She may or may not have been, but the record I'm looking at doesn't demonstrate that. And I would like to pursue that. Now maybe we should put it up on the screen, because my understanding is that the record indicates that she had, as it were, an appointment or had been put on the list, but she was never issued a badge and there's no time of arrival or place of arrival for her, so that's the first point.

Second, this would indicate that the place she was going to, in any event, was in the Old Executive Office Building, and not in the White House residence, but——

The CHAIRMAN. Senator, I never said the White House residence, number one, and I was explaining to Mr. Jennings that there were a number of occasions and people who were there, including himself, including Mr. Kendall, that gave rise to us including a report that Susan Thomases was there. I didn't say—we asked if he met. He said no.

Senator SARBANES. I wasn't focusing so much on your comments as I was the questioning of Mr. Jennings earlier in which it was asserted to him as a premise that Susan Thomases was there that day and did he see her.

The CHAIRMAN. But he has indicated quite clearly that he did not see her. Nor would he——

Senator SARBANES. I'm raising the question, on what basis do we make the assertion that she was there. And if it's on the basis of this record, I don't think this record demonstrates that, and I guess I should ask Counsel about it, since they put—is this the basis on which we're making the assertion?

The CHAIRMAN. No, nobody is making—this record is an indication, speaks for itself and it has Ms. Thomases' name down there, "Susan Thomases," "visitee," it says "Curry, on," and it gives a time. Seems to me it's about 9:58, August 9th. Do you have a time there?

Senator SARBANES. 3:00, 1500. Go all the way over, Mr. Chairman, to badge. There was no badge issued and there's no time of arrival.

The CHAIRMAN. I don't know if every time Susan Thomases went in, she had to sign in, whether she had a badge. I mean, I don't want to get into characterizations, but we know that she had the ability to come and to go just about any time. I don't know what the purpose of this is, if it's to suggest that possibly this record that shows she was there, that she may not have been there, then—and we asked to ascertain from Mr. Jennings whether he met her. He said no. We accept that.

Now, you know, if the White House is deficient in keeping its records, then that's part of this.

Senator SARBANES. No, there is not a deficiency in the record. What this record shows, and I think that we need to be clear about that, is that she was put on the list to come, but it doesn't show that she came. They have no time of arrival for her. There may be other evidence that would show somehow she did come, but on the basis of this record, I don't think it can be asserted that she was there. That's the only point I'm making.

The CHAIRMAN. Fine.

Senator SARBANES. I think it's an important point.

The CHAIRMAN. We were attempting to ascertain whether or not Mr. Jennings did see her, and he said he didn't see her. As a matter of fact, I think thereafter, because there was some confusion as it related to a name that's very similar and that I have at times and I think others have at times have confused Patsy Thomasson, and Mr. Jennings corrected that and said, by the way, he doesn't know Thomases, he was thinking of Patsy Thomasson.

Senator SARBANES. Mr. Jennings, when did you hear from Mr. Kendall about these questions that were being raised about Mrs. Clinton's legal abilities? Do you recall?

Mr. JENNINGS. Sometime before August 9th, and I would assume that it was shortly before August 9th.

Senator SARBANES. Now after you got the call, you then made some inquiries to others about her legal abilities?

Mr. JENNINGS. Yes, I reviewed a card index in our office to refresh my recollection about the three cases that I recalled that I had had with Mrs. Clinton on the other side. I got some further details about that. Then I—well, actually one of my partners reminded me that she had been in a case that he and I had been in, although not as an adversary. And there was one other matter that, again, she was not an adversary, but it involved a question of a dispute within a corporation between stockholders, and I represented one stockholder and she appeared in that, but not on the other side from me, and I frankly don't really remember what, but I was impressed with the way she handled herself in court.

Senator SARBANES. Now, you thought on your own personal impression that she was a fine lawyer; is that correct?

Mr. JENNINGS. Yes.

Senator SARBANES. What did you hear from others as you inquired of others as to your opinion?

Mr. JENNINGS. They confirmed my opinion.

Senator SARBANES. Senator Dodd.

Senator DODD. Well, Mr. Ben-Veniste wanted to raise a question.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Let me just ask one further question. Maybe Ms. Dickey can help us with this, that the record that we have with respect to Susan Thomases reflects that there is a request for a visitor being Susan Thomases by a person named Curry. Do you know someone named Curry?

Ms. DICKEY. Yes, I do.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Who would that be?

Ms. DICKEY. Betty Curry, Secretary for the President.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. There is no indication of a badge number being issued or any other information that would suggest that Ms. Thomases, indeed, entered the White House grounds on that day, the 9th. What we have, Mr. Chairman, in other respects is a log of all individuals who came to the residence during the period in question, which would include the 9th, and Ms. Thomases' name does not appear on that log or does not appear on any record reflecting that she entered the residence.

So prior electronic records reflecting entrance and departure would indicate that at least there is a record made when Ms. Thomases, among I suspect a large other segment of the population, comes to the White House, and there is no such record available, so that the implication in this newspaper—in the question that was raised that Mr. Kendall was there, the First Lady was there, Ms. Thomases was there, is just not an accurate implication and premise for the question, based on the records that we have before us.

Now, Mr. Jennings, let me ask you to further elucidate on the issue of losses to Madison. In 1986, Seth Ward entered into the option agreement that is reflected in the document that we have shown you.

In 1986, the Rose Law Firm withdrew from any further representation subsequent to that event of Madison Guaranty. When, to the best of your knowledge, were the losses incurred that comprised this $4 million?

Mr. JENNINGS. I don't know, but I would assume that they occurred after the option was entered into.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. So the idea of associating the Rose Law Firm, much less the First Lady, with an institution that lost $4 million would be somewhat unfair if, in fact, the losses occurred subsequent to any representation by the Rose Firm?

Mr. JENNINGS. I would agree with that.

Senator SARBANES. Senator Dodd.

OPENING COMMENTS OF SENATOR CHRISTOPHER J. DODD

Senator DODD. Well, just very briefly, Mr. Chairman, and it goes really back to issues that have been raised previously, but I note back in August and September of last year, and it looks like The New York Post and Newsday stories that appeared, lengthy stories, "Did Mr. Foster Kill Himself in the White House Parking Lot" is the headline of this one story back in August, a wire service story in September, just a month later, sort of reflecting that same line of inquiry.

Ms. Dickey, you've been here now 2 hours. You have been asked about four questions. You were never deposed; is that correct?

Ms. DICKEY. No, I was deposed on Monday.

Senator DODD. Oh, you were?

Ms. DICKEY. Yes, I was.

Senator DODD. By this Committee?

Ms. DICKEY. By Mr. Dinh and Mr. Portnoy.

Senator DODD. My point being, and Mr. Chairman, if I could have the attention of the Chairman just for a second here, my point here with Ms. Dickey, she's been here a couple of hours, apparently was deposed earlier—

The CHAIRMAN. Senator, excuse me, I apologize.

Senator DODD. The point I'm trying to make, Mr. Chairman, Ms. Dickey has been here a couple of hours, she has been asked about four questions. Issues were raised back in August, in fact, in two papers in my colleague's State, The New York Post and Newsday, going to the question of whether Mr. Foster committed suicide in the White House parking lot and so forth. Here it is 7 or 8 months later, almost a simple phone call could have really answered these questions.

The CHAIRMAN. Senator—no, no, let me—

Senator DODD. Here we are for 2 hours having a witness here, three or four questions that could have been answered weeks ago and resolved.

The CHAIRMAN. Senator, the Committee, in its own mind and its staff, has resolved that.

Senator DODD. What's the point of having Ms. Dickey here?

The CHAIRMAN. Let me attempt, and let's get it out then. It was at the request of the Minority that this issue was raised so that in a public forum it could get the kind of attention necessary to attempt to answer that question, notwithstanding that there have been statements, et cetera, put out, and the Minority raised this and thought it would be appropriate and should be done, so I did not bring this up on my own.

I brought it up at their suggestion, since she was here, to try to cap that, to end that kind of speculation that might be getting the juices of the media going and inflamed certain people. In addition, I guess it's fair to say that there have been literally thousands of letters written to various Members of the Committee, to the Committee, phone calls, et cetera, saying by the way, there is this testimony, I guess there are tapes and whatnot that go around that say at 4:00 or 5:00 or at some time, that Ms. Dickey called Little Rock and therefore this whole story about how Mr. Foster died and when they learned of it was a contrivance.

We did not spend a great deal of time, and I think he's right, Senator Sarbanes suggested that we attempt to deal with this thing in a public way. So I think that what we have attempted to do is to bring some facts, and less of this wild speculation, the kind of thing that fuels the fire, and that is why I agreed with Senator Sarbanes to do it in exactly the manner that we did. I hope it was appropriate. It was not intended to be inflammatory. And again, it came as a suggestion from the Minority, from your side.

Senator DODD. Mr. Chairman, I wasn't privy to any of those conversations. It seems to me that frankly, as I say, first of all, the billing records a simple call, and say look, did you see them or not. If she did, you want to get her up and talk about it. If she says I don't know what you're talking about, then it's a very simple matter for the Chairman or someone else to say we have made an inquiry, staff has, Ms. Dickey says she has no knowledge to it, swear, do anything I want. But I appreciate wanting to get it on the record. Here are stories in August and September of last year raising the speculation.

Obviously when it's in the media, then it breeds even more speculation, so that what you get is then the story builds on itself. It's a simple enough matter, it seems, when that's out there to then call someone, talk to someone, bring someone before the Committee, maybe someone agreed to that. If they did, that's their business, I'll be glad to hear about it.

But even just the Chairman saying look, we have spoken with Ms. Dickey regarding these allegations, there is nothing to them. She says it was absolutely untrue, she made the call sometime around 10:30, that's the end of it. But instead we have the person sit here. Just the implications, as we know, of the witness at that red-carpeted table here, just has its own dynamic to it.

Now if the Minority or others insisted upon her being here, then I'll stand corrected.

Senator SARBANES. Would the Senator yield on that point?

Senator DODD. I'd be happy to.

Senator SARBANES. Let me just trace the history. Ms. Dickey was asked in her deposition about this question involving Vince Foster. Now that's technically outside the scope of our inquiry. But it was asked in the deposition by Majority Counsel.

It seemed to me that it having been explored in the deposition, and since she was here it was important to get the salient facts out on the public record because we have had this problem of leaks, selective leaks as it were, from depositions. So certain aspects of matters get leaked to the press and then you get stories that do not accurately reflect the deposition, so we discussed it with the Chairman and agreed that we would in effect get the basic and salient facts from Ms. Dickey, since she was here today.

Now, your point about the Book Room and whether that could have been done in another way, I think is a valid point but we got into this matter on a limited basis, since it's outside the scope, but since she was here, in order to try to deal with that speculation. I was particularly concerned that it be dealt with since in her deposition, Majority Counsel questioned her about this issue.

Therefore, I had to consider the possibility that in some way or other, that deposition would get leaked in some sort of selective way, and it seemed to me important therefore to get the facts out on the public record, since Ms. Dickey was here, and that's what the Chairman sought to do earlier.

The CHAIRMAN. I think if anything, Senator, it's a good faith effort on the part of the Committee in a bipartisan way to try to deal with something that was as speculative and could be as provocative as it was, and since Ms. Dickey was here. By the way, let me also say, both the Majority and the Minority are attempting to work out a manner—and I would hope that by the end of today if not by tomorrow morning, we are talking about a proposal as to how to deal with and speed the process in terms of those people who had access to the Book Room. Ms. Dickey was one of those who was there, et cetera.

Indeed, we believe that we can accomplish a great deal of that by way of interrogatories where necessary. We have already proposed a methodology, and I think we are very close to working out a manner by which to facilitate this. So I would mention that to my colleague, we are in the process of working that out.

Senator DODD. Counsel, did you want to make some comments on that?

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Only in terms of the fullness of the record on this issue. After this article appeared, Mr. Chairman, we obtained Ms. Dickey's affidavit. Do you recall, Ms. Dickey, submitting an affidavit in September 1995 to us?

Ms. DICKEY. Yes, I do.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. And that affidavit was consistent with your testimony here today?

Ms. DICKEY. Yes, it was.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. In terms of the time that you made this call. The whole thing arose because a couple of former Arkansas State troopers submitted affidavits that suggested that the call was much earlier, at 6:30 p.m., and that was the purported basis upon which we had this headline story, "Foster Shot in White House Parking Lot," and so forth, or "Foster Committed Suicide in White House Parking Lot." As a result of those affidavits, we then asked for the time records and the work records of the troopers in question, and then the attorney for the troopers said well, maybe the troopers didn't want to testify after all.

That's where the record stood with Ms. Dickey's affidavit, the lack of any documentation provided by the troopers to support this allegation of an earlier call to Arkansas at the time that Ms. Dickey was questioned and as Senator Sarbanes says, the Majority revisited this issue. So I think that sets out the chronology, Senator.

Senator DODD. Well, I appreciate that. Again, as I say, I was not aware that we had asked for it. But in cases where we can move this along, I'm sounding like a broken record, I know, to the Chairman, but here it is, no votes until the 26th. Just to move this process along, because just a couple of witnesses today and then as I say, a lot of this can be answered. I just think we ought to try and answer it if we can, put it in the record, and again, I respect those who want to have people come forward for various reasons, but it seems to me we can avoid that, then we ought to try to do that.

The CHAIRMAN. Senator, in an attempt to do just that, staff went down to Little Rock to interview witnesses, and the deposition of Seth Ward, which was taken on Monday, February 12th, will be made available in the printed depositions. That deposition was videotaped. We will work out an appropriate manner for those who would want to see the tape. I think it runs some 2½ hours. If any are interested, we will work it out under the supervision of the Committee here after we adjourn.

Senator SARBANES. And Mr. Chairman, I think for the record we ought to make the observation that the reason Mr. Seth Ward was interviewed in this way is because his health is not good and it was determined by both the Majority and the Minority that it was appropriate to receive his testimony in this fashion and not to impose upon him a trip to Washington and the strain and stress connected therewith. He's in frail health, I understand.

The CHAIRMAN. That is correct, I understand he's had a number of procedures, I think Mr. Jennings has indicated that, and so it was in an effort to move the process and to accommodate, recognizing his physical condition that we did this.

Senator Faircloth.

OPENING COMMENTS OF SENATOR LAUCH FAIRCLOTH

Senator FAIRCLOTH. Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

Mr. Jennings, one of the problems I have with this, so much of the things we hear here and have heard over the weeks just simply don't make good sense. I mean, we say the dates, we say the hours, we say the times, but yet when you look at it as a whole, it just doesn't make good sense.

Now, you flew to Washington in August for a 20-minute visit, you said, with Mrs. Clinton?

Mr. JENNINGS. My testimony was and is that I do not recall whether I had other business in Washington at that time.

Senator FAIRCLOTH. You did have other business?

Mr. JENNINGS. No, sir, I say I do not recall whether or not I did. I do not recall if that trip was made solely for the purpose of visiting with Mrs. Clinton and Mr. Kendall.

Senator FAIRCLOTH. You mean as recently as August you don't remember what you did in Washington, whether you came for a 20- to 30-minute visit, as you testified, with Mrs. Clinton or you had other business? You come to Washington that often?

Mr. JENNINGS. I come quite frequently.

Senator FAIRCLOTH. You don't know whether you came to see her or whether you came for other business?

Mr. JENNINGS. I know I came to see her. Whether I also had other business, I simply do not recall.

Senator FAIRCLOTH. Well, you join a long list of Clinton friends when you don't recall. Who paid for the trip?

Mr. JENNINGS. I do not recall that. I know I didn't.

Senator FAIRCLOTH. The purpose of this trip, so we heard earlier, was to testify or to say that Mrs. Clinton was a very competent and fine lawyer. Is that not right?

Mr. JENNINGS. That's the reason I talked to Mrs. Clinton, yes.

Senator FAIRCLOTH. Did you write a memo or anything to substantiate this?

Mr. JENNINGS. I wrote a one-page memo, as I have testified, in which I listed the cases that I had had an opportunity to either oppose Mrs. Clinton or to be in court when she was in court.

Senator FAIRCLOTH. Do we have a copy of that? Would you make a copy of it available to us?

Mr. JENNINGS. I don't have a copy of it. I assume Mr. Kendall does, or I don't know whether he kept it or not.

Senator FAIRCLOTH. So certainly you said in this memo, and testimony, that Mrs. Clinton is a good lawyer?

Mr. JENNINGS. I listed the cases I had tried with her that served the basis of my opinion about her capabilities as an attorney.

Senator FAIRCLOTH. All right. She was variously referred to as one of the top 100 in the country and whatever.

Mr. JENNINGS. I've heard that.

Senator FAIRCLOTH. But what I really don't understand is this, how this shrewd, smart, top-notch lawyer did not detect that these deals were sham deals that were being moved back and forth. Now it didn't take the bank regulators long to figure out that it was. And don't tell me there were not—you're talking about 10 percent real estate deals. Ten percent is an extraordinarily high real estate deal——

Mr. JENNINGS. Well, you know——

Senator FAIRCLOTH. —commission.

Mr. JENNINGS. I had nothing to do with that transaction.

Senator FAIRCLOTH. Wait a minute, so here Mrs. Clinton did not figure out it was a sham deal with these unbelievably high real estate commissions, and there were sales to insiders. I mean, this is what I'm trying to get to, the common sense of it. Why would Jim McDougal want to pay Seth Ward $120,000 to make a sale to Jim Guy Tucker, who he is with every day, his close friend?

As I understand it, Mr. McDougal and Senator Fulbright were close friends, but he paid $77,000 and some commission.

Immediately the bank regulators picked up on this and said it is a sham deal. Why would a lawyer as smart as Mrs. Clinton, who was right in the middle of it, not have figured out that the Castle Grande was a sham deal?

Mr. JENNINGS. I don't know what Mrs. Clinton knew, if anything, about the deal. I don't know anything about what Mrs. Clinton may have known. This took place——

Senator FAIRCLOTH. I know you don't.

Mr. JENNINGS. —before I ever had any connection with the matter at all.

Senator FAIRCLOTH. I understand that, but you said she was a smart lawyer and capable lawyer. You are a smart lawyer. You live in Little Rock. Would you not have picked this up as a sham deal if you had been on the inside?

Mr. JENNINGS. If I had thought it was a sham deal, I never would have represented Mr. Ward and brought the lawsuit. I had a piece of paper indicating to me that was the deal, it was signed by Mr. McDougal. Nobody ever questioned that it was signed by him. In fact, it was admitted and undisputed it was signed by him. I had no reason to worry about why the deal came into existence, but I knew it was made and I brought a suit on it.

Senator FAIRCLOTH. You didn't question why Seth Ward would—I mean, McDougal would be willing to pay $120,000 commission on a sale to Jim Guy Tucker?

Mr. JENNINGS. I had no idea of what sales had been made at the time I filed the lawsuit, and when I found out——

Senator FAIRCLOTH. You mean you filed a lawsuit without knowing what the commissions were supposed to be on?

Mr. JENNINGS. I filed the lawsuit upon the representation by Mr. Seth Ward that he was entitled under the agreement to in excess of $300,000.

Senator FAIRCLOTH. What did he bring you to show you that he was entitled to $300,000?

Mr. JENNINGS. He didn't bring me anything at that time.

Senator FAIRCLOTH. What if he had said $800,000, would you have filed it for that?

Mr. JENNINGS. Probably. I subsequently, by way of discovery——

Senator FAIRCLOTH. You file lawsuits pretty easy then, $300, $800, if he says I want to sue him, you sue him?

Mr. JENNINGS. I file lawsuits when I think a client has a meritorious cause of action and I figure we will find out later what the details are and that's what we did, and it's stipulated in the lawsuit by answer to interrogatories that they made sales totaling $3,600,000 and then we got details about it. I didn't have all that information at the time I filed the lawsuit.

Senator FAIRCLOTH. When you looked at the details, that didn't bring a lot of suspicion to you?

Mr. JENNINGS. Not the least.

Senator FAIRCLOTH. You were more interested in the lawsuit than you were in the reality of why McDougal would have paid a commission on these sales to his close friends?

Mr. JENNINGS. I didn't care why Mr. McDougal entered into that agreement. I only knew that he had entered into it.

Senator FAIRCLOTH. But in your heart of hearts, you knew it was a fake deal?

Mr. JENNINGS. I didn't know any such thing.

Senator FAIRCLOTH. Do you toss out $120,000 commissions when you sell a piece of land to your close friends?

Mr. JENNINGS. I don't sell land to my close friends or anybody else, and if somebody was——

Senator FAIRCLOTH. Mr. Jennings, you and I are old enough to know——

Senator DODD. If we could give him a chance to answer.

Senator FAIRCLOTH. —to come to the reality—now, he brought you a deal. You said you didn't even look at it. You said it was $300,000. If he had said $800,000, you probably would have filed it. There isn't a man in the world that has your business experience or mine that doesn't look at that list of commissions and sales to close friends and know that no reasonable businessman would have paid 10 percent commission to sell a piece of his property to his close friend. There's no reason for it, it doesn't make sense. I thank you.

Mr. JENNINGS. I might have looked at that and wondered why a businessman would pay a million—$1,200,000 for a sewer system, but I didn't know anything about it or what its value was. And I didn't have that document until after we had engaged in discovery in the lawsuit, but when I finally did see it, I didn't see anything strange about it.

Senator FAIRCLOTH. I don't see how you got to be your age and don't see anything strange about that.

Mr. JENNINGS. You may not understand it, but that is the fact.

Senator FAIRCLOTH. If I looked at that and didn't see anything strange about it, I wouldn't admit it.

Mr. JENNINGS. Well, that's certainly your privilege.

Senator FAIRCLOTH. That's all.

The CHAIRMAN. Mr. Giuffra.

Mr. GIUFFRA. If we can put up on the Elmo pages 124 and 125 of Mr. Ward's deposition, and probably this is an appropriate time to read it in the record.

Now it's your understanding, Mr. Jennings, that there was a $2 million profit that was earned in connection with the sale of these properties by Madison?

Mr. JENNINGS. In round figures. No, I was not under the impression that at the final windup that that was earned, but I was under the impression there had been sales totaling an amount that would have been about a $2 million profit.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Over what was paid by Mr. Ward and by Madison Financial to the IDC?

Mr. JENNINGS. Yes, sir, exactly.

Mr. GIUFFRA. At his deposition—

Senator SARBANES. Why don't we provide Mr. Jennings with a copy of the deposition.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. I suggest he might want to start looking at page 123 rather than 125.

Mr. JENNINGS. OK. Can you give me a page and line, please?

Mr. GIUFFRA. We'll start at page 122 because I think this is probably important to get on the record.

Mr. JENNINGS. I've got it.

Mr. GIUFFRA. This is Mr. Cole.

Question: And I take it, sir, if you take the $3.7 million total sales and subtract the sales price of $1.75 million, you're left with roughly $2 million in profit; is that correct?

Answer: Yes, sir.

Mr. JENNINGS. I'm sorry, could you give me a line?

Mr. GIUFFRA. This is between line 8 and 11 on page 122. Do you have it, sir?

Senator SARBANES. Why don't we just indicate and then let Mr. Jennings read through it on his own and then come back to the questioning. That might be better. Mr. Jennings, why don't you take a moment or two and just read—how much of it are you going to cover?

Mr. GIUFFRA. I was going to just do the last page, but when Mr. Ben-Veniste indicated he wanted us to go earlier, I am happy to do that in the interest of completeness. And if we could stop the clock, perhaps?

Senator SARBANES. Mr. Jennings, why don't you read through pages 121, 122, 123 and on over to the next page.

Mr. JENNINGS. All right, sir.

Senator SARBANES. This is Seth Ward's deposition. Obviously, you are not familiar with it. So I think you should take some time to familiarize yourself.

[Witness reviewed the document.]

Mr. JENNINGS. OK.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Senator, I think it may be helpful to read it, the whole passage.

Senator SARBANES. Line 8 on page 122?

Mr. GIUFFRA. Correct.

Senator SARBANES. Do you have that, Mr. Jennings?

Mr. JENNINGS. Yes, sir.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Let me start at the beginning, and this is Mr. Cole:

Question: And I take it, sir, if you take that $3.75 million total sales and subtract the sales price of $1.75 million, you're left with roughly $2 million in profit.

Answer: Yes, sir.

Question: And under your agreement with Madison, that's profit that Madison and Mr. McDougal was able to obtain, that they had not purchased the option from you and had you sold the property you would have had that profit; is that correct?

Answer: That's correct.

Question: And finally, the transactions that are listed there, and there are about a dozen of them including Fulbright, Jim Guy Tucker, Davis Fitzhugh, who negotiated those sales? Who arranged those sales of the property?

Answer: As far as I know, McDougal did.

Question: Did you have anything to do with that?

Answer: No, sir.

Question: And did you have anything to do with setting the sales prices of those parcels?

Answer: No, sir, I did not.

Question: Did you have anything to do with setting the terms of the financing that Mr. McDougal provided to those buyers?

Answer: I knew nothing of it whatsoever.

Question: And so your only role was that you felt you were entitled to a 10 percent commission on those sales?

Answer: And the principal being applied to my note.

Question: And that was the dispute that you had with Madison in your lawsuit at a later time, as to whether you were entitled to the—

Answer: That's correct.

Question: So if I'm understanding your testimony, Mr. Ward, when you sold Madison Guaranty the option on this property, the $35,000, you gave—

Just so everyone understands, Mr. Jennings. Mr. Ward had given Madison an option on the 650 acres, the north portion of the property, the IDC property, and he was paid $35,000 by Madison for that option.

Mr. JENNINGS. He was, after the lawsuit.

Mr. GIUFFRA. I'll continue:

The $35,000, you gave up the right to profits on the sales, but you retained the right to earn your commissions; is that correct?

Answer: Not entirely. The principal amount they sold for would be applied to my note and then I get 10 percent commission.

Question: Right. You would get 10 percent commission on the sale. Did you, when you initially entered into this agreement with Mr. McDougal, Mr. Ward, did you feel you were engaging in a sham or an illegal transaction?

Answer: No, I did not. I had no reason to think that.

Question: And—

Answer: If I had, I wouldn't have done it.

Question: And there have been some reports which, including in the hearings that we've been conducting in the Senate, that this IDC property ultimately caused losses to Madison Guaranty Savings & Loan of some $4 million. Did you play any part in the transactions that are described here that might have resulted in those loan losses?

Answer: No, sir, I did not.

EXAMINATION BY MR. GIUFFRA:

Question: The $2 million profit Mr. Cole referred to, that was—you don't know whether that's a real profit that was earned by Madison Guaranty, do you?

Answer: I don't know.

Question: Because if Madison Guaranty sold the properties to the various purchasers at inflated prices, and then fully financed those sales, they would not be real sales of property?

Answer: I wasn't involved in the sales or the sale price or how it was transacted.

Question: So you don't know whether the $2 million profit that Mr. Cole just referred to was an illusory profit?

Answer: I have no idea.

Question: You don't know whether that was—

Answer: Looking back from what I've read, in retrospect, I'd say that I assume the deals weren't on the up-and-up.

That's the end of the deposition.

Now, Mr. Jennings, if we could just briefly, go through the Castle Grande transaction, if we could put up chart number 1, which I think you have a copy of at your table. That one you have in your hand is chart number 1, in your right hand. You have it right there. That's on the screen right now.

If we could just briefly go through this transaction, sir, the way it was structured was that Mr. Ward would get the north portion of the property and Madison Financial would get the south portion of the property; is that right?

Mr. JENNINGS. That's my understanding, yes.

Mr. GIUFFRA. The north portion of the property consisted of 650 acres plus the sewer and water utility; is that right?

Mr. JENNINGS. That's my understanding, yes.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Now, Mr. Ward paid for his portion of the property with a $1.15 million nonrecourse loan from Madison; right?

Mr. JENNINGS. That is my recollection, yes.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Mr. Ward was bearing no risk in this transaction?

Mr. JENNINGS. That is correct.

Mr. GIUFFRA. So that if he defaulted on his loans, the only recourse that Madison would have would be to obtain the property back from him?

Mr. JENNINGS. Mortgaged the property to them in security for the loan, yes.

Mr. GIUFFRA. So his personal assets were safe if he were to default?

Mr. JENNINGS. If he were to default, the property would belong to Madison.

Mr. GIUFFRA. And Madison Financial then paid $600,000 for the 400 acres of the south portion of the property?

Mr. JENNINGS. That is correct.

Mr. GIUFFRA. If we could put up chart number 2, rather quickly after the closing of this transaction, which was October 4, 1985, Madison and Mr. Ward sold these properties. Throughout the hearings in the last several weeks, we have had discussion of these various transactions.

Senator Faircloth just recently went through some of the transactions and the commissions that were earned by Mr. Ward and that were the basis for the Ward v. Madison lawsuit. These sales involved a transaction to Master Developer, a $472,000 sale, upon which Mr. Ward sought in your case a $47,200 commission, another sale to Mr. Fitzhugh for $500,000, for which Mr. Ward sought a $50,000 commission, another sale to Mr. Tucker, for which Mr. Ward sought a $12,500 commission, another sale to Mr. Kuca for which Mr. Ward sought a $12,000 commission, another sale to Mr. Fulbright for $770,600, for which Ward sought a $77,000 commission, and then a $1.2 million transaction for which Mr. Seth Ward sought a $120,000 commission.

Now if we could put up on the Elmo the commission account due Seth Ward that's dated July 1, 1986. Mr. Jennings, this was an exhibit at the trial, this document?

Mr. JENNINGS. I guess it was.

Mr. GIUFFRA. This was a document that Mr. Ward prepared?

Mr. JENNINGS. I believe that's correct.

Mr. GIUFFRA. So that what Mr. Ward essentially did was he totaled up the sales prices that were generated by Mr. McDougal and then believed that he was entitled to 10 percent of the sales price?

Mr. JENNINGS. I would assume that's correct.

Mr. GIUFFRA. If we could put up chart number 3. Were you aware, sir, at the time you were litigating this case that the sales that I just identified, the Fitzhugh sale, the Tucker sale, the Master Developer sale, the Kuca sale, the Fulbright sale, and the Castle Sewer & Water sale were all financed by Madison Guaranty?

Mr. JENNINGS. I'm sure at the trial I was aware of that.

Mr. GIUFFRA. In fact, with the exception of the Fulbright sale, they were all fully financed by Madison Guaranty?

Mr. JENNINGS. I may have been aware of that at the trial.

Mr. GIUFFRA. These were not transactions in which the purchaser of the property put down any money?

Mr. JENNINGS. I assume that's correct.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Would you consider those to be real sales of property, if no money is being put down, and in fact these were all nonrecourse loans?

Mr. JENNINGS. At the time I'd have certainly assumed that any transaction with Senator Fulbright was not a sham transaction.

Mr. GIUFFRA. But the other five transactions, sir.

Mr. JENNINGS. And any transaction—I understood that Mr. Jim Guy Tucker was involved in the sewer and water utility sale through some corporation, I may be mistaken about that, but that was my information, and I would not think that that was a sham transaction.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Did you investigate during the course of the Ward v. Madison trial in seeking the commissions whether those sales, the subsequent sales upon which Mr. Ward was seeking his commissions, whether those were sham sales or not?

Mr. JENNINGS. I accepted the answer to interrogatory by counsel for Madison that there had been sales totaling $3,600,000 and some, and I didn't question that.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Who was the counsel for Madison, sir?

Mr. JENNINGS. A Ms. Shirley Bartlett and a Ms. Lyn Pruitt.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Now, sir, if the sales had been sham sales, OK, and that had been a defense that was raised at the trial, that would have affected Mr. Ward's right to those commissions; correct?

Mr. JENNINGS. If that had been raised at the trial and if the jury had found that that was true, then they would not have been entitled to return the verdict they did.

Mr. GIUFFRA. After you left the case, you had to recuse yourself after the collateral proceeding started in the appeal; right?

Mr. JENNINGS. Yes.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Did you follow the case thereafter?

Mr. JENNINGS. Certainly.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Were you aware of the fact that when the RTC took over the case, that an issue was raised and a defense was asserted on behalf of Madison, and actually the RTC, that Mr. Ward, an unclean hands defense was asserted?

Mr. JENNINGS. That what?

Mr. GIUFFRA. That an unclean hands defense was asserted.

Mr. JENNINGS. My understanding was that the collateral attack by the RTC was made because they cited a lawsuit that held that a transaction with a savings and loan that was not approved by the board of directors was invalid. And it wouldn't have made any difference whether it was a sham or not, it was the mere fact, as I understood it, that they contended that the board of directors had not approved the transaction and therefore it could not be enforced. That defense was never raised in the trial—

Mr. GIUFFRA. That you handled?

Mr. JENNINGS. That I handled.

Mr. GIUFFRA. But after the fact, wasn't there also a defense that was raised with regard to whether the initial transaction was set up in order to evade an investment limitation that limited the amount of money to 6 percent that Madison Guaranty could invest in Madison Financial?

Mr. JENNINGS. It was my understanding that the reason for the transaction or one of the reasons for the transaction being structured as it was was because Madison Financial could not handle the whole deal with loans from Madison.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Let me just read something from the Pillsbury Report on pages 53 and 54. Now the theory—

The investment in Castle Grande has been questioned on numerous grounds, but most of these have nothing to do with the Rose Law Firm. The acquisition of Castle Grande did, however, involve the Rose Law Firm to some extent. The acquisition can be questioned on the theory that Ward, having given Madison Financial an option on the land and having placed no money of his own at risk, was really a straw man purchaser from Madison Financial pursuant to a scheme to circumvent Arkansas law.

The CHAIRMAN. All right. Look, let me do this. This Report has been referred to, there are times when it is absolutely appropriate to do that. I think Mr. Jennings has answered to the best of his ability as it relates to this. This is a report that he may have heard about but there are things that—it's been referred to before. It speaks for itself and Mr. Jennings is not here to attempt to give testimony that he knows that the transactions that took place were or were not sham. He's here to testify as to the knowledge that he had, the representation that he gave, et cetera.

So let's stop. Let's finish it up because we've gone over and then we're going to turn it to the Minority. This is a very special day, all right? This is Valentine's Day, in that spirit I want to try to get out of here. Come on. Let's go.

Mr. GIUFFRA. The Chairman is a true romantic.

During your representation of Mr. Ward, did the issue of whether the initial transaction violated this Direct Investment Limitation Rule ever come up?

Mr. JENNINGS. Not to my recollection.

Mr. GIUFFRA. No further questions.

The CHAIRMAN. Mr. Ben-Veniste.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Well, let me start, Mr. Chairman, by bringing to Mr. Jennings' attention the conclusion further on in the report issued by Pillsbury Madison & Sutro from the same document Mr. Giuffra was reading from, at page 76 where it says, "There is no evidence that the Rose Law Firm had any hand in these loans and it is hard to imagine that any competent lawyer would have recommended this course of action."

Let me draw your attention to the transactions that have been placed on this Elmo machine, the financing of Castle Grande sales by Madison Guaranty. Let's put that back up. And let's start with the integrity of the heading on that chart. Do you have that chart in front of you?

Mr. JENNINGS. Yes, sir, yes.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Now, I'm talking about the one that lists six transactions. First of all, were these Castle Grande sales?

Mr. JENNINGS. No, I do not believe any of those were Castle Grande sales.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. So what would you call these transactions if not IDC? Would there be any other generic designation you could give to them?

Mr. JENNINGS. They appear to me to be commercial transactions.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. So whoever put Castle Grande on there wasn't being accurate on this chart?

Mr. JENNINGS. That's correct.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Let's go to the fundamental fairness of the points that were elucidated here earlier. Do you have any reason to believe that the Rose Law Firm, much less Hillary Clinton, was involved in either the negotiations or the documentation or the closing of any of these—let's leave that chart up, if you don't mind—the negotiations, the documentation, legal advice relating to any of these transactions?

Mr. JENNINGS. I have no reason to believe that she or any member of the Rose Firm was so involved.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Nor do we have any documentation to suggest that. How do you get from the Rose Law Firm had nothing to do with these transactions, no knowledge of them, no work on them, to the fact that Mrs. Clinton being a good lawyer should have known that these were all shams?

Mr. JENNINGS. I believe I previously testified I have no idea what Mrs. Clinton knew or didn't know.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. In the absence of any evidence that would suggest to you that Mrs. Clinton had any knowledge of these transactions, whether they're shams or they're not, and you've voiced your opinion certainly with respect to some of them, how could any reasonable person come to the conclusion that she should have known that there was something improper?

Mr. JENNINGS. I don't think you could. I don't think a reasonable person could.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Now with respect to Mr. Ward's deposition testimony, I would like to call your attention to page 116 on the issue of the nonrecourse loan. If we can put that up, we can follow along.

Mr. JENNINGS. OK. I have the right one. Page 116?

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Right.

Mr. JENNINGS. I now have that.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. At the very top of the page. And this is the discussion under oath in Mr. Ward's deposition earlier this week about the nonrecourse nature of the loan.

Answer: Well, it was nonrecourse but the property was worth—certainly worth the collateral.

Question: Now, did you have the financial wherewithal back in 1985 to purchase the entire property yourself?

Answer: Yes.

Question: Did you go to any banks to try to find out whether you could get a loan for the full purchase price of the entire thing, which would have been about $1.75 million?

Answer: No, it was $1.7 million.

Question: I know. $1.7 million. Did you ever try to see whether you could get a loan for $1.7 million?

Answer: I knew I could.

Question: From another bank?

Answer: Yes.

Question: Did you speak to any other banks about getting a loan for $1.7 million?

Answer: Yes.

Question: Which banks did you speak to?

Answer: I don't know that this is germane, but I'll answer your question, Union Bank.

Question: And they were willing to give you a loan?

Answer: Why sure. I had good credit with them. I would have had no trouble financing a million or 2 million.

Question: Did you go to Madison because they offered better terms than—

Answer: No, I didn't go to Madison because they offered me better terms. I told you why I went to Madison.

Question: Were the terms identical that were being offered by other banks?

Answer: No, they weren't identical.

Question: Which terms were better?

Answer: I went to Madison because, as I told you, I was going to buy it all by myself, but I wanted to run it by McDougal. And I'll reiterate what I told you previously. When I told him, he said, "Well, at that price, maybe we could share it." And I asked him what he had in mind. And he told me.

Now, is that consistent with your understanding in terms of the recourse nature?

Mr. JENNINGS. Totally.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Indeed, there wasn't any foreclosure against Mr. Ward?

Mr. JENNINGS. Oh, no.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. And indeed the nonrecourse nature of the loan was never an issue, was it?

Mr. JENNINGS. Not to my knowledge.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Because it had been bought at bargain base-ment prices and it was disposed of by Mr. Ward for a profit?

Mr. JENNINGS. Well, it wasn't disposed of by Mr. Ward, it was disposed of by Mr. McDougal. Mr. McDougal had a meeting with Mr. Ward on February 25, as I recall, 1986, in which he advised Mr. Ward that the sales had now reached a point where only $70,000 of indebtedness was left on Mr. Ward's note, and that he was going to mark that note for $1.1 million, .15, whatever, paid in full and wanted Mr. Ward to execute a note to him for the balance of $70,000 that Mr. McDougal said was still owed on the original note.

Mr. Ward did execute that note, and at that time it was represented to Mr. Ward that the reason that they were crediting the note down to $70,000 was that they had sold the Castle Water & Sewer and applied $450,000 of that sale price to his note and that they had applied the $680,400 of the sale to Senator Fulbright against his note which made a total of $1,103,000, I guess it would be $1,130,400 left, and they were computing it on a $2 million note and I guess that included interest. And that would leave a balance due of $70,000.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Now was there any indication from anything that you heard from Mr. Ward about those transactions that would suggest that Mrs. Clinton was in any way, shape or form involved in those transactions, much less "right in the middle of it"?

Mr. JENNINGS. Not at all. In fact, Mr. Ward wasn't involved in the transactions.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. The commission agreement that you referred to was the subject of the lawsuit, Mr. Ward contended that he had a commission agreement which entitled him to be paid on the basis of the sales that were made because of the role Mr. Ward had had in finding the property and negotiating the purchase price?

Mr. JENNINGS. That's correct.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. And the jury and the judge agreed with that position; correct?

Mr. JENNINGS. Well, I don't know whether the judge did, but—

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. The judge didn't overrule it after the jury had spoken?

Mr. JENNINGS. He certainly did not.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. The judge has that right in Arkansas, does he not, to set a jury verdict aside on the basis—

Mr. JENNINGS. Oh, yes, he denied that motion.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Mr. Chairman, we would yield back the time.

The CHAIRMAN. Senator Faircloth.

Senator FAIRCLOTH. I just have one question, Mr. Jennings. How many times did you come to Washington last year, in 1995?

Mr. JENNINGS. I don't know.

Senator FAIRCLOTH. Make a guess.

Mr. JENNINGS. I'm not going to guess because I don't know.

Senator FAIRCLOTH. Three times, 30 times?

Mr. JENNINGS. I made a guess at the time when my deposition was taken which turned out to be wrong and I am not doing any more guessing.

Senator FAIRCLOTH. All right, Mr. Chairman. Wait a minute. Let me ask one more question. You don't know who paid for the trip when you met with Mrs. Clinton?

Mr. JENNINGS. I do not. I assume that my firm paid for it. Whether they after that charged it to any client for whom I was coming to Washington, I do not know.

Senator FAIRCLOTH. Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

The CHAIRMAN. I want to thank the witnesses for their testimony and for their cooperation, and Ms. Dickey, you, for putting hopefully an end to that kind of speculative situation that existed. I'm sorry that we had to bring it up but we did feel it would be better to end it. And I think you probably feel better that we did it.

Ms. DICKEY. I hope it's ended.

The CHAIRMAN. Thank you.

Mr. Jennings, thank you.

We stand in recess until 10:00 a.m. tomorrow.

Senator SARBANES. What's our program for tomorrow?

The CHAIRMAN. At 10:00 tomorrow morning.

Senator SARBANES. Who will we be hearing from?

Mr. JENNINGS. Are we excused? These materials that have been furnished to me for me to look at, shall I leave those here?

The CHAIRMAN. You can or you can take them as a memento.

Mr. JENNINGS. I was wondering about Mr. Ward's deposition.

The CHAIRMAN. You can take that, certainly.

Mr. JENNINGS. The rest I don't believe I need.

[Whereupon, at 12:25 p.m., the hearing was concluded.]

Mr. Jim McDougal, President
Madison Financial Corporation
15th and Main
Little Rock, Arkansas 72201

Dear Jim:

This letter is to set forth our agreement concerning the property commonly referred to as all the land owned by the Industrial Development Company of Little Rock.

On or about the 13th day of September, 1985, Madison Guaranty Savings and Loan Association agreed to acquire all of Industrial Development Company of Little Rock's property except the Timex Building. In the agreement, Madison has the right to assign its rights to that agreement to any entity or individual. As part of our agreement, I have agreed to take title to all of the assets and property north of 145th Street, the water and sewer improvements, and the water and sewage treatment ponds south of 145th Street. Madison Guaranty Savings and Loan Association will agree to lend me on a non-recourse basis the purchase price secured only by a mortgage of those parcels and the sewer and waterworks.

Madison Guaranty will have an option for at least 270 days to purchase the property from me at any time for the amount of the note plus all accrued interest. It is the intention of both Madison and myself to attempt to develop all of the property acquired from I.D.C., and sell it as quickly as possible. If there is any purchase of the property or any portion thereof during the 270 day period, the sale price will be mutually approved by me and Madison Financial Corporation. The proceeds of any sale will be applied toward the promissory note, less a ten percent commission to be paid to me if the property is sold by me, or at Madison's discretion, the particular piece of property may be deeded back to Madison prior to the execution of the sales transaction. If it is sold by anyone else, then the proceeds will go to Madison Guaranty, less the commission to the other seller, and a four percent commission to me.

It is also agreed, in addition to the salary I am receiving from Madison Guaranty, on all property acquired from I.D.C. sold either by me or by Madison Guaranty after the exercise of Madison's option, or on that portion of the property already acquired by Madison from I.D.C., I shall receive a ten percent commission on said sale if it is sold by me, and four percent commission if it is sold by anyone else.

During the term of the option period, all of the net revenues of the waterworks and sewer department shall be forwarded directly to Madison Guaranty for application toward the note.

I would appreciate your acknowledging and agreeing to the terms of this letter agreement.

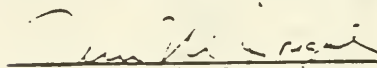

Sincerely,

Seth Ward

Little Rock, Arkansas 72101

Dear Mr. McDougal:

This is to set forth our agreement concerning the property commonly referred to as all the land owned by the Industrial Development Company of Little Rock and certain improvements thereon.

On or about the 18th day of September, 1965, Madison Guaranty Savings and Loan Association agreed to acquire all of the Industrial Development Company of Little Rock's property except the grounds and building commonly referred to as the Times Building. In the agreement Madison has the right to assign its rights to any entity or individuals. In part of our agreement, I have agreed to take title to all of the assets of the aforementioned property that is located immediately north of 14th Street, the water and sewer improvements, and the sewer treatment ponds, including the one located south of 14th Street. Madison Guaranty Savings and Loan Association will agree to lend me the purchase price for this property secured by a mortgage of those parcels and the sewer and water works. Madison Guaranty will pay $35,000.00 to me to have an option for at least 170 days from the date of acquisition to purchase the property from me at any time, in whole or in part, for at least the pro rata amount of the note plus all accrued interest; except one parcel described as follows:

Approximately 11 1/2 acres located and referred to as the Northeast Quadrant of the Interchange of Highway 63 and 14th Street. More specifically described in the attached legal description which is a part of this agreement.

It is the intention of both Madison and myself to attempt to develop all the property acquired from I.D.C. and sell it as quickly as possible. If the property or any portion thereof is sold during the 170 day period, the sale price will be mutually approved by me and Madison Financial Corporation. The proceeds of the sale will be applied toward the promissory note, less a 10% sales commission to be paid to me. At Madison's discretion, any particular piece of property may be deeded back to Madison prior to the execution of a sales transaction.

It is also agreed, in addition to the salary I am receiving from Madison Financial Corporation, I will receive 10% sales commission on all property sold, regardless who sells it, except residential property that will be located south of 145th Street, in which case I will receive 4% commission if sold by any other person.

During the term of the option period, all of the net revenues of the water works and sewer department shall be forwarded directly to Madison Guaranty for application toward the note, unless such facilities are sold sooner. Madison Financial Corporation will also be responsible for all taxes, special assessments, dues, insurance premiums, etc. during the period of this option.

I would appreciate your acknowledging and agreeing to the terms of the letter of agreement.

Sincerely,

 Seth Ward

OPTION TO PURCHASE REAL ESTATE

This Option granted this 1st day of May, 1986, by SETH WARD and YVONNE ANNA WARD, his wife (collectively "Grantor"), to MADISON FINANCIAL CORPORATION ("Optionee"),

W-I-T-N-E-S-S-E-T-H:

1. GRANT OF OPTION. In consideration of Optionee's payment to the Grantor of One Thousand Dollars ($1,000.00), and other good and valuable consideration, the receipt and adequacy of which is hereby acknowledged, Grantor hereby grants to Optionee an exclusive and irrevocable Option to Purchase the following described property together with all buildings and improvements thereon, situated in the City of Little Rock, Pulaski County, Arkansas, to-wit:

A tract of land located in the NE 1/4 SW 1/4 Section 24, T-1-S, R-12-W, Pulaski County, Arkansas, more particularly described as: Starting at an iron pin marking the intersection of the North right-of-way line of East 145th Street and the West right-of-way line of Dineen Drive; thence S89° 44' 40" E along said North right-of-way line, 22.75 ft.; thence Southeasterly and continuing along said North right-of-way line, being the arc of a 2,915 ft. radius curve to the right having an arc distance of 559.07 ft.; thence S78° 45' 20"E and continuing along said North right-of-way line, 2724.44 ft. to the point of beginning of the tract of land described herein; thence N 11° 14' 40" E and perpendicular to said North right-of-way line, 522.72 ft. to a point; thence S78° 45' 20"E and parallel with said North right-of-way line, 555.56 ft. to a point; thence S11° 14' 40" W and perpendicular to said North right-of-way line 522.72 ft. to a point on said North right-of-way line; thence N78° 45' 20" W along said North right-of-way, 555.56 ft. to the point of beginning, containing 290,402.32 sq. ft. or 6.6667 acres more or less.

2. PURCHASE PRICE. The purchase price for the property hereinabove described, together with all improvements thereon, shall be Four Hundred Thousand Dollars ($400,000.00).

3. EXPIRATION DATE. This Option shall expire at 6:00 o'clock, P.M., Central Time, on August 1, 1986.

4. FAILURE TO EXERCISE OPTION. If Optionee does not exercise this Option as herein provided, all sums paid by him hereunder shall be retained by the Grantor free of all claims of Optionee, and neither party shall have any further rights or claims against the other.

5. EXERCISE OF OPTION. This Option shall be exercised by Optionee's delivering to the Grantor written notice of such exercise on or before the expiration date, or any extension thereof, or by Optionee's mailing such written notice of exercise by certified mail to Grantor at least two days before the expiration date, or any extension thereof; and such notice, if so mailed, shall be deemed valid and effective whether or not it actually is delivered to Grantor prior to the expiration date, or any extension thereof.

6. CLOSING REQUIREMENTS. In the event of Optionee's exercise of this Option:

a. Closing will occur within 30 days after the exercise of this Option, which date may be extended by mutual agreement;

b. The Grantor shall deliver at closing to Optionee, or his nominee, a general warranty deed conveying good and marketable title in fee simple to the aforesaid premises, free and clear of all liens, encumbrances and tenancies, except those for streets and utilities and tenancies which may be disclosed by Grantor to Optionee prior to the granting of this Option;

c. Taxes and assessments, if any, due on or before the closing date shall be paid by Grantor. Taxes and assessments, if any, for 1986 shall be prorated as of the closing date;

d. Grantor, at Grantor's sole expense, shall furnish Optionee, within 30 days after exercise of the Option, a complete abstract certified to a current date, or at Grantor's option, a commitment for an owner's title insurance policy convertible at closing to an owner's policy issued on ALTA Form B, 1970, reflecting merchantable title satisfactory to Optionee's attorney. In the event an abstract is furnished and an examination of title to said property shall disclose that the same is not good and marketable, and if the cause of such unmarketability shall not be removed by Grantor prior to the date fixed for closing, then Grantor may exercise his option to furnish Optionee a policy of title insurance satisfactory to Optionee. If marketable title cannot be conveyed at closing, any monies paid by Optionee on account of the purchase price of said property, including any sums paid as consideration for the granting of this Option, shall be refunded to Optionee;

e. The risk of loss, damage, condemnation, or destruction of the premises or improvements thereon by fire, or otherwise, until closing shall be on Grantor;

f. Revenue stamps to be placed on the Deed shall be at the expense of Grantor.

7. PAYMENT OF PURCHASE PRICE. At closing, Optionee will pay Grantor in cash an amount equal to the purchase price set out in accordance with Paragraph 2 hereof.

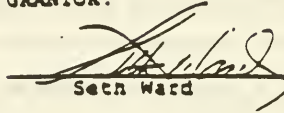

8. NOTICES. Any notices required hereunder shall be effective if given to the parties hereto at the following addresses, or such other address as either party may subsequently designate in writing:

OPTIONEE: Madison Financial Corporation

Dear Mr. Dinh:

Based upon a news story in today's Arkansas Democrat-Gazette and a telephone call that I received this morning from a reporter, it is apparent that the press has access to information concerning which I testified in my deposition. Since I do not have a transcript of my deposition, it is shocking to me that the press already has it.

I respectfully request that I be provided with a copy of the transcript of my deposition in ample time for me to review it before my scheduled appearance before the Committee on Thursday, February 15, 1996. I believe that I was advised that I was entitled to have a transcript four days before an appearance before the Committee. I could be mistaken about that, but that is certainly my impression.

Yours very truly,

First Lady Met Arkansas Figure's Lawyer In Month That Billing Records Appeared

By Susan Schmidt
Washington Post Staff Writer

Last August, first lady Hillary Rodham Clinton met at the White House residence with a Little Rock lawyer who was representing a main figure in a controversial Arkansas real estate deal that Clinton had worked on as a private attorney. It was around that time that long-subpoenaed legal billing records detailing her work on the project mysteriously turned up on a table in the White House residence.

White House logs obtained by the Senate Whitewater committee show that on Aug. 10, attorney Alston Jennings visited the first lady in the White House residence. Jennings's clients include Seth Ward, an Arkansas businessman whom bank regulators have identified as a "straw" purchaser in the thousand-acre Castle Grande project near Little Rock. Called a "sham" by bank examiners, the mid-1980s project caused millions of dollars in losses to Madison Guaranty Savings & Loan, a former client of Clinton and her law firm.

Clinton's meeting with Jennings—whom the White House and her private lawyer declined to discuss yesterday—was discovered as Senate investigators attempt to reconstruct movements in and out of the White House residence during the period when her billing records suddenly appeared in a small area known as the "book room."

Sought under subpoena for more than two years, the records include details of Clinton's work on the Castle Grande project—a matter she had said in a sworn statement she could not remember and recently has said she knew under another name.

Since the records surfaced, the Senate committee has homed in on Clinton's billings for work she did with Ward, a Madison officer, on the Castle Grande transactions.

Jennings's White House visit last year occurred less than a week after and other work it had done for the thrift—when the firm was hired by the government to sue Madison's auditors to try to recover taxpayer funds lost as a result of Madison's failure.

The White House last night referred questions about Jennings's visit to David E. Kendall, private attorney for the Clintons, but he declined to comment. "I've got nothing to say," Kendall said. "I've just got nothing to say. I have no comment. If I'm doing legal work I don't comment."

Jennings, reached at his Little Rock office yesterday, said his visit to the White House did not concern Castle Grande but declined to comment further. In a deposition with committee lawyers this week, he said Kendall had asked him to meet with him and Hillary Clinton at the White House. They did not discuss Ward, he said.

The billing records surfaced last month in the East Wing office of Carolyn Huber, the Clintons' director of correspondence. Huber told the Senate panel that sometime during the first two weeks of August she went to the book room to box up knickknacks and memorabilia to take to her own office for filing.

She said she picked up the shelf of billing documents, in plain view on a table, thinking they were to be filed. Huber, a former office manager at the Rose firm, testified that she recognized them as billing records, but she did not look at them or realize they were the Madison records that had been subpoenaed by Whitewater independent counsel Kenneth W. Starr and other government investigators.

Huber said she took the box to her office, stuck it under a table and didn't get around to looking through it until Jan. 4 of this year.

Yesterday, Kendall and special White House counsel Jane Sherburne were called before the Senate committee to testify about the discovery of those records. Under questioning, both acknowledged that they realized that the 116-page document—and the circumstances of its discovery after two years—would be of great interest to Starr and the committee.

Sherburne said she raised the issue of whether Starr would want to fingerprint the document and questioned whether they should turn it over to Starr immediately before photocopying it.

After a discussion, she, Kendall and a lawyer for Huber decided to examine and copy the documents and to notify Starr and the Senate committee the following day.

Republicans contended they had knowingly made it more difficult to obtain fingerprints from the records. It is not known at this point whether Starr's office has obtained any identifiable prints from the billing records.

"We may never know precisely how the documents got there," Kendall told the panel. "This may be another of the meaningless mysteries of Whitewater."

Kendall and Sherburne also described Huber as deeply shaken and upset after finding the records. Sherburne said in a deposition with committee lawyers that "Ms. Huber said to me that she was really upset and she just didn't know if she had done the right thing."

JANE SHERBURNE

... testifies about discovery of records

And I said, "What do you mean by that?" And she said, "I didn't know what to do when I found these today and maybe I should have just thrown them out." And I said, "... You did the right thing."

Also yesterday, the committee released the two-year-old handwritten meeting notes of former White House communications director Mark Gearan, reflecting the intense damage-control efforts to contain the Whitewater story, which stemmed from the Clintons' partnership in a real estate venture with the owner of Madison Guaranty.

At the meeting, White House aides had discussed sending someone to Arkansas to talk to Beverly Bassett Schaller, the former state securities commissioner who had publicly insisted that she felt no political pressure to act in ways that would benefit Madison despite Hillary Clinton's role in representing the thrift before her agency. They decided against it after deputy chief of staff Harold Ickes said he feared such a move was bound to "come out" publicly.

Staff writer Bill McAllister contributed to this report.

INVESTIGATION OF WHITEWATER DEVELOPMENT CORPORATION AND RELATED MATTERS

THURSDAY, FEBRUARY 15, 1996

U.S. SENATE,
COMMITTEE ON BANKING, HOUSING, AND URBAN AFFAIRS,
SPECIAL COMMITTEE TO INVESTIGATE WHITEWATER
DEVELOPMENT CORPORATION AND RELATED MATTERS,
Washington, DC.

The Committee met at 10:10 a.m., in room 216 of the Hart Senate Office Building, Senator Alfonse M. D'Amato (Chairman of the Committee) presiding.

OPENING COMMENTS OF CHAIRMAN ALFONSE M. D'AMATO

The CHAIRMAN. The Committee will come to order.

We have a procedure that the Majority and the Minority both have agreed to in order to expedite the hearings, and cut down on the number of witnesses and the number of depositions.

We have agreed to a procedure for narrowing down the number of people who may have had or possibly could have had access to the Book Room where Ms. Huber found the billing records. We have, by way of that agreement, issued interrogatories to assist the Committee in determining if any of the people who may have had access indeed saw them, had access to them, knows of anyone who may have had them, knows how they got there.

This will speed up the work of the Committee and help us find out who placed the billing records in the Book Room. I haven't decided whether those questions should be released, although there is nothing secret about them.

But there are questions such as whether the White House overnight guests were ever in the room, and if so, who or what did they see, did any of the guests see, handle or discuss the Rose Law Firm billing records while in the White House, and did these guests see, handle or discuss the Rose Law Firm billing records prior to their discovery on January 4th.

As I said, these interrogatories were prepared and sent out last evening. I think there were 38, and we won't disclose names at this time because I think it would just create some unnecessary speculation. Nothing should be attributed to the fact that we sent out interrogatories—these people were in the White House during this period of time. So it is an effort to, again, narrow and determine if they have any knowledge with respect to the billing records.

The Majority and the Minority both agreed. It is a housekeeping detail, and I thought that I would share it with you.

Now that Senator Sarbanes is here, I think we can proceed. Mr. Gearan, do you have any statement that you would like to make for the record?

SWORN TESTIMONY OF MARK D. GEARAN
DIRECTOR, PEACE CORPS
FORMER WHITE HOUSE DIRECTOR OF COMMUNICATIONS

Mr. GEARAN. Mr. Chairman, I do not. I am here to answer any questions you may have.

The CHAIRMAN. Mr. Chertoff.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

Mr. Gearan, do you have before you a set of documents with the Bates numbers S20564 through S20585? Do you have those?

Mr. GEARAN. Yes, just 1 minute, Mr. Chertoff. These were just given to me. Are they all together here, S20564 through?

Mr. CHERTOFF. Through S20585.

Mr. GEARAN. Yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. And these are your handwritten notes with the redactions?

Mr. GEARAN. If these are the notes I had at my deposition Monday evening, these are all my notes, yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. They are in your handwriting?

Mr. GEARAN. Yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. When did you first turn them over to the White House or to the Senate?

Mr. GEARAN. Well, they were turned over by the White House. My understanding, they were turned over by the White House to the Senate Committee.

Mr. CHERTOFF. When did you turn them over to the White House?

Mr. GEARAN. I turned them over to the White House on the 31st of January.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Of what year?

Mr. GEARAN. This year, sir.

Mr. CHERTOFF. They were not turned over in 1994 to the White House?

Mr. GEARAN. Correct, sir.

Mr. CHERTOFF. They were not turned over in 1995 to the White House?

Mr. GEARAN. Not until January 31.

Mr. CHERTOFF. They were not turned over in 1994 to the White House?

Mr. GEARAN. No, they were not.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Were they turned over in 1995?

Mr. GEARAN. Yes, sir—I am sorry, 1996, correct.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Listen. They were not turned over in 1994; right?

Mr. GEARAN. Correct.

Mr. CHERTOFF. They were not turned over in 1995; right?

Mr. GEARAN. If I might, Mr. Chertoff—

Mr. CHERTOFF. Please Mr. Gearan, it is a very simple question. Did you turn these notes over to anyone in the White House for production to anybody in 1995, yes or no?

Mr. GEARAN. In 1995 these were in the White House, and I left the White House in August 1995.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Where were they in the White House?

Mr. GEARAN. They were in my office.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Did you turn them over to anybody who was responsible to produce documents to the Senate or to the Independent Counsel, or to any other investigative body, in 1995?

Mr. GEARAN. No, I did not. They were inadvertently taken to my office at the Peace Corps.

Mr. CHERTOFF. But even before they were taken, they were in your office in the White House; right?

Mr. GEARAN. That's correct.

Mr. CHERTOFF. While they were in your office in the White House, you didn't turn them over to anybody for purposes of making any kind of production to any investigative body or agency; is that correct?

Mr. GEARAN. Mr. Chertoff, when I was in the White House, for the purposes of production to this Committee or the Independent Counsel or anyone, that production was responsive to the individual request that I was given at that point in time.

Mr. CHERTOFF. There was a point in time in 1994, 1995, that you looked at these notes and you made a decision they were not called for by any request for production?

Mr. GEARAN. These were files that I had segregated in my office for the purposes of the relevant authorities that were looking into this matter. And I did not produce them at that time in consultation with my counsel as they were not responsive.

Mr. CHERTOFF. OK, so you made it just—because we are—you raised the issue of inadvertence. You are telling us sometime in 1984 and 1985 before you left the White House—

Mr. GEARAN. No, 1994.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Listen to me, Mr. Gearan. Sometime during the period from 1984 until you left the White House in 1985, did you make a decision about these particular notes, that they were not responsive to any requests for documents from any investigative agency?

Mr. GEARAN. Assuming you mean 1994 instead of 1984—

Mr. CHERTOFF. I'm sorry, 1994 and 1995.

Mr. GEARAN. —during that period of time, I maintained these files in the Communications Office, and they were at that point not produced as they were not responsive.

Mr. CHERTOFF. In other words, it wasn't that you didn't look at them, you looked at them and you made a decision in 1994 and 1995 before you left the White House that these were not responsive to a request; right?

Mr. GEARAN. I don't recall looking at them, to be honest, but they were in the files that were segregated, yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Segregated for purposes of being looked at to make productions to Grand Juries or Senate Committees or House Committees; right?

Mr. GEARAN. That's correct.

Mr. CHERTOFF. They somehow wound up going with you to the Peace Corps?

Mr. GEARAN. Correct.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Who packed them up?

Mr. GEARAN. My staff at the White House.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Most of these notes before you reflect meetings that occurred during the period from January 4, 1994 through January 8, 1994; correct, except for the last few pages?

Mr. GEARAN. Yes. That's that period of time; correct.

Mr. CHERTOFF. During that period of time there were daily meetings about Whitewater that you attended?

Mr. GEARAN. That's correct.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Were there any meetings later in January about Whitewater?

Mr. GEARAN. I don't recall any. I know the President went on a foreign trip and I accompanied him, in the second week, I believe, in January.

Mr. CHERTOFF. What about the third and fourth weeks, did you have meetings in the third and fourth weeks of January, like you did in the first week of January?

Mr. GEARAN. I don't recall. I don't have any notes to that effect.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Do you know whether there were any notes you have that haven't been produced?

Mr. GEARAN. No, I do not.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Now, Mr. Gearan, this meeting on January 4th, who called the meeting?

Mr. GEARAN. I don't recall who called the meeting as my notes indicate it was in Mr. McLarty's office, but I don't know who called the meeting.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Without holding you to everybody who was there, you were there?

Mr. GEARAN. Correct.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Mr. McLarty was there?

Mr. GEARAN. At this meeting, yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Mr. Eggleston was there?

Mr. GEARAN. Yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Mr. Nussbaum was there?

Mr. GEARAN. I believe so.

Mr. CHERTOFF. There came a time the First Lady was there?

Mr. GEARAN. At this meeting, yes, sir.

Mr. CHERTOFF. How did she come to be at the meeting?

Mr. GEARAN. As I recall, she just happened into Mr. McLarty's office.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Do you know how she knew there was a meeting in progress about Whitewater?

Mr. GEARAN. No, I do not.

Mr. CHERTOFF. I want to take you through some of the notes and it will take awhile to go through all of them, so I will start with some of the highlights. Would you agree with me that on January 4th, one of the topics of conversation was the position the White House ought to take on the appointment of an Independent Counsel to investigate Whitewater?

Mr. GEARAN. Yes. At that time, there had been considerable editorial and Congressional commentary and requests for the President to call for a Special Counsel.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Everybody in that room as of January 4th who participated in the discussion understood that there was an ongoing ing Grand Jury investigation in Arkansas that included focusing on Whitewater and Madison; isn't that correct?

Mr. GEARAN. That is what my notes indicate. Mr. Eggleston, at the beginning, summarized the circumstance.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Mr. Eggleston, in fact, informed everybody who was at the meeting, at that point in time, that there were documents which were in the possession of the White House that might have relevance to the Grand Jury for investigation of either Madison or Whitewater; correct?

Mr. GEARAN. I don't know, Mr. Chertoff, that that's documents at the White House. I would read that documents may have relevance for investigation. This proceeded immediately after the President turned over the documents to the Department of Justice at the end of December.

Mr. CHERTOFF. He was referring to the documents that had been turned over at the end of December?

Mr. GEARAN. That's how I would read that, sir.

Mr. CHERTOFF. So there was an understanding that there was an active Grand Jury investigation going on that was seeking documents and that was examining Madison and Whitewater; correct?

Mr. GEARAN. Seeking documents?

Mr. CHERTOFF. It was understood in the meeting that there was an active Grand Jury investigation going on, that the Grand Jury was obtaining documents, and that they were looking at the issue of Madison and Whitewater; correct?

Mr. GEARAN. I don't know that it was understood they were looking for documents. I don't recall that part.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Well, they had subpoenaed documents.

Mr. GEARAN. I don't recollect that from this meeting, sir.

Mr. CHERTOFF. There were documents that had been turned over that were relevant to the Grand Jury?

Mr. GEARAN. Yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. I can see you are not going to want to move too far outside the notes, but the notes do say documents may have relevance to the Grand Jury; right?

Mr. GEARAN. Yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Now on page 2, somebody says, "Risk of AG getting out front in naming a counsel before White House leadership." Is that a correct reading of the top of that page?

Mr. GEARAN. Yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Who said that?

Mr. GEARAN. My notes would seem to indicate it was Joel Klein because there is not any notation otherwise, but I can't recall.

Mr. CHERTOFF. And—

Mr. GEARAN. From the previous page.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Right, and then down the page, almost at the end on page 2, there is a DG. Is that David Gergen?

Mr. GEARAN. Yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. He says, "Independent Counsel operates differently than criminal prosecutor. They take on a life of their own." Is that a correct reading?

Mr. GEARAN. Yes, it is.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Am I correct that the concern was that an Independent Counsel could pursue matters, so to speak, without control by anybody else, like the Attorney General, or anybody in the Administration?

Mr. GEARAN. No, Mr. Chertoff. I don't recall it as a matter of control. It was a matter that it tends to go on for a long period of time. There was a concern about both the duration of some Independent Counsels in the past, as well as the digression from its original charge.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You mean the scope; there was concern about the scope?

Mr. GEARAN. I don't know if there was concern relevant to this specific matter as much as a historical review of these meetings evidenced from the Counsel's Office of what has happened in past Special Counsels or past Independent Counsels.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Mr. Gearan, you were not meeting for the purpose of having a historical discussion about the institution of the Independent Counsel, were you? You were meeting with respect to a decision that had to be made about the position the White House would take on requesting an Independent Counsel; correct?

Mr. GEARAN. Correct; but in that discussion, a historical review of past counsels was observed.

Mr. CHERTOFF. The particular concern was the duration and scope; right?

Mr. GEARAN. Those were the points that were mentioned, yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Mrs. Clinton comes in; right? This is on page 3.

Mr. GEARAN. That's correct.

Mr. CHERTOFF. It says, "Looks like a meeting I might be interested in." Is that right?

Mr. GEARAN. That's right.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Then she stayed for about 10 or 15 minutes?

Mr. GEARAN. That's my recollection, yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Your note taking at this point stops, except for the comment, "Watergate Committee"?

Mr. GEARAN. Right.

Mr. CHERTOFF. What did Mrs. Clinton say about the Watergate Committee?

Mr. GEARAN. As I recall the conversation, Mrs. Clinton was distinguishing her service as a member of the Watergate Committee on the staff with the present context, and their disagreement with the calls for a Special Counsel were well reported in the press. What I've tried to help the Committee with, and that is, that they did not feel—she did not feel there was any wrongdoing on their part, or that she was aware of, and that the particular standard for past Independent Counsels had not been established in this instance. And she was distinguishing the difference in the instance of the Watergate matter.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Where is all that in the notes?

Mr. GEARAN. It is not, sir; that's my recollection.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Is there some reason you didn't take notes when the First Lady came in, except to make the reference to Watergate Committee?

Mr. GEARAN. I guess my only point that I could assist you with is I found the discussion very interesting and I was listening intently to the conversation.

Mr. CHERTOFF. So at this point it got so interesting you forgot to write it down; is that what you are telling us?

Mr. GEARAN. Well, I think at this point I was listening quite intently to the First Lady, yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Now the next day, which is on the next page, the discussion continues; right?

Mr. GEARAN. That's correct.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Bernie Nussbaum has a fairly extended conversation on his views about the Independent Counsel; right?

Mr. GEARAN. That's right.

Mr. CHERTOFF. He was adamantly opposed to it; right?

Mr. GEARAN. Yes, sir.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Did you know, as of the 5th of January, that 2 months earlier Mr. Nussbaum had met with private attorneys for the Clintons, Mr. Kendall and other attorneys, essentially having a kind of a joint defense meeting with respect to the Whitewater matters?

Mr. GEARAN. No, I am not aware of that.

Mr. CHERTOFF. So he didn't enlighten anybody on the 5th of January that almost exactly 2 months earlier, on the 5th of November, he had sat down with Mr. Engelberg, Mr. Lyons, and Mr. Kendall to have a discussion about Whitewater and Madison, and various issues relating to the investigations that might impact on the Clintons; he didn't bring that up at the meeting, did he?

Mr. GEARAN. That is not my—I don't recall, no, sir.

Mr. CHERTOFF. But he did adamantly oppose an Independent Counsel at the meeting?

Mr. GEARAN. Correct.

Mr. CHERTOFF. He said, this is the second entry, "If appoint outside as counsel or prosecutor, subject to no control and come in with desire to get someone." Is that what he said?

Mr. GEARAN. Yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. He raised the issue of an Independent Counsel not being subject to control; correct?

Mr. GEARAN. His argument, as I recall from the time, was that an Independent Counsel or a Special Counsel at this point was somewhat of an unguided missile.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Meaning they couldn't be controlled?

Mr. GEARAN. No.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Does the word "no control" appear in your notes, Mr. Gearan?

Mr. GEARAN. It does, sir, but I think, as I recall the conversation, it was a circumstance where he was, as these outlines later, it tends to go on and on, both for the duration of it and for the context of it.

Mr. CHERTOFF. And the scope of it; right?

Mr. GEARAN. Right; and then he outlines, on the bottom of that page, past instances——

Mr. CHERTOFF. I understand there are things you want to say but you will have to follow with my questions.

So Mr. Nussbaum raises the issue of no control over an Independent Counsel, and then he basically outlines two possible scenarios; right, that could come about. Under one scenario, you have what he calls a good-hearted Nussbaum who is appointed. So I guess that was kind of the wish to have a good-hearted Bernie Nussbaum appointed to be the Independent Counsel, who would worry about how he goes back to New York City and doesn't indict anyone, and then after 3 years he writes a report. That's the good scenario. Then the bad scenario is the bad-hearted guy—it says, "Bad-hearted guy goes in and decides a smell of corruption and can show some things of those people close around principal." Now the principal here refers to the President?

Mr. GEARAN. I think the principal, any principal that was being investigated.

Mr. CHERTOFF. But here the focus is on a particular issue involving Whitewater, you understood the principal here to be the President?

Mr. GEARAN. Yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. What Mr. Nussbaum is saying here is that the bad-hearted Independent Counsel smells some corruption and can show there are some things involving people close around the principal. That was the bad scenario?

Mr. GEARAN. That's his view of the two types of people that could be an Independent Counsel, and I recall his—the context or his view is that if you had someone, in his words the bad-hearted counsel, it would be very difficult and they would be embarrassed of going back without having charged someone.

Mr. CHERTOFF. No, that was the good-hearted Nussbaum. That's the earlier paragraph. The good-hearted Nussbaum would worry about going back without indicting someone. I am now on the bad-hearted one. The bad-hearted guy actually smells corruption; right? Is that right? Is that what it says?

Mr. GEARAN. That's what it says.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Then "can show some things of those people close around principal." Did Mr. Nussbaum elaborate on the kinds of things that this bad-hearted prosecutor could show involving people close around the principal?

Mr. GEARAN. No, he did not. It was just his very affirmative argument against an Independent Counsel. Because of its, as I have said previously, its duration, its digression, that there are past instances where it went beyond perhaps what some people thought about it. I am certainly aware, I have been in Washington for a bit, that there is some controversy associated with—

Mr. CHERTOFF. Mr. Gearan, please stay on the questions I ask you. My question is very specific. When he raised the fact that the bad-hearted prosecutor might detect a smell of corruption and can show some things of those people close around the principal, meaning the President, did you react to that in some way? Did you ask questions about what people are we talking about here? What is the concern?

Mr. GEARAN. Mr. Chertoff, I never heard it as an individual concern with any factual basis to this matter. It was a hypothetical about the two different types of counsels or Special Counsels that could be named. It was more of a generic discussion as I heard it and recalled it.

Mr. CHERTOFF. All right. Now after this discussion of the two scenarios, the two possibilities, the good-hearted prosecutor goes back and defends his decision not to indict and the bad-hearted one who smells corruption can show some things, then there is a discussion of past Independent Counsels. It concludes, on the top of page 3, with an entry from Mack. That would be Mack McLarty; is that right?

Mr. GEARAN. That's correct.

Mr. CHERTOFF. He says, "Let's get off whether we will have Special Prosecutor or Counsel. HRC and BC don't want it, discuss where we go from here." Was it your understanding that Mr. McLarty was telling you that as of the 4th of January the First Lady and the President both had decided they didn't want an Independent Counsel?

Mr. GEARAN. That's correct.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Was it your understanding that the decision was in part up to the First Lady?

Mr. GEARAN. No.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Wasn't there a point in time, within a couple of days, that there was a specific discussion about whether the First Lady could be persuaded to approve the appointment of an Independent Counsel?

Mr. GEARAN. There are notes reflecting that, yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. We will skip ahead while we are on the subject. Those notes, if we skip ahead to page S20578, this is on the 7th of January, where Mr. Ickes says, "To try to reopen it with us, impossible, POTUS can't, staff can't, Christopher to talk to FLOTUS, Bob Barnett." FLOTUS is the First Lady of the United States; is that correct?

Mr. GEARAN. That's correct.

Mr. CHERTOFF. POTUS is the President of the United States?

Mr. GEARAN. That's correct.

Mr. CHERTOFF. What Mr. Ickes told you on the 7th was that the President and the staff had been unsuccessful in getting the First Lady to change her mind about the Independent Counsel appointment; right?

Mr. GEARAN. I don't know, "unsuccessful," but——

Mr. CHERTOFF. They found it impossible?

Mr. GEARAN. To reopen it, that she was opposed to it, yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Let's make sure it is absolutely clear. On the 7th of January, Mr. Ickes told you and the others at the meeting that the First Lady was adamantly opposed to an Independent Counsel; is that correct?

Mr. GEARAN. He doesn't say "adamantly," but that's my recollection, sir.

Mr. CHERTOFF. That's your recollection. That it would be impossible to reopen it with the First Lady; right?

Mr. GEARAN. That's what my notes reflect.

Mr. CHERTOFF. That's what happened; right? Because you didn't lie to your notes; right? You kept an accurate record?

Mr. GEARAN. I did.

Mr. CHERTOFF. He said the POTUS can't, the President of the United States couldn't get the First Lady to change her mind on this; right?

Mr. GEARAN. That's what my notes are saying.

Mr. CHERTOFF. The staff couldn't do it; is that right?

The CHAIRMAN. Mr. Gearan, let me ask you one thing. You keep saying, "That is what my notes say." Are you telling us you have no recollection of this? The Deputy Chief of Staff comes in, this is like the third or fourth in a series of meetings, this is not just anything. And you are telling us that you don't recall Mr. Ickes saying that the First Lady will not change her mind as it relates to a Special Prosecutor, the President of the United States cannot get Mrs. Clinton to change her mind? Now, you are telling us you cannot remember that? Your notes say it.

Mr. GEARAN. Senator——

The CHAIRMAN. I mean, that is such an inconsequential matter that you wouldn't recall it?

Mr. GEARAN. Senator, I guess what I am suggesting is, I was aware this week that there was an internal discussion within the White House of whether we should have one or not. It had been well reported, I think——

Mr. CHERTOFF. I don't want to know about the press——

Mr. GEARAN. To answer the Chairman's question, I am not certain that this is the first time.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is whether you recall Mr. Ickes saying this. To indicate that's what your notes say is not responsive. When you respond in that manner, you lose credibility. You promised to tell the truth and the whole truth, and I don't believe that you are being responsive when you tell us, "That's what my notes say." We know your notes say that and we are asking you an important question about a meeting, it wasn't just one meeting, it wasn't a casual meeting, the First Lady was present, and there were a series of meetings. And your only response is, "That's what my notes say." You didn't lie to your notes, your notes don't lie, and we are asking you to assist the Committee by giving us information. Did Mr. Ickes come in and say this?

Mr. GEARAN. Senator——

The CHAIRMAN. You have no independent recollection beyond the notes?

Mr. GEARAN. Senator, I have tried my very best in this Committee——

Mr. CHERTOFF. All right, Mr. Gearan——

Mr. GEARAN. If I might, Mr. Chertoff—to present in deposition, the best I can, to recollect my recollections of this period of time. It did not—and I am not sure this is the first time in the history of this planet that a husband and wife have disagreed on something.

The CHAIRMAN. I didn't ask you that, Mr. Gearan. It has nothing to do with whether this was the first time in history spouses disagreed. Do you recall this conversation? This was a report made by the Deputy Chief. We asked you, do you recall this? And you said, "That's what my notes say." That's nonresponsive.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Mr. Gearan, you are not suggesting this was a garden variety dispute between a husband and wife, are you? This was about whether an Independent Counsel gets appointed; right?

Mr. GEARAN. Correct.

Mr. CHERTOFF. This is not an insignificant matter; right?

Mr. GEARAN. No, I would not——

Mr. CHERTOFF. Now, I want to ask you whether you recall this conversation in which the Deputy Chief of Staff—and by the way, Mr. Ickes was one of the people who was tasked or was supposed to be responsible for managing Whitewater; right?

Mr. GEARAN. That's correct, at this point in time.

Mr. CHERTOFF. He says to you, with respect to this very contentious issue and public issue, that the President finds it impossible to reopen with the First Lady the possibility of appointing an Independent Counsel; isn't that correct?

Mr. GEARAN. That's correct.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Didn't you find that remarkable and memorable? Whose decision was it to appoint——

Mr. GEARAN. Mr. Chertoff, the best I can help you with, and the Members of this Committee, is my best honest recollection. And that's what I am trying to do.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Whose decision was it about whether to ask for an Independent Counsel? Who had the final say on it?

Mr. GEARAN. I do not know the answer to that. I know the President called for it. I mean, I was not present in a conversation with the President and Mrs. Clinton.

Mr. CHERTOFF. As you go to the bottom of the page, since we are on the 7th, there is a portion that's redacted. And I just want to state for the record, we have agreed with the White House that the portions that are redacted relate either to discussions about the press or other things that are extraneous. But down here at this meeting, Mr. Nussbaum speaks up and says, "Indictments will be Betsey Wright." Do you remember that?

Mr. GEARAN. Yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Now this was Mr. Nussbaum discussing kind of the worst case scenario that might come out; right? Is that right, if there was an Independent Counsel?

Mr. GEARAN. No. Mr. Chertoff, I think I owe it to Betsey Wright and to the Members of this Committee to say that at no time was I present in any conversation where Mr. Nussbaum suggested that there is any basis for Ms. Wright to be charged with anything like this. He was using this as an extreme example of someone who would be shot by the unguided missile, if you will. That this would be an extreme example of an unwarranted prosecution.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Where does it say that in the notes?

Mr. GEARAN. It does not but that is the flavor of that remark as I recall it.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Out of all the people in the world he picked to show an extreme example, he didn't pick you, he didn't say well, an unguided missile could indict Mark Gearan, did he? He did not say that; right?

Mr. GEARAN. He did not say that, no.

Mr. CHERTOFF. He didn't talk about indicting Donald Duck?

Mr. GEARAN. I don't recall that.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Or a ham sandwich?

Mr. GEARAN. No, sir.

Mr. CHERTOFF. But he did mention Betsey Wright; is that right?

Mr. GEARAN. Yes, that's right.

Mr. CHERTOFF. And your testimony is that you took that as just an extreme example, pulled out of thin air; is that it?

Mr. GEARAN. What I am suggesting is, he gave no basis to say that there was any factual basis that she would be charged with anything. Mr. Nussbaum's entire argument, as we reviewed in the earlier notes, is that the kind of range and duration and digression of an Independent Counsel, and the unguided missile——

Mr. CHERTOFF. That it couldn't be controlled. "Unguided" meaning uncontrolled; right?

Mr. GEARAN. I do not recall that way in the control sense you suggest.

Mr. CHERTOFF. From the conversation, Mr. Gearan, you have talked about an Independent Counsel as an unguided missile. What would be an example of a guided missile, and who would be guiding? Did that come up in the conversation?

Mr. GEARAN. No, it did not. I don't recall that.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Let's go back to the notes. We were on January 5th; page 20569. It's the third page of this meeting on the 5th.

Mr. GEARAN. Yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. This is after Mr. McLarty indicates that the First Lady and the President don't want an Independent Counsel. Then there is some further discussion about the possibility of preparing some kind of a white paper or some kind of a report; right?

Mr. GEARAN. That's right.

Mr. CHERTOFF. And Mr. McLarty suggested like the Travel Office Report?

Mr. GEARAN. That's right.

Mr. CHERTOFF. The Travel Office Report was an internal review that had been done of the Travel Office, or Travelgate matter, the previous year; right?

Mr. GEARAN. That's correct.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Now that was something that was done in-house; is that right?

Mr. GEARAN. That's correct.

Mr. CHERTOFF. That was Mr. McLarty's suggestion; right?

Mr. GEARAN. That's correct.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Then Mr. Ickes goes on to say——

Mr. GEARAN. If I might, sir, I do not know that it was his suggestion, but that's his observation, that it would be similar to it. I don't know that he——

Mr. CHERTOFF. Then Mr. Ickes goes on to say, "Discussion of counsel is the biggest [expletive deleted] waste of time." Right?

Mr. GEARAN. That's correct.

Mr. CHERTOFF. That's because at this point in time he understood or you understood the First Lady and the President had said no to it; right?

Mr. GEARAN. That's correct.

Mr. CHERTOFF. On the next page, page 4, Mr. Kendall says, "In a couple of hours—drafts of Q&A's they need to be approved by Kendall and HRC." These would be Q&A's for public consumption on the issue of Whitewater?

Mr. GEARAN. Mr. Chertoff, that's Mr. Klein, not Mr.——

Mr. CHERTOFF. I'm sorry, Mr. Klein.

Mr. GEARAN. They are Q&A's, yes, that would be drafted on the subject matter; correct.

Mr. CHERTOFF. The idea was to have them personally approved not only by Mr. Kendall but by Mrs. Clinton herself; right?

Mr. GEARAN. That's what my notes reflect, yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. What was the reason for that, for Mrs. Clinton to be involved in reviewing these Q&A's?

Mr. GEARAN. I assume because it involved matters associated with her law practice.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Because it involved matters associated with her law practice?

Mr. GEARAN. The issue was the—I believe at the time the centerpiece of the issue in the press at the time was the preferred treatment for Madison Guaranty.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You mean her possible discussions with Beverly Bassett Schaffer?

Mr. GEARAN. That's correct.

Mr. CHERTOFF. And you understood at this point in time that involved the question of what she did in her law practice; right?

Mr. GEARAN. Correct.

Mr. CHERTOFF. So that the decision was she would take a personal role in reviewing the Q&A's on this particular matter; right?

Mr. GEARAN. That's correct.

Mr. CHERTOFF. So it is fair to say with respect to this set of meetings, one of the focuses of the meetings was this particular issue of Mrs. Clinton's law practice and how it related to Beverly Bassett Schaffer and Madison Guaranty Savings & Loan; correct?

Mr. GEARAN. Mr. Chertoff, the focus of the meeting is—it was a procedural meeting of what we do from here. There was not, as I recall, any discussion of the substance of her representation or Madison Guaranty. It was where do we go from here in terms of providing these Q&A's.

Mr. CHERTOFF. But the reason she had to be involved was because you understood that a particular area of concern for her was her law practice and this issue involving Beverly Bassett Schaffer, and any contacts between Mrs. Clinton and Ms. Schaffer?

Mr. GEARAN. Mr. Chertoff, I don't know that that was a concern to her. I do know that we were trying to work very hard in this period to make sure that we were presenting accurate materials out of the White House, and if we were preparing Q&A's or chronologies or any of the other materials, that it be accurate so the White House would not misstate any facts in any statements we would release.

Mr. CHERTOFF. We are going to get to Beverly Bassett Schaffer when we come back to this, but let me leave you with this question, because I am sure we are going to hear from you that one of the important things here was to get all the facts out into the public. Isn't it a fact though that you understood, and there was discussion at these meetings, that Mr. Kendall had negotiated a subpoena with the Department of Justice in December to turn the documents over, precisely in order to keep those documents out of public scrutiny, so they couldn't be put out to the public?

Mr. GEARAN. I understood it at the time that it was a question of confidentiality.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Meaning confidentiality from the public?

Mr. GEARAN. Correct, that the materials would be preserved and given to the investigators directly.

Mr. CHERTOFF. So there was no notion with respect to those documents of making them public at that time?

Mr. GEARAN. Correct.

Mr. CHERTOFF. I see my time is up.

The CHAIRMAN. Senator Sarbanes.

OPENING COMMENT OF SENATOR PAUL S. SARBANES

Senator SARBANES. I yield to Mr. Ben-Veniste.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Good morning, Mr. Gearan.

Mr. GEARAN. Good morning.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Let me start with the issue of the production of the documents here today. And if you have something to add to a question I might ask, I invite you to finish your answer and to add what information you feel is pertinent to the question.

If I understand you correctly, the materials were indeed reviewed at some point with respect to the then-existing requests by this Committee for material relevant to the hearings we were undertaking last summer. Those hearings were the Foster papers matter and contacts with the Treasury Department; is that correct?

Mr. GEARAN. That's correct.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. When those documents were reviewed, they were reviewed by you and your counsel?

Mr. GEARAN. That's correct.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. And as the result of that review, it was determined, if I understand you correctly, that nothing in the notes was relevant to the requests associated with those areas of inquiry?

Mr. GEARAN. That's correct.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Then those documents were put aside somewhere, segregated?

Mr. GEARAN. Correct.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Now tell us what happened after that.

Mr. GEARAN. In late August, when I left the White House to take a bit of a vacation, my office was packed up by staff at the White House. I then returned from my vacation and went directly to my job as the Director of the Peace Corps. During the course of this period of time, it was my intention, certainly, to leave the documents, because I understood them to be White House communications files, at the White House. That was certainly my intent to leave them there.

I have worked hard to try to maintain their integrity and my staff was instructed that they would not leave the White House. I understood them to be Communications Office files. They were segregated, but as I said, I did not pack my office and they were inadvertently moved to the Peace Corps where I started after Labor Day.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. So if I understand what you are saying, you assumed that the materials had been left; the White House, in going through its request, assumed they had everything that you had; in fact, someone had packed the files and inadvertently included the files in material that went to the Peace Corps with you?

Mr. GEARAN. That's correct.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Then there came a time when it was discovered that you might have additional files in your possession at the Peace Corps. How did that come about?

Mr. GEARAN. At the beginning of November, when there was a request for production of files, my counsel called me to see if there was anything that could be relevant to that. At that time, I realized that, in the storage area where the files were sent over from the White House, that in fact the separate, segregated Communications Office files were still there.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. How did you learn that? How did it happen that on that occasion you learned that you still had the file?

Mr. GEARAN. Well, my counsel called me because he was aware of the subpoena request, that was not issued to me personally but to the White House. When I left the White House, it was my understanding that the White House would be in charge of the production of any of the Communications Office files. And in what I think was an abundance of caution at that point, we looked and discovered that they had been, as I said, inadvertently taken to the Peace Corps.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Were they promptly turned over as soon as you realized?

Mr. GEARAN. At that point, I notified my counsel and we notified the White House. I instructed my staff to send them over to the White House, but regrettably, they were not—that was not done.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. So we received them last week, and indeed, I think on the day before White House Special Counsel, Ms. Sherburne testified. And she testified to the fact that she and others in Counsel's Office had redacted those files; that means they photocopied out portions which they deemed not relevant to the request of this Committee. Are you aware of that fact?

Mr. GEARAN. Yes, I am.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Thereafter, in fact during the testimony of Ms. Sherburne, she invited Counsel from the Majority and Minority to review those redactions to determine whether there was any additional material which we might wish to see. Are you aware of that?

Mr. GEARAN. Yes, I am, sir.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Then Mr. Chertoff and I did so, in the presence of Ms. Sherburne and other staff. And it was determined that additional material would be requested, and it was provided, without opposition, by the White House Counsel's Office. You are aware of that?

Mr. GEARAN. Yes, sir.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Much of the material about which you have testified already this morning was in that category, the political discussion about appointment of Special Counsel and the like. Mr. Chertoff and I concluded that Ms. Sherburne acted appropriately in terms of making the redactions, and that she acted appropriately in terms of our request that they expand the production, and that there was no attempt to hide or mislead this Committee. I think Mr. Chertoff will join me in that, if he is paying attention.

The CHAIRMAN. We are not going to comment on the redaction. We resolved that and are satisfied. And we hope that the manner in which we settled this will allow us to continue to proceed orderly. I don't want to address possible disagreements concerning things that have been produced. I want to move forward and continue to receive cooperation so that relevant information is made available to the Committee in the future. I believe we are proceeding properly.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

Now with respect to the discussion about Mrs. Clinton's, and others in the White House, opposition to the appointment of a Special Counsel at that point, that has been very substantially discussed in the press, has it not?

Mr. GEARAN. Considerably, yes.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. This is not some new revelation, that Mrs. Clinton was opposed to the appointment of a Special Counsel back in January 1994; is that right?

Mr. GEARAN. That's correct.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Indeed, there has been great discussion in the media. I would call the Committee's attention to a lengthy review by Walter Pincus in The Washington Post, January 9, 1994, where he reviews the history of Special Prosecutors looking back over the last 15 years.

The points which were being discussed in the meeting that you have alluded to, back in January 1994, were general points regarding how an Independent Counsel or a Special Prosecutor has been triggered, the appointment of such has been triggered in the past, a historical review; and indeed some discussions about, some criticisms about how various Independent Counsels have operated.

Clearly one that comes to mind, which is mentioned in the Pincus article, is Independent Counsel Walsh who went on for 7 years and spent $35 million. So in terms of being unchecked in terms of limitation and scope, is that the subject of what was being discussed rather than any specifics?

Mr. GEARAN. Without question. The entire tone of the week, as I recall, was responding which had been a considerable drumbeat in the press, both editorially and in Congressional calls for an Independent Counsel or a Special Counsel. The discussions that week were twofold: One is to work on putting together an affirmative strategy to get the story and the truth out about this matter. That required an awful lot of information to be brought together. But second, as my notes reflect, there was, as you allude to having been reported, considerable internal discussion on whether or not the President should call for a Special Counsel.

Those discussions were, as my notes reflect, ones that particularly Mr. Nussbaum and Mr. Klein wove in prior examples of past Independent Counsels or Special Counsels, and the experiences. And as has been reported in the press and as has been the subject of criticism for some time, that their duration is considerable, and their digression from their charges is considerable as well.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Here at page 568 of your notes—that's the Bates stamp number, there weren't 568 pages of notes—there is the discussion of various other historical instances of the appointment of a Special Counsel: The banking scandal in Iraqgate; Nick, I think you have Bowen, but it should be Bua, the judge who was appointed relating to INSLAW; Iraqgate; Walsh is mentioned in the Iran-Contra; the Donovan investigation, which resulted in a trial in which Mr. Donovan was acquitted; Cox and Jaworski, the greatest of the Special Prosecutors; Bill Barr, using the Special Counsel quite cleverly; et cetera.

So there was a large discussion of the mechanics and the history. And indeed let me call your attention to a transcript of which I have the text, of Mrs. Clinton's—or a portion of her press conference of April 22, 1994, where she says in response to a question that asked in substance, you were reported to have opposed a Special Prosecutor. Well, by April 1994, there had been considerable discussion in the press about the fact that Mrs. Clinton had taken a position vis-à-vis the appointment after Special Prosecutor or an Independent Counsel or a Special Counsel; correct?

Mr. GEARAN. That's correct, yes.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. The question was put directly to Mrs. Clinton:

Question: Back in 1994 in April, you were reported to have opposed a Special Prosecutor, at least in the beginning?

Answer: Now to your other question about the Special Counsel, I was not the only one of my husband's advisers who questioned the idea of a Special Counsel. I think those of us who were concerned about the precedent that would be set by having such an appointment made when none of the existing standards that had always been in place had been met, there was no credible allegation, you know, of all the things that are usually required. So I was questioning of that. But the President made the decision that we needed to get on with the business he came to Washington to do, and that was this, an important step to take, and I respected that decision.

So, in fact, Mr. Ickes' comment that Mrs. Clinton was unalterably opposed, et cetera, it turned out that that was an interim position. Indeed, it was a decision of the President to make, and the President made that decision, as we all know, and an Independent Counsel was appointed.

Mr. GEARAN. That's correct.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. So all of this discussion in January leads to later press stories thereafter about Mrs. Clinton's personal opinion and that of Mr. Nussbaum and others. There is a press conference 2 years ago in which Mrs. Clinton acknowledges that her position was as such, that a decision was made by the President, and let's get on with it.

Mr. GEARAN. That's correct, that's how I recall it. There was this internal debate, and as I said, Mr. Nussbaum was particularly vocal in his comments about it as well.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Mr. Ickes, at page 569, remarked that this, "Discussion of counsel is the biggest [expletive deleted] waste of time." He knew at that point that something would ultimately have to be done about it?

Mr. GEARAN. He did not allude to that, but I think he understood that the most productive use of a meeting was to see where we could proceed from there, rather than rehashing the discussion of an Independent Counsel or Special Counsel.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Perhaps out of curiosity, I would just like to know, Mr. Gearan, why you felt it necessary to write down all the "bleeps" in this discussion?

Mr. GEARAN. Mr. Ben-Veniste, I was a reporter for a bit, and I tend to take notes down exactly what people have said. I try hard to record the conversations. A lot of what my responsibilities were at the White House would be to write down reporters' questions, as my documents show, and then to get the answers to those questions. It is a note-making style that I have, to try to do my best to write down what was said. In this instance, it reflects the context of the meeting, perhaps, but that is the way I take notes.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. In connection with the discussion of Beverly Bassett Schaffer, you were aware, or you were made aware, were you not, that Ms. Schaffer had—now turn your attention to 5773.

Mr. GEARAN. I'm sorry. The number again?

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Page 5773, I'm sorry.

Mr. GEARAN. I don't think I have a 5773, sir.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Do you recall that there was a discussion of Ms. Schaffer at that meeting? I think it was January 6th.

Mr. GEARAN. I have 20574. Is that the Bates number you are referring to?

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. 20574, OK. I have a transliteration into type of yours and somebody has misnumbered it. Go back to 73.

Mr. GEARAN. OK.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. There is a discussion there of Whitewater, and then on to 74, there is a discussion of Whitewater and Beverly Bassett. You were aware, were you not, that Ms. Bassett had been the Securities Commissioner in Arkansas during the time that Mrs. Clinton was at the Rose Law Firm and had represented the Madison Bank in connection with some matters of a regulatory nature; is that correct?

Mr. GEARAN. Yes.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. The allegation that was being made during the campaign, and which again resurfaced in 1994, or was expected to resurface, was that Ms. Bassett had somehow done something improper, by reason of the fact that she had been appointed by Governor Clinton, in connection with the Rose Firm representation of Madison Bank; is that correct?

Mr. GEARAN. I am aware those were the stories, yes.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Those were the stories and you were tuned into that because that was your business, to be tuned into what the stories were?

Mr. GEARAN. Right.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. So the discussion which occurs, could you tell us in your own words about what was being requested of Ms. Bassett Schaffer?

Mr. GEARAN. Well, I recall broadly this week and this meeting as well, as a period of time where the White House was going to begin an effort to have a more affirmative strategy on this matter so that we could have the particular information, the truth on this matter, put out. In order to do that, we wanted to make quite certain that the information we had was correct.

So, on one level we would not misstate what Ms. Bassett Schaffer had said previously, as well as the fact that we would have the information to make sure that whatever she had done was, in fact, the correct thing to do.

This was in a period of time where the White House credibility on an issue was paramount. The last thing we needed was to have a question of the White House misstating or misrepresenting any facts on this matter.

In the documents shown before me here presently, it says, "Get a lawyer to check law on issuance of preferred stock. Independent panel of regulators." This was consonant with that approach, to try to get the truth out on this matter, to try to get the information out the best we could. And to do that, it would be helpful to make sure that we checked the law on the issuance of stock; getting to my second point, that the importance of assuring ourselves that if we said anything that in fact what Ms. Schaffer had done as a regulator was correct, and an independent panel of regulators to make sure our information was correct. That was the approach of that period of time.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. All right. So on the one hand, you wanted to get a factual and legal analysis of what occurred back in Arkansas, in 1985 and 1986 in connection with this matter, and then there was the issue of Ms. Bassett herself.

Now were you aware, as Ms. Bassett has testified before this Committee, that during the campaign of 1992, she had, in fact, spoken out about the facts as they occurred relating to her consideration of Madison Savings & Loan's application for preferred stock. And after that, she was besieged by reporters, and felt that she had been harassed by them. That's what she testified to here. And that she was reluctant to get involved again and subject herself to the attention of the national media. Do you recall that?

Mr. GEARAN. I recall that this was an issue during the campaign. And that my understanding is, that she had said that there was no issue of preferred treatment for Madison Guaranty.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. So is it correct to say that there was discussion about whether Ms. Bassett would be willing to come forward again and tell the truth as she knew it with respect to what had occurred back in Arkansas in 1985 and 1986?

Mr. GEARAN. There was certainly discussion that we needed to make quite certain that, if we represented her position, it would not be inaccurate.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Now was there any discussion in any way, shape or form, to try to send some emissary to mold Ms. Bassett's story, to change her story from the true recitation of the facts in any way?

Mr. GEARAN. No, sir.

Mr. CHERTOFF. This is very important, because this is now the speculation resulting from your notes, as you know, in the newspapers and so forth, that because there was this discussion at the time, that there was going to be some effort to try to influence Ms. Bassett's statement in some substantive way, as opposed to simply getting the story from her. You do understand the distinction?

Mr. GEARAN. I do.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Was there any effort that you heard of, either at these meetings or anywhere else, Mr. Gearan, that suggested that the White House was going to send someone to try to influence the substance of what Ms. Bassett was to say?

Mr. GEARAN. No.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Are you clear on that?

Mr. GEARAN. Yes, sir.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. We have received a document marked S 20589, which is a memorandum from a Jake Siewert, regarding preferred stock. It is dated January 11, 1994. Do we have a copy to provide to Mr. Gearan? Do you have a copy of it?

Senator DODD. While you are doing that, let me ask, Mr. Gearan, were you aware of the fact that Ms. Schaffer had been quoted in numerous news articles about her involvement regarding Madison? There have been a number of stories. I am not sure whether the Administration was aware of this, a series of some 18 pages of 3 memos that Ms. Beverly Bassett Schaffer had given to The New York Times in February 1992; I don't know whether you were aware of those in 1994 or not?

Mr. GEARAN. I don't recall that, sir.

Senator DODD. Were you aware of the news stories and her public statements?

Mr. GEARAN. My understanding certainly was that she had said there was no issue of preferred treatment for Madison Guaranty. Senator DODD. She had publicly said that?

Mr. GEARAN. She had said that previously, correct.

Senator DODD. Mr. Chairman, the reason I raise that is because, I think, in terms of the issue of sort of a common sense approach, and I will listen very careful to your answers to Mr. Ben-Veniste as well, but the idea that someone who has already publicly gone on the record and made it quite clear in a public domain what their views were, the idea that you then get someone to reverse themselves, common sense would indicate that would be pretty unwise. Even if there were those who wanted to try and do it, it is a pretty dangerous tactic to take.

I think it may be worthwhile to point that out, that she was on a public record of having stated what her views were regarding that. So the idea you are going to then get her to reverse herself somehow publicly would be terribly short-sighted?

Mr. GEARAN. Right.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. And indeed, you have acknowledged that you may not recall now that the matter was gone into in such substance by Ms. Bassett. One of the things she testified about was that she felt she had been misquoted by the Times in her recitation of these events, and she wrote lengthy letters to Mr. Gerth at the Times, bringing to his attention the facts as she recollected them. And those letters have been made a part of this record.

So there was, back in 1992, 2 years before this conversation had occurred, considerable discussion about Ms. Bassett's recollection in the public domain, that she had stated her recollection and in some detail, and that the conclusion was that no preferential treatment had been accorded.

Now as this matter resurfaces, 2 years later in 1994, we see that the White House is discussing how to get Ms. Bassett's story brought forward again, and to do the additional work of research regarding the issue. So if you look at the Siewert memo, you will see that there—did you see that at the time, was that circulated by Mr. Waldman?

Mr. GEARAN. I don't recall this, but—

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. It discussions the:

Authority to issue preferred stock, granted in 1979; Florida savings and loan, Federal Home Loan Bank Board approval for preferred stock, Mississippi experience, California experience; large banks began issuing preferred stock in 1982; use of preferred stock not confined to the business papers. Federal regulators acknowledged that the issuance of preferred stock was common in 1984. By 1984 the use of preferred stock by thrifts was widely discussed in the banking and legal press. Federal regulators expressly authorized the issuance of preferred stock by finance subsidiaries in 1984.

So, all of this was resultant from the discussion on January 4th; is that correct?

Mr. GEARAN. It was certainly—I don't know that it was specifically the 4th, Mr. Ben-Veniste, but it was certainly that period of time, the effort within the White House was to make sure we would have the accurate information, that if we were going to undertake this effort, that we should not misstate any part of the information.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. My last question is that—the heading description of this memorandum was that several media accounts have portrayed the 1985 plan to have Madison Guaranty issue preferred stock as somehow novel or unique. And this was a description of—and I have only read the topic headings—of all the literature to show that it was extremely common at the time that Madison Guaranty considered it; is that correct?

Mr. GEARAN. That's my reading of this, yes.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Mr. Chairman.

The CHAIRMAN. Senator Hatch.

OPENING COMMENTS OF SENATOR ORRIN G. HATCH

Senator HATCH. Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

Mr. Gearan, thank you for coming before the Committee. I certainly appreciate the important work you are doing at the Peace Corps.

Mr. GEARAN. Thank you, Senator.

Senator HATCH. I want to compliment you for it.

I would like to ask you some questions about the notes you took in your previous job as Deputy, or as Director of Communications at the White House. And I want to personally commend you for promptly turning these notes over to the Committee.

Mr. GEARAN. Thank you.

Senator HATCH. We appreciated that, because a number of people on the Committee really have become increasingly frustrated with what they consider to be obfuscation, delays, and other approaches that really have slowed down the investigation.

I would like you to explain some of the notes that you took from January 4th through the 9th, 1994. During last week's hearings, I touched upon whether your notes indicated that efforts were made to influence Beverly Bassett Schaffers' story. I now want to ask you about your discussions concerning the appointment of an Independent Counsel. This is an area that, naturally, I have some interest in as Chairman of the Judiciary Committee.

In your notes from January 5th, and that would be found on page 20569, you record that the President and First Lady were adamantly opposed to an Independent Counsel—I'm sorry, I will wait until you finish—did you find it?

Mr. GEARAN. 569?

Senator HATCH. That's what I have, 20569.

Mr. GEARAN. Yes, OK.

Senator HATCH. You record that the President and First Lady were very much opposed—

Mr. GEARAN. That's right.

Senator HATCH. —to an Independent Counsel being appointed to investigate Whitewater. Mack McLarty, the President's Chief of Staff, says in those notes that "HRC"—that's Hillary Rodham Clinton—"and BC"—I guess that's Bill Clinton—"don't want it." That's correct?

Mr. GEARAN. That's correct, sir.

Senator HATCH. And Harold Ickes chimed in that, "Discussion of counsel is the biggest," I guess, "F---ing waste of time," since they don't want it. That's correct?

Mr. GEARAN. That's correct.

Senator HATCH. During the January 7th meeting again, at page 20576, He says that a major problem with the Independent Counsel is that—do you have it—"HRC," Hillary Rodham Clinton, "adamantly opposed." That's correct as well?

Mr. GEARAN. Uh-huh.

Senator HATCH. The Independent Counsel has not been, to me, "the biggest F---ing waste of time." As you're no doubt aware, the Independent Counsel's investigation has lead to Grand Jury indictments on at least 21 counts against Jim McDougal and even the Sitting Governor of Arkansas, Jim Guy Tucker, and has led to the conviction of the number three official at the Justice Department, Webb Hubbell.

Indeed, for the first time in history, the First Lady has been called to testify before a Federal Grand Jury. And the investigation could lead, and may very well lead, to even more charges against others, and of course, there are others against whom indictments have been raised.

Now the participants in these meetings—that you have in your notes, and the President and Mrs. Clinton were opposed to the Independent Counsel because they felt that they had done nothing wrong and that the Counsel was unnecessary; is that right?

Mr. GEARAN. Yes, sir. If I might, I don't believe Mr. Ickes' comments was that it is a waste of time. I believe I would read my notes that it's a waste of time at this meeting to prolong a discussion about it.

Senator HATCH. You thought that's what he meant by that?

Mr. GEARAN. That's how I would read it, sir, yeah.

Senator HATCH. That's the way you would read it, but what is your recollection?

Mr. GEARAN. I don't recall him—

Senator HATCH. Could it have been the other meaning, though?

Mr. GEARAN. I'm sorry?

Senator HATCH. Do you recall exactly what he meant in your opinion, or could it have been the way it appears to me?

Mr. GEARAN. Senator, I guess from the rest of the notes, where he outlined what we should be concentrating on, it was typical certainly for Mr. Ickes to move a meeting along.

Senator HATCH. But in essence you don't know if that's what he meant by it or not, you just presume that it was?

Mr. GEARAN. That's how I would read my notes.

Senator HATCH. You read it that way but you don't recall?

Mr. GEARAN. That's correct.

Senator HATCH. I think it could be read the other way too. And you agree with that?

Mr. GEARAN. I agree that's how I would read my notes.

Senator HATCH. But it could be read the other way?

Senator DODD. If you look at—what page are we on here, on 69?

Senator HATCH. No, this is—

Senator DODD. At the bottom, what you have underlined, "Discussion of counsel."

Senator HATCH. Let me withdraw that question. Let's move on. That's fine with me. I will take your feelings about it. But I also see, in your notes, that several White House officials argued that an Independent Counsel should not be sought; is that correct?

Mr. GEARAN. That's correct.

Senator HATCH. I presume after the Independent Counsel bill would be reauthorized, because the Independent Counsel could not be, as the notes say "controlled"; is that right?

Mr. GEARAN. I'm sorry, Senator. Could you repeat the question?

Senator HATCH. I presume that when they said that an Independent Counsel should not be sought, that the bill had expired so if an Independent Counsel would be reauthorized, one of the things they were concerned about is that the Independent Counsel could not be "controlled"?

Mr. GEARAN. No, I think my notes use Independent Counsel and Special Counsel interchangeably.

Senator HATCH. I am referring to 20567. For example, in the January 5th meeting at page 20567, Bernie Nussbaum says that an Independent Counsel is "subject to no control"—

Mr. GEARAN. Yes.

Senator HATCH. —right?

Mr. GEARAN. That's what my notes says.

Senator HATCH. During the January 7th meeting, 20575, your notes say, "We cannot affect the scope of the prosecutor." Right?

Mr. GEARAN. Correct.

Senator HATCH. Now to me, a fair reading of these statements is that people in these meetings wanted to prevent the appointment of an Independent Counsel because they wanted to exercise control over his or her investigation. Wouldn't you say that's a reasonable conclusion?

Mr. GEARAN. No, Senator.

Senator HATCH. You don't?

Mr. GEARAN. I don't.

Senator HATCH. What do you think they meant by those things?

Mr. GEARAN. I think, as I've tried to testify, this was an issue of—a question of, and Mr. Nussbaum particularly outlines a history of other Special Counsels or Independent Counsels that could stray beyond in length in time from their original scope and charge, that's, I think, the tenor of my notes and certainly my best recollection for you.

Senator HATCH. I will accept that. During your January 4th meeting when you discussed the appointment of the Independent Counsel, your notes at page 20566 indicate that the First Lady enters and says, "Looks like a meeting I might be interested in." Is that right?

Mr. GEARAN. That's correct.

Senator HATCH. Did the First Lady, at that time or at any other time, express concerns during the meeting that an Independent

Counsel should not be appointed because of her concerns that a Counsel might not be controlled or might not——

Mr. GEARAN. No.

Senator HATCH. —be somebody acceptable?

Mr. GEARAN. No, sir.

Senator HATCH. Did anyone in any of these meetings discuss an attempt to control Justice Department investigations?

Mr. GEARAN. No. No, Senator. In fact, I think some of my notes reflect the independence of the Attorney General. I think people at the meeting understood that our Attorney General is fiercely independent.

Senator HATCH. If they didn't what do your January 8th notes mean at page 20579, where Mr. Ickes says, "Kendall attempted to talk to Alan Carver who was supervising Donald Mackay's investigation into Whitewater at the time." Mr. Ickes calls Mr. Carver a "bad guy," who wouldn't talk to Mr. Kendall without some FBI agents present; is that correct?

Mr. GEARAN. My notes reflect that, yes.

Senator HATCH. They reflect that, OK. Then Mr. Ickes says, "Those guys are," I take it, "F---ing us blue." Is that correct?

Mr. GEARAN. That's what my notes indicate.

Senator HATCH. And what do you understand Mr. Ickes to have meant by that?

Mr. GEARAN. I would read this, Senator, as a follow-up to the initial entry from that meeting, where Mr. Nussbaum argues against a Special Prosecutor. And I think Harold's observation here is that Alan Carver, who apparently is at the Department of Justice, is a tough guy and that they were not particularly treating the matter with kid gloves.

Senator HATCH. And you think that's all he meant by that?

Mr. GEARAN. I think, read in the context of another discussion of a Special Prosecutor, Bernie's argument against it, that that's how I can read my notes.

Senator HATCH. Mr. Ickes was very concerned, he didn't want a Special Counsel?

Mr. GEARAN. I don't recall Mr. Ickes' view more than just moving the process along to make sure that we had the material, and the information and the Q&A's and the chronology together.

Senator HATCH. I guess what I am asking is how could Mr. Carver and Mr. Mackay be problems if Mr. Carver was only doing his job to carefully investigate Whitewater. Wouldn't a fair reading of your notes seem to suggest that there was an attempt to influence his investigation, that he spurned, that Carver spurned?

Mr. GEARAN. I am not sure what—I am not sure of your point, Senator.

Senator HATCH. Well, as I read the notes, they were concerned about Carver, who was "a bad guy," who wouldn't talk to Mr. Kendall without some FBI agents present. Mr. Ickes says, "That guy is F---ing us blue." It seems to me a fair reading would suggest that there might have been an attempt to influence the investigation and Carver spurned it?

Mr. GEARAN. I am not aware of anything to that effect, Senator. I think it makes sense when read in context with the previous argument that Mr. Nussbaum was making all of that week and that Harold's response was somewhat similar to, it is not as if the Justice Department investigation that was ongoing was treating us easy by it.

Senator HATCH. Is it your testimony, for the record, that there was no attempt to influence Alan Carver or Donald Mackay in this matter?

Mr. GEARAN. Yes, sir.

Senator HATCH. What would anyone hope to gain by controlling the investigation into Whitewater? The President and First Lady had promised to be fully open with the Committee, with the Special Prosecutor, with the American people on Whitewater. If that's the case, then it seems to me the only interest should be in getting out all the facts and not controlling the investigation. But you are saying that that wasn't what went on?

Mr. GEARAN. No, no, Senator. I am not aware of any effort to control the investigation. I think what I am trying to testify to this Committee is during this period the Clintons had submitted their files to the Department of Justice at the end of December, and that they felt that was complying as best they could with the investigation. There was no effort, and I don't believe my notes reflect an effort, to try to control anyone at the Department, and recognizing that we had a very fiercely independent Attorney General.

Senator HATCH. Some think a fair reading of your notes on January 7th, at page 20376, where David Gergen says, "Once a Special Prosecutor is appointed, Reno is boxed in" could mean that it would be hard for Attorney General Reno to interfere; is that a fair reading, or again—

Mr. GEARAN. Senator, I think this was all in the context of the fact, as I've tried to testify, that frequent Independent Counsels' histories replete with the Counsel's own criticism, that it goes beyond its anticipated duration, and it takes on a life of its own. I think that's the point of Mr. Gergen's comments here, I think, that the Attorney General would be boxed, is that the matter is out of her hands at that point.

Senator HATCH. I have just a few more but I am afraid that I have gone over—

The CHAIRMAN. Well, in the interest of continuity, Senator, Senator Sarbanes has agreed to let you continue and I thank him. We will save time.

Senator HATCH. Let me see if I can move it along. At another point in your notes, on January 5th, this is 20567, there is a discussion of Independent Counsels and the people were complaining in these notes, as I view them, that some Independent Counsels can be good, and some in their words can be bad. Is that a fair statement?

Mr. GEARAN. Well, I think it is sort of a cliché or slang approach to the two kinds of—the two generic—

Senator HATCH. Yes, it goes without saying really. Bernie Nussbaum says that a "bad" Independent Counsel, one appointed from the "outside," in these notes, and "decides a smell of corruption and can show some things of those people close around the principal," but then he goes on to say that there can be "good" Independent Counsels who undertake a 3- to 4-year investigation, and then "will have written 400-page report." That's what your notes say; right?

Mr. GEARAN. Yes, sir.

Senator HATCH. Did anyone discuss influencing Attorney General Reno concerning who she should choose as an Independent Counsel in this matter?

Mr. GEARAN. No.

Senator HATCH. Nobody, to your knowledge?

Mr. GEARAN. No, sir.

Senator HATCH. To your knowledge, did anyone attempt to influence Attorney General Reno to choose, in Bernie Nussbaum's words, a "good" Independent Counsel, not a bad one?

Mr. GEARAN. No, sir.

Senator HATCH. On the day before January 7th at page 20576 now, you will recall that Mr. Ickes says that there are major problems with the Special Counsel. The first was that "HRC," Hillary Rodham Clinton, "adamantly opposed." That's correct?

Mr. GEARAN. That's correct.

Senator HATCH. The second was that "Reno has shut the door." What does that mean?

Mr. GEARAN. I would read that to mean that the Attorney General would make up her own mind about the Independent Counsel.

Senator HATCH. Well, the way I would read it, and I think a fair reading, is the phrase suggests that someone went to Attorney General Reno and that she rejected any attempt to influence her. That's the way I would read it and I think most others would read it as well.

Mr. GEARAN. I am not aware of that, Senator.

Senator HATCH. I would expect nothing less from her because she is a very fine person, but that's the way I would read that.

Mr. GEARAN. I am not aware of that, Senator.

Senator HATCH. You are not aware of anybody going to her and asking for special treatment, or for a good counsel versus a bad counsel?

Mr. GEARAN. That's right.

Senator HATCH. I think the reason that we get a little upset about it here is because if you go back to Roger Altman's diary, it reads, "Maggie's strong inference"—I can't get those next two words but it's "that the White House was trying to negotiate the scope"—what are these two words—"inference was that the White House was trying to negotiate the scope of an Independent Counsel with Reno and having enormous difficulty."

See, that's what causes us a great deal of angst here, and when we see this kind of language in your notes, it is consistent with that. You can see why I have taken the interpretation I have.

Mr. GEARAN. Senator, this is the first time I have seen this. I am not aware of that, as I've testified.

Senator HATCH. Is it just a coincidence then, less than 2 weeks after you had this discussion where you took these notes, Attorney General Reno went ahead and chose what some think was a "good" Independent Counsel, Robert Fiske, who many have criticized as failing to investigate fully the events surrounding Whitewater?

This is what's bothering a lot of people and these notes lend a lot of credibility that there was an attempt to manipulate this process, and to get somebody who was easier rather than somebody who would do the job.

Now during the time that your meetings took place, Attorney General Reno was considering whether to appoint a Special Prosecutor to investigate Whitewater. At this time the Independent Counsel statute had lapsed, as I recall, and the Attorney General chose Robert Fiske on January 20th, to be her Special Prosecutor. Unlike the Independent Counsel, the Special Prosecutor was under the control of the Justice Department and therefore ultimately the President—

The CHAIRMAN. Senator, I am going to ask you, because—

Senator HATCH. I have two paragraphs to go. Let me make these points and I will quit.

As Chairman of the Judiciary Committee, I am gravely concerned at any discussion by White House officials to influence the workings of the Justice Department, particularly when it conducts ongoing criminal investigations into the White House itself. And I don't need to remind anyone of what happened with Watergate when President Nixon attempted to interfere with the investigation of the Special Prosecutor there.

Last time when I questioned Ms. Sherburne and Mr. Kendall about these notes, I was very concerned that the White House officials appeared to be attempting to influence the story of an important witness, Beverly Bassett Schaffer, in this investigation. And Ms. Sherburne agreed that the notes could be read that way.

The possibility that the White House officials might attempt to influence or tamper with an ongoing investigation into their actions, or into the actions of the President and his aides, does raise questions about the integrity and fairness of the Administration of justice in our Nation. And so I intend to pursue these questions until we get good answers to them.

Now, I understand you have been very forthright here today, and I appreciate it, and I appreciate the work you are doing at the Peace Corps, but I think these questions have to be asked and I think there have to be answers to them.

Mr. GEARAN. If I might, Senator, the only text I can provide to you for that period of time in terms of your last point about Ms. Schaffer is our effort at that period of time was to have a new affirmative effort within the White House to try to get the truth and the facts out in this way. That's what these meetings evidence, putting together the Q&A's, putting together chronology to try to state the facts, and the background, and the history of this Whitewater matter.

In order to do that, there needed to be information brought together, and that accounts for my notes which talk about attorneys looking at it or an independent panel of regulators to try to get those facts amassed. Those are the meetings that I participated in, Senator. It was an effort as Communications Director to make sure, when we were representing any fact on behalf of the White House, that it not be an error. And this was the week immediately after a period of time when we had to clarify when the documents went over to the Department of Justice, so we—there were press stories at the time about White House credibility and White House handling of this matter. That's the context of the meeting. That's certainly my recollection of the meetings that Mr. Ickes held.

The CHAIRMAN. I want to thank my colleagues, and because the Senator did want to complete his thought we have gone over 10 minutes, we will add that to your time in fairness.

I want to make an observation, and if you would put up the last set of notes concerning Maggie Williams' comment. Let's see the date. It is January 6, exactly while this is going on—and we will come back to this note—but this is what I believe the Senator was driving at and I wasn't aware of this. I have seen this note before, but it becomes quite apparent that when they say that Janet Reno has shut the door, when you look at this in connection with other events, your notes reveal that the White House was attempting to negotiate the scope with the Attorney General.

Your notes of the same day, or day after, say she shut the door. I mean, let's not fool ourselves. This wasn't press—people were attempting to negotiate the scope with the Attorney General. Now, you may or may not be aware of who those people were, but it is pretty obvious that was the context. Any other interpretation, I believe is strained. So I share that with you.

Senator Sarbanes.

Senator SARBANES. Senator Dodd.

OPENING COMMENTS OF SENATOR CHRISTOPHER J. DODD

Senator DODD. Thank you, Mr. Chairman. Thank you, Mark.

Let me also join with Senator Hatch in commending you for the work you are doing at the Peace Corps, but also joining Senator Hatch in commending you for the promptness in which these documents were turned over when discovered. Others have made other suggestions, and I think it is to Senator Hatch's credit that he recognizes that this ought not to be an issue, how you found these documents and what you thought had happened with them and how they ended up here, and I agree with him on that.

First, let me respond to my friend and colleague from New York. As I recall it, first of all, the appointment of Mr. Fiske was highly commended by everyone. At the time of his appointment, it was recognized, and in fact, I think my friend from New York was one of those who also suggested this was a first-rate appointment, had all the credentials in the world to do a great job. It was widely reported that Mr. Fiske wrote his own charter when it came down to the scope. So while it may be intriguing to look at people's own desires and so forth, and what they'd like to have happen, the bottom line is that Mr. Fiske wrote his own charter. What is the date of these notes? Is this the 5th of January?

Mr. GEARAN. I'm sorry?

Senator DODD. The date of your notes—

Mr. GEARAN. It's throughout the year.

Senator DODD. It's a series of dates, isn't it?

Mr. GEARAN. Yes, Senator Dodd. Beginning with the first note I have, Senator, is the 4th of January.

Senator DODD. And it goes through until when?

Mr. GEARAN. I believe the 8th of January.

Senator DODD. Do you recall when, in fact, President Clinton called for the appointment of an Independent Counsel?

Mr. GEARAN. I believe it was the next week, it was during the foreign trip that the President was on, as I recall.

Senator DODD. If I said the 12th of January——

Mr. GEARAN. That would make sense.

Senator DODD. On the 12th of January, President Clinton calls for the appointment of an Independent Counsel. Do you recall when the Independent Counsel was appointed?

Mr. GEARAN. I do not.

Senator DODD. Well, if I said the 20th of January, does that seem about right?

Mr. GEARAN. That was what was referenced this morning.

Senator DODD. The reason I make that point, while we can go back and examine all these notes and so forth, the fact of the matter is that within a week of these notes being taken, President Clinton called for the appointment of an Independent Counsel. Within roughly a week after that, in fact, Mr. Fiske was appointed.

Now again that may not seem like much to anybody else but it seems like you have to find out exactly what happened after these notes were taken. It is not as if we don't know what happened. We know what happened. If other things occurred, the notes and things, people want to read into it. If you know what happens, the President names or calls for an Independent Counsel, going back and reviewing these notes, the context of that seems to me cannot be neglected or avoided. So I think it is very, very important to make that point.

Second, you know, I find if it weren't so significant and important, it would be almost amusing that anybody on this side of the table would find it mystifying that someone in public life would be antsy about the appointment of an Independent Counsel. People sitting around saying what does this mean, or heaven forbid, someone might be opposed. The idea in public life of an Independent Counsel, I find hard to believe someone sitting at this table looking over the last 20 years of his life might be antsy about that.

That may come as a shock to some of my colleagues, but by and large, I find people in public life are not enthusiastic about a public Independent Counsel being named, looking into 20 years. So common sense would dictate what you reflected, at least to this Senator, is people sitting around you get a lot of press inquiries, you got a lot angst. Again, I don't find that terribly novel in a Washington context.

Let me go back, if I can, because the question of the independence is an important point and the suggestion has been made about the ability to influence. I would like to turn your attention to page 20570. As I read this——

Senator SARBANES. Would the Senator yield for a moment?

Senator DODD. I would be glad to yield.

Senator SARBANES. On the Independent Counsel issue, it was a subject of considerable controversy in the Congress, whether the Independent Counsel law ought to be extended when it expired. Indeed, many of my Republican colleagues opposed extending the Independent Counsel law. In the end, it was extended and we are now proceeding under it. But the notion that there weren't legitimate points being raised about the extension or nonextension of the Independent Counsel doesn't square with the record.

Senator DODD. I thank my colleague for reminding us of that and, in fact, I know today that there are people in Congress, on both sides of the aisle, who have some serious reservations about Independent Counsels.

I will come back to the point about the Attorney General. I was intrigued in your notes about the good-hearted and bad-hearted. We see what happens. You become a self-fulfilling prophecy about what happens when these operations are established. The complaints, in my view, about Mr. Walsh and how long that went on, I think, were legitimate, frankly. As a Democrat I will tell you that. I opposed, as I pointed out in this Committee before, the establishment of an Independent Counsel to look into the October Surprise. In 1992, the allegation that President George Bush had been flying to Europe to meet with people on the Iran-Contra was ridiculous, in my view.

So I know I am not alone in my reservations about what Independent Counsels can do and what your notes seem to reflect is what is common discussion, maybe not in too many public circles, but I can tell you an awful lot of people here feel that this needs to be re-examined, how Independent Counsel's function because of the very observations you make in these notes. Maybe others won't say so but I will. I know there are colleagues on this Committee who feel this way about it. So to suggest that somehow the White House was acting in a way or talking about this and something that anyone will find strange on this side of the table I don't think really is credible.

Let me go to the bottom of page 20570 and as I read that line, we have that up—it's hard to read, "Republican appointee is running investigation." That's Mr. Mackay?

Mr. GEARAN. Right.

Senator DODD. Second line, GT or Grand Jury—"GJ is——?"

Mr. GEARAN. It says, "Citizens available to look at evidence."

Senator DODD. The next line?

Mr. GEARAN. Says, "And an independent Attorney General."

Senator DODD. What is the point? What are you saying here with that paragraph?

Mr. GEARAN. I guess I would read this, Senator Dodd, as Mr. Ickes saying at the, four lines up, get the argument on why not a Special Counsel. One, there is no evidence of wrongful acts, you can't appoint someone every time there is a charge. Two, there has to be a basis for this. Three, we have a Republican appointee who was running the investigation and you have Grand Jury available. When I look at this and then review the talking points that were shared with me at my deposition on Monday night, Senator, they track, frankly, the talking points of the argument that was being made within the White House on why there should not be a Special Counsel.

Senator DODD. That, in fact, with a, "Republican appointee is"—what is that word? Pursuing?

Mr. GEARAN. Running.

Senator DODD. —"running investigation," that the independence of a Grand Jury. And what you are identifying here "and an Independent Attorney General," in effect, reflecting the observation about the Attorney General.

Mr. GEARAN. The whole point is that if the question is reflecting the independence, that Mr. Mackay was a well-known and respected Republican, as the next page reflects, as well as the fact that there is a Grand Jury available to look at the evidence and the fact that we have an independent Attorney General.

Senator DODD. That was enough in a sense to ensure the, kind of, independence of the investigation?

Mr. GEARAN. That is how I read that as an argument posed by Mr. Ickes.

Senator DODD. Second, let me go back to the issue, and the pages on this, on Mr. Ickes, and I find that some people just get overly fascinated with the colorful language in your memo. I am not interested in that so much as I am on the point that was raised by Senator Hatch over whether or not on the appointment of the Independent Counsel, the reaction of Mrs. Clinton and the reaction of Mr. Ickes.

Let me ask the question Senator Hatch asked you. Is there any doubt in your mind about what Mr. Ickes was intending by his points of there was no point in pursuing the discussion, that in fact it reneged. Now it left it unclear in my mind when Senator Hatch raised the question that maybe this is open to some different interpretation in your mind. If there is, you ought to make that clear, if it is not, you ought to make that clear as well.

Mr. GEARAN. Thank you. I thought how I left it with Senator Hatch is that is not how I would read my notes. There is not a doubt in my mind about this, that is, certainly when you look at the context of the notes, it was certainly Harold's style to move the meeting along, to say it is a waste of time and to go through the items that he thought this meeting should be concentrating on seemed logical to me.

Senator DODD. It is a waste of time because the view at that juncture of the President and Mrs. Clinton was they were opposed to an Independent Counsel?

Mr. GEARAN. That's correct. We should move on to determine if the White House effort at this period of time was to put together this affirmative strategy, to getting the truth out on Whitewater, then we should move on to concentrating our best efforts to putting together the Q&A's, putting together the chronology, putting together the types of things that would help facilitate that.

Senator DODD. Again, to make the point, I will turn it back over to Mr. Ben-Veniste but what is the date of that discussion where the reference is made to the Clintons' opposition to the appointment of an Independent Counsel?

Mr. GEARAN. January 5th.

Senator DODD. January 5th?

Mr. GEARAN. If I am reading from the same memo you are referring to.

Senator DODD. To make the point again, a week later on the 12th, the President, in fact, calls for the appointment of an Independent Counsel. So, obviously whatever happens between the 5th and 12th, they changed their mind?

Mr. GEARAN. Right.

Senator DODD. Thank you.

Mr. Ben-Veniste.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. To go back to the discussion of the "good" Independent Counsel versus the "bad" Independent Counsel, my sense of what you have said and what is contained in your notes is that even if someone is good in the sense of faithful to his or her task in getting the evidence, analyzing the evidence and making a decision straight down the line on that evidence, there still is, after all that process, a great deal of pressure on that individual who is the Independent Counsel to come up with something at the end of the day.

Mr. GEARAN. That is certainly the flavor of what Mr. Nussbaum was saying. At the bottom of 567, he says someone who was "appointed for 6 to 9 months, wrote report, didn't expand and went home." I think his point was, as I have said, the length and expense and—

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. It takes an extraordinary person with a great deal of self-confidence and professional integrity to conclude at the end of the day that, indeed, there is nothing there and not come forward with some indictment as we have seen recently, one multicount indictment that was reduced to a misdemeanor and so forth. A difficult decisionmaking job, even with the best of intentions, to come back and say, yes, I have looked, there isn't anything there. And that has happened. It has happened, but it seems to be a balance between the law that is on the books and the individual who gets the position.

Mr. GEARAN. That's right. I think the point generally is that it would be difficult for someone to go back. I think he used the case in New York. He would be afraid that he would have conducted this investigation and come up with nothing.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Again, when the use of Ms. Wright is made as an example; explain how that came about.

Mr. GEARAN. Mr. Ben-Veniste, I would like to be quite clear about it, that in fairness, as I said to Ms. Wright particularly, this was an extreme example of what could be a really unwarranted prosecution, I think was the point that Mr. Nussbaum was making. At no time, did he suggest that there was any evidence or any factual basis for her to be charged with anything. This was consonant with his general argument about an Independent Counsel or Special Counsel.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Now with respect to the points that were made about Mr. Mackay. Mr. Mackay was a Republican appointee and a career Department of Justice employee in the Criminal Division; is that what was discussed at that time?

Mr. GEARAN. I think, as my notes reflect, is that he had served in the Nixon and Ford Administration as a U.S. Attorney in the Southern District in Illinois and then to the Department of Tax in Illinois and he had been a career prosecutor.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. So the point was that an individual line prosecutor for the Justice Department who was a career individual who had been appointed by a Republican President and had served in Republican Administrations would have the credibility to conduct a fair and impartial investigation without implicating all of the surrounding ambiance or baggage that the appointment of an Independent or Special Prosecutor would involve; is that correct?

Mr. GEARAN. That's correct.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Then the discussion about the career people at the Department of Justice and what the White House had experienced up to that point in dealing with them was that the people at the Department of Justice, the career individuals such as Mr. Carver were not giving any favored treatment to the White House.

Mr. GEARAN. That's how I would read that, there was no—

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. The idea of "bleeping" us blue," in colorful language, meant to convey that they weren't getting any kind of special treatment out of these career people at the Department of Justice.

Mr. GEARAN. I think it is a colorful way to express that independence of the Department, yes.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Let me share for the benefit of Senator Hatch and others, since we have had the testimony of the career individuals about this, so that there is no misunderstanding of their perspective of what was going on, from Mr. Alan Carver's testimony of October 17, 1995. At line 17, he said: "I don't think it got to a disagreement. Again, I think what it got to was some discussion to the effect that we want interviews, and it is important to have them and we want to get them scheduled and get them done. And we want them under conditions which will be credible and that will be in accord with the usual way the FBI does interviews."

"And in dealing with people who are not totally accustomed to that environment," which I take it was people at the White House, who were the subject of these interviews at this point, "as you do when you are dealing with people all the time in investigations and trying to work that out, so it was that sort of thing. I don't see it, in my mind, as a contest or an antagonistic situation. But I think there was apparently a sense that it should be done a little differently than the way we wanted to do it," meaning Department of Justice career investigators, "and we wanted to do it professionally and in accordance with the standard operating procedure of the FBI. It was as simple as that and we weren't going to do it any other way."

Then Mr. McDowell testified at page 137.

"Question: As the result of those interviews," meaning the ones which had taken place just before your meeting in January, "did it appear to you that anyone at the White House had acted unlawfully?"

"Answer: No. Although, frankly, I haven't—if I have ever seen the interviews, I have forgotten them but it was not an issue as we were turning the case over to Fiske. We didn't think we had any evidence of any unlawful behavior."

"Question: And did you uncover, putting aside unlawful behavior, any evidence of improper motive?"

"Answer: I don't recall any, no."

Finally, with respect to Mr. Mackay, at page 44 of his testimony. "The only thing I remember about that was Mr. Carver basically complaining, I guess, to Mr. McDowell that the bureau was dragging its feet," meaning the FBI, "in conducting all the interviews, not just Mr. Nussbaum. I sort of have a faint recollection of maybe later on Mr. Carver complaining to Mr. McDowell in my presence that the FBI was holding back on the Nussbaum interview."

So these discussions were going on and Mr. Carver, who was the person who was being complained about, said in his testimony before this Committee under oath that he was going to stick to the regular procedures and wasn't going to deviate from them, that the White House people might not have liked that, but that is what he was going to do.

So, that, in essence, all falls within the composite picture of Mr. Mackay as a credible person, as an experienced person who could conduct this investigation with credibility under the aegis of the Department of Justice and that from the standpoint of technical analysis, putting aside political analysis, which eventually ruled the day, that the appointment of Independent Counsel was not necessary in this circumstance. Is that what this discussion essentially was about?

Mr. GEARAN. Mr. Ben-Veniste, that is the first time I have obviously heard that testimony. Certainly I'm not aware of it. As I have testified here, Mr. Ickes' comments on Mr. Carver in the context of those notes, as it illustrates again Mr. Nussbaum's argument against a Special Prosecutor is such that there was clear independence by the career folks at Justice, and that was quite clear in his language.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Mr. Ickes was saying so in direct and colorful language?

Mr. GEARAN. Apparently, yes.

The CHAIRMAN. Before I recognize Senator Grams, I have to tell you, I noticed that there is a propensity for you to have almost a detailed recollection when it is something that is exculpatory or that would minimize a reasonable interpretation of your notes. How anyone can interpret your notes of January 8th—let's put it up on the Elmo. Whitewater, January 8, Ward Room.

Mr. GEARAN. What is the number, Senator?

The CHAIRMAN. That's your last page of notes, "Whitewater, January 8th." See it?

Mr. GEARAN. Yes.

The CHAIRMAN. On or about what time did that meeting start? Where was the Ward Room?

Mr. GEARAN. The Ward Room is in the West Wing of the White House.

The CHAIRMAN. Why were you there?

Mr. GEARAN. I recall during this week a series of meetings, as I have said, where the White House was trying to put together efforts to speak more publicly through op eds and appearances on television shows and related matters and in more detail—

The CHAIRMAN. At the same time the White House was attempting to prevent the release of various records from the public, as you testified; isn't that true?

Mr. GEARAN. I'm not sure—

The CHAIRMAN. Didn't you say that they wanted the documents subpoenaed by the Department of Justice so that they wouldn't be made public?

Mr. GEARAN. I hope I testified that my understanding was that the request for the subpoena was to protect the confidentiality of those—

The CHAIRMAN. Yes, from the public, so that they would not be made public; is that correct?

Mr. GEARAN. Senator—

The CHAIRMAN. We will go over that, because we have other indications. This isn't an isolated meeting. People are working, assembling. It ties together. What is the next line in your notes?

Mr. GEARAN. "BN," which I would read as Bernie Nussbaum, "argument against Special Prosecutor."

The CHAIRMAN. Let's go down to the next one.

Mr. GEARAN. "HI," Harold Ickes. "Alan Carver at Department of Justice—bad guy."

The CHAIRMAN. He says he is what? Read it.

Mr. GEARAN. My notes say, "bad guy."

The CHAIRMAN. What does that mean?

Mr. GEARAN. I think it means tough guy.

The CHAIRMAN. A tough guy is now a bad guy or a bad guy is now a tough guy? It doesn't say he is tough. It says he is a bad guy. Why is he a bad guy? You had a discussion about this. You don't remember that?

Mr. GEARAN. Senator, my notes reflect as it goes on to say, "When Kendall called, when he called on speakerphone were two FBI agents and Jim Nixon."

The CHAIRMAN. Go ahead.

Mr. GEARAN. "These guys are [expletive deleted] us blue."

The CHAIRMAN. This wasn't usual. The Justice Department was viewed, if you take Mr. Ickes' views, as bad guys?

Mr. GEARAN. I would take it to mean they are being tough and independent.

The CHAIRMAN. Independent? Is it bad if they are independent?

Mr. GEARAN. No, but when read in the context of—

The CHAIRMAN. You are a great notetaker. We asked before why you took these notes and even included some of this colorful language, and you said because that is my training. He didn't say "independent." If he said "independent" you would have put it down; isn't that true?

Mr. GEARAN. I may have, but—

The CHAIRMAN. Now wait a minute. You are not telling me that you put "bad" down when he really said "independent"?

Mr. GEARAN. No, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. You are not suggesting to me when he says these guys are giving it to us blue that that had anything to do with independent; is that true?

Mr. GEARAN. Senator, what I am trying to do is to help this Committee—

The CHAIRMAN. I am asking you to be responsive to my questions. Nothing there suggests they are independent. You suggested they are not happy with the Justice Department. Isn't that true? Yes or no?

Mr. GEARAN. Senator, I think Mr. Ickes, this is probably best a question for Mr. Ickes—

The CHAIRMAN. I am not asking you to characterize your feeling. I am asking you to reflect about what people said and what took place at that meeting.

Mr. GEARAN. My reflection of that meeting—

The CHAIRMAN. You are going to say that he really meant that they were independent. That's your characterization. Read it again and then tell me your conclusion.

Mr. GEARAN. "Bernie Nussbaum argument against Special Prosecutor Harold Ickes, Alan Carver at Department of Justice—bad guy. When Kendall called"—

The CHAIRMAN. Slow down. What did he say he was at Department of Justice, Carver?

Mr. GEARAN. "Harold Ickes, Alan Carver at Department of Justice—bad guy."

The CHAIRMAN. Why is he bad? Because he is independent?

Mr. GEARAN. Senator, I think what I can best provide to you—

The CHAIRMAN. But why is he a bad guy?

Mr. GEARAN. I'm sorry?

The CHAIRMAN. Why is he a bad guy?

Mr. GEARAN. I don't recall anything more than Harold responding, as I read this, and do my best to recall for you.

The CHAIRMAN. Well, he concludes with a rather colorful observation and conclusion, doesn't he?

Mr. GEARAN. He does.

The CHAIRMAN. Senator Grams.

OPENING COMMENTS OF SENATOR ROD GRAMS

Senator GRAMS. Thank you very much, Mr. Chairman,

Mr. Gearan, nice seeing you again today. We are talking about a series of meetings that you attended and took notes at. How would you describe these meetings? What was the purpose or the mood during these set of meetings that you attended?

Mr. GEARAN. To your second point, Senator, the mood was or the context was, at the beginning of this year, Mr. Ickes had just joined the White House staff as the Deputy Chief of Staff, and there was an effort, as one of my notes I believe say, that we should have an affirmative strategy within the White House to try to put together the information, we would need to get the truth out, to get out—the information that reporters were inquiring about in the best way we could. These meetings reflect two things, I believe. Number one, an effort within the White House to put together the information that would be needed to deal with these issues, whether that was a chronology or the question and answers or the other kinds of materials that these notes reference.

It is particularly important, Senator, because at this time at the beginning of January, there were questions about the White House handling of this matter, that the White House had announced Sunday that the documents were already at Justice. On Monday, we had to say there would be a delay because they were not there yet. The question was a network story, frankly, about the White House handling of this matter.

So, there was I think even an increased effort and need and recognition of the importance that we be correct, that we not misstate any particular fact because then the last thing we would need is to come back and have to restate something or correct something or to amend a statement that the White House issued.

Second, this was a period of time where there was an internal debate within the White House, which the notes are quite clear on, as to whether the President should call for an Independent Counsel or not. Those notes reflect the differing views on that matter. What I most recall certainly is the effort to try to be affirmative in our presentation and to make sure that we had the facts. Frankly, having worked for a little bit as a reporter, I found that a responsible thing to do, that we would have the correct information.

Senator GRAMS. All right. Now knowing what you know about these meetings, you left in August, about 8 months later. Your nomination to serve as Director of the Peace Corps was reported out of the Foreign Relations Committee on August 10, 1995; is that correct?

Mr. GEARAN. That's correct.

Senator GRAMS. Your nomination was confirmed by the Senate the next day, August 11, 1995?

Mr. GEARAN. That's correct.

Senator GRAMS. During this time, the Whitewater investigation was going full steam. You knew about these notes and these meetings. In fact, if you will recall, I had an opportunity to meet with you regarding your nomination to the Peace Corps and during our conversations, you never brought up the notes to the Whitewater incidents and we had no reason to talk about that. I didn't bring them up because I had no knowledge of your participation in that. So it wasn't part of our conversation. But the fact is that you were aware of these notes, you were aware of the subpoenas that had been issued dealing with this information and yet never offered these or never presented these notes ahead of time.

Mr. GEARAN. Senator, for the purposes of production during that period of time, I worked with my counsel to provide this Committee, the House Banking Committee, this predecessor committee, the Special Counsel, and the Independent Counsel any information that could be helpful and would be responsive to individual subpoenas or requests for information. These were not during that period of time.

Senator GRAMS. But you were aware of the investigation that was going on by this Committee and the House?

Mr. GEARAN. Certainly, Senator.

Senator GRAMS. No official request, I understand it, had come from this Committee asking for the documents before your confirmation. But I have heard your explanation for complying with subsequent requests or subpoenas. But at the time you didn't feel you had an obligation to turn over these notes ahead of this time?

Mr. GEARAN. Senator, at the time of my confirmation, which I think was the week before my appearance before this Committee, those documents I understood as being Communications Office files, and I did my very level best to respond to every inquiry that has been made. I have tried to do my best effort to respond at every step of the way to the various investigations that have gone on with this matter. I have worked hard to do that.

Senator GRAMS. These notes would not have been included in those efforts?

Mr. GEARAN. These notes were not responsive to any previous inquiry?

Senator GRAMS. When we were talking about the whole investigation dealing with Madison Guaranty Savings & Loan specifically and the investigation dealing with issues around Whitewater, and just to read some of the notes that were indicated, taken into your notes here, indicated that President Clinton called Mr. Hale several times. The notes indicate alleged conversations between Hale, McDougal, and Tucker about Madison problems, that Madison's financial problems, needing to get money into Madison, your notes reflect that these were discussed. You don't recall when you first learned of the allegations of the meetings again between Clinton, Hale, and McDougal.

So these were all in these notes, all dealing with the investigation, and while they might not have been specifically asked for in detail, but you knew they were within the scope of the investigation, but yet did not cooperate. I think it is more not of cooperation, but a lack of cooperation with this Committee.

Mr. GEARAN. Senator, the notes I think that you referred to were reporter's inquiries to me when I was the Director of Communications at the White House. Those were reporters' questions posed to me. I've done my very best to respond completely and accurately to every individual request of this Committee, and I will continue to do so. There has been no instance where I have not appeared before this Committee or the House Banking Committee or the Grand Jury on occasions or the Inspector General of the Department of the Treasury. I have tried my very level best to cooperate at every step of the way.

To the extent that these in your judgment would have been responsive in a previous instance, I would be happy to review this with my counsel, who worked with me on the production. But most sincerely, Senator, for 2 years, from the initial request from Mr. Fiske to Mr. Starr to the House Banking Committee to your predecessor committee to this Committee, which I respect the U.S. Senate for calling, I have done my best to respond.

Senator GRAMS. Were you asked by the Independent Counsel's Office at any time to produce these documents? If not specifically, at least documents related to anything dealing with Whitewater.

Mr. GEARAN. I have at the request of the Independent Counsel produced everything that was responsive.

Senator GRAMS. But these notes didn't come until January, but yet they dealt with Whitewater.

Mr. GEARAN. Senator, in terms of the Independent—in terms of this Committee, when I received requests and I personally have not been, but when the White House has been subpoenaed for these documents from the Committee, I have gone through them with the best care that I can take. They were segregated in my files for that purpose and certainly no effort was made to be anything but the most compliant with any request for information.

I honor the subpoena power of this Committee. I honor the subpoena power of any investigative authority. And there has been no effort on my part not to be compliant in every way. Personal appearances or documents or depositions—

The CHAIRMAN. Mr. Gearan, we have heard that.

Mr. CHERTOFF. I want to ask you a question. Frankly, I tell you, I have a vivid recollection of you being before the Banking Committee in July 1994. First of all, let's get it absolutely clear under oath on the record. The records, the notes you turned over on January 31, 1996, including notes of the meetings that you have been testifying about here and the notes of a 2-hour meeting, give or take a few minutes with Mr. Gerth and Mr. Lindsey, you had that in your possession in 1994; right?

Mr. GEARAN. Those were my files from the White House.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You were aware of their existence, right?

Mr. GEARAN. They were segregated in that group of files.

The CHAIRMAN. But you knew that you had the notes?

Mr. CHERTOFF. They were segregated and put aside in a certain area.

Mr. GERAN. That's correct.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Your notes and your handwriting; right?

Mr. GEARAN. That's correct.

Mr. CHERTOFF. On July 23, 1994, under oath before the Senate Banking Committee, at page 24 of your testimony, you were asked about an October 14th meeting you had with Jean Hanson from Treasury, where you received information, and the question you were asked was what you recalled about that meeting, and you answered on page 24:

Again, for the part of the meeting that I was at, these are the notes that I took because these were questions to Treasury and about an RTC matter. This was one of the first contacts I thought references that I can recall for Whitewater. This was not on my radar screen, Whitewater, at this point in time.

But in fact, 3 weeks before this October 14th meeting which you testified about under oath, you had sat down and had a lengthy meeting about Whitewater with Mr. Gerth and Mr. Lindsey. There is a telephone message to you on September 23rd, shortly before the October 14th meeting discussing Castle Grande, your own handwriting. You have questions about the Hale meeting on September 23rd. Within 3 weeks you have this October 14th meeting and yet you come before the Banking Committee and you swear that the October 14th meeting was the first time it was on your radar screen.

Yet if we had had the September 23rd telephone message, for example, we would have known quite to the contrary that it was all over your radar screen, that you were able to write about the three conversations David Hale had with Bill Clinton, that there was a meeting on Castle Grande. And I have to ask you, Mr. Gearan, it never occurred to you during your deposition in preparation for those hearings or during your sworn testimony under oath in 1994 when you were asked about whether Whitewater was on your radar screen, it never occurred to you to go back and look at those segregated notes and determine that in fact it was dead center on your radar screen?

Mr. GEARAN. Mr. Chertoff, as I testified in my deposition, I would not have placed this at that point in time. I have no reason to doubt it.

Mr. CHERTOFF. What does it say? September 23, 1993. You don't have to place it. Right in front of you it says September 23, 1993. There is a message from someone at The New York Times. Would you agree with me that September 23, 1993 is before October 14, 1993?

Mr. GEARAN. I would agree with that.

Mr. CHERTOFF. And that in your notes you had a document that indicated that on September 23rd, this reporter was anticipating doing a story tomorrow and had questions for you, which means that you—and you wrote down your notes of your conversation with Mr. Engleberg and in it there is discussion of Castle Grande and David Hale. This was right in your notes that you had segregated, absolutely conclusively demonstrating that 3 weeks before your October 14th meeting, you were dealing with this issue. Yet you came before the Senate and you didn't think those notes were relevant?

Mr. GEARAN. Mr. Chertoff, as I tried to say in my deposition, I did not recall that this had happened in September.

Mr. CHERTOFF. How do you explain September 23, 1993? Doesn't it say it there?

Mr. GEARAN. As I said, I have no reason to dispute that, Mr. Chertoff.

Mr. CHERTOFF. No, you had your notes segregated; right?

Mr. GEARAN. My point is this: The questions I have been asked and I have tried to be responsive to the Committee on is when was Whitewater on my radar screen. As my memory in my deposition and in my testimony from last year or today would be, I would not have placed it that early. But I have no reason to dispute that.

Mr. CHERTOFF. But Mr. Gearan, you had the notes. You didn't have to rely on your memory. The notes showed a 2-hour meeting with Gerth about David Hale.

The CHAIRMAN. Clearly you indicated that was not the first occasion. You might not know the exact month, but you had a pretty important conference with regard to White House personnel who were concerned about this meeting with Gerth and this interview. So you might have thought one was in September, but you indicated this was the first time. You said the meeting in October was the first contact. That wasn't true. You had this on your radar, but you said you didn't recall that. This was important. We are talking about the President, the First Lady, what they may have done, Castle Grande. You went in—by the way, is that your note?

Mr. GEARAN. Yes, Senator.

The CHAIRMAN. So you took that, then?

Mr. GEARAN. Yes, Senator.

The CHAIRMAN. You never reviewed it before you came before this Committee? You were aware of this contact, weren't you?

Mr. GEARAN. My notes from the Gerth meeting were not dated.

The CHAIRMAN. But you remembered the meeting.

Senator DODD. Can we give him a chance to answer. I appreciate your point. I understand that, but give him a chance to answer.

The CHAIRMAN. I am going to make an observation. You certainly knew that you had a rather extensive contact that lasted for a period of time with respect to this and you had noted this as well. So when you said, well, my first time was this other occasion, that was not correct.

Mr. CHERTOFF. And you talked to the President about it.

Senator DODD. Wait a second. Give him a chance to answer.

The CHAIRMAN. Is that true, that wasn't correct?

Senator DODD. You are saying what he's going to say, why don't you ask him if it wasn't correct.

Mr. GEARAN. Why don't you repeat the question, Mr. Chairman?

The CHAIRMAN. Didn't you have prior contact and wasn't this matter on your radar screen before the October meeting?

Mr. GEARAN. Mr. Chairman, I have stated previously that the October—

The CHAIRMAN. You are not being responsive to the question. I would like to know whether—

Senator DODD. Mr. Chairman, let him answer the question, with all due respect.

The CHAIRMAN. Well, with all due respect, the answer is not responsive. I am asking you whether your testimony—

Senator DODD. If you don't like the answer, that is one thing. That is perfectly legitimate. Let him answer.

The CHAIRMAN. I want a responsive answer. The question is this: In your testimony before this Committee, you said the October meeting was the first time Whitewater was on your radar screen? Now was that accurate?

Mr. GEARAN. If we could just put that up on the screen again, that would be helpful to me.

The CHAIRMAN. Page 24.

Mr. GEARAN. I think it says, "This was one of the first contacts, I thought, references I can recall for Whitewater."

The CHAIRMAN. Go ahead. Read the rest.

Mr. GEARAN. "This was not on my radar screen, Whitewater, at this point." What I can help you with and let me try to be responsive is that the best I can recall, this was one of my first contacts with Whitewater. My Gerth notes are not dated. So, I would have placed the story later. I don't believe they were wrote for several weeks. But I will accept that this conversation happened at this point in time in September.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Mr. Gearan, I want to put up S20454 through 56. This was a newspaper article Bruce Lindsey sent you. It says "Mark: FYI, Bruce—Judge expects to be indicted in SBA loans." This is S20454. We are putting it up. This is something that you received within days after the Gerth meeting for 2 hours. It is directed to you from Mr. Lindsey.

Mr. GEARAN. Mr. Chertoff, I don't know when I received it. I don't know when I received it. I don't dispute it was in my files.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You think you got it months after the article was written?

Mr. GEARAN. I don't know when I received it. My point is this, in terms of the radar screen at this period of time, because Mr. Lindsey was the principal point of contact on Arkansas matters, because he would be the person that I would solicit information from in the instance of the Gerth conversation, because there were so many names and players of which I was unfamiliar with and I was grateful that Mr. Lindsey was there because he was more knowledgeable than I—

Mr. CHERTOFF. This is not a responsive answer.

Senator DODD. Come on now.

The CHAIRMAN. Here is the problem. Our time is up. I want to make a point. In your notes—these are not just any notes. The notes of September 23rd, put them back up on the Elmo, please. Would you read that? "There are 3 occasions of"—

Mr. GEARAN. What is the number of that again, Senator?

The CHAIRMAN. The number is S20452.

Mr. GEARAN. I will read it from here. "There are 3 occasions of conversations with BC."

The CHAIRMAN. With Bill Clinton.

Mr. GEARAN. "February 1986—Bill Clinton meeting on Castle Grande."

The CHAIRMAN. Read the next one.

Mr. GEARAN. "Does Bill Clinton have recollection of meeting? If so, what happened?"

The CHAIRMAN. Then you have what? What does it say?

Mr. GEARAN. "No."

The CHAIRMAN. At the top right-hand side, what does it say?

Mr. GEARAN. "No recollection, doesn't believe it happened."

The CHAIRMAN. So you checked with somebody to see if the President had any recollection with respect to these meetings; is that correct?

Mr. GEARAN. I'd have checked with Mr. Lindsey, I believe, yes.

The CHAIRMAN. Now, you actually went back to the President of the United States, whether directly or through Mr. Lindsey, but when you came before this Committee and we asked you, you had no recollection of Whitewater being on your screen? This isn't just a report from a reporter. You actually went to a Presidential Assistant, Bruce Lindsey; right?

Mr. GEARAN. Yes.

The CHAIRMAN. You reported to him that there were three meetings. There were three meetings in 1986 and then, "Does Bill Clinton have recollection of the meeting? If so what happened?" That's your question; right?

Mr. GEARAN. That is I would assume Mr. Engleberg's question. That is my handwriting.

The CHAIRMAN. It is your handwriting. So somebody wanted to know. You then followed up on this.

Mr. GEARAN. I would have asked Mr. Lindsey.

The CHAIRMAN. Mr. Lindsey got an answer from whom?

Mr. GEARAN. I would take it to mean the President.

Senator DODD. Mr. Chairman, can I ask, what is the significance of all of this?

Mr. CHERTOFF. The significance is whether the testimony that he gave is accurate testimony and whether his failure to produce the records is justifiable.

Senator DODD. Beyond that, tell me the significance in the context of where this is going.

The CHAIRMAN. I think it goes even further. We have a witness who has testified previously before this Committee in a manner that raises some very real questions just in terms of failing to respond to this Committee concerning our investigation. He says that the first time he was aware of this was at this—

Senator DODD. What is the point, though?

The CHAIRMAN. Indeed, there was a very important meeting and series of meeting because indeed if Mr. Lindsey checked on it, when did he get back?

Senator DODD. I still ask the same question, so what?

The CHAIRMAN. His failure to come forward and produce these documents in a timely manner, withholding these documents from the Committee—

Senator DODD. Now wait a minute.

Now wait a minute, Mr. Chairman.

The CHAIRMAN. That is—

Senator DODD. That's your interpretation. There's no evidence that happened.

The CHAIRMAN. Given the lack of response.

Senator DODD. You can't say that now.

The CHAIRMAN. Mr. Gearan, did you discuss whether these documents should be produced at an earlier time with anybody prior to their production on January 31st?

Mr. GEARAN. Mr. Chairman, when I was at the White House, the production was—I reviewed the production with my counsel and then that's the process. I did not discuss with the White House Counsel how they were producing it to the Committee at this point in time, no, I did not.

The CHAIRMAN. Did you—

Senator DODD. Can we have some time back? This has gone on now for 25 minutes.

The CHAIRMAN. Certainly. Senator Grams, do you want to make an observation?

Senator DODD. The time is 25 minutes, Mr. Chairman.

The CHAIRMAN. Fine. The Senator has a question. We will do it on his next turn. Go ahead.

Senator SARBANES. I want to first make an observation that as of August 1995, this Committee had only requested documents related to the White House-Treasury contacts and to Foster's office. Let me repeat that again. When did you have your hearing on the Peace Corps confirmation?

Mr. GEARAN. August 10th or 15th.

Senator SARBANES. Of 1995?

Mr. GEARAN. Of 1995, yes.

Senator SARBANES. As of August 1995, this Committee had only requested documents related to the White House-Treasury contacts and Foster's office. Now in response to that request, you provided material; is that correct?

Mr. GEARAN. I did, Senator.

Senator SARBANES. Now the material that is being provided goes beyond that request. It responds to subsequent requests; is that not the case?

Mr. GEARAN. That's my understanding, yes, Senator.

Senator SARBANES. On that point, because of this inadvertent transfer of these documents, they weren't provided until January, although the request for them was prior to that, but the request for them was subsequent to the dates that are being referred to here this morning. Is that not the case?

Mr. GEARAN. That's correct, Senator.

Senator SARBANES. Well, now, I don't see how, Mr. Chairman, we can assault this witness for withholding documents.

The CHAIRMAN. We will attempt to make that—what our concern is. We are out of time.

Senator SARBANES. I want to underscore the—

The CHAIRMAN. If you want a response now, I'll ask Mr. Chertoff.

Senator SARBANES. I'm happy to have you do it on your time.

The CHAIRMAN. If you want a response, we will respond on our time or respond to the question now, because it goes even further.

Senator SARBANES. But as of August 1995, this Committee had only requested documents related to the White House-Treasury contacts and to Foster's office. Mr. Gearan had provided those documents. He had responded to that request. Subsequent, additional requests were made. We now have these documents and the response to that ran into this problem of the documents being moved over to the Peace Corps, which I take it when you discovered that, you regretted that happened?

Mr. GEARAN. Very deeply.

Senator DODD. That same point, Senator Hatch had it right this morning when he began his round of questioning, he commended you for the promptness in which these documents were turned over. I recall when documents ended up in a shredding machine in this town. I remember when documents and information, because someone stuck their foot on a recording pedal, were lost for a number of minutes. I remember when ashtrays were being used to handle documents.

Here we have people who find documents and turn them over and explain what happened and you move from the White House to the Peace Corps, very understandable. Common sense would indicate those things do happen. Senator Hatch has it right. It is perfectly legitimate to go over the notes and talk about what was meant by language and so forth in those notes. But the implication somehow that this witness is obstructing justice in the context of what we have seen happen in this town on previous occasions is ludicrous. That's our point we are trying to make here. What is the point of all of this? We are trying to create a fire where none exists, in a sense.

Senator SARBANES. Mr. Gearan, let me ask you this question: When you had this discussion about the naming of an Independent Counsel and the reviewing of past Independent Counsels, I understand that took place in this meeting; is that correct?

Mr. GEARAN. Yes, sir.

Senator SARBANES. In this discussion, did this quote that Senator Dole's made in the St. Louis Post Dispatch of January 9, 1989, where he said:

I say let's get on with it. The whole Independent Counsel theory ought to be reviewed by Congress. They seem to have an unending license to do somebody in.

Was that raised in that meeting?

Mr. GEARAN. I don't recall it, Senator. There was discussion about a similar point.

Senator SARBANES. Let me ask you this question. Did it come up, this statement by Senator Dole on August 7, 1992:

In far too many instances, the investigations conducted by Independent Counsels have turned out to be partisan political fishing expeditions, expeditions which have accomplished nothing more than wasting millions of tax dollars.

Did that come up?

Mr. GEARAN. I don't recall that, Senator, no.

Senator SARBANES. How about a statement he made in The Los Angeles Times on December 27, 1992:

Lawrence Walsh is completely out of control. Now, he wants to turn his 6 years of incompetence into a personal vendetta against President Bush. There is only one final act for Mr. Walsh. Immediate resignation.

Did that come up?

Mr. GEARAN. I don't believe so, Senator.

Senator SARBANES. How about the testimony that he gave to the Senate—this is Senator Dole now, to the Senate Governmental Affairs Committee in which he said:

The statute places no limits on the amount of time and money an Independent Counsel can spend on his target, nor does it monitor the motives behind the Counsel's actions. It has allowed someone like Lawrence Walsh to go down every blind alley pursuing more conspiracy theories than Oliver Stone.

In your review of the history of Independent Counsels, did this statement of Senator Dole's come up? Do you recall?

Mr. GEARAN. I don't recall that, Senator.

Senator SARBANES. You don't recall any of these. Actually, you all missed an important dimension, it seems to me, in your discussion of the situation with respect to an Independent Counsel that you didn't have of these statements by Senator Dole with respect to the Independent Counsel made over quite a period of time and some of them extremely strong. But that was a missing dimension. That would have been an important dimension to have in your conversations, would it not?

Mr. GEARAN. I think it would have added to the discussion.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Mr. Gearan, let me turn back to, since there have been such extended discussion about the "bad guy" description of Mr. Carver, would you turn to your notes at page 579. Underneath the line where it says, "Alan Carver at DOJ—bad guy." And I don't mean to imply that Mr. Carver did anything untoward or improper in connection with his investigation, he has testified before this Committee, I think quite forthrightly and candidly, as have several career Department of Justice attorneys who have all testified to their involvement in the early stages of this investigation. But underneath that reference, it says, "When Kendall called, when he called on speakerphone were two FBI agents and Jim Nixon." Does that indicate to you that the reason for that reference is that Mr. Carver did not disclose the fact that the two FBI agents were monitoring the call?

Mr. GEARAN. That could be a fair reading of it. I don't recall it specifically.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Do you have a specific recollection?

Mr. GEARAN. Of?

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Of the context in which this comment was made about Kendall and the speakerphone.

Mr. GEARAN. Beyond this, no, no, sir.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Let me go to the issue that Senator Dodd raised about the question of the accuracy of your prior testimony. Now the contact that you received from the Gerth call, your notes are undated; is that correct?

Mr. GEARAN. That's correct.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. When were the stories actually written in relation to the time Mr. Gerth contacted the White House providing the White House with information and requesting its reaction?

Mr. GEARAN. My best recollection is the end of October, the beginning of November.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. And that would have been subsequent to the time that you were asked about?

Mr. GEARAN. Correct.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. You were asked about October 14th; correct?

Mr. GEARAN. I was asked—

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. In your testimony.

Mr. GEARAN. Yes, I was asked about the 14th, correct.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. So that, in your mind, you associated the contact as having occurred later?

Mr. GEARAN. The Gerth meeting?

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Yes.

Mr. GEARAN. I would have, but I recognized that the dates indicate otherwise.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Now to follow up on Senator Dodd's question, what possible motive might you have to mislead this Committee, if you indeed had a recollection? Was there some reason to cover up the fact that Mr. Gerth had called the White House?

Mr. GEARAN. No.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. That was well known, was it not?

Mr. GEARAN. That he had called? I don't know how well-known it was. I certainly had no motive not to accurately represent that conversation.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. I have to say, from my point of view, I don't see that there could have been any motive to mislead because of the significance of this information. Maybe somebody will point that out.

In terms of the notes that you have provided, let's go back to the substance of them so that we can at least address what is in there. On 575, you are talking again about Beverly Bassett. Do you see under point 5?

Mr. GEARAN. Yes.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Why don't you read that.

Mr. GEARAN. Number 5, "PB," which I would read to be Paul Begala, "Bruce Lindsey, Waldman to Arkansas to meet with Beverly Bassett, try to poke holes in their story."

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. First of all, do you have any reason to believe that either of those three individuals went to Arkansas or met with Beverly Bassett?

Mr. GEARAN. No, I do not.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Now, "try to poke holes in their story," who is the "their" that you are referring to?

Mr. GEARAN. I guess those would be alleging that there was preferred treatment for Madison Guaranty.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Then underneath that, it read—

Mr. GEARAN. "Try to get independent validation from securities attorney, search of Arkansas regulation."

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Was it considered to be important to the issue again of whether there was some impropriety, some favoritism shown by Ms. Bassett, to have Ms. Bassett come forward and again repeat her truthful story with respect to what occurred back in Arkansas in 1985 and 1986?

Mr. GEARAN. Yes. I think this reflects the effort of that period of time to, in my notes, get an independent validation from a securities attorney that what she did was correct and then a search of Arkansas regulation to ensure that, in fact, what she did was the appropriate and the right thing to do.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Mr. Chairman, we will cede back the remainder of our time.

The CHAIRMAN. You have gone over these notes for a period of time now; right?

Mr. GEARAN. Mr. Chairman, I was asked to come last Thursday, and I had my deposition Monday night.

The CHAIRMAN. But you have had these notes since January 31st; is that right?

Mr. GEARAN. No, and I have not reviewed them. I just reviewed them since—

The CHAIRMAN. You haven't reviewed them?

Mr. GEARAN. Since I was notified last week that I would be invited for a deposition.

The CHAIRMAN. Let me ask you to look at the second page of your notes of January 7, 1994. It is S20576. Going down to Roman numeral III.

Mr. GEARAN. I'm not sure—I think that is HI, Harold Ickes. Is that what you are referring to? That is not a III, that is HI.

The CHAIRMAN. It is? Well, I am looking at "Whitewater 1/7/94." S20575.

Mr. GEARAN. OK. Number 3?

The CHAIRMAN. Number 3. Who is saying this?

Mr. GEARAN. My notes don't reflect who is saying this, and I don't recall.

The CHAIRMAN. Read it.

Mr. GEARAN. Number 3, "We cannot affect the scope of the prosecutor. Politically—fewer questions to lesser the exposure."

The CHAIRMAN. So there was concern over the scope of the Special Prosecutor?

Mr. GEARAN. I think there was, as the other notes state, that there was concern for the range of time and the frequent nature and past history of other Special Counsels that have digressed from their original work.

The CHAIRMAN. Now, Mr. Gearan, listen to me closely. Wasn't there also discussion about the Attorney General with respect to the appointment of a Special Prosecutor?

Mr. GEARAN. Mr. Chairman, there was, as my notes reflect, a conversation that if the Attorney General got, I think, out front of the White House on calling for a Special Counsel. Beyond that, I don't recall any.

The CHAIRMAN. Go to the next page, down to where it says, "HI."

Mr. GEARAN. Yes, Senator.

The CHAIRMAN. You want to read that?

Mr. GEARAN. Yes, Senator.

The CHAIRMAN. "HI" is Mr. Ickes, and you record him having said this; correct?

Mr. GEARAN. Yes, that is correct. "Special Counsel—three major problems. One, HRC," Mrs. Clinton, "adamantly opposed. Two,

Reno has shut the door. Three, if we ask it looks like we have ducked."

The CHAIRMAN. Let's go to number 2. What does that mean?

Mr. GEARAN. I would read that to mean that the Attorney General would make up her own mind about the Independent Counsel.

The CHAIRMAN. Read it again, number 2.

Mr. GEARAN. "Reno has shut the door."

The CHAIRMAN. "Reno has shut the door." Now tell me what you possibly could have meant? We also have notes of the Deputy—and we will give them to you so that when we take a break you can reflect on them because we are going to touch on this—Mr. Altman reflecting his conversations with the Deputy Chief of Staff, Maggie Williams, also I'm summing it up, but we will put it on the Elmo, concerning their attempt to deal with the question of scope with the Attorney General and how they were rebuffed.

Here is Mr. Ickes at the meeting saying, "One, Hillary Rodham Clinton adamantly opposed." The Deputy Secretary of the Treasury indicates the same in his notes. He says that you can forget about everything unless this thing is handled; and number 2, at this meeting, you are there, what does it say? Read it, number 2?

Mr. GEARAN. "Reno has shut the door."

The CHAIRMAN. Now what are we to believe? What did you mean by that? "Reno has shut the door"? What did she shut the door on?

Mr. GEARAN. Senator, as I said, these are Mr. Ickes' remarks.

The CHAIRMAN. I understand, but you are an intelligent person, do you believe that you are being candid? What did Mr. Ickes mean by that?

Mr. GEARAN. Senator, I can't go too far beyond this, because I do not have a detailed recollection.

The CHAIRMAN. What did you understand it to mean? Did anybody attempt to negotiate the scope with the Attorney General and she shut the door? Come on. We are not in an isolation booth. What happened?

Mr. GEARAN. Senator, I do not understand it to mean anything like that, nor do I recall any conversation—

The CHAIRMAN. What is a reasonable interpretation? You wrote this note. You listed three major problems. What does it say, "Special Counsel"—

Mr. GEARAN. "Three major problems."

The CHAIRMAN. Then you took the time to enunciate them. Number 1 is what?

Mr. GEARAN. "HRC adamantly opposed."

The CHAIRMAN. What does that mean?

Mr. GEARAN. That Mrs. Clinton was opposed to a call for a Special Counsel.

The CHAIRMAN. To the appointment of a Special Counsel?

Mr. GEARAN. That has previously been noted, yes.

The CHAIRMAN. There were discussions about this. As a matter of fact, later your notes mention the fact that the suggestion was raised that various people speak to the First Lady; is that true?

Mr. GEARAN. There were suggestions that different Washington attorneys would get together in one instance and then later to speak with Mrs. Clinton.

The CHAIRMAN. About persuading her to change her mind, isn't that true?

Mr. GEARAN. To talk about the Independent Counsel, yes.

The CHAIRMAN. Yes, right. So this was important and had been noted before?

Mr. GEARAN. Mr. Chairman——

The CHAIRMAN. Because before you made a flip remark about how husbands and wives have disagreements. But, this wasn't just petty disagreement. You even noted, and you must remember this, that even the President couldn't speak to Mrs. Clinton, about the question of the appointment of a Special Counsel, isn't that true?

Mr. GEARAN. To reopen whether or not we should have it. I did not mean to be flip, Senator.

The CHAIRMAN. I understand. Let's go back. Even the President couldn't get Mrs. Clinton to change her mind on her opposition to the appointment of a Special Counsel; is that true?

Mr. GEARAN. Well, my notes from that meeting I would read it "try to reopen it"——

The CHAIRMAN. I know this is in your notes. But, what do you recall about that?

Mr. GEARAN. I recall that week that the President and Mrs. Clinton opposed the appointment of a Special Counsel at that point. My notes——

The CHAIRMAN. Specifically, it says even the President couldn't get the First Lady to change her mind. Isn't there some other conversation when you talk about the Secretary of State possibly speaking to her?

Mr. GEARAN. That's in my notes, sir, and Bob Barnett.

The CHAIRMAN. Bob Barnett. This matter was pretty important, wasn't it?

Mr. GEARAN. I think everyone understood there were calls to an Independent Counsel and editorials from Capitol Hill.

The CHAIRMAN. You couldn't get Mrs. Clinton to agree. It was important because you even thought about having the Secretary of State intervene because the President couldn't do anything. Isn't that true?

Mr. GEARAN. I would like to answer, Senator. There were previous references to bringing in the best counsel of other attorneys, which was solicited. Mr. Gergen references it I believe on that page, to bring in Washington attorneys to talk about whether or not we should have an Independent Counsel.

The CHAIRMAN. Well, we understand that. We are talking about the First Lady's adamant opposition and the possibility of having other people speak to her because the President couldn't. Let's move on. Number 2, after the discussion about the Independent Counsel, the second question concerns the Attorney General. What did Mr. Ickes say?

Mr. GEARAN. Number 2, "Reno has shut the door."

The CHAIRMAN. Who said that?

Mr. GEARAN. I would read that as Mr. Ickes.

The CHAIRMAN. In connection with what? Discussing whether an Independent Counsel would be appointed? And the scope of the inquiry?

Mr. GEARAN. I don't recall, Senator.

The CHAIRMAN. You don't recall one of the most important aspects of the meeting even when you took the time to note three major problems, number 1, the question of the First Lady; number 2, "Reno has shut the door." What did she shut the door on? What does it commonly mean when somebody shuts the door?

Senator DODD. He has answered the question. I understand your point. But it has been 2 years since this conversation took place. It was in January 1994. Even when you keep notes and I realize it is important, but the idea of somebody to go back and absolutely recall exactly what was said, he has given his best interpretation of it and the Committee has to move on. Just keeping at it, in all fairness to our witness here.

The CHAIRMAN. In all fairness to our witness we wanted to give him an opportunity to be more forthcoming. I hoped that you would be more responsive because reasonable people, I believe, have a difficult time—

Senator DODD. Mr. Chairman, as you know, though, what happens is a week later on the 12th of January the President calls for the establishment of Independent Counsel. We can't avoid that fact. Seven days later, despite these notes, the President calls for one, and a week later—that is important.

The CHAIRMAN. We are attempting to find out what took place. You are going to find out later that people do certain things and take certain action, and I believe that this Committee has been and was entitled to more information from a variety of sources and people. And it is only through this almost painstaking process that we have begun to receive some of this information that the American people and the Independent Counsel have a right to know.

Mr. Chertoff.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Mr. Gearan, it is just perfectly clear if you add your notes, even if you don't want to go beyond your notes which at times apparently you don't want to do, if you go to your notes of the meeting of the 5th of January, you see Mr. Nussbaum complaining about an outside counsel as not being subject to control.

Then you get to this day on the 7th, 2 days later and you hear that Reno has shut the door, and then totally independently we have the diary where Roger Altman, who, as you will recall, ultimately had to resign his position as Deputy Treasury Secretary and who was criticized for whether he was fully forthcoming with the Committee in 1994, Altman totally independently becomes aware of the fact from Maggie Williams that the White House was trying to negotiate the scope of an Independent Counsel with Reno and having enormous difficulty.

So when you look at these together, what they add up to is that shutting the door means that the Attorney General wouldn't have any part in any negotiations over the scope of the Independent Counsel. Now, I take it you understood in the last analysis, Mr. Gearan, and it comes up again and again in the notes, that if the Attorney General decided in her independent judgment to appoint an Independent Counsel, she would do it; right?

Mr. GEARAN. Right.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Nevertheless, there was a lot of time spent in the White House thinking about the position to take on this; right?

Mr. GEARAN. On the position of the President, correct.

Mr. CHERTOFF. There was concern about the fact that Ms. Reno shut the door, because that was identified by Mr. Ickes as a "major problem." Is that right?

Mr. GEARAN. That's what my notes reflect.

Mr. CHERTOFF. To get back to the issue of Mr. Carver so that we can put the whole picture in context, the concern didn't merely relate to the Independent Counsel. There was concern even about the career prosecutors, because I am struck by the fact of the use of the term "bad." You see when Mr. Nussbaum talks about the bad guy, the bad prosecutor, he is talking about the guy who smells corruption and can show some things about the people around the principal. When we get to Mr. Carver, Mr. Ickes talks about Mr. Carver at DOJ as a "bad guy." "These guys are F---ing us blue." Mr. Gearan, you are not going to suggest to us that Mr. Ickes was expressing his delight over the independence and toughness being exhibited by the Department of Justice?

Mr. GEARAN. No.

Mr. CHERTOFF. He was angry because he felt that they were "F---ing us blue." He was angry because he felt that they were too independent for the White House; right?

Mr. GEARAN. Well, I don't know if you would describe it that way or not.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You were in the meeting; right?

Mr. GEARAN. Uh-huh.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You took notes about it?

Mr. GEARAN. I did.

Mr. CHERTOFF. I assume that all of your notes were taken down accurately, to the best of your ability?

Mr. GEARAN. The best of my ability, yes, sir.

Mr. CHERTOFF. So that when we have Mr. Ickes in, we will be able to rely upon these, to the best of your ability, as accurate renditions of what occurred?

Mr. GEARAN. To the best of my ability.

Mr. CHERTOFF. That's why I am fascinated with the "bad guy" being the independent prosecutor, where he says in December and January of 1993 and 1994, as the record in this hearing amply demonstrates, what was happening was first Mackay and then the Independent Counsel were trying to reach a deal with Hale. You knew what Hale had to say because you heard about it from Gerth; is that right?

Mr. GEARAN. I sat in on the Gerth meeting, yes, I heard from Mr. Gerth.

Mr. CHERTOFF. He was trying to get documents or he had obtained documents from the White House about Whitewater; right? That's what the prosecutors were trying to do; right?

Mr. GEARAN. Could you repeat that, Mr. Chertoff?

Mr. CHERTOFF. The prosecutors, first at Justice and then the Independent Counsel were obtaining and seeking to obtain documents about Whitewater and Madison; right?

Mr. GEARAN. I believe that's correct that DOJ prosecutors were obtaining documents.

Mr. CHERTOFF. So, what was there about this process of first a career prosecutor and then an Independent Counsel trying to deal with David Hale and trying to look into the issue of Madison and Whitewater? What was it in your understanding that caused Mr. Ickes to say he is "F---ing us blue"? You see my point?

My point is that the opinion is being expressed by Mr. Ickes here and you were in the meeting, so you must have had some common understanding of what is being discussed is that the fact that the Independent Counsel is out there—rather, the career prosecutor is out there trying to do a job of getting information about Whitewater and Madison, of trying to strike a deal with Hale, that someone—this isn't regarded really as someone doing their work, but it is regarded as "F---ing us," meaning the White House, in some way that angers the speaker. Now what was the discussion here?

Mr. GEARAN. Well, beyond what I have already testified, Mr. Chertoff, I believe the discussion was Mr. Ickes expressing in admittedly this colorful language his view that the ongoing investigation at the Department of Justice, given this, didn't evidence the fact that we were being treated in any way or that the Clintons were being treated in any way lightly.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Was he approving of this or was he disapproving? Are the words they are "F---ing us blue" words of approval?

Mr. GEARAN. I think that they are evidence of in a colorful way really—

Senator DODD. Let's not have an analysis. We can go back in the English dictionary here. Is this really necessary? Can we move on?

The CHAIRMAN. I think in fairness, Senator, if the witness would be a little more responsive, because if the witness won't even concede something as obvious as that Mr. Ickes, who was Deputy Chief of Staff was expressing extreme displeasure—at the very least, wouldn't you say that? They were angry, they were annoyed about what the Justice Department was doing. We cannot—

Senator DODD. Surprise, surprise.

The CHAIRMAN. We cannot get the witness who says he is going to testify truthfully to concede that. If it is something he wants to argue over, let him argue and tell us his understanding of—

Senator DODD. He has given you his best recollection. The Chair doesn't like it. I understand that, but that's his recollection.

The CHAIRMAN. Wait.

Senator DODD. Counsel has a bizarre fascination with the language of this memo.

The CHAIRMAN. The fascination is that it was brought up, it is a strong term, so adamantly conveyed that he took it down verbatim and then when he is asked what that means, he is not responsive.

Senator DODD. Mr. Chairman, each Member can have their own interpretation of an answer. I understand that. But he has answered to his best recollection.

The CHAIRMAN. And do you feel comfortable, Senator, with that answer?

Senator DODD. I accept that answer. Two and a half years ago, to have people go back, it is his best recollection. We go back a week, 2 weeks, a month ago and recall meetings that we are involved in all the time. Obviously this was a big story, a lot of press inquiries, a lot of questions about the Independent Counsel, a lot of editorial comment. Here is the Communications Director. He has to answer these questions in a sense. That's what the meeting is all about. How is any politician in this town surprised about a meeting like this going on? My gosh, when they go on in offices we get less than that, a critical story written in your hometown newspaper, you convene half your staff to talk about it. We are treating this as some bizarre, unique experience.

The CHAIRMAN. We are going to come back, obviously, to this. Since we have gone over our time, I will give the Minority the option of continuing or breaking and starting with you. Take whatever time you want and then we will break. If you haven't used all your time, we will start with you when we come back. We will take an hour break for lunch and when we return I hope that we have calmed down. Depending on when the Minority ends, we will take an hour break.

Senator SARBANES.

Senator SARBANES. Mr. Chairman, just let me make this observation. I think if your attorney called someone in the Justice Department and while he was on the speakerphone they put on two FBI agents and a prosecutor, you might make a comment like the one that is contained in these notes.

Senator DODD. I suspect he might have been a little stronger.

Senator SARBANES. "When Kendall called, when he called on speakerphone were two FBI agents and Jim Nixon." Now it may not bother Mr. Chertoff as a former prosecutor, but I think it would bother most people that they make a phone call and they have two FBI agents and a prosecutor on the speakerphone with them.

Now let me ask you, Mr. Gearan, it wasn't any secret that Mrs. Clinton was opposed to the appointment of a Special Counsel. First of all, let me clarify this. At the time there was no Independent Counsel law; is that correct?

Mr. GEARAN. That's my understanding.

Senator SARBANES. Do you recall that?

Mr. GEARAN. That's my understanding.

Senator SARBANES. In fact, there was an issue in the Congress about whether to reenact an Independent Counsel law?

Mr. GEARAN. Right.

Senator SARBANES. There was considerable difference about that. I quoted what Senator Dole said when he went before the Senate Committee that was holding hearings on the Independent Counsel law, he says: "The statute placed no limits on the amount of time and money an Independent Counsel can spend on his target, nor does it monitor the motives behind a Counsel's action. It has allowed someone like Lawrence Walsh to go down every blind alley pursuing more conspiracy theories than Oliver Stone." He also said in another quote: "Lawrence Walsh is completely out of control."

I could go on at great length with these quotes. Senator Cochran said: "Independent Counsels have too much power and too little accountability. They are beyond the reach of anybody, any power on earth." So, this issue of the Independent Counsel and then the separate issue of the Special Counsel which is named by the Attorney General, correct.

Mr. GEARAN. Correct.

Senator SARBANES. That was the only issue at the time because there was no availability of an Independent Counsel since the statute had expired?

Mr. GEARAN. That's correct.

Senator SARBANES. Now, I take it Mrs. Clinton's opposition to appointing a Special Counsel was that no wrongdoing had been shown and therefore the threshold for doing this had not been crossed; is that the case?

Mr. GEARAN. Yes. That was certainly my understanding of her view, that there was no wrongdoing and that if every time there was a chance that there be a Special Counsel, that this was quite a precedent that would be established.

Senator SARBANES. In fact, you have somewhere else in here in your notes where someone says, well, this is really a matter of principle, because politically we are paying a cost for this or taking a hit on it. I don't remember exactly what the language was.

Mr. GEARAN. That it was a matter of principle and admittedly bad politics, that given the drumbeat at the time, given the sizable press questions, given the editorial writings that were existing during this period of time, that it certainly might have been bad politics. But as my notes reflect, it was a matter of principle for the President and Mrs. Clinton.

Senator SARBANES. Let me turn to the "Reno has shut the door," because I want to try to get some context to that one. My understanding at the time was that the Attorney General didn't want to name a Special Counsel; she wanted the Independent Counsel law passed and have that apply.

But there is a newspaper article of January 7, 1994, that says:

For weeks Reno has said that in the absence of the new law, it would be pointless for her to name a Special Counsel because such a person would not be viewed as truly independent. The Counsel would report to her and she would be responsible for the case. In the current state of the law with respect to the Whitewater case, "I am going to be damned if I do and damned if I don't," Reno said at her weekly news conference yesterday.

Now in fact, there was a lot of newspaper speculation and various sorts of pressures for the appointment of a Special Counsel. But at this point, as I understand it, Reno was expressing her misgivings about doing so. In fact, there is another article that says:

Justice Department spokesman Carl Stern said that Reno, who has urged the restoration of an Independent Counsel law, saw no purpose in appointing a Special Counsel herself. Anyone she appoints, the prosecutors would be under her supervision and influence, Stern said. To take the case away from the career prosecutors would be to create the very kinds of perceptions that she and Congressman Leach are trying to avoid.

Namely, a perception that the career people couldn't do the job.

So you have tried to recollect back about the meaning of "Reno has shut the door" in a statement that says, "Special Counsel, three major problems, One, HRC adamantly opposed," which everyone knew, it was public knowledge at the time. "Two, Reno has shut the door." At that time, the Attorney General was expressing her doubts and reservations about appointing a Special Counsel. Do you recall that? I guess not.

Mr. GEARAN. Now that you have refreshed me with that, Senator, having prepared for this within the week, I have not had a chance to go through all the press clippings for that period that might have shed more light on it for me, for the purposes of this testimony, but I'm aware of those articles now that you read them.

Senator SARBANES. This is part of the context. I think we have to view it in that light. Now eventually, of course, Ms. Reno did—I think the President first decided that a Special Counsel should be asked for?

Mr. GEARAN. That's correct.

Senator SARBANES. Do you recall when that——

Mr. GEARAN. I guess, I'm told the date is January 12th.

Senator SARBANES. January 12th.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. January 12th.

Senator SARBANES. Then on the 20th, I think she went ahead and named a Special Counsel. That's when she named Mr. Fiske, who, of course, was highly praised. In fact, our own Chairman said:

Fiske is a man of unflinching and uncompromising integrity. I think he is the kind of person who will bring out the truth for the American people so there will be no question as to the thoroughness and objectivity of this investigation.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Just to continue, exactly what Attorney General Reno had feared when she had initially closed the door, that is, that whoever she picked, no matter whether he had the reputation of Bob Fiske, who has an outstanding reputation in the United States and has received the praise of Senators from this Committee and is a leader in the Bar in New York and was the U.S. Attorney in the Southern District of New York prior to his appointment as Special Counsel. Nevertheless, exactly what Ms. Reno said would come true did, in fact, come true. When the Independent Counsel statute passed, Mr. Fiske was removed, and the argument given was how could he be objective if he was appointed by the Attorney General.

So, Mr. Starr was substituted in his place. Doesn't that give flavor and context to this statement about "Ms. Reno has shut the door"? All of the statements that she had made prior to January 5th and 6th, and we have read you the contemporaneous statement of the 7th and going back to December, Carl Stern's statement on behalf of the Justice Department, doesn't that put into context the discussion about why this would be an argument against an Independent Counsel, "Ms. Reno had shut the door"?

Mr. GEARAN. I think that is helpful. If I had had the opportunity, as I said, to review more of this period of time through the context of news clips and materials, it would have been refreshed. I certainly can recollect the dilemma that she expressed at the time, that either way, depending on what her decision was, she would face that charge.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Now to try to go forward with a line of questioning that Mr. Chertoff has put forward, I guess the implication is that no matter what you did, no matter who was investigating, Mr. Chertoff wouldn't be happy with that because somebody at the White House wouldn't be entirely pleased with whatever that investigative body was doing. You weren't doing back flips and shouting yippee because the Department of Justice was now coming in and interviewing White House personnel. That was disruptive, nobody liked that. If you had your druthers, that would not be on the top of the list of things you wanted to do that day, interviewed by the FBI.

Mr. GEARAN. I think that is a fair statement.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. At this meeting, this is what they were saying, that Reno had opposed the appointment of Independent Counsel. There was no Independent Counsel statute on the books because it expired, I guess, during the Republican Administration and they didn't want to reauthorize one, and there was a great deal of discussion because of the length of time that Mr. Walsh had gone on as Independent Counsel in the Iran-Contra matter. He spent, I think, $35 million and took 7 years and there was discussion about the history, a discussion about the advisability, and then a discussion about the independence of the career prosecutors who were handling the matter then.

Mr. GEARAN. That's correct.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. I think we would resume with whatever time we have.

The CHAIRMAN. All right. I will note that you have 3 minutes. We will start with my colleagues on the Democratic side. We will take a break until 2:15 p.m. and then we will resume.

[Whereupon, at 1:15 p.m., the hearing was recessed, to be reconvened at 2:15 p.m. this same day.]

AFTERNOON SESSION

The CHAIRMAN. The Committee will come to order.

At the time that we broke for lunch the Minority still had 3 minutes. I will ask them to put at least 5 minutes on the clock. We turn to Senator Sarbanes.

Senator SARBANES. Mr. Gearan, I want to return to this point that you were questioned about at some length about "Reno has shut the door" when you made this reference about three major problems with respect to getting a Special Counsel. Before the lunch break, I quoted from an article which suggested that Reno was actually against appointing a Special Counsel and therefore appointing a Special Counsel would be a major problem in the sense that she had appeared to shut the door to it.

Over the luncheon break, I had a chance to review some other articles, and I don't know whether you recall any of these. But The New York Times on January 13th, this was when the President asked Attorney General Reno to appoint a Special Counsel, and the article said this represented a change in position by the President and his wife, which is quite true and was known at the time. As we discussed earlier, they were against it, Mrs. Clinton, because she didn't think any wrongdoing had occurred, which would be the basis for the appointment of the Special Counsel. This article say:

Ms. Reno said tonight she would reluctantly comply with the President's request. For weeks Ms. Reno has argued that any counsel she appointed would not appear to be entirely independent and that she would prefer to wait until Congress revived a law that would allow her to ask a court to choose a counsel. A bill to put the law back on the books is now in Congress.

Now just by way of background on this, in The Washington Post on January 3rd, there was an article, and I'm just going to quote from it. It is referring to Senate Minority Leader Robert Dole:

Appearing on NBC's Meet the Press, Dole accused Reno of "dragging her feet" on appointment of an Independent Counsel. "It's high time that she did what she knows she should do," Dole said.

Dole, angry at a lengthy investigation of the Iran-Contra affair during the Reagan Administration, has led a GOP effort on Capitol Hill to block reinstatement of the post-Watergate law providing for court appointment of Independent Counsel to investigate wrongdoing by high-level Government officials.

Without the law, Dole said on Sunday, Reno could use her authority as Attorney General to appoint an outside counsel to handle the case, which is being investigated by career Government employees.

When a similar proposal was made by Representative Jim Leach, R-Iowa, Ranking Minority Member of the House Banking Committee, Justice Department spokesman Carl Stern said anyone Reno appointed would be under her supervision and influence rather than serving independently by court appointment as the law intended. Unlike Dole, Reno supports restoration of the Independent Counsel law, which was approved late last year by the Senate and is slated for consideration this year by the House.

This is in The New York Times on January 8th. The other was at the beginning of that week. That was in The Washington Post on January 3rd, the quote I just read.

So, this reported an appearance on Meet the Press on Sunday, January 2nd. That's the report that makes the point that when a similar proposal was made by Representative Leach, Ranking Minority Member of the House Banking Committee, which had been done earlier, Justice Department spokesman Carl Stern said anyone Reno would appoint would be under her supervision and influence. So, she had expressed that reservation.

Your first meeting here I think is January 4th, on these notes?

Mr. GEARAN. That's what my notes are dated, yes.

Senator SARBANES. This other story says:

Bob Dole, the Senate Minority Leader, again urged Attorney General Janet Reno to appoint an Independent Counsel. Ms. Reno said on Thursday that anyone she named would be vulnerable to accusations that they were not truly independent because they owe their jobs to her and the Justice Department.

And then Dole listed some names and said:

If you appointed a Special Counsel person with reputation for integrity and competence, there will be no second guessing of the Special Counsel's investigation, Mr. Dole wrote to Ms. Reno. Through her spokesman, the Attorney General today reiterated her opposition to that approach.

Having read all of this and knowing that this was the context in which you were operating at the time, it seems to me that this, your notes here are subject to the reasonable interpretation that in terms of appointing a Special Counsel that a perception is that the Attorney General didn't want to do that, "Reno has shut the door." Is that not a possible reasonable interpretation of those notes?

Mr. GEARAN. Senator, I think that is a possible interpretation. I have not had the benefit of reviewing the clips of the contacts in this time. I have tried, to this Committee, to testify accurately to what I recalled at the time. I cannot tell you that I have any more recollection—other than what I testified to.

Senator SARBANES. In the end, the President asked the Attorney General to appoint a Special Counsel; is that correct?

Mr. GEARAN. That's correct.

Senator SARBANES. In The Times of January 13th they say:

Ms. Reno said tonight that she would reluctantly comply with the President's request. For weeks Ms. Reno has argued that any counsel she appointed would not appear to be entirely independent and that she would prefer to wait until Congress revived a law that would allow her to ask a court to choose a counsel, a bill to put the law back on the books is now in Congress.

That law came along much later, as we know, and I take it at the time there was a tremendous amount of press uproar and inquiry about this matter; is that correct?

Mr. GEARAN. There was a sizable amount, editorials, Congressional calls for an Independent or Special Counsel. As I testified, the drumbeat in the press was quite significant.

Senator SARBANES. Thank you very much.

OPENING COMMENTS OF SENATOR LAUCH FAIRCLOTH

Senator FAIRCLOTH. Mr. Gearan, before the Committee starts, I just want to say something, and I might be alone in this, but I don't think I am. We have gone through dates and zigs and zags and who did and who didn't. But the truth of it is I am disturbed about the delay in getting the documents and the redactions. Now this week, 14 days before these hearings were supposed to end, we come up with 21 new pages of documents—brand-new and very pertinent. We had 3 pages of whatever last week.

This is the type of thing that has gone on from the beginning here, from the very beginning. I have said it with similes or whatever, that however you want to approach it, getting information out of the White House has just been pick, pick, pick, pick, pick and we finally get something.

I think that we need to revisit the scope of the document request. If somebody is having trouble telling us the truth and getting the document or dancing behind a gossamer facade that this didn't come and that really wasn't under it, then maybe we need to broaden the scope.

But I think Mr. Chertoff and whoever, there is enough of this, and if we are going on with the hearings, we need to make the scope broad enough and the request clear enough that there isn't anybody who can misunderstand what we are asking for and what we want. I am tired of 3 today, 21, a little of this, a little of that, and I think we need to change it.

Mr. GEARAN. Senator, if I might, to your point on the redactions, I don't know if you wanted to cover that, Senator. My understanding, and I believe it is in my deposition, I think on page 82, my understanding is that the Republican and the Democratic Counsels have met on this. I would be happy to testify on any materials that this Committee has. My understanding is that has been worked out by your respective Counsels.

Senator FAIRCLOTH. We ultimately work out everything. But when you were at the White House, you segregated your White-water documents in the summer of 1994 when the Committee began looking at these matters; is that correct?

Mr. GEARAN. Actually, Senator, I believe I started it when Mr. Fiske's subpoena first started this process.

Senator FAIRCLOTH. Who decided that the notes we have now were not relevant to the Committee?

Mr. GEARAN. At what—

Senator FAIRCLOTH. Who decided the notes we got?

Mr. GEARAN. My understanding, Senator, is the previous request for information, as Senator Sarbanes mentioned earlier, was notes regarding Treasury contacts and the death of Vincent Foster, the Deputy White House Counsel.

Senator FAIRCLOTH. Let me ask you a question. Did you and your attorney or did Lloyd Cutler decide they were not relevant and should be held back? Who made the decision?

Mr. GEARAN. While I was at the White House, White House Counsel sent memoranda describing Congressional requests and subpoenas to me and responsive documents were provided to White House Counsel for their review and production.

Senator FAIRCLOTH. Was Mr. Cutler involved in the review of what should come out and what should not come out?

Mr. GEARAN. I don't believe so. I am only aware from my own part, Senator. I am not sure.

Senator FAIRCLOTH. Did you ever discuss the release of your documents, your notes with Mr. Cutler?

Mr. GEARAN. No. It was my production responsibility.

Senator FAIRCLOTH. In your presence, sir, did you ever hear the First Lady state that she did not want someone poking into 20 years of public life? Did you ever hear her make that statement?

Mr. GEARAN. I don't recall that, Senator.

Senator FAIRCLOTH. Have you heard that she made the statement? Have you heard that she had made that statement, whether you heard it or not?

Mr. GEARAN. I guess it has a vague recollection. I don't know if she said that at a press conference. I am not sure what you are referring to.

Senator FAIRCLOTH. Well, I am really referring to what Maggie Williams said. Did you ever hear the First Lady say anything that the issue was paralyzing the White House and whether or not we had a Special Counsel, it was a major issue whether we got a Special Counsel or not and that it was paralyzing the White House. Did you ever hear such conversations?

Mr. GEARAN. Well, there was considerable discussion, Senator, the first week in January whether or not the President should call for a Special Counsel. It had been a significant issue in the press, as I mentioned, with two of the Nation's leading newspapers editorializing. It was a very significant public issue, that's correct.

Senator FAIRCLOTH. Mr. Altman's diary showed that Maggie Williams said, "The White House was trying to negotiate the scope of the Independent Counsel with Ms. Reno and having enormous difficulty." All of the meetings and things we are hearing here suggest that this was a pretty accurate reflection of what was going on at the White House. My question is: Why was the White House involved in the scope? Why was it even being discussed whether a Special Counsel should be appointed? Wasn't that the sole discretion of the Attorney General—

Mr. GEARAN. Senator—

Senator FAIRCLOTH. —and not the White House? It is my understanding that would have been the sole decision of Ms. Reno and not the White House.

Mr. GEARAN. Unless the President requested it, which he did. But Senator, I guess to be most responsive to your question, what we were dealing with in our meetings was how to handle the significant press interest and questioning that was associated with the calls for Independent Counsel, what would the White House response be, what was the White House effort at that point.

As I have tried to testify, the meetings that week both took the terms of that internal debate as well as the strategy that the White House was going to do to produce chronologies and questions and answers and related information.

Senator FAIRCLOTH. It seems that there was a total failure there to make the distinction between Ms. Reno's authority to either appoint or not appoint and the scope of what would be that you-all were discussing pretty freely, negotiating what would be and negotiating with Ms. Reno; is that right?

Mr. GEARAN. No, Senator. I never heard of any negotiations with the Attorney General in that regard. What we were discussing was what are the pros and cons of a Special Counsel and what would the White House response be. If we were not going—if the President was not going to be calling for a Special Counsel, what would the reasons be that would be stated why the President did not feel a Special Counsel was warranted.

Senator FAIRCLOTH. Did you ever hear anyone mention, Mr. Nussbaum especially, that he had talked to the Attorney General about the issue and the appointment of Special Counsel?

Mr. GEARAN. No, I do not recall that, Senator.

Senator FAIRCLOTH. Did anyone mention having talked to Webb Hubbell about it?

Mr. GEARAN. No, I do not recall that, Senator.

Senator FAIRCLOTH. Did anyone go to Little Rock to visit Beverly Bassett Schaffer as a result of these meetings? It was discussed. Did you ever send anybody?

Mr. GEARAN. Not to my knowledge, Senator.

Senator FAIRCLOTH. But you talked about sending somebody to talk to her?

Mr. GEARAN. My notes reflect there was a suggestion or a reference to that, of someone going to Little Rock.

Senator FAIRCLOTH. I guess my point is why would you even think about sending somebody to Little Rock to talk to Ms. Schaffer when Donald Mackay from the Justice Department was out there investigating the entire thing? Would that not have appeared a little strange to you, that while the Justice Department had people on the job that you were even thinking about sending somebody out to maybe change testimony or whatever with Ms. Schaffer?

Mr. GEARAN. First of all, Senator, I'm not sure whose suggestion that was. My notes don't reflect it. But it was also dismissed, as my notes show, in Mr. Ickes' reference. I guess what I could explain to you is that there was a very significant interest on the part of the White House that if we were to state anything or represent what Ms. Schaffer had previously said, that it would be paramount that we not misstate it. In order to get the facts straight, in order to get our ducks in a row about what was factually the case on this matter, we needed the kind of information that the chronology and the study of Arkansas banking law and the suggestion on the independent panel of regulators was referencing, I believe.

Senator FAIRCLOTH. But did anybody bring up the fact that if Mr. Ickes' suggestion was followed and White House aides went to Little Rock to visit with Ms. Schaffer, that that could be considered an obstruction of justice?

Mr. GEARAN. Senator, I am not sure it was Mr. Ickes' suggestion, just for clarification. But there was never any instance or suggestion that this would be for anything but to get the information available to the White House so we would not mislead the press in any of the materials we would put out. That was the context of the meetings, as best I recall.

Senator FAIRCLOTH. Well, I remember a considerable time ago, in fact, it was before Whitewater became—it was just beginning to be heard about, and I mentioned to Ms. Reno that we were hearing a lot in the press and seeing a lot of things. I think she was before the Banking Committee at another hearing and I asked her, and she very quickly told me that she had the top people in the country from the Justice Department investigating it, and she would do a thorough investigation herself and no one else need be involved and the buck stopped with her. That was a considerable time ago, I think.

The CHAIRMAN. Mr. Chertoff.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Mr. Gearan, let's go back to this issue with Ms. Beverly Bassett Schaffer. You will agree with me that as of January 7, 1994, you understood and everybody in that meeting, so far as you were concerned, understood that there was an active Grand Jury investigation going on that touched upon Madison and White-water; correct?

Mr. GEARAN. Yes, that the Department of Justice was conducting that, yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. And in the context of the discussion on the 7th, there was a specific reference to boxes going to some prosecutorial authority; correct?

Mr. GEARAN. That's correct.

Mr. CHERTOFF. There was discussion about the possibility of an Independent Counsel being appointed; correct?

Mr. GEARAN. Correct.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Now bearing that in mind, the discussion then turned to Beverly Bassett Schaffer, and Mr. Ickes—this is on page S20576—says, "is so F---ing important." Why was she so "F---ing important?"

Mr. GEARAN. Well, I guess I would say that because the centerpiece of what an awful lot of the press interest was at that time and the issue was, as it is alluded to on the previous page, is that Madison Guaranty not getting special treatment is most important thing to prove next week. That was the issue in large part of what an awful lot of the stories were swirling around, as best I can recall, for that period. Her comments that my understanding were previously in the press is that she had stated there was no preferred treatment of Madison Guaranty.

Mr. CHERTOFF. So before this meeting, you were already aware of public statements by her about this issue?

Mr. GEARAN. I suspect that I was aware that she had made those statements previously. I was not—

Mr. CHERTOFF. Didn't Senator Dodd ask you about 2 hours ago and you answered yes, that you understood she had made some public statements earlier?

Mr. GEARAN. Yes, but I don't present myself as an expert on all those statements that she had made during 1992.

Mr. CHERTOFF. I don't want you to be an expert on all her statements. I want to ask you directly and simply. As of this meeting did you understand that she had already made a public statement or public statements about this whole issue?

Mr. GEARAN. It was my understanding that she had said that there was no preferred treatment of Madison Guaranty.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Where had she said it?

Mr. GEARAN. My understanding it was in the public domain. I don't know what publication.

Mr. CHERTOFF. But what additional information did you need from her?

Mr. GEARAN. Mr. Chertoff, it was an interest that we had, and again, I—

Mr. CHERTOFF. No, no, no. Please answer my question, not the question you want me to ask but my question. Given that she had made statements in the public domain, what did you need from her? What more information did you need?

Mr. GEARAN. We needed to make sure that everything I think as I have tried to say, is that everything, if we were to restate what Ms. Bassett Schaffer had said, that we would be accurate.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Why couldn't you just Xerox what she had said publicly and send it out?

Mr. GEARAN. That could have been one level. The second level was that we needed to make sure that whatever she did as a regulator, that was actually in accord with what should have been done.

Mr. CHERTOFF. So there was discussion about what you would do if it turned out that it was not in accord with what should have been done?

Mr. GEARAN. No. I think it was just a discussion, as the notes reflect, that we should have clear in our minds based on other independent attorneys or experts in Arkansas banking law, that we are quite well aware of what was done so that there would be no misstatement on the part of the White House.

Mr. CHERTOFF. But that's independent attorneys and other people. We are talking about why you have to go to her to get her statements when her statements have already been made in the public record. What more do you need to talk to her about?

Mr. GEARAN. Again, I don't recall a protracted discussion on this other than the import of it was to make sure we would not misstate Ms. Bassett Schaffer's position.

Mr. CHERTOFF. The import was if we "F this up, we are done." That suggests it wasn't really a casual aside but something that Mr. Ickes focused everybody's attention on.

Now, you understand you are dealing in the world of Grand Jury subpoenas where whatever your press concerns are, contacts with a potential witness are like radioactive. That is very serious business to talk to a witness when there is a Grand Jury investigation.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. That is nonsense.

Mr. CHERTOFF. What was the reason it was necessary to go to Beverly Bassett Schaffer to talk about what she would say when she had already said it publicly?

Mr. GEARAN. Again, Senator, the best as I can recall, it was to make sure that we would not misstate anything, and I would read this as what I think this means is if we would in any way misrepresent the facts in this, that once again, White House credibility would be at stake.

Mr. CHERTOFF. I have one last question.

The CHAIRMAN. We have gone over—I will ask the Minority to indulge me. One of our Members has a question and needs to leave. With that understanding, I would ask that we yield to Senator Faircloth.

Senator FAIRCLOTH. Mr. Gearan, practically every answer we get is euphemised or polished, but very clearly from the notes, Mr. Ickes said—do you have a copy of that?

Mr. GEARAN. Yes.

Senator FAIRCLOTH. This is not soft language. This is flat. "We can't send PB, BL, or MW. It will come out." If you are afraid something is going to come out, you aren't dealing in a legitimate operation. I mean, there is no reason for it not to be out. "Item by item make sure her story is OK." Now, he isn't saying make sure it fits the press story. He is saying make sure it is OK, it fits what we want.

Jack Quinn, the current White House Counsel, says, we must keep it at "arm's length." Who will we send, "Tisdale in Lindsey firm. Skip, WH, pass. PB friend New York lawyer." In other words, who can we send out there and we won't get caught. That is clearly the implication of this. When you knew that Mr. Mackay from the Justice Department was out there already investigating and had talked to Ms. Schaffer and had talked to these people and you-all were clearly planning to go out and that is nothing less than interfere with a Justice Department investigation. I don't think any other inference can be made.

Mr. GEARAN. Senator, the best I can do is provide you with my best understanding of having been at the meeting, and I would read this as consonant with the time where we were trying to make sure there were network stories about the White House credibility and how we had handled this issue, that we make sure, item by item to make sure that the story, the facts that the White House was going to be presented was indeed accurate.

That is my recollection, both of the substance, given that the strategy that the White House was going to embark upon, which was to have op ed pieces and chronologies and question and answers out there, that we make sure, that we do our very level best to make sure any information we were reporting or presenting to members of the press was accurate.

Senator FAIRCLOTH. We will end this so the Minority can get on. But you were not talking about the press here. "PB, BL, MW, we can't send them. It will come out." If you were dealing with a legitimate, clean operation, why not let it come out? What difference does it make? You were merely trying to get the facts to the press. If that's what you were after, why not send somebody, PB, BL, or MW, what difference does it make? Why did you have to keep it at arm's length, as Mr. Quinn suggested? Why would you need a New York lawyer or a PB friend? Why not send PB and let PB go and get off the airplane and say this is what I am here for to make sure that the facts are straight? No, that's not what you had in mind or you would have sent PB.

I thank you, Mr. Chairman.

Mr. GEARAN. If I might, Senator, I think I would read that and think that means that it would be a White House overreaction to this if the White House was to dispatch people, that it could be lending credence to circumstances and it would be an overreaction. We were very much aware of the issue of how the White House was handling this, because it was called into question by the national media. Before we embarked upon anything that would once again revisit how the White House had handled it, I think the tenor of the meeting, my best recollection, that was what we were talking about.

The CHAIRMAN. I'm going to call upon Senator Sarbanes or Mr. Ben-Veniste, but given your notes and the warnings about getting on top of this and you better otherwise we blow up, your explanation is rather strained, Mr. Gearan.

Senator Sarbanes.

Senator SARBANES. Mr. Chairman, I want to put on the record a letter that was sent to the Committee by David Enzel, the Special Counsel of the Office of Thrift Supervision. I want to quote from it briefly.

Yesterday, Steven Parr, an examiner in the Little Rock Field Office of the Office of Thrift Supervision, found some additional documents relating to Madison Guaranty Savings & Loan Association and promptly forwarded them to me. They included status reports relating to "problem institutions" from the 1984 to 1986 period. Mr. Parr was searching for a folder on investment securities and found the documents in a box primarily containing non-institution specific examination information.

So then those documents were sent along, and Mr. Parr in his explanation for it, and I put this on the record because no big to-do was made about this matter with Mr. Parr or Mr. Enzel. I don't think any big to-do should have been made about it, because I think it is quite possible that relevant documents can be overlooked or that you can have an inadvertence which produces problems in producing them.

But what Parr said in his memo to Enzel is, he says:

As I informed you earlier today over the telephone, I found some additional documents this morning in the Little Rock Field Office relative to Madison Guaranty Savings & Loan Association.

And he details what those documents were. Then he says:

I sincerely apologize for any inconvenience or embarrassment the late discovery of these documents may cause you and/or others at the Office of Thrift Supervision and/or Department of the Treasury. I found the documents while searching for a folder on investment securities. The documents were previously overlooked in searches of the Little Rock field office for Madison Guaranty-related documents due to my failure to search or diligently search a cardboard file folder box located in my office. By far, the vast majority of the contents in the box relate to general examination information and topics instead of to a specific institution or institutions.

I would like to include both the letter from Enzel to the Committee and the memo of Parr to Enzel with respect to turning up these documents in the Committee record.

The CHAIRMAN. I would like to have a copy. I don't know whether I have seen it before.

Senator SARBANES. The letter I am quoting from went to Mr. Giuffra. I yield to Mr. Ben-Veniste.

The CHAIRMAN. I think, Senator, documents that turned up and were found in a box by an RTC employee who had little, if any, connection with them other than to inherit them is a far different situation than when a witness produces his notes of meetings that he attended and testified about and comes forth with this information to the Committee, now but not before. I think it is a big distinction. That's a big distinction. I don't see any similarity.

I will still put back 2 additional minutes. Certainly we will put these in the record.

Senator SARBANES. The only point I want to underscore, Mr. Chairman, we have had this issue come up previously. Mr. Gearan is not the first one who has been criticized on this production of documents. I just want to make the point it is obvious that people can overlook things. Mr. Gearan has an explanation for what happened to his documents which he offered at the beginning of his testimony here today, and I would be happy to carry him back through it again if we need to do that. So, I think it is very important that we understand that.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. I think the point is, Mr. Gearan, that when you and your attorney, who is an experienced attorney in Washington, looked at the subpoena, you looked at your documents or you looked at the document request—I don't think it was a subpoena then—you looked at the documents you had, you matched your documents against what is requested. And then there is a conclusion made, I take it with the advice of your counsel, as to what comes within the document request. And, quite clearly, these documents didn't come within that request, OK.

So, now the only issue is how did they fall between the cracks in terms of the subsequent request, and you have explained that at least four times, to my recollection, here today.

Mr. GEARAN. Mr. Ben-Veniste, I might request to put into the record a letter that I submitted and fax mailed to the Independent Counsel upon providing them back to the White House which details this in some form, if that would be helpful to the Committee.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. I would please recommend its receipt.

The CHAIRMAN. We would be happy to receive that.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Now let me address something that Mr. Chertoff raised, because I don't think it can be left—

The CHAIRMAN. Can I ask you, what letter do you want to submit to us?

Mr. GEARAN. I was just saying, Mr. Chairman, that if it would be helpful to the Committee, there was a letter that I sent to the Independent Counsel at the time on January 31st.

The CHAIRMAN. Do you have a copy of that with you? Does your attorney?

Mr. GEARAN. I would be happy to share that with you. I have a copy here, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. Would you submit it? It will be made a part of the record. If you say you want to submit the letter, let's see the letter.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. That's what he wanted to do.

The CHAIRMAN. No, he didn't want to do it. He was going to proceed. If we are going to make it part of the record, I would like to see it. I am going to make it part of the record, but I would like to have a copy of it.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. May I, Mr. Chairman?

The CHAIRMAN. Certainly.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Mr. Gearan, let me address a matter that Mr. Chertoff raised, because I would not wish to have this record stand as it is now with respect to the question of the appropriateness of interviewing a potential witness in a case.

Now the proposition was put to you that Ms. Schaffer might have been a witness in an ongoing Grand Jury investigation. I know of no investigation that was going on at that time that would have involved Ms. Schaffer's testimony. But even if it did parties associated with defending themselves and their reputations have every right in the world to interview a witness. Any notion that this is poisonous or radioactive, as Mr. Chertoff put it, is quite clearly not the law.

What is not allowed is any attempt to influence improperly a witness in that witness' testimony. What you have said quite clearly here is that there was no effort to change the substance of Ms. Schaffer's testimony, only that you wished her to come forward again; is that correct?

Mr. GEARAN. Only that we wished to make sure we had the information correct. That was my understanding, sir.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Now, Ms. Schaffer had made statements to Mr. Gerth in The New York Times during the 1992 campaign. She also testified before us that because of all the media attention that descended upon her in Arkansas, she didn't want to get involved again, and indeed, in a story quite recently, February 9th of this year, Larry Margasak of the Associated Press wrote "Beverly Bassett Schaffer said in an interview Thursday that her response was 'no way I want to be drawn into the political response.' She added, 'I was sick of talking about Whitewater.'"

She has testified here and consistently said that after having been harassed, in her words, by the media during the campaign in 1992, she was quite reluctant to get reinvolved. On the other hand, it was recognized that her statements in the public domain would be important in getting this full story out. So while somebody may be reluctant, their testimony might well be quite important, indeed vital to putting to rest the notion that there was some impropriety associated with her connection in this matter.

We have had hearings over several days now looking into all aspects of her connection with Madison, and the Rose Firm's connection with Madison, and Mrs. Clinton's connection with Madison. And at the end of the day, there is not a single witness who testified here that Ms. Bassett did anything improper in connection with the Madison application that was before her.

Senator SARBANES. Can I have this letter put up on the machine, please, the one that was just provided to us by Mr. Gearan?

The CHAIRMAN. I think they are making copies now. We are in the process of doing that so we can put it up on the machine.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. While that is happening, let me just summarize what is in these notes, because as we say, we have these notes, we have your explanation for how they were produced. Now, we have to look at the substance of them and what of importance is there contained.

There was a discussion of the appointment of an Independent Counsel, something which has been reported upon for 2 years now. The positions of the parties are set forth, the historical considerations about how Independent Counsels or Special Prosecutors have acted over the years. There is a substantial body of material from which one can draw to analyze whether Independent Counsels have been effective, have they gone beyond their mandates, have they spent too much money, taken too much time or have they, in fact, done what they were supposed to do and the results are mixed. That was discussed. The importance of Ms. Bassett, the press reaction to all of this, and how you would go forward.

Now all of that information we have now received. I don't see anything that is new or startling or particularly extraordinary about these notes. Virtually everything that is here has been dealt with previously, sometimes at length over a period of 2 years.

So when we talk about the discovery of notes, it is my view that it is the obligation of the White House to continue to produce materials that they find. There are occasions where materials may be misfiled, mislocated. That happens in virtually any big document case. You have come forward with an explanation which has been credited by Senator Hatch, the Chairman of the Judiciary Committee. It has been commented on here. I find it credible.

Senator Sarbanes.

Senator SARBANES. Mr. Gearan, do you have this letter in front of you?

Mr. GEARAN. I do, sir.

Senator SARBANES. Do you have a copy to put up on the machine?

The CHAIRMAN. I don't have a copy to put up on the machine because we are using our only copy to make more copies. We just got this several minutes ago. I will be happy to have it—

Senator SARBANES. Apparently they will have it in a moment, I'm told by staff. Do you have a copy in front of you?

Mr. GEARAN. I do.

Senator SARBANES. This was a letter sent by your counsel to the Independent Counsel dealing with this matter; right?

Mr. GEARAN. Yes.

Senator SARBANES. Let me go through this with you because I want to make sure we get these facts tied down.

As you know, Mr. Gearan left the White House and assumed the responsibilities of Peace Corps Director in September 1995. Prior to his departure, Mr. Gearan was on vacation and his files and memorabilia were packed up by his White House Communications Office staff. The bulk of this material was sent to White House Records Management, while memorabilia and personal items were sent to Mr. Gearan's Peace Corps office. All of us believed that documents relating in any way to the Whitewater or Foster investigations were sent to Records Management for inventory and safekeeping. Up to that time, we had followed a strict procedure that no documents relating to these matters were ever to be removed from the White House so that complete accountability for these documents could be maintained. The only exception was the production of a single one-page document to your office in July 1994.

So, your belief, when you went over to the Peace Corps was that any documents that pertained to the Whitewater or Foster investigations had been sent—they were over in the White House and had been sent to Records Management; is that right?

Mr. GEARAN. Yes. It was my intention that they were communications files and should remain there.

Senator SARBANES. All right.

In late October 1995, we learned of a document request to the White House as a result of newspaper stories and confirmed that the White House Counsel's Office was taking responsibility for reviewing and producing documents from the Communications Office.

That's the office you had previously headed up; is that correct?

Mr. GEARAN. That's correct, Senator.

Senator SARBANES. [Continuing:]

Because we have consistently endeavored to be punctilious about document productions, and even though we thought we no longer had access to White House Communications Office documents, Mr. Gearan checked to make sure that he had not inadvertently retained any documents potentially responsive to that request. Included in this review were the boxes of memorabilia in storage at the Peace Corps which had come over from the White House. Amid this memorabilia, Mr. Gearan discovered a box which contained the documents he believed had been left at the White House. This discovery was made on the afternoon of November 1, 1995, and on the morning of November 2, 1995, Mr. Gearan gave directions to his secretary to have these documents returned to the White House Communications Office by hand delivery. Without intent to waive the attorney-client privilege, suffice it to say that later that afternoon we confirmed Mr. Gearan's understanding that the documents had, in fact, been sent to the White House Communications Office. In contemporaneous and subsequent discussions with White House Counsel, we alerted them to these facts and were under the distinct impression that the documents had, in fact, been received by the White House and sent to Records Management and were being reviewed in conjunction with other requests for White House documents.

You thought you had left them at the White House?

Mr. GEARAN. I did.

Senator SARBANES. As it turned out, they went over to the Peace Corps. Now when further requests were being made for documents, you did, as it were, sort of a confirmatory check and uncovered these documents and then said, "well, they ought to be sent over to the White House." And you assumed they had gone on over to the White House; is that correct?

Mr. GEARAN. That's correct.

Senator SARBANES. [Continuing:]

Last evening we called White House Counsel and in the course of that discussion we were informed that they were having some difficulty locating certain Communications Office files in the Records Management system. We offered our assistance in locating this material. We learned that, rather than being sent to the White House, Mr. Gearan's Communications Office documents remained in their original White House container in storage at the Peace Corps.

This was contrary to what you thought had been done; right?

Mr. GEARAN. That's correct.

Senator SARBANES. [Continuing:]

We, of course, have notified White House Counsel and, in order to expedite their review of these documents, sent them by courier to White House Counsel's Office this morning without reviewing them. As these documents belong to the White House and review and production of these documents is a responsibility that has been assumed by White House Counsel, we felt it appropriate to handle the documents in this manner, even though there may not be any responsive documents in the box.

Then you make this explanation to the Independent Counsel. In the end they were sent over and then, of course, the White House furnished them to the Committee. That's how we now have them.

In a way, it is unfortunate. First, they were sent over to the Peace Corps when you thought they had been left at the White House, as I understand it; is that correct?

Mr. GEARAN. That's correct, Senator.

Senator SARBANES. Second, when you thought they had been sent back to the White House, in fact, that had not happened, those instructions or understanding was not carried out. That would have been back in November; is that correct?

Mr. GEARAN. That's correct.

Senator SARBANES. And then upon this indication that they had some difficulty locating them, then a further check was made and you found they were still there and you made certain they got over there; is that correct?

Mr. GEARAN. That's correct.

Senator SARBANES. Thank you.

The CHAIRMAN. Senator Grams.

Senator GRAMS. Thank you, very much. It is nice to get back again. Just a couple quick questions and maybe a couple comments before I yield the rest of my time back over to Mr. Chertoff.

I know comments have been made how these files got misplaced and that there is some satisfaction of the explanation that you have given in not producing the documents but I think if we look at it, it has been very selective, even though they weren't specifically requested. I don't think this has been an issue of minimal compliance with the subpoena versus really the full cooperation that the White House has always said that they were willing to provide.

My questions are that, like I said, it has been quite selective, not full cooperation, because the subjects of these notes dealt exactly with what this investigation has considered, and that is the dealings with Madison Guaranty and all the other meetings and everything. I believe they were pertinent and although they didn't meet the letter of maybe the request, I think there could have been better cooperation despite some of that.

Also, timing is everything, that if this would have been brought out maybe before your confirmation, it might have been a different view on your appointment to head up the Peace Corps. So timing could have meant a lot to whether these notes were turned over or were not turned over.

I wanted to get back to some other questions about the notes themselves and again, as I say, that I understand you had no official request come from this Committee asking for these specific documents, but didn't you feel you had an obligation to turn over these notes, even though they weren't specific but what I feel was in the broad concept of what this Committee was looking for?

Mr. GEARAN. Senator, my understanding is that what this Committee has asked for, as best as I can describe it to you, is initially on White House-Treasury contacts and then on the death of Vincent Foster. I have tried, and I have no reason not to provide them to you, as I have tried to do and to other committees as best I can. My understanding is, that's what those requests and subpoenas were about.

Senator GRAMS. The Treasury context dealt with Madison Guaranty and Whitewater, and these notes do the same.

Mr. GEARAN. My understanding, the Treasury context dealt with the issue of the October 14th meeting. I would not have joined them that way, no, Senator.

Senator GRAMS. I still think under the big umbrella of what we are talking about is the answers we have been trying to find.

Mr. GEARAN. Senator, the best I can tell you is I have tried to comply with absolutely the letter of the law here. I have done my honest best to give you the information that this Committee has requested.

Senator GRAMS. Did anybody at the White House ask you not to turn over these notes?

Mr. GEARAN. No, Senator.

Senator GRAMS. From this meeting or any other meeting?

Mr. GEARAN. No.

Senator GRAMS. The decision basically was yours that these notes were in your file and you would make them available to the White House and let them make the decision whether they should be turned over to this Committee?

Mr. GEARAN. My decision on previous subpoenas was that they were not requested and did not fit within the ambit of that subpoena request initially on Treasury contacts, and then Vince Foster, certainly if they are appropriate to this new subpoena, I am fully willing to go through them and to provide them to you as I have done.

I regret the delay, and I regret the circumstances of this. I have tried to be forthcoming in my honesty in presenting the circumstances how that happened. I take responsibility for it.

Senator GRAMS. One other question I had and which I began my questioning today earlier with, about the mood of the meeting. I know you said the meetings were just basically to get the truth out, to try to put everything in order with the questions and answers and chronology. But as you knew, this followed by several months a meeting with the White House Counsel staff, Mr. Kendall, who is the President's private attorney and others, and it sounds more like when you read these notes of this meeting that it was nothing short of, we wouldn't say a panic mode, but there was a lot of concern about what was going on.

It wasn't just basically to sit down and get the questions and chronology straight, because when you hear things that if Beverly—if we don't get this thing done, there is going to be trouble here, the diary from Mr. Altman at the same time about White-water, that Maggie told me that HRC was paralyzed by it, we don't want people getting into 20 years of politics in Arkansas.

So, when you look at all of this, I think it is more than just a meeting to try to get your questions and answers and chronology straight. There was a lot of concern about what was going on.

Mr. GEARAN. Senator, I don't mean to minimize in any way the circumstances in the White House. We were facing, I think, considerable drumbeat, as I have said, from press stories and Congressional calls for an Independent Counsel. Absolutely, this was a considerable issue in the press and press questions and if I said the mood was just to put together individual chronologies or question and answers, what I would like to testify is certainly that's what we intended to do. Certainly the mood was such, acknowledging a considerable drumbeat and a considerable cacaphony of voices on this whole issue. It was a significant press issue at the time, absolutely, Senator.

Senator GRAMS. Again, I will raise it. If it was a great concern in January 1994, according to your statements, it wasn't on your radar screen in the middle of 1995, if I am correct in following this?

Mr. GEARAN. No, Senator. What I testified previously was that the October 14th meeting of 1994 was, as best I can remember, one of the times when it was on my radar screen, which is an inelegant way, but something I was dealing with. These meetings were at the beginning of 1995. In between my October 14th meeting and these meetings in 1995, of course, the President turned over his documents to the Justice Department and there was a continuing drumbeat of stories and attention paid to this matter.

Senator GRAMS. That's all the questions. I just have the comment that despite the fact the White House and many in the Administration had been working on this from the first days of the Clinton Administration, and yet when requests were made for documents, although it didn't fit the letter of the subpoenas, that more effort was put into not providing them than it was in providing them.

I want to thank you very much. I yield my time.

The CHAIRMAN. Mr. Chertoff.

Senator SARBANES. For the record, he misspoke on his dates. We ought to get them straight. I think the October date was 1993.

Mr. GEARAN. Yes, Senator.

Senator SARBANES. These dates were 1994. You said 1994 and 1995.

The CHAIRMAN. The record reflects that. We will note that.

Mr. CHERTOFF. I'm going to come back to this issue of the documents and, in fact, your earlier testimony. But before I do, I just want to close out the discussion of Beverly Bassett Schaffer and get you back to page 20577 of your notes. This is right after Mr. Ickes underscores for the assembled how important it is to handle this matter with Beverly Bassett Schaffer.

Now, we have already established that Beverly Bassett Schaffer had made public statements about this, and as a matter of fact, we have some evidence that she had furnished copies of those statements to Mr. Lindsey via her husband. Then the suggestion is addressed whether to send PB, Paul Begala, Bruce Lindsey, and Michael Waldman; right?

Mr. GEARAN. That's correct.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Mr. Ickes says, "We can't send them because it will come out."

Mr. GEARAN. That's what my notes say.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Then the discussion becomes whether someone instead of these three could be sent who would be in effect at arm's length, and not traceable to the White House; correct?

Mr. GEARAN. That's how one could read that.

Mr. CHERTOFF. One could read anything to be anything. Isn't that what happened?

Mr. GEARAN. I don't have a firm recollection of it. That's how one could read it. It is also the case that we were also looking for people, lawyers to substantiate the substance of Arkansas law.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Are you going to tell me that Skip—that is Skip Rutherford you were looking to to substantiate the law, he wasn't a lawyer was he?

Mr. GEARAN. He is not a lawyer, that's correct.

Mr. CHERTOFF. When you have the list of "Tisdale, Skip, and PB friend New York lawyer," you are not going to tell us they were people to do legal research; right?

Mr. GEARAN. What I'm telling you, Mr. Chertoff, is I don't recall that that was specifically to send to speak with Ms. Bassett Schaffer. It could have been. I just don't recall.

Mr. CHERTOFF. The question is "We can't send Begala, Lindsey, or Waldman because it will come out." Is that right?

Mr. GEARAN. That's what Mr. Ickes said.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Then it says, "Item by item, make sure her story is OK." Let me stop here for a second, because you told us earlier that the point of this exercise in dealing with Ms. Bassett was to make sure the White House's version was correct. But it doesn't say here, "Item by item make sure our story is OK." It says, "make sure her story is OK." Now assuming she was telling the truth as of January 1, 1994, how could you conceivably need to make sure her story was OK?

Mr. GEARAN. The best that I can recall is that it was the story of both what she had said previously, so we would not misstate it. But also the factual basis of what she did as a regulator to make sure that was in compliance with any Arkansas law.

Mr. CHERTOFF. So, in other words, you had a doubt in your mind about whether, in fact, what she had done was a problem?

Mr. GEARAN. I don't recall that. I just recall an issue of the White House credibility being paramount to make sure that we are not misrepresenting anything.

Mr. CHERTOFF. But it doesn't say, Mr. Gearan, "make sure our story is OK." It says, "make sure her story is OK." You understand, you wrote those words down, right?

Mr. GEARAN. Yes, I did.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Unless you really want to torture the English language, and we had an individual here a couple years ago, Josh Steiner, who, you remember we had his diary and we got all kinds of acrobatics with it. And you understand the distinction between "make sure our story is OK" and "make sure her story is OK." You see the distinction?

Mr. GEARAN. Certainly.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Right under that, you have three people that are listed, "Tisdale, Skip, and PB friend New York lawyer." Who was that friend, by the way?

Mr. GEARAN. I don't know. I don't recall.

Mr. CHERTOFF. It wouldn't be Ms. Thomases, would it?

Mr. GEARAN. I don't recall that name listed there.

Mr. CHERTOFF. It is not listed there. I'm asking you to remember who the person was.

Mr. GEARAN. I do not recall who the person was.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Now, you are not suggesting that the three people listed under, "Item by item, make sure her story is OK" were three people who were going to do legal research; right?

Mr. GEARAN. Mr. Chertoff, I can't recall exactly.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Recall generally.

Mr. GEARAN. As I said in my deposition, one could read it, as you say, that these were people that could have gone to Arkansas to make——

Mr. CHERTOFF. Sure her story was OK?

Mr. GEARAN. To make certain that we were representing the story, make certain her story was correct. I can't give you any firm recollection that that's exactly what that means.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Mr. Rutherford and Mr. Tisdale did, in fact, contact Ms. Schaffer; right?

Mr. GEARAN. I don't know that.

Mr. CHERTOFF. That's what Ms. Schaffer indicated in her statements to AP, that she had a discussion with Mr. Rutherford and she had a discussion with Mr. Tisdale and that, in fact, Mr. Tisdale offered to put together a factual document list for her. Do you know how it is that this discussion here about Mr. Tisdale and Mr. Rutherford having contact "to make sure her story is OK" wound up having an actual effect down in Arkansas in which Mr. Rutherford and Mr. Tisdale, in fact, communicated with Ms. Schaffer?

Mr. GEARAN. I don't, sir.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Do you think that is a coincidence?

Mr. GEARAN. I don't know. I just don't have any knowledge of how that happened.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You don't think that, in fact, a decision was made to request that Mr. Tisdale and Mr. Rutherford get in touch with Ms. Schaffer to make sure her story is OK?

Mr. GEARAN. Mr. Chertoff, I just don't know the answer to that question.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You were at this meeting; right? Wasn't that decided in this meeting?

Mr. GEARAN. I have no recollection of it and my notes don't indicate it.

Mr. CHERTOFF. So you can't give us anything more than what your notes say on this, right? This is one of the areas where you can't go beyond your notes; right?

Mr. GEARAN. I do not want to misrepresent anything to the Committee of what I can honestly recollect and what I cannot.

Mr. CHERTOFF. I might direct your attention to the previous page, where if there is any doubt about the need to come to closure on this where Mr. Ickes says, "Let's not talk it to death, let's just get it done." Is that right? That is kind of a call to action, isn't it?

Mr. GEARAN. I think it sounds like something Mr. Ickes would say, yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Was Ms. Bassett represented by counsel, by the way, at this point in time?

Mr. GEARAN. I have no idea.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Was there any discussion about whether it was appropriate to have discussions with her directly as opposed to through some kind of an attorney?

Mr. GEARAN. I don't recall that.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Now with respect to Betsey Wright, this comment in your notes in discussion the next day—I'm sorry—later in the day, where Mr. Ickes complains that it is impossible to reopen this with Mrs. Clinton, the President can't even do it himself. You remember that conversation?

Mr. GEARAN. I cannot say I remember it in any detail beyond my notes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. It wasn't memorable to remember a conversation in which you were told by the Deputy Chief of Staff to the President that the President of the United States, himself, couldn't move the First Lady to agree to an Independent Counsel? You didn't think that was memorable?

Mr. GEARAN. I am doing the best I can to recollect this meeting from 2 years ago. I am happy to provide you the notes that I have had from that meeting. But I cannot recollect it in any great detail, no, I cannot.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Can you recollect the part where it says, "Indictments will be Betsey Wright"?

Mr. GEARAN. That part, I—

Mr. CHERTOFF. That part you recollect a little bit?

Mr. GEARAN. If I might, I can certainly recollect Mr. Nussbaum's great argumentation at the time against it. He was quite strong and quite forceful in his argumentation against an Independent Counsel. I guess what I am just trying to say to the Committee is how I would read this. I never heard any suggestion at a meeting by Mr. Nussbaum that there was any indication that he felt there was any factual basis that Ms. Wright would be charged with something like this.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Did he suggest she would be a natural target for investigation?

Mr. GEARAN. No, I don't remember that.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You don't remember one way or the other whether he suggested she might be a target?

Mr. GEARAN. I don't recall that coming up.

Mr. CHERTOFF. But you did find it important enough to write down "Indictments will be Betsey Wright"; correct?

Mr. GEARAN. I wrote that down, that's correct.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You did that because you thought there was some significance to that?

Mr. GEARAN. I wrote it down because, as you can well see, I tend to detail a lot of what exactly people have said.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Did you know that during the same week, Ms. Wright was down in Little Rock trying to locate documents relating to Whitewater?

Mr. GEARAN. I don't believe so.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Did that come up in the meeting?

Mr. GEARAN. I don't believe so.

The CHAIRMAN. We will come back to it.

Senator Sarbanes.

Senator SARBANES. Mr. Gearan, I would like to make the observation, I think if you had said make sure our story is OK, you would—if we could put that thing back up there, page 2577. "Item by item, make sure her story is OK." Mr. Chertoff suggested to you why didn't you say, "make sure our story is OK." I would like to suggest that if that's what you had said, then you would have had a line of questioning here that someone was going to go down, and in effect take Ms. Bassett Schaffer through your story to make sure it is OK, in other words, that that would be the story line. This is one of those damned if you do and damned if you don't propositions.

From my perception, it is more straightforward that it says make sure her story is OK than if it had said make sure our story is OK, which would imply White House people were going to go down with their story and in effect peddle that and make sure it was OK.

Now, I'm beginning to think what we should do in these hearings is we ought to spend the first 10 or 15 minutes running the press accounts for the period about which we are then going to ask questions so people get some sense of what was out in the public and what was taking place and what the context of the situation was.

These meetings were held on January 4th. On January 2nd, the Minority Leader of the U.S. Senate, Bob Dole, appeared on Meet the Press. The story in The Washington Post was "Senate Minority Leader Robert Dole and House Minority Whip Newt Gingrich yesterday urged Attorney General Janet Reno to appoint an Independent Counsel to investigate any involvement by President Clinton with the failed Arkansas savings and loan" and so on.

Then it goes on to report that on Meet the Press, he accused Reno of dragging her feet on appointment of an Independent Counsel. He then went on about the Iran-Contra affair, and, of course, you had Reno resisting this appointment of a Special Counsel.

That took place on the Sunday before any of these meetings took place. Now that was not the only focus of attention on this issue that the White House was receiving, was it, at the time? Do you recall?

Mr. GEARAN. You mean beyond—

Senator SARBANES. Senator Dole's call. There was a lot of—

Mr. GEARAN. Editorial calls and—

Senator SARBANES. Other newspaper comment and so forth, was there not?

Mr. GEARAN. Yes, sir.

Senator SARBANES. In fact, it tended to reach a crescendo in those first couple weeks in January, did it not?

Mr. GEARAN. Yes, quite significant.

Senator SARBANES. In the end, the President asked the Attorney General to name a Special Counsel; is that correct?

Mr. GEARAN. That's correct.

Senator SARBANES. But that was done after a period in which Mrs. Clinton, and I take it the President, to some extent, saw no basis on which to have a Special Counsel. Their position was no wrong-doing has been done, why do we need to have a Special Counsel.

Mr. GEARAN. That's right.

Senator SARBANES. In your notes, you refer to—I forget where that was, where you say principle versus politics. Do you recall where that is?

Mr. GEARAN. I believe it is 2571, Senator.

Senator SARBANES. Yes. "Matter of principle/bad politics." Before that says, "No credible evidence. They have done enough." I take it the position of Mrs. Clinton was that there wasn't any credible evidence for such a thing. The meeting recognized that this was bad politics; is that correct?

Mr. GEARAN. Yes, it was understood that this was bad politics.

Senator SARBANES. Because of the clamor for having a Special Counsel?

Mr. GEARAN. Yes, in light of the significant clamor for it, as you say.

Senator SARBANES. Mr. Ben-Veniste.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Mr. Gearan, I want to come back to this Beverly Bassett Schaffer situation, because there is so much on the record here and when you look at the notion that your memo may be some sort of sensational information, the smoking gun du jour in these hearings. Beverly Bassett Schaffer wrote a detailed memorandum on February 25, 1992, which is part of this record. She wrote it to Jeff Gerth of The New York Times.

Three days later, she wrote a second memorandum to Mr. Gerth, February 28, 1992, where follow-up questions were addressed. All of this material is in the public record. Beverly Bassett Schaffer has testified fully before this Committee. Her testimony is in all respects consistent with what she said back in 1992 and consistent with what each and every witness from Arkansas, from the RTC, and from the Federal Home Loan Bank Board, I might add, has said about the appropriateness of her conduct.

In October of last year, this Committee received from the White House the memo of Beverly Bassett Schaffer—dated January 19, 1994, 10 days to 2 weeks after these meetings began, regarding Madison Guaranty Savings & Loan and her connection there with a narrative statement and a very detailed chronology of events, 14 pages long. We have all of that material, Ms. Schaffer's testimony, the testimony of each and every witness who has testified about the appropriateness of her action, the memos that she wrote in 1992, the memo that she wrote in 1994, and her testimony in 1996. It is all consistent.

So, the notion that somebody has been sent to try to get her to change that, which was helpful and favorable in the first place, is a total non sequitur.

Senator SARBANES. I give back my time.

The CHAIRMAN. Mr. Gearan, because I think it is important that we have a little background on public as well as private things that were taking place in connection with this, I have asked Mr. Chertoff to examine some of this with you. Let me ask you, during this period of time, what was your title? What were you in 1993?

Mr. GEARAN. The Director of Communications.

The CHAIRMAN. Director of Communications. So, as such, you obviously follow and you have people clip out those materials and articles that are pertinent, that are important, that the President should be aware of and that the Administration should be aware of; is that correct?

Mr. GEARAN. Yes. There are people within the White House that provide a daily clip service.

The CHAIRMAN. And they give it to you?

Mr. GEARAN. It is circulated broadly in the White House, including me, yes.

The CHAIRMAN. Let's talk about what you do. You are Director of White House Communications, so you keep yourself updated. If there is a big event that may be taking place, a catastrophe, whether it is worldwide or domestic, you are on top of this. Your job is to be right on top of this?

Mr. GEARAN. I try to be, Senator.

The CHAIRMAN. Was that part of your responsibilities? Was that a major part of your responsibilities so you can respond, so you can parcel things out, so you can work with the various departments within the White House and within the Executive?

Mr. GEARAN. Yes. I guess I only hesitate, Senator, because what we had in the White House, particular spokespeople for an issue, for instance, health care or those who would be more expert in a particular area on NAFTA or some of the larger issues, we broke it up. In addition to the fact there was a press secretary who provided the daily press briefings. So, there were other pieces of this of how we divided it up.

The CHAIRMAN. But you follow the important, relevant events?

Mr. GEARAN. Yes.

The CHAIRMAN. Mr. Chertoff.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Mr. Gearan, there is an editorial in The New York Times dated December 20, 1993. I think you have it before you. Along the side is a typed version of the President's handwritten note, which we still don't have a copy of. The line in the President's handwriting is next to the reference to Beverly Bassett Schaffer says, "Shortly thereafter, Governor Clinton named Beverly Bassett Schaffer as head of the Arkansas agency charged with overseeing State-chartered savings and loans. Ms. Schaffer had once done legal work for Madison. For the next 18 months, up to the point where Federal regulators moved in, she took no significant regulatory action."

Then the President says: "This is important to be on top of. Bassett did a good job in" what appears to be "campaign on this—can she now?" Did you get a copy of the President's note?

Mr. GEARAN. I don't believe so.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Did you know that the President expressed concern about this?

Mr. GEARAN. No, I don't believe so.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Did you know the President viewed it as important?

Mr. GEARAN. I don't know.

The CHAIRMAN. How do you think these meetings of the highest officials beginning in the first week of January, came about? No one told you the President was concerned about this? Is that what you are suggesting to us?

Mr. GEARAN. I don't think there is any confusion that given what was in the public domain, everyone was concerned about it.

The CHAIRMAN. Did you see this matter?

Mr. CHERTOFF. This editorial.

Mr. GEARAN. Well, I don't believe I saw the copies of the President's—

The CHAIRMAN. Did you see the editorial?

Mr. GEARAN. I believe I would have. I don't recall it to this day. But I tried to read the editorials, certainly.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Just so you understand what the position is with respect to this, briefly, to put it in context, we have had evidence that Ms. Bassett, when she was a lawyer the year before she was appointed Commissioner who would regulate savings and loans, actually worked for Madison and actually wrote a memo to Jim Guy Tucker, who was her senior partner or her partner on the case, and told Mr. Tucker that there were some legal problems with some of Mr. McDougal's other projects relating to Madison that could even result in criminal action.

Nevertheless, a year later, she was regulating Madison, didn't recuse herself, had a conversation with Mrs. Clinton about Madison in which we learned for the first time in the last couple of months they actually discussed the substance of a proposal to have Madison issue preferred stock and then she gave the green light to develop that proposal with respect to a man, James McDougal, whom she already knew had had some difficulty complying with the law about registering and disclosing with respect to the sales of land. So, that is the picture we are dealing with with Ms. Beverly Bassett Schaffer.

Now this editorial comes out on December 20th, and then early in January, this group with Mr. Ickes starts to get busy discussing the issue of the Independent Counsel and also discussing Beverly Bassett Schaffer.

My understanding is from the very beginning, just to get this all in context, from the very first day on January 4th, it is clear that the President and the First Lady do not want to have an Independent Counsel; right?

Mr. GEARAN. That's my recollection, yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. The concerns expressed by Bernie Nussbaum, for example, are issues of the bad-hearted prosecutor who is going to smell out corruption and may make cases on people who are surrounding the principals, namely the President and the First Lady, or concerns about not being able to limit the scope of the investigation.

On the first page of your January 7th notes, 20575, "We cannot affect the scope of the prosecutor." The concern is that there is not an ability to somehow limit or tailor what the prosecutor is going to look at, which is, of course, consistent with Mr. Altman's diary that indicates that the White House wasn't successful in negotiating limitations on scope.

Then on the next page, we have these three major problems including the fact that "Reno has shut the door." You understand that the reference to Janet Reno shutting the door meant that she would make her own mind up about the scope of an Independent Counsel. She wasn't going to be influenced or pushed by efforts to define the scope of the Independent Counsel; correct?

Mr. GEARAN. That's how I would read it.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Then we discover, as I gather the press indicates, the pressure is mounting during the first week of January.

Mr. GEARAN. Yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Finally, if I am not mistaken, within a day or so before the President finally wrote the letter asking for an Independent Counsel, members of his own party had gone out publicly and told him he better do that, right?

Mr. GEARAN. I don't know if it was the day before, but a period of time, yes, sir.

Mr. CHERTOFF. At the same period of time, you understood from Mr. Ickes that he wasn't all that delighted with the way the Department of Justice was looking at this anyway because he viewed Carver, who was one of the guys at Justice working on this, as himself being a bad guy who was trying to F us blue; right?

Mr. GEARAN. That was my understanding.

Mr. CHERTOFF. In effect, what happened here was this, the White House is caught between the devil and the deep blue sea. They don't want to have an Independent Counsel, don't want to have someone poking through 20 years of Arkansas, don't want to have a guy who is, as you say, an unguided missile who can't be controlled. The problem they have is the Attorney General has shut the door and says she is going to make up her own mind about the scope and if they look at what Justice is doing, these guys at Justice, Ickes is annoyed because the guy there is a bad guy who is F---ing us blue and the pressure is mounting, even by members of the President's own party, to appoint an Independent Counsel. In any case, it is the Attorney General's position because she is not going to be pushed around. That is pretty much the picture, the way it was?

Mr. GEARAN. I think the drumbeat was mounting, I think the intensity of the meetings reflects that.

Mr. CHERTOFF. The intensity of the meetings reflects that as far as the White House was concerned. The last thing they wanted to have was a prosecutor looking at this that couldn't be controlled, but the truth of the matter is with the Attorney General having shut the door and with the drumbeat mounting and with Carver himself trying to F us blue, there wasn't much choice by the time the President asked for the Independent Counsel; right?

Mr. GEARAN. I think the concerns for the Independent Counsel, as I said, were, among them, the kind of—length and the time and the expense and the control.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Let me ask you this, Mr. Gearan, I want to go back to the issue of your testimony in 1994, because I think we need to take a serious look at the question of whether the first time this issue got on the radar screen with you was on October 14th, when you had the meeting you were asked about.

Now, I have read you your sworn testimony before the Senate in which you indicated before October 14, 1993, it wasn't really on the radar screen for you. That is testimony you gave in the summer of 1994. It was within 9 months of October.

Senator SARBANES. Was this at a hearing?

Mr. CHERTOFF. It was a deposition. It is page 24. It is your deposition on Saturday, July 23, 1994.

Now, I want to go to another deposition you gave. You were also examined under oath by the RTC Inspector General's office on Saturday, July 16, 1994, and they asked you the same question. On page 4, at the top of the page:

Question: When were you first made aware of the issues surrounding the Madison Guaranty Whitewater matter?

Answer: I—the first recollection I'd give would be the meeting that I attended in October.

Question: When was that?

Answer: October 14, 1993.

So, anybody, like us, for example, until a few days ago or a couple weeks ago looking at this testimony would have concluded that until October 14, 1993, you had absolutely no consciousness to speak of of Whitewater or Madison in terms of your duties at the White House. But then we get a package of documents that reveal you were rather extensively involved in discussions in September 1993, and I want to emphasize, Mr. Gearan, this sworn testimony we are looking at was given less than a year after these meetings.

So we are not talking about 11 years ago or even 2 years ago. We are talking about a matter of months. What we have is an undated package of notes starting at S20292 and going through S20310 which reflect a 2-hour meeting you had starting at 10:00 a.m. with Jeff Gerth and Bruce Lindsey in which Mr. Gerth lays out in painstaking detail allegations of misconduct made by Mr. Hale and others which you saw fit to take down in precise detail, evidencing the fact that you evidently thought it was important enough to keep a record of.

On page S20296, you learned, or make light of the fact that in "Early 1986, examiners go to Madison Guaranty, McDougal and Tucker are trying to help him with the capital of his SBIC." That's Hale, and they are trying to find someone who will buy a piece of land. You make a diagram of the money moving from Madison to Hale to the SBIC. There's explicit discussion about the meetings that Hale claims he had with the President.

This goes on and on and on. It talks about Whitewater, it talks about Castle Grande, it talks about Madison, it talks about Hale. It is virtually a road map to everything that's now begun to emerge, which we now know. And it is really undisputed because we've compared this with Mr. Lindsey's notes which were taken at the same meeting which occurred in September 1993, 3 weeks before the October 14th meeting. And even Mr. Kravitz, the Democratic Counsel, observed, at page 26 of your deposition a few days ago, that he had read both sets of notes and they were strikingly similar, and it would be very surprising to him if these notes were two different meetings.

So we know, notwithstanding the lack of a date, that you spent hours on this before October 14th with Lindsey and Gerth. We know that on September 23rd you continued to pursue this story with respect to further questions from The Times. We know that, during the same period, your notes indicate calls with other reporters concerning this issue.

In light of the fact that all of this is going on within 3 weeks of this October 14th meeting, it is remarkable that you could give sworn testimony less than a year later saying that you were first made aware of the issues surrounding Madison Guaranty on October 14, 1993. And what makes it particularly amazing is you have admitted to us today that these notes were part of a group of documents you had segregated and you had put aside because you knew they were potentially relevant. How many documents were in this segregated group of documents?

Mr. GEARAN. I can't estimate. It was a few inches.

Mr. CHERTOFF. A few inches, a few inches of documents.

Mr. GEARAN. I think at least, yes. Clips and maybe—actually more than that.

Mr. CHERTOFF. What, six inches?

Mr. GEARAN. Probably. It was more like a file box of documents.

Mr. CHERTOFF. How much of that was news clippings and how much of that was actual notes?

Mr. GEARAN. I would—it was—I would say most of it would be news clippings or briefings, but there were notes like this that were provided.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Now it frankly defies belief that in the face of the requirement that you give sworn testimony in two separate places, before the RTC and before a Senate deposition—

Senator SARBANES. Mr. Chairman, I think Mr. Chertoff ought to ask a question and not put all these kind of legal conclusions. I mean, this thing about defying belief with respect to sworn testimony is actually Mr. Chertoff drawing conclusions. He ought not to do that. He ought to ask the witness questions. Conclusions can be drawn by others.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Mr. Gearan, did you prepare for what you knew were to be two sworn occasions of testimony by looking at the notes that related to Whitewater and Madison?

Mr. GEARAN. Mr. Chertoff, I would have, as I tried to say in my deposition, I would have placed even this later than that. Obviously, that's an erroneous recollection.

Mr. CHERTOFF. That's not my question. In preparation for what you knew would be sworn testimony on a matter of seriousness before the RTC and before the Senate, did you prepare by looking at what you've described as about yea much material, most of which was news clippings but some of which were notes? Did you look at it before you testified?

Mr. GEARAN. I prepared for the documents that were requested, which concerned White House-Treasury contacts and it was in the context of White House-Treasury contacts concerning Whitewater that I responded to the OIG's question. I prepared as best I could. Whether or not I reviewed this, or not, I don't know. A bit of the difficulty, I think, Mr. Chertoff, is these notes are not dated.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Well, the September 23rd note is dated and the other notes from the context, it certainly would have put you on notice, but you still haven't answered my question. Did you prepare by looking at your own notes relating to your involvement with Whitewater, because you are the one who volunteered that you didn't know about it before October 14th. No one put those words in your mouth; those were your words.

Mr. GEARAN. Mr. Chertoff, that would be my recollection of when I learned of the White House-Treasury contacts concerning Whitewater.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Did you prepare by looking at these notes that show your involvement in September 1993, did you prepare before you went to give your testimony?

Mr. GEARAN. To the RTC?

Mr. CHERTOFF. Or to this Committee.

Mr. GEARAN. I can't recall whether I looked at these notes or not, Mr. Chertoff. It is certainly the case that my memory would have put it there. That is my very best recollection.

Obviously, I have no reason to doubt the other notes that you have that put it in the September time period. When I've said it was on my radar screen frankly because Mr. Lindsey was the principal point of contact on Arkansas matters, I was assured that this would be taken care of.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You were the Director of Communications. Are you telling us that in a 2-hour meeting where the reporters indicate that a guy has made specific, specific allegations, and you actually draw a diagram of the way the money goes, this is on page 20297—I mean, this can't possibly be a common occurrence to have people come in and make this kind of explicit set of allegations, and you write page after page of notes, this didn't leave an impression in your mind?

Mr. GEARAN. Mr. Chertoff, I remember the meeting, I remember Mr. Gerth coming in. I guess all I can—

Mr. CHERTOFF. You do remember the meeting?

Mr. GEARAN. I remember the fact that Mr. Gerth came into the White House and we had this—I took these notes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Is it your testimony that this 2-hour discussion did not leave an impression on you, was not a memorable event when you had it?

Mr. GEARAN. It would be my testimony that because Mr. Lindsey was there, because he was the knowledgeable Arkansas point of contact within the White House, and because I did not see any perceptible concern on his part, nor was that remarked to me later, and I knew that he would be the appropriate person within the White House to follow up on it, that's—

Mr. CHERTOFF. You weren't concerned about detailed allegations involving Madison and Whitewater by New York Times reporters indicating they had detailed allegations of involvement and misconduct concerning Madison and Whitewater? You didn't see this as a matter to concern you as Director of Communications?

Mr. GEARAN. Well, I guess in tandem with the Engelberg document where Mr. Lindsey informed me that the President had had no recollection of those meetings, and that the story wasn't written—

Mr. CHERTOFF. Is that what he said? This is in response to what is frankly a very strong accusation. The response to take that you got was—and I take it this is what you got related to you by Mr. Lindsey and you had a reason to be accurate about it—on September 23rd, the response to this very strong and serious allegation by Hale is, about these meetings is simply "No recollection, doesn't believe it happened." That was it?

Mr. GEARAN. Those are my notes, yes; that's all I wrote down.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You didn't feel a little unsatisfied by that as a resounding denial of a serious accusation?

Mr. GEARAN. I guess Mr. Chertoff, because I knew Mr. Lindsey would be quite knowledgeable about it, and if this is the response from the President, given his department or his—he did not seem particularly agitated about it afterwards, that accounts for my recollection perhaps.

The CHAIRMAN. We've gone over our time. We'll come back.

Senator SARBANES. Mr. Gearan, I listened to Mr. Chertoff very closely. You don't deny that a meeting took place between you and Mr. Gerth and Mr. Lindsey, do you?

Mr. GEARAN. No, sir.

Senator SARBANES. You have been very clear in stating that that's the case; right?

Mr. GEARAN. Yes, and these are my notes.

Senator SARBANES. You have notes of that meeting?

Mr. GEARAN. I do.

Senator SARBANES. And those are undated notes?

Mr. GEARAN. They are.

Senator SARBANES. It was your impression, I take it, that meeting took place after October 14th? Or at least when you were asked this question, you didn't slug that meeting in ahead of it?

Mr. GEARAN. I didn't, but I have no reason to dispute it certainly now, but that would have been where I had placed it.

Senator SARBANES. Right. In fact, what you said is that this was one of the first contacts, I thought, references that I can recall for Whitewater. Now where they are trying to hang you up on that here—I am not quite clear why we are in this gotcha game but in any event—your recollection, if you had been asked without the other material we have that pinpoints the meeting, was that it occurred later in time; is that correct?

Mr. GEARAN. That would be my recollection.

Senator SARBANES. Do you recall when Gerth wrote his article?

Mr. GEARAN. I believe it was the beginning of November.

Senator SARBANES. Yes. If I told you it was November 2nd or 3rd, does that sound about right to you?

Mr. GEARAN. That sounds about right.

Senator SARBANES. So the article that sort of came out of all of this came at the beginning of November. Now when you made the statements, you thought you were trying to give your best recollection; is that correct?

Mr. GEARAN. Yes, sir.

Senator SARBANES. Now confronted with the Committee's assertion that we have other material that indicated this meeting with Gerth, you, and Lindsey took place earlier, you don't contest that?

Mr. GEARAN. No, certainly not. My understanding—

Senator SARBANES. I take it from your testimony here today you accept that?

Mr. GEARAN. I do and I have no reason to dispute that.

Senator SARBANES. Right. Mr. Ben-Veniste.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. The meeting with Mr. Gerth was a meeting where he was providing information to you that he had obtained, not under oath, but from somebody who was seeking, at that time, to be given favorable treatment by prosecutors down in Arkansas, Mr. Hale; correct?

Mr. GEARAN. Yes.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. That was the source of Mr. Gerth's information. Then he wrote a newspaper story in which he included much, if not all, of that information; correct? That was in November.

Mr. GEARAN. Correct.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. So when we look at the importance of all of this, whether you remembered precisely whether the meeting was before October 14th or after, it doesn't make a bit of difference, does it? Other than the fact that you've given testimony where you said you thought the October 14th meeting was before, but in fact, now it's after?

Mr. GEARAN. Which I do not dispute.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. It was not a meeting of a clandestine nature with some conspirator who was going to do something, it was with a New York Times reporter?

Mr. GEARAN. Correct.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Who then wrote a story?

Mr. GEARAN. Correct.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. And all you wrote down is what he was telling you, not that it was true or false, you wanted to be accurate as far as what he was saying; correct?

Mr. GEARAN. Correct.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. So now let's look at the big picture for a second, and get away from the game of gotcha and off the capillaries, to the heart of the matter. What was your role? What were you supposed to do?

Mr. GEARAN. Well, at that time, I sat in on the meeting, and as I said, those are my notes. I understood that Mr. Lindsey, as I said, was the principal point of contact on Arkansas-related matters.

If there are questions here, as the back of the memo or the Gerth notes outline, as well as the Engelberg call, I would go to Mr. Lindsey. Increasingly, as the Whitewater stories proceeded in the fall, Mr. Lindsey took more and more of the calls himself, and became the Whitewater spokesperson, if you will, increasingly for that, because of the complexity of the issue and the names, people, and places that I was frankly very unfamiliar with.

So, at this point in time, I was in some instances, as other notes that I've provided show, taking down the questions from reporters, but it would be my practice to report this to Mr. Lindsey who would either call back himself, or they would increasingly tend to call him.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Now other than acting as a funnel for information between the news reporters and Mr. Lindsey and back, did you direct anybody to go to Arkansas to do anything?

Mr. GEARAN. No.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Did you direct some independent fact-finding to be done?

Mr. GEARAN. No.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Did you set out as an investigative reporter within the White House to begin interviewing people?

Mr. GEARAN. No, I did not.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. So, if I understand your role here, it was in a very limited capacity for a limited period of time until Mr. Lindsey took over completely to field questions from the press and get back to them?

Mr. GEARAN. That's correct. I did not take it upon myself to school myself in the details of Whitewater. I did not think that was the best use of my time, and that I should be doing other things. And because Mr. Lindsey, frankly, was so knowledgeable about Arkansas, I thought that was the appropriate course to follow.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. I know you have been here for many, many hours already today. I know it's hard to sit here and answer questions for such an extended period of time, and I commend you for your patience and your attention to these matters.

The question has been raised about what it meant when it was said that the Attorney General had closed the door. I had referred to several articles that had already appeared that said that Ms. Reno had stated publicly, privately, in every which way but Sunday, that she did not want to appoint a Special Counsel. Does this reference to "closed the door" when you were listing reasons against a Special Counsel, in your mind, refer to the fact that apparently Ms. Reno had "closed the door" on the appointment of a Special Counsel?

Mr. GEARAN. Mr. Ben-Veniste, I think that could be a read of my notes. I cannot tell you that I recollect it any further with the benefit of those articles that you read to me. Those are notes from Mr. Ickes. I know you have indicated that you will be asking him this, I want to just report to you as completely as I can what I remember. And I can't amplify beyond what I've done, sir.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Thereafter, despite Ms. Reno's very public statements about her position, which was eventually borne out by the facts, when Mr. Fiske was replaced by Mr. Starr despite the fact that Mr. Fiske is so highly respected, you then see a situation where Ms. Reno, at the request of the President, goes forward and does, in fact, appoint a Special Counsel; correct?

Mr. GEARAN. That's correct.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. And all of this happens within a 2-week period of time, from the time of your notes to the appointment of a Special Counsel?

Mr. GEARAN. Right.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Nothing further.

The CHAIRMAN. Mr. Chertoff.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You were asked the question, Mr. Gearan, about why these issues are important. With respect to this issue of the desire of the White House, the concern about Mr. Ickes and Mr. Nussbaum, about controlling investigations, of course you were aware that ultimately the Attorney General's decision was for her to make? She couldn't be told to do it or not to do it; right?

Mr. GEARAN. That's my understanding.

Mr. CHERTOFF. And of more importance perhaps she couldn't be told to limit the scope because it was her discretion and her independence that would lead her to make that decision; right?

Mr. GEARAN. That's my understanding.

Mr. CHERTOFF. That's notwithstanding that Mr. Nussbaum had expressed concerns about control and scope in the meetings. But, I also want to make quite clear that the reference to shutting the door has to do with her making the decision on her own, and announcing it on her own; isn't that right?

Mr. GEARAN. Mr. Chertoff, again, I—that could be an interpretation. Mr. Ben-Veniste outlines another one.

Mr. CHERTOFF. When you swore under oath in your deposition a couple of days ago which interpretation did you advance?

Mr. GEARAN. Well, I had not had the opportunity to review any of the articles that were read to me. I am just trying to—

Mr. CHERTOFF. You've had the opportunity to look at your notes?

Mr. GEARAN. I did, sir.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Didn't you tell us in the deposition a couple of days ago that the interpretation—wasn't the interpretation that you adopted that the Attorney General, was going to act independently, that she hadn't decided, and that she had shut the door, and she would decide and announce it on her own?

Mr. GEARAN. That's how I could read that sentence.

Mr. CHERTOFF. That's how you read it in the deposition; right?

The CHAIRMAN. Get the deposition out.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Page 144.

The CHAIRMAN. Take a look at your deposition. We had to pull teeth to get the facts and we are going to do it. And if we have to stay here late, we will. Do you have a copy of your deposition?

Mr. GEARAN. I don't, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. Page 144.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Let's get Mr. Gearan a copy of the deposition, please, before we start. It is further up the page, it's line—

The CHAIRMAN. Let's wait until he gets to it. Do you have the page, Mr. Gearan?

Mr. GEARAN. Yes, I do.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Follow along at line 20.

Question: What did you understand Mr. Ickes to be saying by "Reno has shut the door"?

Answer: I can't recall. I guess I could read that as she will make up her own mind on this. She is an independent Attorney General. She has said that she hasn't decided, that she has shut the door, that she will decide and announce it on her own.

That's the interpretation you advanced in your deposition; right? Correct? It is right there in black and white.

Mr. GEARAN. Yes, I said I can't recall, but then I guess I could read this. That's how I guess——

Mr. CHERTOFF. And you came up with an interpretation of your own notes; right? Which talked about the fact "that she has shut the door, that she will decide and announce it on her own." Is that the answer that you gave in response to the question you were asked, yes or no?

Mr. GEARAN. From the deposition, yes. I have no reason to——

The CHAIRMAN. When was the deposition given?

Mr. GEARAN. Monday evening, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. This past Monday evening?

Mr. GEARAN. Yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. In terms of why it is important, are you aware of the fact that within a matter of weeks after this discussion with Mr. Nussbaum and Mr. Ickes concerning controlling investigations, the issue of controlling another investigation was presented, having to do with the RTC's investigation of matters associated with Madison, and whether Roger Altman, the Deputy Treasury Secretary, would stay on and be involved in that, or whether he would recuse himself? Are you familiar with that?

Mr. GEARAN. Not in a detailed way.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Were you involved in discussions at the White House concerning the desire to control that investigation by having Mr. Altman stay in charge rather than recuse himself?

Mr. GEARAN. No, I don't recall that.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Do you see a pattern here in which it seems that Mr. Nussbaum and Mr. Ickes and others felt a strong desire to assert control over who the decisionmakers would be on investigations?

Mr. GEARAN. Mr. Chertoff, I have not seen a pattern to that in my White House time.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Do you see a problem with the White House having a desire to exert control over the people who are going to be making decisions about investigations that touch upon the President and the First Lady?

Mr. GEARAN. What I do know is the conversations we had in the White House, during this week in particular, was the matter that the Independent Counsel would not have this kind of control. That was the whole point that Mr. Nussbaum was making, that they as I have said, tended to go on and last——

Mr. CHERTOFF. And be unguided?

Mr. GEARAN. And be unguided.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Now in terms of the importance of your testimony in 1994 about the sequence of these discussions, what's important about this, Mr. Gearan, is, back in 1994, I think the Committee and the RTC were trying to get a sense of why information was coming from Treasury to the White House, and why you would have, for example, attended a meeting at which there was discussion between an official of Treasury who had access to confidential information and people in the White House.

The thrust of your testimony was that basically this whole issue was no big deal for you back in the fall, and therefore, essentially, your involvement was almost that of a bystander. And would you agree with me that, in assessing your state of mind at that time, an awareness that you had been involved during the same time period in extended conversations with reporters where they had laid out the detailed allegations of Mr. Hale would have been of considerable value in assessing the degree of your interest in this matter?

Mr. GEARAN. Senator—I mean, Mr. Chertoff, I never joined those two things.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You didn't join——

Mr. GEARAN. For the October 14th meeting, if that's what your question is.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You didn't draw a link in your mind between the meeting on October 14th where there was discussion about Madison and Whitewater and the Rose Law Firm, and your conversation with Mr. Gerth for 2 hours where he laid out chapter and verse of Mr. Hale's allegations of the President's alleged misconduct with respect to Madison and Whitewater? Those two events were totally different to you? You didn't see any connection?

Mr. GEARAN. Well, again, I would have placed it at a different point, but aside from that, because Mr. Lindsey was the principal source of information on this, and I frankly must have taken my cues from the meeting we had with Mr. Gerth from Mr. Lindsey.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You didn't mention anything about the meeting with Gerth as having occurred either before or after the October 14th meeting, did you?

Mr. GEARAN. To?

Mr. CHERTOFF. During your testimony before the Senate or the RTC Inspector General?

Mr. GEARAN. I don't know. I haven't reviewed my transcript, but I don't recall if I did or not.

Mr. CHERTOFF. By the way, let me direct your attention to page S 20572 of your notes. I think this is January 5th, still. This is a meeting with the Vice President?

Mr. GEARAN. Mr. Chertoff, I don't know if this page is—it is seemingly an entire day kind of listed here, Vice President, a luncheon, and then p.m. meeting in the evening.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Whose handwriting is it?

Mr. GEARAN. It is my handwriting. I can't imagine that there are three different meetings or whether I was summarizing something at the end of the day.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Did you talk to the Vice President?

Mr. GEARAN. I don't recall personally talking to the Vice President about this.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Does this based on your practice in terms of your notes, which we have now spent a fair amount of time on today, is there a doubt in your mind that this records—it says at the top, "VPOTUS," that means Vice President of the United States; right?

Mr. GEARAN. That's right.

Mr. CHERTOFF. And it says 5 January; right?

Mr. GEARAN. That's correct.

Mr. CHERTOFF. No one else is listed here; right?

Mr. GEARAN. No.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Then it says here, "I'll do it. I'm sure it will help. Need to dump all documents." Whose words are those?

Mr. GEARAN. I believe—well, it is my handwriting. I don't know that I am quoting what someone is telling me about the Vice President, or what he told someone. I don't recall personally speaking with the Vice President about this.

Mr. CHERTOFF. What was your understanding about who stated, "I'll do it. I'm sure it will help. Need to dump all documents."?

Mr. GEARAN. My understanding, or how I would read this, is I recall, I believe, this period of time, in our efforts to have statements made about why a Special Counsel was not needed to make the arguments about why it was not needed. There, I believe, was going to be a press event, and that might apply to the second entry, "Luncheon, no question on Whitewater," where, if I recall correctly, the Vice President said that he would do it, he would make the argument for why an Independent Counsel was not necessary or called for at this time.

I would read "I am sure it will help," that sounds to me like frankly a sarcastic joke on the part of the Vice President, that in light of the considerable drumbeat, that this would be unlikely to turn the tide of public debate on it.

Mr. CHERTOFF. What does the phrase "Need to dump all documents mean."?

Mr. GEARAN. Well, in preparing for this hearing, I observed in the materials that were—I was questioned on in my deposition, and reviewed the stories that existed on January 4th and 5th, in that period of time, where there is a question of the documents going over to the Department of Justice—that was a considerable press story at the time. The White House had said on that Sunday that they had gone to the Department of Justice.

Then the next day, the Press Secretary said well, it will take a couple of weeks, according to the press reports I reviewed from the package that I was questioned on.

Mr. CHERTOFF. What package of press reports?

Mr. GEARAN. From my deposition, the documents that were submitted, to the Committee.

My observation, in remembering now that that was a big press issue at the time, could very well be that the importance of getting all of the documents over to Justice as soon as possible.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You interpret the phrase "dump all documents" as get them over to the Department of Justice as soon as possible?

Mr. GEARAN. "Dump" would be my word obviously. I mean, getting it, turning it over or—I wouldn't—I think it can be read in the context of what was a very big press issue at the time about the White House back-and-forth on this issue.

Mr. CHERTOFF. And this is a recollection you have just come to since your deposition, based upon a review of articles?

Mr. GEARAN. Well, I was notified last Thursday and I have tried to do my best to prepare for this. Last evening, when I was looking at the submitted documents to this Committee—

Mr. CHERTOFF. You mean the notes?

Mr. GEARAN. My notes and the press articles. There is a memorandum from the Press Secretary about the different network news articles, and I was reading this. I was reminded of that very big press issue at the time, that I had frankly not remembered before.

Mr. CHERTOFF. So last night you determined that "need to dump all the documents" means that the Vice President suggested getting all the documents over to Justice as soon as possible?

Mr. GEARAN. Well, in my deposition, I said I thought it could mean that it was the Clintons have recognized the need to provide the information to the Department of Justice. That's how one could read that.

Mr. CHERTOFF. One could read anything almost anyway, and we have learned during the course of these hearings, Mr. Gearan, some people will pretty much read anything any which way. But my question to you is you came to the conclusion that this refers to getting documents over to Justice last night; is that right?

Mr. GEARAN. I am just trying to help the Committee, of how I would read my notes. I have to observe, in reading the articles last night, I was refreshed that this was a very big press issue about White House credibility, that on Monday evening, I had not had a chance to review all of those articles.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Now, Mr. Gearan, I want to go back to this issue of the documents because I am really baffled. What was the procedure when you were at the White House for responding to subpoenas or document requests from the White House for paperwork that might be in your possession? They notified you, they gave you some kind of a memo, and told you what they wanted?

Mr. GEARAN. Yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. And you collected everything conceivably relevant in one space; right?

Mr. GEARAN. That's correct.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You reviewed it to make a determination about what you thought was responsive; right?

Mr. GEARAN. With my counsel, yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Where did you keep this segregated material in your office?

Mr. GEARAN. In my office there is a credenza.

Mr. CHERTOFF. A particular credenza you kept this stuff in?

Mr. GEARAN. Yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Did you tell the White House Counsel's Office where you were keeping this stuff?

Mr. GEARAN. I don't know that I did. I don't recall.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Did anybody from the White House Counsel's Office, which had accepted the subpoena and taken responsibility for complying with it, did they ever come by and say we would like to look at the universe of stuff that might be responsive and make our own determination?

Mr. GEARAN. I believe my counsel reviewed it with White House Counsel but I am not certain.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Your understanding is your counsel reviewed it with White House Counsel. Did White House Counsel know where you kept this stuff?

Mr. GEARAN. I don't know.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Did they ask you for a set so they could have a central file of all White House documentation that might conceivably be responsive?

Mr. GEARAN. I don't know.

Mr. CHERTOFF. I mean——

Mr. GEARAN. I don't recall that.

Mr. CHERTOFF. These notes were notes that you prepared in the course of your official duties as the White House Communications Director; right?

Mr. GEARAN. That's correct.

Mr. CHERTOFF. This isn't your personal diary——

Mr. GEARAN. No.

Mr. CHERTOFF. —of your personal stuff?

Mr. GEARAN. Right.

Mr. CHERTOFF. It is official stuff which, under the law, is supposed to be kept within the control of the White House——

Mr. GEARAN. Right.

Mr. CHERTOFF. —generically; is that right?

Mr. GEARAN. That's my understanding, yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. What I have a hard time understanding is it is segregated, it is put in a certain area, you even think that the White House Counsel's Office may have at a point in time reviewed the documents with your counsel. How is it possible that these things leave the White House, and no one at the White House misses them, or reaches out to you, and says we need these things back?

Mr. GEARAN. I can't speak for the White House Counsel's production process, Mr. Chertoff. I do know that my office was packed, that I did not pack my office. I wish I had. And that that accounts for its inadvertent transfer.

Mr. CHERTOFF. When did your office get packed up?

Mr. GEARAN. I believe the end of August, I would assume. I was on vacation from mid-August through Labor Day and did not return to the White House.

Mr. CHERTOFF. We asked for documents relating to Whitewater, and really anything concerning the Resolution in August. Did anybody come to you at the end of August and say do you have things that are relevant to this?

Mr. GEARAN. I don't recall that, no.

Mr. CHERTOFF. On August 25th, I think, the letter went out. Did you see an August 25th letter requesting all documents relating to Whitewater and Madison?

Mr. GEARAN. On August 25th?

Mr. CHERTOFF. Yes.

Mr. GEARAN. I don't recall that, Mr. Chertoff.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Would you agree with me these notes clearly relate to Madison and Whitewater?

Mr. GEARAN. Yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. I see my time is up.

The CHAIRMAN. We have some more to go over.

Senator SARBANES. OK, good. Mr. Gearan, your deposition, when was that done?

Mr. GEARAN. Monday evening.

Senator SARBANES. Do you recall when it began? I have here that it began at 5:30 p.m.

Mr. GEARAN. That's my understanding, yes.

Senator SARBANES. And it finished after 10:00——

Mr. GEARAN. Yes, Senator.

Senator SARBANES. —is that correct?

Mr. GEARAN. Yes.

Senator SARBANES. Did you take time out for dinner?

Mr. GEARAN. No, we did not.

Senator SARBANES. You went straight through with no dinner?

Mr. GEARAN. That's correct.

Senator SARBANES. Your counsel said at the beginning, "If I may make a brief statement. For the record, Mr. Gearan is appearing here voluntarily and on rather short notice."

And Ms. Fisher who was counsel for the Majority said, "Yes, we appreciate that very much. So thank you for being so flexible."

Your attorney then said, "The one thing I wanted to make clear is he has really not had an opportunity since he has been, shall we say, hitting the ground running at the Peace Corps since he came to have a opportunity to revisit this subject, either before or after your invitation to come down today. I do want to say at the beginning, he will endeavor to use his best efforts but to understand that we're sort of catching him with a relatively minimal amount of opportunity to refresh his recollection about the broader context of this inquiry." Do you remember that—

Mr. GEARAN. I do.

Senator SARBANES. —statement by your counsel?

Now then, Counsel took you through your notes phrase by phrase; is that correct?

Mr. GEARAN. That's correct, Senator.

Senator SARBANES. And you know, even in those instances where you said well, you didn't recall, you were then pushed to interpret what the notes meant; is that correct?

Mr. GEARAN. Well, I tried to do my best to interpret what my—how I would read my notes. I tried to note where I did not have any independent recollection of it as best as I could.

Senator SARBANES. Let's take the one on Janet Reno about which they were pressing you on that answer, you said, "I can't recall. I guess I could read that," and then you went on to state what your guess was, as to how you could read it. Now as I look at your notes, that's not the only instance when that happened; is that correct?

Mr. GEARAN. That's correct. There were probably many instances in this deposition where I was not able to fully recall the specifics of it, particularly when I was—

Senator SARBANES. Of course, interestingly enough, that answer in terms of she is an independent Attorney General is consistent, of course, with the position she took, in not wanting to name a Special Counsel?

Mr. GEARAN. Yes.

Senator SARBANES. Now, you were also asked about this meeting with Gerth, and as I recall, this was at your deposition, your testimony was that you placed it later; is that correct?

Mr. GEARAN. I would have, but I also don't dispute the fact of its apparent date in September.

Senator SARBANES. You said, "I guess the only thing I would say today is I have no reason to dispute that the meeting was in September, if the notes join those facts. I would not have placed it then."

Mr. GEARAN. I would not have.

Senator SARBANES. You go on to say, "I would not have placed it at that time line, but again, I have no reason to dispute that." And of course, that's the position you take here today as well?

Mr. GEARAN. It is.

Senator SARBANES. So it is consistent with the position you took in your deposition.

Mr. GEARAN. That's correct, sir.

Senator SARBANES. Mr. Chairman.

The CHAIRMAN. Mr. Chertoff.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Mr. Gearan, I want to explore with you this concept that your 2-hour meeting with Jeff Gerth, you didn't have any particular reaction to it; that's your testimony?

Mr. GEARAN. Well—

Mr. CHERTOFF. That didn't alarm you, you didn't feel this was a matter that you ought to be concerned about or just kind of a routine matter, was that it?

Mr. GEARAN. I guess my testimony would be that, because I did not see any evidence of Mr. Lindsey's alarm, afterwards or in those days, that I not knowing any of the names or many of the issues that Mr. Gerth outlined to us, I took my cues from Mr. Lindsey's reaction.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Do you have your document, S20292? We just got this, I guess, in the last month. And I want you to follow me and tell me, did you talk to Mr. Lindsey afterwards to gauge his reaction, or are you just going by his body language?

Mr. GEARAN. I don't recall. I would have assumed I did. But I have no recollection of any extraordinary reaction of Mr. Lindsey.

Mr. CHERTOFF. My question is did you talk to Mr. Lindsey after Gerth left, about what this was about?

Mr. GEARAN. Mr. Chertoff, I don't recall an instance, but it seems likely that I would.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Seems pretty likely you don't recall what he said about it; right?

Mr. GEARAN. I don't recall specifically what he said. No, I do not.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Let's explore whether this is the kind of material that would likely capture your attention or whether it was too obscure. It begins with a reference to "David Hale—Federal Grand Jury investigation, misuse of SBA money, about to be indicted for plea, claims pressure of people to loan, Bill Clinton, Jim Guy Tucker." Did that catch your attention?

Mr. GEARAN. Well, I don't know how much more I can add, Mr. Chertoff.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Was that the first you heard of an allegation that Mr. Clinton had been involved in pressuring someone to make an illegal loan?

Mr. GEARAN. I believe so.

Mr. CHERTOFF. And did that surprise you to hear The New York Times reporters saying they had an allegation from a specific person to that effect? Isn't your job, it is not like you were in a national security council, you were the Director of Communications. Maybe I am wrong, doesn't that mean you are in charge of communications?

Mr. GEARAN. That's what it means.

Mr. CHERTOFF. That means you have to be concerned about the image that the White House is projecting out; right?

Mr. GEARAN. Correct.

Mr. CHERTOFF. I assume you were at the meeting with Lindsey, not as a potted plant, but because he viewed you as being a necessary person to be there; right?

Mr. GEARAN. Well, I would like to think that, Mr. Chertoff.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You think he was just looking for company?

Mr. GEARAN. No. But for my own part, certainly I was grateful Mr. Lindsey was there because this was information and people and names that I was most unfamiliar with and it would be obvious I would have to look to Mr. Lindsey for handling this matter.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Did you do that? Did you look to Mr. Lindsey afterwards to explain to you and lay out what this was about?

Mr. GEARAN. Well, I do know from the follow-up questions from Mr. Engelberg, the questions that he listed in that phone message that you mentioned earlier, I would have gone to Mr. Lindsey for that information.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Here is what I do not get. For 2 years now we have heard people say that the reason it was important to get information from various law enforcement agencies was to prepare for press inquiries. You are the guy with the responsibility for supervising responses to press inquiries and making sure it happens. And yet, with respect to a 2-hour conversation with The New York Times, where they repeat detailed damaging allegations, you don't seem to be real interested in kind of putting together a memo or something that's going to enable you to respond to the press.

Mr. GEARAN. I guess, Mr. Chertoff, because of the press of other business on my plate, because of the other legislative issues that the President was working on, and NAFTA I believe was up in the fall, and other issues, that I felt the best use of my time was to work on how we can explain and communicate the President's agenda because Mr. Lindsey frankly was known within the White House as being that person to speak with, to get the information, I thought that was entirely appropriate.

Mr. CHERTOFF. But you nevertheless took copious notes.

Mr. GEARAN. I did.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Now as you move down the page, toward the bottom of that first page—

Senator SARBANES. Page 1?

Mr. CHERTOFF. Page 1. It says, "Allegation BC encouraged misuse of Government programs or at least a cover-up." At that point did a little alarm bell go off with you?

Mr. GEARAN. Mr. Chertoff, I am not sure I can add too much more than what I have testified in terms of my recollection of this, and the probable reasons for that.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Your position with us and it is very pertinent to the issue of your testimony before the Committee in 1994, that this hadn't popped up on the radar screen and was not a big deal to you. At least someone has to weigh that against this new evidence, in terms of seeing whether it kind of fits.

And if you had no notes or a page of notes on a conversation, it might be pretty easy to understand that you wouldn't consider that popping up on the radar screen, but here, given the October 14th meeting specifically involved a discussion that there were going to be potentially criminal referrals involving Madison and Whitewater, the fact that within 3 weeks earlier you had heard there was a witness who was trying to plead—you know, reach a plea bargain by making allegations regarding Madison and Whitewater, it is hard to see how you wouldn't connect these things. And when you went on October 14th, you wouldn't immediately key into the fact that you had been hearing about this. For someone whose job is communications, this is what we are trying to figure out.

Now on page 20293, you write down——

Senator SARBANES. Is that page 2 of these notes?

Mr. CHERTOFF. Page 2 of the notes. You recount what Hale says with "Three conversations with BC." That's Bill Clinton; right?

Mr. GEARAN. Yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. That much detail you understood; correct? Then you see on the third page, that Gerth went to Arkansas last week, 12 hours of interviews. And I take it from your experience you understood that that suggested The Times was treating this with a certain degree of seriousness; right?

Mr. GEARAN. Yes. I was certainly aware that Mr. Gerth was a respected reporter.

Mr. CHERTOFF. That would suggest to you as Communications Director, this is something you ought to start paying attention to; is that right?

Mr. GEARAN. Mr. Chertoff, again, my best recollection is derivative, I guess principally because of how Mr. Lindsey approached it.

Mr. CHERTOFF. If your view of this September meeting was that this was Lindsey's problem, why were you the one who responded to questions on September 23rd from Steve Engelberg rather than simply kicking it over to Lindsey?

Mr. GEARAN. As I said, increasingly it became that. Initially I would get the answers from him and report back to the reporters. It became increasingly clear to me, and I think to Mr. Lindsey, that it was easiest for reporters to call him directly, or he would call them back after I had outlined to him the kinds of questions that were going to be asked.

Mr. CHERTOFF. But as of the October 14th meeting with Ms. Jean Hanson from Treasury, you were still attending the meetings; right? And you were taking notes?

Mr. GEARAN. That meeting I was at briefly, yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Did you miss part of the meeting?

Mr. GEARAN. Yes, I did.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Then after that, your recollection is you turned it over to Lindsey?

Mr. GEARAN. My recollection is that increasingly throughout that period of time in the fall, he became the principal contact for most of the press.

Mr. CHERTOFF. See, but that doesn't fit with your earlier testimony that you believed that this long, extensive conversation with Gerth occurred after the October 14th meeting, because you have just told us your memory of that period of time was that, as time passed later into the fall, you had less and less to do with it. That's inconsistent with the statement that somehow your heavy meeting with Gerth, your 2-hour meeting with Gerth, would have occurred later in the fall rather than earlier?

Mr. GEARAN. Let me try to explain. My belief is that at that time I—my recollection of this period of time is that, increasingly, the day-to-day press contacts and the more detailed questions that were coming in from a variety of different reporters, particularly as we moved into later in the fall, were handled by Mr. Lindsey.

It is certainly the case in the beginning part of this, I would get the answers, as I did I believe with Mr. Engelberg, and then call him, which I think I did directly and report to him my information was from Mr. Lindsey, in all of this material.

Mr. CHERTOFF. So that given your testimony here, that as time went on you were less involved, it doesn't make much sense that the biggest and most extensive meeting involving this issue would have occurred later in the fall, after October. It really only makes sense it would have occurred earlier, which is what the documents show.

Mr. GEARAN. And I have no reason, as I said, to dispute that. I'm just trying to say that when this came on my radar screen, I would not have placed it at that point. That's obviously erroneous because this meeting with Mr. Gerth was in September.

Mr. CHERTOFF. When you testified under oath twice within 9 months of these events in 1994, on each occasion, you affirmatively stated that the October 14th meeting was the first meeting; right, the first discussion?

Senator SARBANES. One of the first.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Actually I think that—

Senator SARBANES. In the testimony in the deposition to our Committee, what did he say?

Mr. CHERTOFF. I will do both of them.

One of the first contacts references you could recall, you said in the deposition to the Committee, was October 14th. It was not on your radar screen at this point in time.

You were earlier asked by the RTC IG:

Question: When were you first made aware of the issues surrounding the Madison Guaranty/Whitewater matter?

Answer: I—The first recollection I'd give would be the meeting that I attended in October.

Question: When was that?

Answer: October 14th, 1993.

That's page 4; right?

Mr. GEARAN. I have no reason to dispute—

The CHAIRMAN. Let's put it in front of you. Let's go over it slowly, each one of them. Do you see it there?

Mr. GEARAN. Yes, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. Why don't you read it. "When were you first"—start from the top question.

Mr. GEARAN. It says:

Question: When were you first made aware of the issues surrounding the Madison Guaranty/Whitewater matter?

Answer: I—the first recollection I'd give would be the meeting that I attended in October.

Answer: When was that?

Question: October 14th, 1993.

Mr. CHERTOFF. That is what you said in your testimony to the RTC?

The CHAIRMAN. Continue, go on down. How were you advised of that meeting?

Mr. GEARAN. It says:

Question: How were you advised of that meeting?

Answer: It was on my schedule that day and—to go to a meeting in Mr. Nussbaum's office.

Question: Who contacted you?

Answer: Who put it on the schedule? My assistant Steven Cohen.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Let's go back to this meeting with Jeff Gerth—Senator SARBANES. Let's do the deposition.

Mr. CHERTOFF. I think we've done the deposition.

The CHAIRMAN. Let's put the deposition up, page 24. Ready?

Mr. GEARAN. It says:

Question: You don't recall anybody in the room having any type of reaction to these inquiries at all?

Answer: No. Again for the part of the meeting that I was at, these are the notes that I took because they were questions to Treasury and about an RTC matter. This was one of the first contacts, I thought, references that I can recall for Whitewater. This was not on my radar screen, Whitewater, at this point in time. So I don't recall this meeting vividly beyond these notes in the Early Bird system.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Now let's go back to that interview with Gerth in September. Move to page 20295, you have page 2 at the top but—let's keep it in sequence, down toward the middle—

Mr. GEARAN. I'm sorry. The Bates number again is?

Mr. CHERTOFF. S20295.

Mr. GEARAN. OK.

Mr. CHERTOFF. In the middle of the page, "McDougal also told him he would run to audit in S&L had to get loans transactions out of there, asked for a list of assets." Does this ring a bell?

Mr. GEARAN. No.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Then there was a discussion of Castle Sewer and Water, Steven Smith loan to Susan McDougal. I mean, you had a very—

Senator SARBANES. What page are we reading from now?

Mr. CHERTOFF. 20295.

Senator SARBANES. On page 4 of the notes.

The CHAIRMAN. Yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You were keeping a very detailed account of what Mr. Gerth was telling you.

Mr. GEARAN. It was certainly my practice to write down information from reporters, and the questions they would be asking the White House.

Mr. CHERTOFF. There weren't a lot of question marks and notations that you didn't understand what was going on; right?

Mr. GEARAN. Well, there may not have been but I certainly wasn't—this was all very complex to me.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Now next page, 20296, it has a little 3 at the top.

Senator SARBANES. This is page 5 of the notes?

Mr. CHERTOFF. They are not numbered sequentially otherwise, so I think the best I can do is 20296 at the bottom. In the middle of the page it says, "Early 1986, examiners go to Madison Guaranty." Now Madison Guaranty came up in your October 14th meeting with Ms. Hanson; right?

Mr. GEARAN. The question of the referrals?

Mr. CHERTOFF. Yes. You knew what Madison Guaranty was; is that right?

Mr. GEARAN. I believe I had heard about it, yes. Mr. Chertoff, I was never schooled in a lot of this detail.

Mr. CHERTOFF. But this looks to me like a schooling process. This is the problem——

Mr. GEARAN. Well, because frankly——

Mr. CHERTOFF. You were writing down what is really a compellingly lucid account of this——

Mr. GEARAN. I understand.

Mr. CHERTOFF. —which frankly would have been like a road map a year ago to all of this. And yet then 3 weeks later, you are acting as if you are completely disinterested and ignorant about this. That is why I am going through this to examine the level of detail and comprehension to the point that on the next page, you actually do a little diagram here. This is 20297. You talk about the appraisers inflating, and then you have Madison money going to Hale, puts into this SBIC, and then you have loans to entities that Madison had trouble with. I mean, we could have used this chart 3 weeks ago. It is a beautiful—not——

Senator SARBANES. Well, we had the Gerth article on November 2nd, 1993.

Mr. CHERTOFF. My point is you knew in September this was on your radar screen, you have a lengthy exposition of it——

The CHAIRMAN. I want to point out, Mr. Gearan, that on November 2, following this meeting which took some time, there was an article in some detail 2 weeks prior to your November meeting, so this was on your radar screen. Are you saying that that wasn't on your radar screen? When the article was printed—I haven't seen the November 2nd article. I may have seen it—but indeed, if Mr. Gerth, subsequent to the September meeting, published an article on November 2nd; is that right?

Mr. GEARAN. My understanding, Mr. Chairman, is that the article did not run until November.

The CHAIRMAN. November 2nd; is that right?

Mr. GEARAN. That's my understanding.

The CHAIRMAN. Yes. So if this was not a memorable occasion, given the matters and the detail that were laid before you with Mr. Lindsey, then what would be a memorable meeting?

Mr. CHERTOFF. In the course of this meeting, wasn't there even discussion about Mr. Foster's death and some question about—I want to go to page—this is toward the end, S 20309.

Senator SARBANES. 20-what?

Mr. CHERTOFF. 20309.

Senator SARBANES. What about all the pages in between?

Mr. CHERTOFF. I am going to do all the pages but this is memorable stuff. It says, "Believe VF," Vincent Foster, "was involved somehow, knowing they were—had done work for JMcD." Didn't the fact that Mr. Foster potentially had a connection with Mr. McDougal raise a red flag for you in September, which was 2 months after Foster took his own life?

Mr. GEARAN. Mr. Chertoff, I don't know how much more I can add to this, that because of the particular meeting, and because Mr. Lindsey was in the room, and because I knew him to be knowledgeable about this, and I suspect from his——

Mr. CHERTOFF. Did you know Mr. Foster?

Mr. GEARAN. Yes, sir.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Didn't your curiosity get piqued by the thought that Mr. Foster—there was some connection between Mr. Foster and work from McDougal and The New York Times was going to be examining this or looking into this?

Mr. GEARAN. It was quite a lengthy and frankly very complicated report from Mr. Gerth, and because of its complexity and because of Mr. Lindsey's expertise, that is my recollection.

Mr. CHERTOFF. What does that say there by where it says, "Out to POTUS meeting"? What does that mean?

Mr. GEARAN. I assume I had to go to a meeting with the President and I left the meeting.

Mr. CHERTOFF. It says, "Request to see the rest of the notes." Where does that come from?

Mr. GEARAN. It is the continuation of the—I would assume the Gerth meeting, of what he is requesting.

Mr. CHERTOFF. So you went back in again?

Mr. GEARAN. That's how I would read that, yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. When you went to see the President in between the first part of the meeting and the second part, did you say, "By the way, there is a guy in here, a reporter from The New York Times, who says there are allegations you were involved in some kind of illegal loan activity?"

Mr. GEARAN. No, I don't believe I did, no.

Mr. CHERTOFF. As you sat there in your meeting, did you wonder, I mean, having just heard pages of allegations, did you wonder, did any kind of irony strike you?

Mr. GEARAN. I don't recall that. I would not have brought it up with the President because, of course, I would have understood that would be for Mr. Lindsey to do because he was most able to understand and to ask the President these questions. I would not have understood that as my——

Mr. CHERTOFF. But then you made a point of going back in; you didn't just tail off; you actually went back into the meeting?

Mr. GEARAN. To the Gerth meeting?

Mr. CHERTOFF. Yes.

Mr. GEARAN. Yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. If it wasn't of interest and too confusing and Mr. Lindsey was the one handling it and he didn't care, why did you go back to the meeting?

Mr. GEARAN. I understood it to be important because of The New York Times and because of this information that I was sitting on and to assist in making sure that what the particular reporter from The New York Times wanted, that we have listed as clearly as we could.

Mr. CHERTOFF. So it was important then? I am trying to figure out, it is either unimportant or it is important. Which is it?

Mr. GEARAN. Well, certainly The New York Times is important. And I think sitting down for this period of time evidences that. The question of whether it came on my so-called radar screen or not, it would not have in this period.

Mr. CHERTOFF. I'm going to continue on this issue of memorableness. I want to go back on this issue of the documents.

You told us that you, in terms of your dealings with the White House, you had taken these documents inadvertently, no one in the White House evidently was taking steps to make sure documents weren't inadvertently removed. We received a letter on February 13th, which was 2 days ago, from Ms. Sherburne. Mr. Waldman, whose name came up in your notes, wonderful to relate, on February 12th, he discovered documents in the course of an office move. Have you talked to Mr. Waldman about his recent discovery of documents in the—maybe we ought to move everybody and we will get more documents.

Mr. GEARAN. I have not talked to Mr. Waldman, no.

Mr. CHERTOFF. One of the problems—and for this I think this is not—obviously Mr. Waldman is not your responsibility. One of the problems, Mr. Gearan, is we may have to go back with you over these things, too.

The CHAIRMAN. Excuse me. Mr. Ben-Veniste.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Can we put up the note of the chart which Mr. Chertoff has found so fascinating from your notes? Memorable.

Mr. Chertoff said I wish we would have had this chart last week. It is really useful. Can we put up the chart of Mr. Lindsey's notes which we have had for 4 months in this Committee? The point being that Mr. Gearan's notes, which have the same exact chart as Mr. Lindsey's, which we have had for 4 months is supposed to be some new and important information. Is there any distinction between what you have said and what Mr. Lindsey has said about what Mr. Gerth was telling you that he eventually printed 2 years ago in The New York Times?

Mr. GEARAN. I have not reviewed Mr. Lindsey's notes, but the chart looks similar.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. The notion that here we have uncovered this nugget of important information, this chart which is so revealing of what happened which was in the newspaper story 2 years ago, the story of a man who was trying to make a deal to save his skin and who some day will testify somewhere under oath, we expect, but now your chart is the Rosetta stone for this Committee, we are led to believe. This is the important nugget of information we have waited for, because Lindsey's chart, I think, has the arrows on—the Madison and Hale on the left and you have them on the right.

Senator SARBANES. These notes were what Gerth was recounting that he had heard or found out; is that right?

Mr. GEARAN. That's right.

Senator SARBANES. Including extensive allegations that were made by David Hale. Now the very article said about Hale, "In an effort to win leniency from prosecutors on the eve of his indictment, Mr. Hale offered prosecutors information about Mr. Clinton and other Arkansas politicians." You had no idea who Mr. Hale was, did you?

Mr. GEARAN. No.

Senator SARBANES. Did Mr. Lindsey know who Mr. Hale was?

Mr. GEARAN. I would assume—at what period of time?

Senator SARBANES. You are assuming he knew because he was from Arkansas, I take it?

Mr. GEARAN. Yes.

Senator SARBANES. So these notes are really a recounting of Mr. Hale's allegations.

Mr. GEARAN. Seemingly, as told to Mr. Gerth.

Senator SARBANES. As communicated to Gerth, or at least a large part of them; is that correct?

Mr. GEARAN. I think that is the appropriate read of these.

Senator SARBANES. And Gerth went through these things?

Mr. GEARAN. Yes. All of this information would be from Gerth.

Senator SARBANES. That was all from Mr. Gerth. Mr. Gerth was passing on what he had gotten from Mr. Hale and perhaps others.

Mr. GEARAN. And others, yes.

Senator SARBANES. Then at the end of it, Mr. Gerth left you—all with some questions; is that how it went?

Mr. GEARAN. That's how I would read this, yes, Senator.

Mr. CHAIRMAN. Mr. Chertoff.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Now, I take it in the course of this meeting in 1993 that the identity of a project known as Castle Grande or Castle Grande became known to you through what Mr. Gerth was telling you; right?

Mr. GEARAN. I'm sorry. What page are you on?

Mr. CHERTOFF. I'm now on 20298.

Mr. GEARAN. And your question, Mr. Chertoff?

Mr. CHERTOFF. Well, in the middle it goes "phone call from JGT ask meeting with him and BC late in day after work in JGT office, sales office for Castle Grand, 145th Street." You wrote down "Castle Grand." Is that right?

Mr. GEARAN. That's what Mr. Gerth must have told me.

Mr. CHERTOFF. That name came up during the course of the conversation; right?

Mr. GEARAN. Yes, that's what Mr. Gerth must have told me.

Mr. CHERTOFF. At the bottom it says, "1984 BC campaign debt that McDougal helped erase." It says, "Betsey Wright." What is that word after "Betsey Wright"?

Mr. GEARAN. I believe that is "confirmed."

Mr. CHERTOFF. That is the same Betsey Wright, to your knowledge, that came up in the discussion early the next year in January 1994, when Mr. Nussbaum was picking up an example of someone where there might be some indictments, right, same person?

Mr. GEARAN. Yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Then the next page, 20299—

Senator SARBANES. Let's be fair here. Your testimony, as I understand it this morning, was that Mr. Nussbaum, giving extreme examples, made reference to Betsey Wright in that context; is that correct, that it was not a serious statement that she was going to be indicted?

Mr. GEARAN. I never heard any serious statement of him laying out any factual basis for Ms. Wright facing any charge.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Was there a Whitewater group actually, formally known within the White House as a Whitewater group or the Whitewater group in January 1994?

Mr. GEARAN. Well, I don't know if it was formal, but Mr. Ickes, I understood Mr. Ickes as being the point person at the beginning of January in 1994 to coordinate this effort. That's what—

Mr. CHERTOFF. Was there a group in December 1993 that formed before Mr. Ickes arrived?

Mr. GEARAN. I don't recall it. In December 1993?

Mr. CHERTOFF. Yes. Let's focus on January 1994. Mr. Ickes was the leader of the group basically?

Mr. GEARAN. He was the coordinator.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You attended meetings because you took notes?

Mr. GEARAN. I did.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Did Maggie Williams attend?

Mr. GEARAN. I don't recall Maggie Williams at those meetings.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Did Mr. Nussbaum attend?

Mr. GEARAN. Yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Mr. Podesta?

Mr. GEARAN. In this period, I don't know if he was in these meetings or not.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Later he took it over?

Mr. GEARAN. Yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Did Mr. Ickes used to issue memos that assigned tasks for particular people in the group?

Mr. GEARAN. I was just shown this this morning, this memo. I had not recalled this memo before.

Mr. CHERTOFF. I don't know what "this" is. What is the Bates number?

Mr. GEARAN. Your staff handed me, S20760.

Mr. CHERTOFF. 20760. This came within the last couple of days when Mr. Waldman discovered documents during his move. It is to the Whitewater group from Harold Ickes. Do you recognize this as a memorandum that was prepared by Mr. Ickes on a regular basis as part of his responsibilities?

Mr. GEARAN. No, I don't recall this as a regular basis.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Did you recall them as an occasional?

Mr. GEARAN. I don't recall this document. But I have no reason to dispute this as the kind of thing he would—he might have done.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Do you know if the MW in this is Michael Waldman?

Mr. GEARAN. I don't, but that's what I would guess.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Did Mr. Ickes take notes during the meetings?

Mr. GEARAN. He does take notes from time to time. I don't recall him at these meetings. I can't recollect.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Was it his practice to take notes in the meetings?

Mr. GEARAN. He takes notes at different meetings.

Mr. CHERTOFF. That's his kind of routine; right?

Mr. GEARAN. I don't know what his routine is, to be honest with you. This—

Mr. CHERTOFF. In your observation, so far as you are aware.

Mr. GEARAN. At this point in time.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Was he keeping notes in order to be able to come up and summarize what the assignments were for the Whitewater group?

Mr. GEARAN. I don't recall that he did take notes or he didn't, Mr. Chertoff.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You remember him taking notes on some occasions; right?

Mr. GEARAN. During the past 2 years, yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. With respect to these Whitewater group meetings; right?

Mr. GEARAN. No, I don't remember him taking notes at these meetings or not.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You don't remember one way or the other?

Mr. GEARAN. I don't recall.

Mr. CHERTOFF. If you go to S20761, it says here, "Research issue of whether then-Governor Clinton used political or other pressure to see that Madison Guaranty be given special consideration. (Counsel, "BL," that would be Bruce Lindsey, "PB," Paul Begala, "MW," Michael Waldman, "assigned 1/7.)" What was your understanding of how that kind of research got taken care of?

Mr. GEARAN. You mean how they did it?

Mr. CHERTOFF. Yes.

Mr. GEARAN. You mean what sources they used?

Mr. CHERTOFF. Yes.

Mr. GEARAN. I don't know in the specific instance how they would have done it, through the public research or files or in terms of a NEXUS search. I don't know.

Mr. CHERTOFF. The next reference says, "Reference in 1/8 press that Chris Wade, Arkansas realtor, has document re Whitewater, but won't release unless President Clinton asks for them to be released. (MW—assigned 1/8.)" How would one research that kind of an issue? Were people being sent out to Arkansas to fact gather on this?

Mr. GEARAN. No, I have no knowledge.

Mr. CHERTOFF. How would you research this?

Mr. GEARAN. I don't know. I didn't assign this. Nor was I tasked with that. I don't know how that was done or assigned or if it was concluded or not.

Mr. CHERTOFF. I just want to go down, there is a reference to a PG. Who would PG be?

Mr. GEARAN. I'm sorry? Where are you?

Mr. CHERTOFF. Now on item number 13 on the preceding page. Who would PG be?

Senator SARBANES. What page?

Mr. CHERTOFF. This is S20760. It is the first page of the 10 January 1994 Memo.

Mr. GEARAN. I don't know. Mr. Chertoff, I don't know what Harold meant specifically. PG could be Pat Griffin, who is Congressional Relations.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Who would that be?

Mr. GEARAN. Patrick Griffin with Congressional Relations, given the context of it.

The CHAIRMAN. And it refers to Congressional members.

Mr. GEARAN. That would be my guess.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Let me just finish up with your memo regarding your discussion with Mr. Gerth.

The CHAIRMAN. Can I just ask one thing? Mr. Gearan, looking at this memo, move it over a little bit please, "To: Whitewater group"—the other way. "From: Harold Ickes, Date: 10 January 1994." Here you have almost a daily—it is a daily and very intensive kind of meeting held at, you tell me. Where were they held during that week of January, starting on the 4th or 5th?

Mr. GEARAN. Principally in the Ward Room.

The CHAIRMAN. Where was the first meeting held?

Mr. GEARAN. Mr. McLarty's office, I think.

The CHAIRMAN. Mack McLarty, who was he?

Mr. GEARAN. He was the Chief of Staff.

The CHAIRMAN. He was the Chief of Staff. So this is an important meeting. Is that the meeting the First Lady drops in at?

Mr. GEARAN. I believe that was the first meeting, if she did drop in and it was in Mr. McLarty's office.

The CHAIRMAN. And we have Bernie Nussbaum there?

Mr. GEARAN. Yes, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. What was he at the time?

Mr. GEARAN. The President's Counsel.

The CHAIRMAN. The President's Counsel. Chief of Staff at some point in time. First Lady. Who else?

Mr. GEARAN. Joel Klein—

The CHAIRMAN. Who was he?

Mr. GEARAN. The Deputy Counsel.

The CHAIRMAN. Deputy Counsel. Go ahead.

Mr. GEARAN. Neil Eggleston.

The CHAIRMAN. Who was he?

Mr. GEARAN. He was an Associate Counsel.

The CHAIRMAN. Go ahead.

Mr. GEARAN. George Stephanopoulos.

The CHAIRMAN. Who was he?

Mr. GEARAN. He was a Senior Adviser to the President.

The CHAIRMAN. Who else?

Mr. GEARAN. David Gergen.

The CHAIRMAN. Who was he?

Mr. GEARAN. He was Counselor to the President. That's what my notes reflect.

The CHAIRMAN. That's on the 4th. On the 5th, where is the next meeting held? By the way, how long does that meeting go, do you know how long?

Mr. GEARAN. I can't recall, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. That's not a 10-minute meeting?

Mr. GEARAN. No.

The CHAIRMAN. I mean, the First Lady, at some point toward the end, drops in and she stayed for about 20 minutes or so.

Mr. GEARAN. I don't recall it was that long. I don't know how long the long meeting was.

The CHAIRMAN. How long were some of those meetings? Did they take 2 hours, 3 hours?

Mr. GEARAN. I would say they averaged, the Ward Room, maybe 45 minutes.

The CHAIRMAN. When is the second meeting? That's the 5th?

Mr. GEARAN. It is the 5th. I don't have a location on it. I don't recall where it was.

The CHAIRMAN. Same basic group of people?

Mr. GEARAN. Same basic group. Mr. McLarty was there. So I don't know if that means it was in his office or not. I don't recall.

The CHAIRMAN. We will speak to some of these other people and hopefully get their accounts. I have to ask a question publicly to both Counsels. Given the information that we have requested, would it be fair to assume that we should have received some kind of notice or to conclude that we would get some kind of information from some other members of the White House? Of course, maybe they didn't keep notes. But certainly as it relates to their schedules it would seem to me that might be something given the number of people, we could probably find a little more information.

I would hope that we might be able to do so. This gives us a point of reference, the 4th, 5th, 6th, 7th and these people who attended. It is an important thing. Then you have the meeting on the 5th, the 6th, the 7th and we go through. Now, we go to the 10th, "To: Whitewater group."

Now to the best of your recollection, did you receive or see anything like this memorandum?

Mr. GEARAN. I don't recall receiving it, Senator. This was not in my files, I don't believe.

The CHAIRMAN. Tell me about the Whitewater group, when was it formed?

Mr. GEARAN. My recollection was, as I said, when Mr. Ickes joined the White House staff, it was our understanding he would be the principal person on this. It was right at the beginning of his tenure at the White House.

The CHAIRMAN. Wasn't there another group formed earlier to deal with the question of Whitewater and the Treasury and the inquiry that the Banking Committee was undertaking earlier on and the statute of limitations and the question of who was going to be involved?

Mr. GEARAN. I don't recall that, Senator. I guess—I am just trying—

The CHAIRMAN. Yes, I thought there was testimony that there was another group that Mr. Podesta was working on and that it predated Mr. Ickes. I was wondering if you were aware of a prior group.

Mr. GEARAN. I think Mr. Podesta's work on this followed this period of time.

The CHAIRMAN. Anyone else work with him on that?

Mr. GEARAN. I'm sorry? Who worked with him on it?

The CHAIRMAN. Yes.

Mr. GEARAN. I think it was largely the Counsel's Office.

The CHAIRMAN. OK. I'm not going to ask you to speculate. There were others. We will ask them.

Mr. GEARAN. I don't mean to mislead you in any way.

The CHAIRMAN. No, I understand.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Mr. Gearan, let me turn to one last topic. You were aware, I take it, in the fall of 1993 that the Small Business Administration was being asked questions by the media concerning David Hale and the investigation of David Hale; right?

Mr. GEARAN. There was this memo that I—are you referring to the memo from the Small Business—

Mr. CHERTOFF. Well, you received a memo. Let's put that up. It is S20448. It is dated December 2, 1993, from Kathy McKiernan. Who is Kathy McKiernan?

Mr. GEARAN. She's a Press Assistant in the Press Office.

Mr. CHERTOFF. It was to Dee Dee and you, and who is Arthur?

Mr. GEARAN. Arthur is Arthur Jones, who was the Deputy Press Secretary at the time.

Mr. CHERTOFF. It says, "Small Business Administration Deputy General Counsel Marty Techler granted an on-camera interview to Alan Frank of ABC News yesterday for a story ABC is preparing on the SBIC and its role in the Capital Management/Whitewater Inc. story. A summary of the interview, by SBA press person Janice Kearney, is attached." Then attached at Bates numbers 20449 and 20450 is a 2-page summary of the interview prepared for the White House Press Assistant by the SBA. These were in your files; right?

Mr. GEARAN. Yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You produced them recently; right?

Mr. GEARAN. Yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Was it the practice of the White House to keep tabs of what the agencies were doing in terms of having agency officials giving interviews to the news on Whitewater?

Mr. GEARAN. It was the practice of the White House, I believe it is everyday, to have a conference call with the various public affairs agencies to assess what is going on in the Departments across the whole range of Administration issues. I don't know in what context this came into the Press Office, whether it is through that conference call, but it is certainly the practice to have the agencies keep the White House informed of what is going on in their agencies and what news stories are being worked on.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Did this liaison function fall within your area of responsibility?

Mr. GEARAN. Well, this was run by the Press Office. That—

Mr. CHERTOFF. That was under you as the Director of Communications?

Mr. GEARAN. At that point, it was under mine.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Do you know about a situation in which the White House in September 1993, made efforts to influence the way the Small Business Administration characterized Whitewater or Mr. Hale in news accounts?

Mr. GEARAN. I don't believe so.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Let me put up a document we have seen previously, OIC 1030. It is to the SAC, Little Rock. It is an FBI document from Supervisory Special Agent Steven Irons regarding a conversation the writer had on September 28th with an attorney for the SBA involving David Hale. I hasten to say this occurs before the December interview with Mr. Techler. But it does talk about Mr. Techler.

It goes on to say "writer," that would be the agent, "mentioned the media reports of SBA spokesman Techler's comments concerning the case and noted Techler was not helping matters by stating certain activities were not criminal in nature when he did not have all the facts. Seay" that's the SBA lawyer "advised she had spoken to SBA in Washington, possibly Mark Stevens, and understood officials from the White House had urged SBA to make such a characterization due to the mention of Whitewater Development in some news accounts and White House desire to avoid any inference criminal activity could have occurred in relation to Whitewater Development and Hale's company." What do you know about this?

Mr. GEARAN. Nothing. This is the first I have seen of this.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Never heard of any efforts by White House communications officials to influence the way in which the agencies they were liaising with were characterizing matters that might touch on Whitewater?

Mr. GEARAN. I'm not aware of anything in this matter, I don't believe. This is the first I have seen of it. I can't go beyond that.

Mr. CHERTOFF. But at least you are aware that somewhere within the communications apparatus at the White House, they were keeping tabs on what was being said by the SBA concerning Whitewater because we have this memo in December; right?

Mr. GEARAN. Well, yes, that they would keep the White House informed of news stories, as was their practice, yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. And Ms. McKiernan informed you specifically about it?

Mr. GEARAN. Yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. When it says, "cc: BL, file: Whitewater," whose writing is that?

Mr. GEARAN. That's my handwriting. I assume I asked this to be copied to Bruce Lindsey.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You were keeping a Whitewater file as of this point?

Mr. GEARAN. As of December, I assume.

Mr. CHERTOFF. I think my time is up, Mr. Chairman.

The CHAIRMAN. Senator Sarbanes.

Senator SARBANES. Mr. Chairman, I want to address an issue that is increasingly concerning me, and I do it because I just received a letter yesterday from the Vice Chairman of the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation. It addresses, I think, an increasing tendency on the part of at least some Members of this Committee and staff to make assertions which really are not factually correct but which can then injure a person or affect their reputation.

At the hearing on January 31st, Senator Faircloth said, and I am now quoting from the transcript:

What I'm getting to, and I can get there real quick. We are still going with these friends of Hillary. We appointed—I opposed Ricki Tigert for FDIC because I said it was going to be right back where we are today, she would be making judgments on Mrs. Clinton, which is exactly where we are with the RTC, folded into the FDIC. Ricki Tigert is making judgments on what was described as her favorite hanging-out pal, Mrs. Clinton.

Now, I don't recall being here when that was said, and I regret that, because it is just factually wrong. I have received a letter from the Vice Chairman of the FDIC, and let me just read it:

Dear Senator Sarbanes,

I understand there may be a misunderstanding regarding the responsibility for decisions at the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation for matters arising from Madison Guaranty. So that the record is clear, Chairman Helfer is fully recused from all matters relating to President and Mrs. Clinton, including Madison Guaranty. A copy of the Chairman's recusal is enclosed. As Vice Chairman, it has been, continues to be, and will be in the future my responsibility to ensure that these matters are handled appropriately by the FDIC. Thank you for this opportunity to clarify the record.

Sincerely,
Andrew C. Hove, Jr., Vice Chairman.

Mr. Chairman, the reason this is of extra concern is because this was the Committee—well, the Banking Committee of which all its Members are here—that confirmed Ricki Tigert to be the Chairperson of the FDIC, as you will recall. In that confirmation proceeding, there was some discussion of this issue, and she gave a recusal statement.

Let me just quote that:

In order to avoid any appearance of conflict of interest or loss of impartiality in connection with any investigation, inquiry or determination concerning President or Mrs. Clinton in their personal capacities currently or hereafter pending before the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation, I, Ricki Rhodarmer Tigert, will, if confirmed by the U.S. Senate to the Office of Chairperson of the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation, recuse myself immediately from participation in any such investigation, inquiry or determination.

Now in light of this record, the recusal statement, which actually was filed with this Committee, which was the one that confirmed her, and I'm glad this matter was brought to my attention, but to have statements that went on the record saying that we are "going to be right back where we are today. She would be making judgments on Ms. Clinton, which is exactly where we are with the RTC folded into the FDIC. Ricki Tigert is making judgments on what was described as her favorite hanging out pal, Mrs. Clinton." That is absolutely not the case. It is a clear example in my view of really abusing a person and abusing their reputation.

I want to include in the record this statement from the hearing of January 31st, of the letter I have received from the Vice Chairman of the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation to which is attached the recusal statement made by Ricki Tigert on February 7, 1994.

The CHAIRMAN. So ordered to be included in the record.

Senator SARBANES. An outrage.

The CHAIRMAN. I would ask that the letter of February 13th be put in the record. I find it deeply distressing that I just saw this letter for the first time, literally minutes ago when Counsel referred to it. This is a letter—and I do not want to impute this to the Special Counsel, Jane Sherburne. I want that to be understood, but it certainly is distressing that at this late date we get information that obviously concerns Whitewater and the first memorandum that I see on top says, "To: Whitewater group, From: Harold Ickes, Date: 10 January 1994, Re: Assignments." I have to tell you, that wasn't a small group.

I ask Counsel and our staff, as best you can recall, have we received any memorandum from any of the other members of the White House or the White House group that looks like this memorandum?

Mr. CHERTOFF. Other than the two copies we received with the submission we got in the last couple of days, my best understanding is we have not seen documents like this.

The CHAIRMAN. Up until?

Mr. CHERTOFF. Two days ago.

The CHAIRMAN. If you have a group, and we will find out how big this group was, why wasn't this produced sooner? I can understand if one member of the group doesn't produce it. But did everyone lose this?

Now, we will probably have someone come in and say the group consisted of two people or maybe one person. This is incredible and not acceptable. How can we be accused of dilatory tactics, when, very candidly, this information that we requested should have been made available, here, "To: Whitewater group, From: Harold Ickes." Let me inform you that we have requested Mr. Ickes for next week. We have a great reason for calling him——

Senator SARBANES. Mr. Chairman——

The CHAIRMAN. Let me finish. Now, we have requested him. We haven't subpoenaed him to come in next week. I understand his counsel has indicated to us that he has a deposition on that particular day. We try to be accommodating. And we said we aren't going to vote out subpoenas unless they were necessary. We are going to continue to do so. But I would think that the work of this Committee is such that the deposition should be put off and that Mr. Ickes, given the information that has been developed within the past several days, make himself available. If he doesn't make himself available, do we have to subpoena him in?

Now if you want to say that this isn't important and his testimony isn't important and relevant, that may be one thing. I believe the record clearly indicates and substantiates that it is important. So, I am not happy that some of these things are painstaking. I am happy that the information is produced later rather than never.

I must say, Mr. Gearan, you are in a very tough position, and I recognize that. I recognize given the sensitivity of the meetings, the intensity of the dialogue, et cetera, and your position that it is not easy. I understand that. If at times I find some of the responses less than completely responsive, I think that you would feel the same way given the circumstances. I am not passing judgment. I think you are in a difficult position given your circumstances.

I have to say, again, to you and to your counsel we certainly prefer getting these things. There is no doubt in my mind we are going to get more. No doubt. Because just as the information that you have provided gives us other relevant facts, some that you may have been aware of, and some that you were not aware of, we will continue to follow upon this. As others see this develop, they may become more candid with Congress and this Committee's work, and be more forthcoming.

It is one thing to say something when there is no evidence or witnesses to contradict the statement. It is quite another thing when information begins to develop. I think that is what is beginning to take place here with greater frequency.

I do not mean to attribute that to anyone specifically or to the witness today. Again, I recognize that you are in a tough position. I think that the contents of your notes are very revealing.

Now some people may, and it appears to me that there are some spokespeople who make rather strange interpretations, not just of this document, but repeatedly, "vacuum" doesn't mean vacuum, "close the door" doesn't mean close the door and so on. This is not the first time and it is not only with respect to your notes. That's what upsets some of the Members, and I think they feel that they are being trifled with and that certain persons are not being forthcoming.

Again, I also want to say to Ms. Sherburne, because she has a job and she can only produce what people give her. She can go back and circulate memos but people still may not be forthcoming. I have to tell you if this is a member of the group, and I happen to know that from past testimony and we can search the record, there were other members of the group. What happened to their memos? Did they throw them out? Disregard the requests of this Committee and the Special Prosecutor? Those are the questions that reasonable people would ask. And I raise it. I find this document very distressing today. It is not one attributable to you.

I have to tell you something else, Mr. Gearan. I might have found some of your answers not responsive. Aside from that, I believe you when you said you didn't receive this memo. But I also believe a substantial number received this kind of information and other information, and it has not been produced to this Committee.

Now as it relates to Mr. Ickes, I have to say that he has to make a determination whether he and his attorney want to come in this week. I think we scheduled him for Thursday. If he doesn't want to come in, we will meet Tuesday. I recommend to vote a subpoena to require his appearance. But we will leave that to him. He must make the call.

I thank you for your appearance today.

Mr. GEARAN. Mr. Chairman, if I might. I appreciate those closing remarks about my efforts here. I would just like to reiterate that I have done my level best before this Committee in my depositions and in my testimony twice and to the Banking Committee and to the other authorities to recall as best as I can. I don't want to add to the confusion that already exists around this issue. I just want to help you in your efforts and anyone else to recall as best I can, while it may be limited, which I can appreciate your view on that. I am just trying to present it as best and as completely as I possibly can.

The CHAIRMAN. Thank you for your cooperation. Thank you for being here.

This Committee stands in recess until Tuesday.

Senator SARBANES. Aren't we going to do our other panel?

The CHAIRMAN. No.

Senator SARBANES. Those people have been here all day.

The CHAIRMAN. Well, we advised them at our noon break that it would be doubtful if we would take on another panel. One witness would require at least 2 hours. It goes beyond examining the question of who was in the document room and who wasn't. We have advised them, one of their counsels indicated rather strongly that he wanted to proceed. We have indicated to him that we were not—it's a quarter to 6:00. We started at 10:00 a.m. We took a little more than an hour break. They will be scheduled, if possible, for this week, and we will resume Tuesday at 10:30 a.m.

Senator SARBANES. Are they going to be heard on Tuesday?

The CHAIRMAN. I believe we are attempting to work out a schedule with Ms. Susan Thomases, and with Wooten Epes, who is the former Director of the Arkansas Development Finance Authority—they would probably come in Wednesday. Mr. Ickes is scheduled for Thursday.

Senator SARBANES. Who is scheduled for Wednesday?

The CHAIRMAN. We are attempting to work that out, given the fact that we have two witnesses, Ms. Thomases, we are going to see if she can come in sometime during the week, and Mr. Ickes, who has just, as of this afternoon or sometime today advised us through his attorney that his attorney had a deposition.

That happens to be the problem. If necessary, we will bring Mallard and Wooten Epes in Tuesday or Wednesday. But obviously this depends on the schedules of the people involved. Again, in order to accommodate and be reasonable, we have not sent out summonses for a specific date. So, we will convene Tuesday, 10:30 a.m., subject to the witnesses' availability.

Now if Mr. Ickes and his attorney can't make it that day, but they can make it another date or make it on Wednesday instead of Thursday, we will try to work that out. Obviously, he is important and we look forward to his testimony. We would like to do it in a manner that accommodates reasonably the professional schedules of his attorney and the work of the Committee.

Senator SARBANES. We have raised the issue of the subpoena to Hale. I take it we would be ready to go ahead with that?

The CHAIRMAN. We will take that issue up. Counsels will discuss that. It would be helpful for Mr. Hale to appear.

Senator SARBANES. This is for documents, not for Hale. Not Hale as a witness. Hale's documents.

The CHAIRMAN. Sure. Our Counsels will discuss the various ramifications of the proposal submitted, I believe, the day before yesterday. Mr. Chertoff will discuss it and we will make a decision by tomorrow.

Senator SARBANES. Is it a possibility that neither the witnesses who were going to be heard today will be heard, that it won't be necessary?

The CHAIRMAN. No. One of the witnesses is absolutely essential. I think it is Mrs. Clinton's scheduler. We will bring her in here.

Senator SARBANES. How about the other lady?

The CHAIRMAN. I'm not certain. We might be able to by way of deposition. We may be able to put the depositions in the record.

Senator SARBANES. I looked at that deposition and I have to tell you I didn't really see why she was being brought as a witness.

The CHAIRMAN. Counsel tells me he doesn't believe it will be necessary to bring in Ms. Feinman, the deposition could cover that.

Senator SARBANES. That's what I thought.

The CHAIRMAN. We will summarize the deposition, it will take us 10 minutes to put it in.

We stand in recess.

[Whereupon, at 5:55 p.m., the hearing was adjourned, to reconvene at 10:30 a.m., on Tuesday, February 20, 1996.]

THE WHITE HOUSE
WASHINGTON

January 11, 1994

~~MEMORANDUM FOR CIRCULATION~~

FROM: JAKE SIEWERT
SUBJECT: Preferred Stock

At the suggestion of Michael Waldman, I have done some research on the issuance of preferred stock by S&L's in the early 1980's. Several media accounts have portrayed the 1985 plan to have Madison Guaranty issue preferred stock as somehow "novel" or "unique." That is far from the case:

- Authority to Issue Preferred Stock Granted in 1979. The American Banker reported in August of 1979 that federally insured S&Ls have had the authority to issue preferred stock since 1975.
- A Florida S&L Got FHLBB Approval for Preferred Stock in the 1979. In August, 1979, the American Banker reported that a Florida savings and loan association became the first Federal S&L to issue preferred stock as the result of a ruling by the Federal Home Loan Bank Board.
- A Bank in Mississippi Issued Preferred Stock as Part of a Successful Reorganization that Received National Recognition. In February 6, 1980, the American Banker reported that a S&L in Mississippi was recapitalized under a preferred stock plan that received the approval of the Mississippi Commissioner of Savings Associations and favorable responses from the Securities and Exchange Commission and the Federal Home Loan Bank Board. After the recapitalization, it made substantial progress rebuilding and reported profits in excess of $2,000,000.00 in 1979. On September 29, 1980, the merger and its use of preferred stock received a detailed and favorable profile in American Banker.
- A Major California Bank Merger in 1980 Involved Preferred Stock. On August 27, 1980, the New York Times reported that the Golden West Financial Corporation, a savings and loan holding company based in Oakland, California agreed to acquire the Westdale Savings and Loan Association, Los Angeles in a scheme involving the issuance of preferred stock. The bank merger involved over 100 thrift branches.

NOTES ON PREFERRED STOCK
PAGE 2

- Large Banks Began Issuing Preferred Stock in 1982. In November of 1982, City Federal Savings and Loan Association, the largest depository institution in New Jersey, announced plans to offer 2,000,000 shares of cumulative convertible preferred stock through an underwriting syndicate led by Morgan Stanley.
- Use of Preferred Stock Not Confined to the Business Papers. On September 13, 1983, the Christian Science Monitor ran a story titled "How Banking Barriers are Coming Down" that discussed the use of preferred stock in bank mergers.
- Federal Regulators Acknowledged that the Issuance of Preferred Stock was Common in 1984. In April, 1985, the Federal Home Loan Bank Board which was operating FSLIC amended its regulations on the issuance and use of subordinated debt securities by federally insured savings and loans. In the new regulations, the FHLBB specifically said that many S&L's had begun to issue preferred stock: "The Board is aware that during the past year many institutions have issued subordinated debt to "limited purpose" finance subsidiaries which obtained the funds to purchase the subordinated debt by issuing preferred stock to independent third parties." The FHLBB rule on subordinated debt was first published on December 5, 1984.
- By 1984, the Use of Preferred Stock by Thrifts Was Widely Discussed in the Banking and Legal Press. For example, a December 1984 article in Legal Times, "Offerings Provide Thrift Financing Alternatives," analyzed the use of preferred stock by thrifts in the early 1980's.
- Federal Regulators Expressly Authorized the Issuance of Preferred Stock by Finance Subsidiaries in 1984. On July 12, 1984, the FHLBB issued regulations authorizing a federally chartered savings and loan association or savings bank to establish a subsidiary "whose sole purpose is to issue debt or equity securities that the association is authorized to issue directly . . . and to remit the net proceeds of such issuance to the association. . . ." (49 Fed. Reg. 29,357, 1984)
- In 1983 and 1984, Federal Regulators Encouraged Subsidiary Preferred Offerings Under Certain Circumstances. See opinion letters by FHLBB General Counsel Norman H. Raiden dated Dec. 12, 1983, and March 23, 1984 (responsibilities of FSLIC as receiver of failed insured institution); 49 Fed. Reg. 29, 357 (1984) (new FHLBB regulations on finance subsidiaries).

Judge expects to be indicted in SBA loans

BY JONATHAN GROVES
Democrat-Gazette Business Writer

Pulaski County Municipal Judge David Hale says he expects to be indicted on federal charges this week.

And he said he blames part of his problems on bad loans made in the 1980s to groups that included the president of the United States and the governor of Arkansas. Hale, a municipal judge since 1979, said he expects to be indicted for allegedly misrepresenting uses for loans made by Capital Management Services Inc., a small business investment company licensed to make Small Business Administration loans.

He provided no specifics about the expected indictment and said it is a separate matter

Dear Mr. Giuffra:

Yesterday, Steven P. Paar, an examiner in the Little Rock field office of the Office of Thrift Supervision ("OTS"), found some additional documents relating to Madison Guaranty Savings and Loan Association ("Madison Guaranty") and promptly forwarded them to me. They include status reports relating to "problem institutions" from the 1984 to 1986 period. Mr. Paar was searching for a folder on investment securities and found the documents in a box primarily containing non-institution specific examination information. I am enclosing copies of the pages of these reports relating to Madison Guaranty along with a memorandum dated February 8, 1996 from Mr. Paar explaining in more detail how and when they were discovered. In addition, Mr. Paar yesterday found, in the same box of documents, some time sheets indicating time expended related to the supervision of Madison Guaranty, which I have also enclosed. Mr. Paar estimates that the Madison Guaranty related documents he found constitute less than one percent of the contents of the box in which he found them.

Enclosed with these documents is a receipt that I ask be signed by an appropriate person and returned to me. If you have any questions, please call me at 202-906-6844.

Sincerely,

David H. Enzel

OTS No. 07601
Status Reports

As I informed you earlier today over the telephone, I found some additional documents this morning in the Little Rock Field Office relative to Madison Guaranty Savings and Loan Association (Madison Guaranty). The documents are entitled Status Report and are enclosed in this mailing. Actually, these are the reports I referred to as monitoring reports in my Senate Banking Committee interview on January 23, 1996. The documents have somewhat refreshed my memory on the monitoring practices in the Little Rock Area Office in 1985 when I became a field manager. It was the Little Rock Area Office's practice for each field manager to complete monthly status reports for each identified problem institution in his caseload of institutions.

I sincerely apologize for any inconvenience or embarrassment the late discovery of these documents may cause you and/or others at the Office of Thrift Supervision and/or Department of the Treasury. I found the documents while searching for a folder on investment securities. The documents were previously overlooked in searches of the Little Rock Field Office for Madison Guaranty related documents due to my failure to search or diligently search a cardboard file folder box located in my office. By far, the vast majority of the contents in the box relate to general examination information and topics instead of to a specific institution or institutions. Actually, there are two boxes of such general examination information; one stacked on top of the other. I would roughly estimate that the Madison Guaranty related documents comprise less than one percent (eleven legal size pages) of the contents of the box.

Additionally, I have enclosed an article, apparently dated October 8, 1986, that may help the Senate Banking Committee determine the extent of the problems in Arkansas in 1985. I recall that in my interview there were several questions regarding the extent of problem institutions in Arkansas in 1985. According to Senator Pryor's statements in the article, he believed that 17 out of 37 institutions in Arkansas were considered problems in 1986 by the Federal Home Loan Bank of Dallas. I could not specifically recall the extent of the problems at the time of my interview. I also found this article in the box.

If you have any questions, please call me. I plan to work in the Little Rock Field Office for the next several days. My telephone number is 501-576-2428.

Re: Mark D. Gearan

Dear Mr. Kavanaugh:

We think it appropriate to share with you a clarification of information which we provided on January 18, 1996, where we accurately reflected our understanding at that time regarding Communications Office files.

As you know, Mr. Gearan left the White House and assumed the responsibilities of Peace Corps Director in September, 1995. Prior to his departure, Mr. Gearan was on vacation and his files and memorabilia were packed up by his White House Communications Office staff. The bulk of this material was sent to White House Records Management, while memorabilia and personal items were sent to Mr. Gearan's Peace Corps office. All of us believed that documents relating in any way to the Whitewater or Foster investigations were sent to Records Management for inventory and safe keeping. Up to that time, we had followed a strict procedure that no documents relating to these matters were ever to be removed from the White House so that complete accountability for these documents could be maintained. The only exception was the production of a single one-page document to your office in July 1994.

In late October 1995 we learned of a document request to the White House as a result of newspaper stories and confirmed that the White House Counsel Office was taking responsibility for reviewing and producing documents from the Communications Office.

Brett M. Kavanaugh, Esq.

Because we have consistently endeavored to be punctilious about document productions, and even though we thought we no longer had access to White House Communications Office documents, Mr. Gearan checked to make sure that he had not inadvertently retained any documents potentially responsive to that request. Included in this review were the boxes of memorabilia in storage at the Peace Corps which had come over from the White House. Amid this memorabilia Mr. Gearan discovered a box which contained the documents he believed had been left at the White House. This discovery was made on the afternoon of November 1, 1995, and on the morning of November 2, 1995, Mr. Gearan gave directions to his secretary to have these documents returned to the White House Communications Office by hand delivery. Without intent to waive the attorney-client privilege, suffice it to say that later that afternoon we confirmed Mr. Gearan's understanding that the documents had, in fact, been sent to White House Communications Office. In contemporaneous and subsequent discussions with White House Counsel we alerted them to these facts and were under the distinct impression that the documents had, in fact, been received by the White House and sent to Records Management and were being reviewed in conjunction with other requests for White House documents.

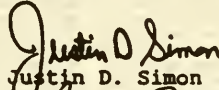

Last evening we called White House Counsel and in the course of that discussion we were informed that they were having some difficulty locating certain Communications Offices files in the Records Management system. We offered our assistance in locating this material. We learned that, rather than being sent to the White House, Mr. Gearan's Communications Office documents remained in their original White House container in storage at the Peace Corps. We, of course, have notified White House Counsel and, in order to expedite their review of these documents, sent them by courier to White House Counsel's office this morning without reviewing them. As these documents belong to the White House and the review and production of these documents is a responsibility that has been assumed by White House Counsel, we felt it appropriate to handle the documents in this manner, even though there may not be any responsive documents in the box. At the same time, given our letter to you of January 18, 1996, we thought it appropriate to promptly notify you of these events.

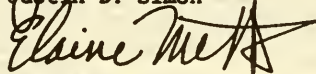

In view of Mr. Gearan's extraordinary record of cooperation with all investigations, including the investigation being conducted by your office, we regret the need to have to clarify our prior correspondence in response to your "clean-up" subpoena. While we understand that the White House is continuing to produce documents in response to parallel subpoenas from your office, and realize that this matter will not delay that production, we just wanted to make sure that the record is completely accurate.

Sincerely,

Justin D. Simon

Open Up on Madison Guaranty

Much as President Clinton might wish, the curious saga of his and his wife's dealings with the owner of a failed Arkansas savings and loan association just won't go away. It keeps popping up in Congressional inquiries and newspaper accounts, each time with a new and unsavory detail added to an already unflattering portrait of the cozy relationship between money and politics in Arkansas.

An important detail, disclosed by The Times's Jeff Gerth and Stephen Engelberg, is that the owner of Madison Guaranty Savings and Loan, James McDougal, helped Mr. and Mrs. Clinton repay a $50,000 personal debt just when Mr. McDougal needed favorable treatment from state banking officials to stay in business. Mr. McDougal did stay in business, his problems got worse, and in 1989 the bank was taken over by the Federal Government, at a cost to taxpayers of $60 million.

There is no irrefutable evidence of a quid pro quo. But the Arkansas savings and loan mess, and the Clintons' relationship to it, is not, as the White House keeps saying, an "old" story that has no relevance to Mr. Clinton or his present job. This is a man who rode into Washington on a pledge to end politics as usual, and every time the White House dodges inquiries about the old days in Arkansas, reasonable people begin to wonder about a cover-up and Mr. Clinton's sincerity.

The matter clearly needs ventilating, and if the White House won't do it, two other institutions can. One is the Justice Department, which is already looking into transactions at Madison. The Clintons are not targets of the probe.

The other is the House Banking Committee, whose ranking minority member, Jim Leach, believes that a full investigation of Madison could help the committee frame new rules to prevent future banking disasters. His request has been rebuffed by the committee chairman, Henry Gonzalez, a Democrat who until now has been a tiger on the savings and loan issue. Mr. Gonzalez accuses Mr. Leach of a Republican "fishing expedition."

Mr. Leach has also called Madison a "private piggy bank" for its owners and their influential Arkansas friends, and on this he is surely right. In addition to a string of dubious real estate investments, Madison made large unsecured loans to executives and other insiders.

Madison's practices attracted the attention of Federal auditors, whose 1984 review found "unsafe and unsound lending practices" that could threaten to drive the bank under. Shortly thereafter, Governor Clinton named Beverly Bassett Schaffer as head of the Arkansas agency charged with overseeing state-chartered savings and loans. Ms. Schaffer had once done legal work for Madison. For the next 18 months, up to the point where Federal regulators moved in, she took no significant regulatory action.

Three months after her appointment, Mr. Clinton came to Mr. McDougal with a request to "knock out the deficit" — Mr. McDougal's words — left over from the Governor's 1984 campaign. It turns out that the deficit wasn't just an ordinary campaign debt, but $50,000 Mr. and Mrs. Clinton had borrowed from another bank to finance the campaign. Mr. McDougal organized a fund-raiser and the debt was repaid. Federal auditors suspect that some of the donations assembled by Mr. McDougal may have been improperly diverted from the savings and loan.

Bruce Lindsey, the official wheeled out by the White House to answer questions, says the Clinton-McDougal relationship was entirely above board. Others, however, are more than mildly troubled by the fact that Mr. Clinton did not order his regulators to crack down on Mr. McDougal even after he was advised by his own banking commissioner in 1983 that the savings and loan operator was engaged in imprudent banking practices.

Suspicious that Mr. Clinton was excessively kind to his friend — at great cost, eventually, to the taxpayers — are further reinforced by the fact that Mr. McDougal had done other favors for the Clintons, including making them 50-50 partners in Whitewater Development, a real estate company for which Mr. McDougal put up most of the money. The venture ultimately failed, and the Clintons lost money. But that doesn't make their financial ties to Mr. McDougal seem any more savory.

Based on what's publicly known, there's probably not a crippling scandal here. But the White House is behaving as if there were. For example, Federal investigators say they have received little cooperation in a search for files they suspect were taken from the office of Vincent J. Foster, a White House aide who killed himself. Investigators want to know if one of those files dealt with Mr. McDougal and Whitewater.

This defensiveness isn't helping anyone. Mr. Clinton — and Mr. Gonzalez — owe it to the public to clear the air about Madison and its influential Arkansas friends.

This is important to be on top of. Bassett did a good job in camp. on this — can she now?

1 Q And what was the conversation about these press
2 inquiries, what was discussed about them?

3 A Well, this information was discussed -- the only
4 other topic that I can remember being talked about in
5 addition to this briefly was this Early Bird warning system
6 that the department had in public affairs, that it was a
7 system where reporters' inquiries were called into a
8 central person who produced the so-called Early Bird
9 warning document that was circulated around. It was 10 designed for the purposes of preventing leaks, which I
11 found interesting.

12 Q All right. Now what did Mr. Nussbaum talk about 13 at this meeting?

14 A I recall Nussbaum, Lindsey and DeVore as 15 principal conversants here. I don't remember specifically
16 what Mr. Nussbaum would have said.

17 Q Well, was there any concern about these press
18 inquiries?

19 A I don't recall concern.

20 Q What do you recall?

21 A What I recall is pretty much what's right here.

22 Q Only that there were press inquiries. You don't

1 recall anybody in the room having any type of reaction to
2 these inquiries at all?

3 A No. Again, for the part of the meeting that I
4 was at these are the notes that I took because these were 5 questions to Treasury and about an RTC matter. This was 6 one of the first contacts, I thought, references that I can
7 recall for Whitewater. This was not on my radar screen,
8 Whitewater at this point in time. So I don't recall this 9 meeting vividly beyond these notes and the Early Bird
10 system.

11 Q Do you recall how the meeting ended, were there
12 designations of who would do things or?

13 A Well, I can tell you, based on the way I take 14 notes, that if I was tasked to do something it would be 15 indicated to do. I have, you know that I can -- I know I
16 left this meeting without an assignment. And as I've said
17 before, I know I left this meeting feeling the pressure at 18 that point in the day to get back to return reporters
19 questions but beyond this, because I wasn't tasked to do
20 anything, this was a question to Treasury. My notes at the 21 end of the handwriting is frankly typical of my handwriting
22 if I'm sort of falling out of the meeting, so.

BY HAND DELIVERY

Robert Giuffra, Chief Counsel
United States Senate
Special Committee to Investigate Whitewater
Development Corporation and Related Matters
534 Dirksen Building
Washington, D.C. 20510-6075

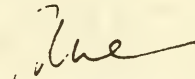

Dear Bob:

I am transmitting with this letter additional White House records (Bates Nos. S 020586 - 020761) that the Counsel's Office received yesterday from Michael Waldman, who found them in the course of an office move. In addition, we transmitted yesterday additional White House records (Bates Nos. S. 020564 - 020585), which were redacted copies of Mark Gearan's notes. After reviewing unredacted copies of the notes, Michael Chertoff agreed to certain redactions, and we delivered the records to Alice Fisher promptly.

Pursuant to the Committee's Security Procedures, we request that all of these documents be treated as "Highly Confidential." We would appreciate the opportunity to discuss with the Committee the basis for our request in the event the Chairman and Ranking Member consider redesignating any of this material.

Please feel free to call me if you have any questions.

Sincerely yours,

Jane C. Sherburne
Special Counsel to the President

RE: ~~ABC Nightly News Interview with SBA Deputy Counsel re:~~
SBIC/Arkansas/Whitewater

DATE: 12-2-93

Small Business Administration Deputy General Counsel Marty Teckler granted an on-camera interview to Alan Frank of ABC News yesterday for a story ABC is preparing on the SBIC and its role in the Capitol Management/Whitewater Inc. story. A summary of the interview, by SBA press person Janice Kearney, is attached.

The story is scheduled to air on the ABC evening news this Friday (12/3).

S 020448

TO: Kathy McKiernan, White House Press Assistant
 From: Janis Kearney, Public Affairs, Small Business Administration
 RE: ABC interview
 Date: Dec. 1, 1993

Kathy, the following is a summary of the ABC interview which took place on Tuesday at the Small Business Administration. (Responses are paraphrased for brevity.)

The ABC reporter was Alan Frank of New York, representing Peter Jennings' World Nightly News show. Martin Teckler, our Deputy General Counsel was interviewed. Martin has served as the SBA spokesperson for this case throughout the duration and considered most well versed regarding the program.

The interview lasted approximately 45 minutes and, for the most part, centered around these main topics:

1. How does the SBA Small Business Investment Company (SBIC) program and Specialized Small Business Investment Company (SSBIC) work?

2. What is the status of SBA's involvement in Capital Management, Inc?

a. How much money is outstanding?

b. How does SBA go about reviewing this money?

c. How does SBA go about reviewing this money? What are the consequences of Master Marketing applying for loans for one purpose and using them for another purpose?

RE: We're not in a position to respond to speculation, we are now in the process of reviewing the files from Capital Management, Inc., which includes documentation on Master Marketing.

d. Are there other agencies involved? (FBI, Justice, etc.)

3. What do we know about Judge Hale's allegations regarding the former Governor of Arkansas and the current Governor? Did Judge Hale bring his allegations of the former Governor and the current Governor's involvement in this matter to SBA's attention?

RE: No, not to my knowledge.

4. Does SBA have any knowledge of Whitewater, Inc.

RE: The SBA has no knowledge of Whitewater.

5. What is the status of Castle Development or Castle Grande?

RE: The SBA has no knowledge of these...

6. How would Susan McDougal, wife of James McDougal who claimed to have been a millionaire, have qualified for a SSBIC?

 S 020449

RE: SSBIC requirements are not based solely on economic status, her husband's financial status would not necessarily preclude her from qualifying for participation in the program.

7. Does SBA have any knowledge of the McDougal's relationship to the former Governor in regards to this case?

RE: The SBA has no knowledge of such a relationship.

Notes: Mr. Frank made it clear that our interview would be only a miniscule part of the story to be aired (probably Friday.) They also mentioned the fact that they would be in Arkansas to interview others for the story (did not identify who.)

Kathy, Martin Teckler made it abundantly clear that the SBA has no knowledge whatsoever regarding Mr. Hale's allegations and that our only interest is in collecting the SBA's and the taxpayers' monies that is still outstanding with Capital Management, Inc.

From : SSA STEVEN D. IRONS

Subject: THOMAS W. ANDERSON;
 ET AL;
 FAG-SBA
 OO: LITTLE ROCK

On 9/28/93, writer had a telephonic conversation with CECILIA SEAY, attorney for the Small Business Administration (SBA) in the matter involving DAVID HALE. SEAY advised she was still attempting to obtain all of the records of HALE's SBA company and needed a list from the FBI of what was missing from the records SBA turned over to the Bureau. SEAY intends to interview or depose HALE, and continue to demand all records.

Writer mentioned the media reports of SBA spokesman TECHLER's comments concerning the case and noted TECHLER was not helping matters by stating certain activities were not criminal in nature when he did not have all of the facts. SEAY advised she had spoken to SBA in Washington (possibly MARK STEVENS), and understood officials from the WHITE HOUSE had urged SBA to make such a characterization due to the mention of WHITEWATER DEVELOPMENT in some news accounts and WHITE HOUSE desire to avoid any inference criminal activity could have occurred in relation to WHITEWATER DEVELOPMENT and HALE's company.

INVESTIGATION OF WHITEWATER DEVELOPMENT CORPORATION AND RELATED MATTERS

THURSDAY, FEBRUARY 22, 1996

U.S. SENATE,
COMMITTEE ON BANKING, HOUSING, AND URBAN AFFAIRS,
SPECIAL COMMITTEE TO INVESTIGATE WHITEWATER
DEVELOPMENT CORPORATION AND RELATED MATTERS,
Washington, DC.

The Committee met at 10:20 a.m., in room 216 of the Hart Senate Office Building, Senator Alfonse M. D'Amato (Chairman of the Committee) presiding.

OPENING STATEMENT OF CHAIRMAN ALFONSE M. D'AMATO

The CHAIRMAN. The Committee will come to order.

Mr. Ickes, if you have a statement, we'll be pleased to receive it.

SWORN TESTIMONY OF HAROLD M. ICKES WHITE HOUSE DEPUTY CHIEF OF STAFF

Mr. ICKES. I do not, Mr. Chairman.

The CHAIRMAN. I have a brief statement.

I find it unacceptable to have a pattern which I can only describe as unacceptable where the White House and its chief aides continue a pattern that is certainly contemptuous of good procedure, that borders on deliberate withholding of information or, at the very least, total and ineffectual efforts to attempt to be cooperative. It is one or the other.

Just the other day, we read—as a matter of fact today in the Washington Post—that it was only 18 months after the Senate investigation and 2 years after the Independent Counsel was named that the White House has finally put together a team to ensure compliance with subpoenas.

I would note for the record that the Treasury Department did what should have been done, sent in IRS investigators to go through the files of those people who may have had materials that have been requested.

If this isn't a deliberate pattern of evasion, then it's certainly an attitude of disdain.

Let's look at just some of the materials that we have received. And I have to tell you that it seems to me that when we speak about all the key members of the Whitewater Response Team, that I cannot believe that they have turned over to us information that they still have and it keeps dribbling in. Then we're met with lame excuses in terms of how they found it. You don't find something if you don't look for it. There wasn't a conscious effort.

We received this packet of information from Mr. Gearan on January 29th! Another packet of information, again from Mr. Gearan was received on February 7th. Here's another packet of information. I might mention this information certainly was subpoenaed back in October from Mr. Altman, another White House official on February 13th. That's just 10 days ago. There's another file, another packet of information we received 2 nights ago.

Now who's playing politics? Who's deciding to withhold what?

This is information that is directly related to Whitewater and indeed we find, in a deposition given last evening to Mr. Waldman, one of the members of the Whitewater Response Team, that you, Mr. Ickes, I understand put together, he says that he found this last batch of papers. I have to tell you, I don't know, and I have reason to believe that this isn't everything. I don't believe it's everything. Not in the way this thing has been withheld.

Guess where he said he found it? They were in the White House office for months in a file marked WWDC, that's a quote, "WWDC," and Mr. Waldman admitted that stands for Whitewater Development Corporation. We should have had these papers and this information months ago. It's inexcusable.

The first place that the counsel should have gone to, you certainly knew there was a Whitewater Development Response Team, was to those people who were part of that team, the key members and said to them: "What documents do you have? Let's get them out." That's reasonable.

You can't tell the American people and attempt to say, "well, you are just dragging this out," when, in fact, the very people who should have been working, should have been complying, should have been providing information have failed to do so. And this is a pattern, over and over and over.

The electronic mail, the same thing. Delay. Delay. Delay. We will be asking for an extension, and it is necessary, and we are going to get the facts. And if those facts are exculpatory, indeed, if they clear the mystery away and demonstrate that things were done appropriately, fine. That will be the finding of this Committee.

But by gosh, you just cannot withhold things, tell us that we are wasting time, that we are spending taxpayers' money inappropriately when the very people who are charged and who say that they are going to meet the Committee's legitimate requests for information and documents deliberately withhold them. If you don't deliberately withhold them, then you do it in such a manner and conduct a search in such a way it is again arrogance, and is not a bona fide attempt to meet the Committee's legitimate requests.

I have to say that I am deeply shocked at this and that it doesn't surprise me anymore. But it is wrong. It is wrong. It is wrong again to have the political spin doctors attack the Committee and its integrity for attempting to do what we were charged with, and that is to gather the facts. To gather the facts and to get the information and let the chips fall where they may. We are going to continue to pursue it, but it's not right. We have not been dealt with fairly, and the American people have not been dealt with fairly.

Senator Sarbanes.

OPENING COMMENTS OF SENATOR PAUL S. SARBANES

Senator SARBANES. Mr. Chairman, I think it's important for the Committee to get all the material that's relevant to its inquiry. Whether it's reasonable to make charges about deliberate withholding I have very large questions. I mean, we can get from each person an explanation as to why the documents that were provided were not provided sooner. Mr. Gearan was here and we went into it in some detail with him, and it seemed to me that he had a reasonable explanation why the documents had not come. And once they were discovered, he provided them as promptly as he could.

It's also I think instructive to look at what the material provides once it's gets here, the substance of it. I have not, in any of it, as yet found any so-called smoking gun. But I think before one leaps to conclusions, we should explore with each the basis on which the material was not provided sooner.

We did that with Mr. Gearan who had, I thought, quite a reasonable and plausible explanation. And I, for one, would not level at him a charge of deliberate withholding of material.

But I think the Committee can move along. I think the important thing is that we're getting this material. None of it has been removed from the Committee's reach. We continue, I assume, the process of obtaining it and carrying out these hearings, hopefully in a fair manner.

The CHAIRMAN. Senator Hatch, Senator Faircloth, if you have no statements, I'll go to Mr. Chertoff.

Senator FAIRCLOTH. I do not have a statement.

The CHAIRMAN. Mr. Chertoff.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

Mr. Ickes, you are Deputy Chief of Staff at the White House?

Mr. ICKES. I am.

Mr. CHERTOFF. When did you first take that position?

Mr. ICKES. In very early January 1994.

Mr. CHERTOFF. And it is also true that in very early January 1994, you, I guess, became the chair of what you have described as the Whitewater Response Team?

Mr. ICKES. I wouldn't call it the chair. I was asked by then-Chief of Staff, Mack McLarty, to put together a group of people who were informed about Whitewater and related matters. We were getting deluged by the press with many, many questions. There were a number of people who were answering those questions and he wanted to make sure that we were getting information so that we could respond to the press as quickly and as accurately and as timely as possible.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Now, Mr. Ickes, you still have responsibility for Whitewater matters in the White House; is that correct?

Mr. ICKES. That's correct.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Ms. Sherburne reports to you?

Mr. ICKES. Ms. Sherburne reports to me, yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Who do you report to on Whitewater matters?

Mr. ICKES. I report to the Chief of Staff.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Anybody else?

Mr. ICKES. No.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You do not report to the President or the First Lady directly?

Mr. ICKES. Mr. Chertoff, everyone in the White House reports to the President.

Mr. CHERTOFF. I mean directly. Do you directly report to the President and the First Lady on Whitewater matters?

Mr. ICKES. I directly report to the Chief of Staff, Mr. Chertoff.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You do not directly report to the President and the First Lady?

Mr. ICKES. I don't know what you mean by the phrase. I directly report to my immediate superior, my immediate superior, Mr. Chertoff. I'm trying to answer the question. My immediate superior is Mr. Panetta and I report directly to Mr. Panetta.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Do you talk to the President about Whitewater matters?

Mr. ICKES. I do on occasion.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Do you talk to the First Lady about Whitewater matters?

Mr. ICKES. On rare occasion, yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. I want to direct your attention to the early part of 1994, particularly February. And I want to remind you where it is in the context of events, because you were before the Banking Committee 2 years ago testifying about a February 2nd meeting at which you were present, in which Roger Altman had discussions with Mr. Nussbaum and others in the White House staff concerning whether or not he should recuse himself, take himself out of the decisionmaking process on the RTC's investigation of Madison and Whitewater.

Now later that month, did you have discussions with the President concerning the question of the possible exposure that the President and Mrs. Clinton might have with respect to an RTC investigation of the Rose Law Firm?

Mr. ICKES. Are you reading from testimony that I've given, Mr. Chertoff? If so, I would like to see it.

Mr. CHERTOFF. No. I'm asking you a question, Mr. Ickes.

Mr. ICKES. Are you reading from testimony, Mr. Chertoff, because if you are, I would like to see it.

The CHAIRMAN. Mr. Ickes, we ask the questions, all right?

Mr. ICKES. Well, Mr. Chairman, it's proper to inquire.

The CHAIRMAN. Now wait a second.

Mr. ICKES. It's proper to inquire, Mr. Chairman.

The CHAIRMAN. He's making an inquiry. If you don't recall, you can say you don't recall. If we have information that will be helpful in refreshing your recollection, we will make it available to you. Now he's asking you a question. So let's go.

Mr. ICKES. As I understand it, Mr. Chairman—

The CHAIRMAN. I will ask that the question be rephrased, and I am going to ask the witness to attempt to be responsive.

Mr. ICKES. I am attempting to be responsive, Mr. Chairman.

The CHAIRMAN. Well, I can say already that I've seen a number of instances when it would appear fairly obvious that Mr. Chertoff had to ask the question two or three times to get a response as it related to whether you communicated with the President with respect to Whitewater.

Mr. ICKES. Mr. Chairman, he used the word "report"—

The CHAIRMAN. Mr. Ickes, you may be Deputy Chief of the White House and you give orders there, and we will be fair, but you must try to be responsive.

Mr. ICKES. I'm trying to do that, Mr. Chairman.

The CHAIRMAN. Please, Mr. Ickes, try to respond to the questions. Be responsive. No trick questions. If you recall, please answer. If you don't, say you don't recall.

Now go ahead, Mr. Chertoff.

Mr. CHERTOFF. My question to you, Mr. Ickes, is in late February 1994, did you have conversations with the President of the United States concerning whether he and/or the First Lady faced possible exposure relating to an RTC investigation into the activities of the Rose Law Firm?

Mr. ICKES. I think I've testified before, at least twice, if not three times, Mr. Chertoff, that I did have conversations. I wouldn't say they were about exposure. And I do not recall at what time I had those conversations, when I had those conversations, where I had those conversations, or whom was present.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Isn't it a fact, Mr. Ickes, that the President of the United States repeatedly asked you whether he and the First Lady faced possible liability or were exposed to possible liability for an RTC investigation into the activities of the Rose Law Firm?

Mr. ICKES. Not that I recall, Mr. Chertoff.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Were you interviewed by the White House Counsel's Office in the summer of 1994 in connection with what the White House has described as a review that they were conducting about White House-Treasury contacts?

Mr. ICKES. I don't recall the time of year. I think it was some time during the spring or summer, but I was interviewed by some people on Lloyd Cutler's staff. Lloyd Cutler was at that point the White House Counsel.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Did that include Ms. Sherburne? Did she interview you?

Mr. ICKES. As I recall, it did.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Was Ms. Cheston also present at the interview?

Mr. ICKES. I recall that she was in an interview. I think both of them were in an interview at some point.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Did you also direct your attorney to communicate with them and tell them information you had in your possession that was relevant to what they were examining?

Mr. ICKES. I am not sure I directed my attorney to meet with them.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Well, I am going to put up on the Elmo two sets of notes. The first set of notes is 20783 and 20784, which are Ms. Sherburne's notes. And there's a copy before you.

Senator DODD. Do we have copies of those?

Mr. CHERTOFF. Everybody has copies, I believe. It's on one sheet of paper and it carries over. This is a portion of a series of notes.

The CHAIRMAN. Let him find it first. Do you see that number over there up at the top? That will identify and generally they're sequential. That's 20783.

Mr. ICKES. Yes, these aren't. This starts with 20564, then it goes to 1-2—

The CHAIRMAN. Go ahead. You're going up to 83.

Mr. CHERTOFF. This is from the notes that Ms. Sherburne had concerning the information she gathered from you relating to this issue in the summer of 1994. It says: "Late February (2/26 or 27), HI"—that's you, Harold Ickes—"has conversation with WJC"—that's the President—"in which WJC asks lots of questions re RTC procedures, whether HRC and WJC exposed." Then off in the corner in says, "Whether Rose could be held liable." Does that ring a bell with you?

Mr. ICKES. I was not present at this. My understanding of these notes, Mr. Chertoff, is that these were notes written by Jane Sherburne after a conversation with somebody else. I was not present there. I don't know the context, I don't know the nature of the question. All I can tell you is she wrote what she wrote.

Mr. CHERTOFF. My question to you is, Mr. Ickes, is it true? Is it true that you had conversations in late February with the President in which the President asked lots of questions regarding RTC procedures, whether HRC and WJC were exposed? Is that true?

Mr. ICKES. I have testified before on several occasions, Mr. Chertoff, that I did have conversations with the President and separately with the First Lady. I don't know whether they were during February 1994, or during March 1994.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Whether February or March, put the date to one side. Did you have conversations with the President in which the President asked you lots of questions about RTC procedures, whether Mrs. Clinton and the President were exposed?

Mr. ICKES. I do not recall lots of questions. I recall having a meeting, several meetings with the President in which I had some discussions with him. I've testified to that before.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You actually haven't, Mr. Ickes.

Mr. ICKES. Mr. Chertoff, please. And my testimony stands.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Well, we'll get to your prior testimony.

Are you telling us that this statement is true or untrue, this statement in the notes? Did you have these conversations or not?

Mr. ICKES. To the best of my recollection, Mr. Chertoff, I have testified before and I testify again today that I had question—I had several meetings with the President during this period of time, February and March. I do not recall when the meetings occurred nor do I recall the substance of the conversations.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Now it goes on to say in the notes, "HI," that's you, "asked NE," Neal Eggleston, "to draft memo which NE did in 12 hours. HI made revisions. Sends to HRC 3/1. DR discussing." Did you ask Mr. Eggleston to draft a memo regarding the question of RTC procedures in response to these questions?

Mr. ICKES. I may well have, Mr. Chertoff. I think that that memorandum has been again testified to at considerable length. If you would show it to me, I could answer more appropriately.

The CHAIRMAN. We are not asking you to tell us that we have seen the memo. We are asking you to answer the question.

Mr. ICKES. I have been answering.

The CHAIRMAN. You are not answering the questions. You are not being responsive.

Mr. ICKES. Mr. Chairman, you may not like the answers but I am answering the question, and I am trying to be as responsive as possible.

The CHAIRMAN. Well, we will be here. We are going to get more responsive answers.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Did you ask Mr. Eggleston to prepare a memo regarding RTC procedures in response to these conversations with the President?

Mr. ICKES. I think I've testified to that before that I did ask him to prepare a memo.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Did you ask him to prepare a memo—let me put the memo up. It's S 7288. And I'm going to show you—

Mr. ICKES. Do I have a copy of that here, Mr. Chertoff?

Mr. CHERTOFF. Yes, Mr. Ickes, you have a copy of everything before you. And if we can stop the clock and give the witness an opportunity to find it, so we don't lose time.

I'll also direct your attention to X 1200 which is a redacted form of the same memo which the Committee originally received in 1994 before we finally got the full version.

Mr. ICKES. The memo you are referring to is the one dated January 17, 1994?

Mr. CHERTOFF. No, it is dated 1 March 1994, to the First Lady from Harold Ickes.

Mr. ICKES. OK, I have it. I have it.

Mr. CHERTOFF. There are two versions of that. One is redacted and one is unredacted.

Mr. ICKES. I have one here, Mr. Chertoff, that's 7288.

Mr. CHERTOFF. That's right, and there is another one X 1200, which you also have before you.

Mr. ICKES. Right, I have that also.

Mr. CHERTOFF. And X 1200 is the redacted form of S 7288, which is what we originally had before the White House finally, we finally arranged to get the entirety of the document.

Mr. ICKES. That's correct.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You had Mr. Eggleston draft this document, that is to say, the underlying memorandum that is beneath the transmittal page. Isn't that correct?

Mr. ICKES. And you are talking about the February 28th memorandum.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Correct.

Mr. ICKES. Yes, it's my recollection I did ask him to draft it.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Now when you were asked about that in your deposition—I'm going to give you a copy of your deposition—well, you actually have it. Why don't you turn to page 192? You didn't tell us about this?

The CHAIRMAN. Let him get to page 192 and take a look at it.

Mr. ICKES. Page 192 of?

Mr. CHERTOFF. Of your deposition before the Senate Banking Committee.

Mr. ICKES. I'm not sure I see it here, Mr. Chertoff.

Mr. CHERTOFF. It's there.

The CHAIRMAN. We'll provide it—

Mr. ICKES. No, no. I'm—just bear with me.

The CHAIRMAN. It's up on the screen also.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Mr. Ickes—

The CHAIRMAN. Now wait, let him get there. Page 192?

Mr. ICKES. OK, I've got it. I've got—yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Of your deposition testimony given on July 24, 1994, and you were being questioned by Mr. Codinha, who was Mr. Ben-Veniste's predecessor, who was then the Majority Counsel on the Democratic side. He asked you specifically about this memorandum and the 25-page attachment. He asked you at line 16:

Question: Do you recall creating a memo on or around March 1st, which was a confidential memo for the First Lady of the United States that dealt with the Resolution Trust Corporation?

Mr. ICKES. What line are you on? I'm sorry. What line?

Mr. CHERTOFF. Line 16.

Mr. ICKES. Line 16 on page 192?

Mr. CHERTOFF. Correct. Of your deposition testimony.

Mr. ICKES. I'm with you.

Mr. CHERTOFF. At line 16:

Question: Do you recall creating a memo on or around March 1st, which was a confidential memo for the First Lady of the United States that dealt with the Resolution Trust Corporation?

Answer: I may have. I don't recall the specifics.

Then Mr. Codinha went on to show you X 1202, which if you look at X1200 is attached, and that is the redacted version of the memo we've been talking about.

Mr. ICKES. Yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. And if we continue on the next page, which would be page 193, at line 14:

Question: Does that refresh your memory as to whether at least a draft of such a document was created?

Answer: As I sit here today, I don't recall specifically creating a draft, but this certainly appears to be a draft.

Question: Do you know the purpose, why such a memorandum would be created?

Answer: Assuming it was created and assuming it was, in fact, sent to the First Lady, I think the purpose was to inform her about what was stated in the body of the memo.

Then Mr. Codinha directs your attention to the fact that the memo was heavily redacted.

Mr. ICKES. Right.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Go on to the next page, actually we'll start at 195 at line 14. Mr. Codinha says:

Question: That's X1201 and does that indicate it says "redacted 25 pages"?

Answer: It does.

Question: Does that indicate to you this is a heavily redacted document?

Mr. BENNETT: It speaks for itself.

Question: Do you recall writing 25 pages on the subject of the Resolution Trust Corporation to the First Lady?

Answer: I do not and I doubt that I did.

This is important, now. This is line 2, page 196.

Question: When you say you doubt that you did, do you believe that someone else acting on your instructions wrote a 25-page memo?

Answer: It's hard for me to tell since you say it's heavily redacted. There's a blank page, other than the word "redacted" and the handwritten page, "25 pages."

Finally to page 197, you continue to go back and forth with Mr. Codinha, this is at line 8:

Question: First of all, how can you determine from looking at the page that it is a transmittal memorandum?

Answer: You're exactly right, I can't. And the only reason I said that is because this was attached to it—

Question: This being X1201 which is redacted 25 pages?

Answer: Yes. And I assume, and probably incorrectly, that this 1201 was attached to 1200. Therefore, I concluded it was a transmittal memorandum and I'm in error. I don't know whether it was or wasn't.

Now my question to you, Mr. Ickes, is this. At the time you were shown this redacted memorandum, that was just around the time you had told someone and had communicated to Ms. Sherburne the fact that you had directed Mr. Eggleston to draft the memorandum which you later transmitted up to the First Lady under the title Resolution Trust Corporation.

Isn't it a fact, Mr. Ickes, that when you were confronted with this memo, even though it was heavily redacted, you were able to determine from the cover page, which is X1202 entitled, "To: The First Lady; From: Harold Ickes; Re: Resolution Trust Corporation;" that you knew then and there that you had prepared that transmittal memo and that you had sent Mrs. Clinton a 25-page memo on the Resolution Trust Corporation because you knew you had asked Mr. Eggleston to prepare it, and you knew you had made revisions in it, and you knew you had sent it up to the First Lady?

Mr. ICKES. I think, Mr. Chertoff, that the deposition referred to documents that were heavily redacted, and therefore it was unclear to me what the documents were involved.

Mr. CHERTOFF. But even with the redaction, Mr. Ickes, even with the meager amount of information we received from the White House back in July 1994, we did have and you were shown this. You were shown X1202, put it up on the Elmo, it was entitled, "Memorandum—To: The First Lady, From: Harold Ickes, Re: The Resolution Trust Corporation" and that is, in fact, when you finally looked at the whole memo, that is the cover sheet you used to transmit the entirety of Mr. Eggleston's memo to the First Lady.

At the same time you were telling Mr. Codinha that you didn't know what this was in relation to, you were telling people who were asking you questions at the White House or who were conveying your information to the White House, that, in fact, you specifically remembered having directed Mr. Eggleston to prepare that memorandum.

Mr. ICKES. Mr. Chairman, is that a question? I mean, that's a statement by Counsel.

Mr. CHERTOFF. I'm about to get to the question.

Mr. ICKES. Well, I know, but let's ask the question.

The CHAIRMAN. He's setting the stage.

Mr. ICKES. Mr. Chairman, in all fairness, he's using—I mean, ask the questions. That's an editorial comment by Counsel. He's concluding.

The CHAIRMAN. Mr. Ickes—

Mr. CHERTOFF. Did you tell—

Mr. ICKES. As far as I know, the Members of this Committee are going to draw conclusions.

The CHAIRMAN. Right.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Mr. Ickes, is it, in fact, the case that you told people in the spring or the summer of 1994, that you recalled asking Neal Eggleston to draft a memo about the RTC procedures, which he did in 12 hours, that you made revisions in the memo, that you sent it to Mrs. Clinton, and that Mrs. Clinton asked a few questions about it?

Mr. ICKES. Mr. Chertoff, the responses that I gave in the deposition were responses that were referring to a specific piece of paper that was put in front of me.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Mr. Ickes, my question is this. Did you tell people, did you tell anyone in the spring or summer of 1994 that you had directed Mr. Eggleston to draft a memo, which he did in 12 hours, relating to RTC procedures, that you made revisions in the memo, and that you sent it to Mrs. Clinton?

Mr. ICKES. I may well have, Mr. Chertoff. But that was in connection with documents that we're being shown to me at the time.

Mr. CHERTOFF. In fact, the documents that were being shown to you were the complete versions of what the Committee was given in a heavily redacted form? And if you want to compare the redacted memo 1202 with the complete memo 7288, you look at those two pages, you will agree with me, will you not, that, in fact, 1202 is simply a redacted or edited version of 7288?

Mr. ICKES. Mr. Chertoff, there are a lot of memos back and forth.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You compare them—

Mr. ICKES. Let me just finish, Mr. Chertoff. There are a lot of memos back and forth, and when I am under oath, as I was when I was taking—that deposition was being taken of me, I was responding specifically to the documents that were put in front of me.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Again, Mr. Ickes, my question is this. Would you compare X1202, the redacted version you were shown in the deposition, and the complete version, 7288, and will you agree with me that 1202 is, in fact, a redacted portion or an edited portion of what is the full memo?

Mr. ICKES. Upon comparison, I wouldn't disagree with you. However, Mr. Chertoff, I was not shown that during my deposition.

Mr. CHERTOFF. But had you been shown the full memo at any other time before your deposition?

Mr. ICKES. I may well have. I don't recall.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Now, I want to direct your attention to the notes which have recently been produced to us. In particular, I want to direct your attention to your notes, page S 2790.

Senator DODD. Mr. Chairman, while he is looking at that, can I inquire, when did we receive the full unredacted memo?

Mr. CHERTOFF. I think the full unredacted memo, as I recall, Mr. Chairman, was presented to the then-Chairman and Minority Member on, I believe, the next-to-last day of the hearing.

The CHAIRMAN. During the summer, I think, we had a meeting with Ms. Sherburne and then-Counsel to the White House and arranged for the full unredacted, or very lightly redacted portion to be produced.

Senator DODD. Is that like the end of July?

Mr. CHERTOFF. It was August.

The CHAIRMAN. Was it August? July 29th.

Senator DODD. Of 1994.

Senator SARBANES. 1994.

Senator DODD. So we had the full document then in July 1994?

Mr. CHERTOFF. We did not have it, Mr. Chairman, during the deposition.

The CHAIRMAN. Yes. The point is though that it was withheld, or we didn't have it, and there was no agreement until late July when we agreed that we would—

Senator DODD. No, my point was, I think Mr. Ickes testified on August 4th, and we had the document prior to his testimony.

Mr. CHERTOFF. I believe, Mr. Chairman, to be absolutely clear on the record, the deposition testimony, including the questions by Mr. Codinha, then the Democratic Counsel, was on July 24th. We did not receive the full memorandum, the unredacted memorandum until the hearings were underway, which was several days thereafter. We did not receive Ms. Sherburne's record of what Mr. Ickes knew until it was shown to us within the last couple of months.

Now, Mr. Ickes, I want to direct your attention to S20790. These are notes of a meeting regarding Whitewater in your handwriting.

Mr. ICKES. Here's the problem, Mr. Chertoff. The documents that I was given to you by—given to me by your staff are not in order, so—

Mr. CHERTOFF. We'll send someone down then to—

Mr. ICKES. That's all right. They're in my handwriting?

Mr. CHERTOFF. They are in your handwriting.

Mr. ICKES. And what date are they?

Mr. CHERTOFF. 1/16/94.

Mr. ICKES. OK, I have those.

Mr. CHERTOFF. The first page of the notes is S20790; correct?

Mr. ICKES. That's correct.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Now it says under Arabic numeral 2, "Statute of Limitations," is that correct?

Mr. ICKES. Yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Where were these notes before they were produced to this Committee? Were they in your possession?

Mr. ICKES. They were in my possession, yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Were they in your possession continuously from January 1994, until you produced them to the White House Counsel to be produced within the last week?

Mr. ICKES. Yes, they were in my files.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You had them available to review in 1994?

Mr. ICKES. Well, as I recall, as I understand it, these had been produced to the White House Counsel pursuant to the subpoena that was issued by the Independent Counsel or then-Special Counsel Fiske in early March 1994.

I'm confident that these particular notes that you're referring to had been produced to the White House Counsel and it's my understanding that the White House Counsel overlooked producing them pursuant to subsequent subpoenas that this Committee issued.

Mr. CHERTOFF. And you reviewed these documents before they were produced to Mr. Fiske; is that correct?

Mr. ICKES. I turned the documents over and let the White House Counsel and my attorneys determine what was responsive and what was not responsive.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You reviewed these notes, the notes that were produced to Mr. Fiske, before they were produced, correct?

Mr. ICKES. Again, Mr. Chertoff, I don't want to quibble with you. I don't know what the term "review" means. Did I glance at them as I turned them over? Yes. Did I read them? I doubt it.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Well, let's go to page 231 of your deposition on July 24, 1994.

Mr. ICKES. I'm sorry, what page?

Mr. CHERTOFF. 2-3-1, 231.

Mr. ICKES. OK. I'm there.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Have it?

Mr. ICKES. Yes, I do.

Mr. CHERTOFF. At line 4:

Question: Did you review those notes before you made a production to Mr. Fiske?

Answer: I did.

Question: Did you review those notes before production was made here?

Answer: Yes.

Were those your answers to the questions that I put to you back in 1994?

Mr. ICKES. Yes, it was, but again there's a question about what review means.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Well, did you have a question, do you see anywhere in that answer there, a qualification or an expression of uncertainty about what the word "review" means?

Mr. ICKES. The word "review," Mr. Chertoff, can mean many things. I glanced at these documents, and basically I turned whatever documents——

The CHAIRMAN. Mr. Ickes, you didn't say in your testimony there that you glanced at the documents. You answered that you did review them before you gave them to Mr. Fiske. You said that you reviewed them again before your examination.

Let's go, Counsel.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Now, I want to continue with the deposition.

The CHAIRMAN. If you want to have a discussion on the word "review," we're not going to spend——

Mr. ICKES. Mr. Chairman, if I could finish my——

The CHAIRMAN. We're not going to spend——

Mr. ICKES. Mr. Chairman, if I could finish my answer.

The CHAIRMAN. We are not going to spend 30 minutes on your interpretation of what review means.

Mr. ICKES. Mr. Chairman, if I could finish my answer to Mr. Chertoff, I'd appreciate it.

The CHAIRMAN. Well, go ahead, try to be responsive.

Mr. ICKES. I thought that you all asked me to come up here to answer questions, and I'm trying to do that.

The CHAIRMAN. And not give speeches, and not beat around the bush, and not tell us what you testified to previously. We are trying to get straightforward answers from you. When he asks you whether you reviewed, give us an answer. Yes or no?

Mr. ICKES. Mr. Chairman——

The CHAIRMAN. Yes?

Mr. ICKES. Mr. Chairman, I was cut off in the middle of a question.

The CHAIRMAN. OK, go ahead.

Mr. ICKES. I'd like to finish my answer if I could.

The CHAIRMAN. I'd like to see you try to do it.

Mr. ICKES. All right.

[Laughter.]

I'd like to be given a chance.

Mr. Chertoff, when that subpoena was issued by Mr. Fiske in early March 1994, as I recall, I pulled out all of the documents that I thought were responsive. Indeed, I was overly responsive to that subpoena. I turned them over to my counsel and to White House Counsel. They then determined what was responsive to the subpoena. When I say I reviewed them in this testimony, I merely glanced at them. I did not read them.

Mr. CHERTOFF. I'll tell you what, Mr. Ickes, we're just going to go over what's in the record which is as it stands. The question to you was did you review those notes before you made a production to Mr. Fiske. And your answer is, I did. Is that correct?

Mr. ICKES. That's correct.

Mr. CHERTOFF. That's what's written there; right?

Mr. ICKES. Yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You had an opportunity, Mr. Ickes——

Senator SARBANES. Wait a minute. Why don't we back off and ask the previous question.

The CHAIRMAN. Senator, you can do that on your time.

Senator SARBANES. I mean, you have a question what was the content of those notes, and he says, I have no idea, I have to look this up. Did you review those notes before you made the production? I did, but he's already said he didn't know the content.

The CHAIRMAN. Senator, if you want to testify for him, you can do that.

Senator SARBANES. This is not Constitutional.

The CHAIRMAN. Oh, come on now, let's cut that out. Seriously.

All right, we'll go back right from the top of the page and start.

Mr. CHERTOFF. This is the question. I will go back to line 2.

Question: And what was the content of those notes?

Answer: I have no idea, I'd have to look that up.

Question: Did you review those notes before you made a production to Mr. Fiske?

Answer: I did.

Question: Did you review those notes before production was made here?

Answer: Yes.

Now, Mr. Ickes, you had an opportunity actually to make corrections in the deposition, didn't you?

Mr. ICKES. As I recall, I did.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Do you have reason to believe that the printed record of your answers is incorrect?

Mr. ICKES. I am not disputing the answer. I am disputing the interpretation of the word.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Now it goes on:

Question: Was there any mention in any of those notes of the words "statute of limitations"?

And then after we have some discussion with the lawyers, the question again is posed:

Question: Were there notes in the file in which the words "statute of limitations" appeared?

Mr. BENNETT: If he remembers.

The WITNESS: The word "statute of limitations"?

Question: Right.

Answer: I don't recall the words "statute of limitations," other than press clips.

Then Mr. Bennett interjects about the February 2nd note. And go on to ask you, at line 16:

Question: Excluding TS 1192 which is your February 2nd notes, excluding that, were there references to the statute of limitations in any of your other notes?

Answer: Not that I recall.

Now would you agree with me that your notes of January 16, 1994, which you have indicated to us were turned over to the White House Counsel to be produced to Mr. Fiske in March 1994, does in fact contain a discussion of the statute of limitations, and it's right there in your handwriting; correct?

Mr. ICKES. I've already testified to that. Yes, it does.

Mr. CHERTOFF. And you understood at the time that one of the issues that the Committee was looking at—this wasn't just, you know, playing scrabble, hunting for words, one of the issues was whether in January 1994, one of the considerations in the minds of the people at the White House who ultimately met with Roger Altman was an acute awareness of the fact that the statute of limitations on the RTC investigation of Madison and the Rose Law Firm was going to expire at the end of February unless there was an extension, and that that had a great deal of relevance to the discussions with Mr. Altman in terms of his recusal. Do you remember that being the issue that was on the table?

Mr. ICKES. I do. I remember a number of Senators up here talking about it at great length.

Mr. CHERTOFF. In fact, I want to ask you, Mr. Ickes, whether you have other notes about Whitewater response meetings because you took notes of Whitewater response meetings in January, 1994.

Mr. ICKES. The notes that I have, I've turned over.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Have you taken other notes?

Mr. ICKES. The only notes that I recall taking were the notes that were the basis for the typewritten notes that have been turned over to this Committee.

Mr. CHERTOFF. I'm going to ask the question again. I don't want to ask whether something was the basis for something. Did you take notes during Whitewater response meetings that are not in the documents that have been produced here today?

Mr. ICKES. The only notes that I recall taking, Mr. Chertoff, are those that are the basis for the typewritten notes that have been turned over to this Committee.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Where are the original notes?

Mr. ICKES. I do not know.

Mr. CHERTOFF. What happened to them?

Mr. ICKES. They may have been discarded, Mr. Chertoff. After those typewritten notes were typed up, there was no need for them.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Were the original notes turned over to Mr. Fiske?

Mr. ICKES. They were not.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Were they discarded in February 1994?

Mr. ICKES. I suspect that they were discarded right after the typewritten memos were typed.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Now the notes contain a description of what went on in the meetings? Is that what it is?

Mr. ICKES. The notes basically contained what is typed in those memos that have been turned over to this Committee.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Well, the memos we have don't cover every day in which there were meetings. I am correct, am I not, that there were meetings during the first 2 weeks of January 1994, on a daily basis?

Mr. ICKES. That's correct.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Sometimes twice a day?

Mr. ICKES. Sometimes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. So that would suggest there should have been notes for somewhere between 7 and 14 sets of notes for those first 2 weeks; right?

Mr. ICKES. There's no suggestion that there should be any notes, Mr. Chertoff.

Mr. CHERTOFF. But you took notes, didn't you?

Mr. ICKES. I took notes of those documents that were then transcribed by a typewriter and were distributed to certain members of that group. They were actually assignment notes. That's what I was interested in.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Right. You had assignment notes. I think if you'll look in your production, you'll see assignment notes for January 9th and for January 10th. Are there any other typewritten versions of notes from these daily meetings over this 2-week period that you find in your production of documents?

Mr. ICKES. Not that I know of, Mr. Chertoff. I turned all of these, all of my files over to White House Counsel and to my own lawyer. Last week, they went through all of the files, and this is what has been produced.

Mr. CHERTOFF. The only handwritten notes—you saved these notes on January 16, 1994, though; right?

Mr. ICKES. What?

Mr. CHERTOFF. The January 16th notes in your own handwriting you saved; right?

Mr. ICKES. That was a much, that was a different meeting. That was not the Whitewater Response Group that you referred to.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Did you make a decision that with respect to Whitewater response meetings you would not save the notes, as opposed to keeping the notes of other meetings?

Mr. ICKES. No. There was no typewritten transcript of this, Mr. Chertoff. There was a typewritten transcript of the notes that I took in the Whitewater response meeting, and those typewritten notes have been turned over to this Committee.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Well, who made the typewritten transcript of the notes of the Whitewater response meetings?

Mr. ICKES. I don't recall. Somebody in my office.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Did you ask somebody to do it?

Mr. ICKES. Yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Are you telling us that the assignment lists for January 9th and January 10th, which are the only assignment lists we have received, that's the sum total of all the notes for those 2 weeks?

Mr. ICKES. All the notes that I have. Obviously others took notes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. But you only took notes on two occasions?

Mr. ICKES. What?

Mr. CHERTOFF. You only took notes on two occasions?

Mr. ICKES. That's right. My job was to coordinate the pulling together of information and make assignments. That is what I was doing with that group, and that is what I was interested in, and that is what I was focused on.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Now just to close the loop on this, let's go back to your deposition on page 87, line 2.

Mr. ICKES. Wait just a moment, sir. This is page 87 of the deposition?

Mr. CHERTOFF. On July 24th, Mr. Codinha asking the questions.

Mr. ICKES. OK, I'm at 87.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Line 2:

Question: Did individuals take notes at those meetings, if you noticed?

Answer: Some individuals did.

Question: Did you take notes?

[Witness conferred with counsel.]

Answer: I kept notes.

Question: Would it be correct to say that if they pertain to the scope of Senate Resolution 229, that they have been delivered to the Committee?

Answer: Yes.

Question: And you have reviewed your notes yourself or along with your attorney?

Answer: I have.

Is that true? Did you review your notes of the Whitewater response meetings with your attorney?

Mr. ICKES. Again, I reviewed notes in the sense that I use review, Mr. Chertoff, that I looked at stuff and I turned it over to, I turned it over to my lawyer.

Mr. CHERTOFF. But here is the problem, Mr. Ickes, Mr. Codinha was really quite specific. He was asking you specifically about notes of the Whitewater Response Team meetings. Now you have just told us that all the notes of the Whitewater Response Team meetings were discarded because they were turned into typewritten assignment lists.

Whether review means glance, survey, interpret, or examine your testimony in 1994, was that you had reviewed notes of the Whitewater Response Team meetings with your attorney. That strongly suggests, Mr. Ickes, that you had notes of those meetings in your possession at a point in time, and you could sit down with your lawyer and look at them.

Mr. ICKES. Those notes, Mr. Chertoff, are on two or three or four typewritten pages which have been turned over to this Committee.

Mr. CHERTOFF. I see the only notes then that you're referring to here are a memorandum of January 9th with assignments and the memorandum of January 10th with assignments S2888 and 2889 and S2819 and 2820, those 4 pages?

Mr. ICKES. Yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. That's it? That's all the notes you had of Whitewater Response Team meetings?

Mr. ICKES. That's correct.

Mr. CHERTOFF. When you said in your sworn deposition that you reviewed notes with your attorney, what you really meant was typed memoranda, not notes?

Mr. ICKES. Well, I didn't know that notes referred only to handwritten notes, Mr. Chertoff. You didn't make that clear that that's what you were referring to.

Mr. CHERTOFF. It was Mr. Codinha. All right, we'll resume.

The CHAIRMAN. Senator Sarbanes.

Senator SARBANES. I yield to Mr. Ben-Veniste.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. May I inquire? That was 35 minutes, 39 or 40 minutes.

The CHAIRMAN. Let me say this to you. We went about 2 minutes over, but when the witness looks for documents, we have made a practice of taking the clock off to give him an opportunity, so that's what the additional time is. We'll grant you certainly an additional 2 minutes.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. So what is the time we have?

The CHAIRMAN. You have 32 minutes.

Senator SARBANES. Mr. Chairman, I think it makes for a more orderly procedure if we just adhere to the lights. I mean, that way we won't have this kind of discussion.

The CHAIRMAN. Well, I will to this extent. Mr. Chertoff continued for approximately 2 minutes after the red light went on. That was in an attempt to finish a particular line of questioning. I think it is not realistic for us to think that we're going to ask, particularly our colleagues, Senators, to stop a line of questioning when they are about to complete it within a few minutes. So we'll adhere to the light with that exception, we'll permit both sides that latitude. But we will attempt to stick as closely as we can to the lights.

Senator SARBANES. Well, I think that process carries abuse with it. I think we really ought to just adhere to the lights. That's what the Resolution provides for. That way we have no argument, we have no difference over the amount of time and so forth.

The CHAIRMAN. Senator, if you want to take responsibility, when the light goes on, for telling those Members on your side that their time is over, but I have not been too successful in dealing with my colleagues on either side because they generally say, "Well, if I might just be permitted to finish this question." So you can attempt to do that.

Senator SARBANES. Well, we have done that.

The CHAIRMAN. Yes, we have. We are really wasting a lot of time right now, and it's on your time, but I am going to attempt to hold us as closely as we can to the light, recognizing, as I have indicated, what I believe makes for an orderly hearing and also comity for both sides.

Senator SARBANES. Speaking of comity, we'll take it off our time, Mr. Chairman, this discussion.

The CHAIRMAN. OK. I thank my friend.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Mr. Ickes, let me start with, I guess a minor point, which is whether, as a normal practice, you keep every scrap of paper that you have written during the time that you have been at the White House?

Mr. ICKES. I don't think there was enough room to keep every scrap of paper that one generates at the White House, Mr. Ben-Veniste.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. So you've indicated that with respect to notes that were transcribed from handwriting, and I happen to have been among those that have tried to decipher your handwriting, and I applaud the occasions when those notes were transcribed—

Mr. ICKES. Good luck.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. —that once they were reduced to typewritten form, you saw no need to keep as historical relics the handwritten notes from which the typewritten pages were made?

Mr. ICKES. I mean, once the typewritten—I cross-checked them against my notes. They were accurate. And I don't know if they were thrown away or not but there was no need for them.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. When you refer to notes in general, does that encompass both handwritten and typed notes?

Mr. ICKES. Certainly in my mind it does.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. OK. Let me get first to the question of process. If I understand your testimony heretofore correctly, there were notes which were turned over to White House Counsel's Office that were for the reasons set forth in Ms. Sherburne's letter to this Committee, not produced in a timely fashion. Is that correct?

Mr. ICKES. Yes.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Similarly, with respect to other notes which have been produced recently by you, those additional notes were in your possession, but through inadvertence were not turned over?

Mr. ICKES. They were, Mr. Ben-Veniste. If I may be permitted to give you a short explanation? When Mr. Fiske's subpoena was served on the White House, I reviewed, I went through all of my files, and as I recall I was overly inclusive in giving documents to White House Counsel and to my own counsel, to let them make a decision as to whether or not a particular document was responsive to the so-called Fiske subpoena.

I was under a misimpression, as the year wore on, that I had turned over all of my documents relating to Whitewater to them for review. It turns out that the documents that had been delivered to this Committee, I guess yesterday or day before yesterday, there were a bunch of those documents, I think 114 pages or so, of which 54 pages or so had already been turned over by other means to this Committee. But none of those documents, with the exception of the handwritten notes of Mrs. Clinton's press conference in April, none of those documents were dated after the Fiske subpoena.

It was inadvertent on my part. There was no attempt whatsoever to hide anything, to keep anything back from this Committee. I think if you look at the substance of those documents, there's nothing of critical importance in there. Obviously, this Committee has a right to have those documents. I made a mistake and I apologize to the Committee for that. But the fact of the matter is this White House has made every attempt exceeded by no White House in the history of the Republic to cooperate with this Committee, with House Committees, with independent prosecutors. We have turned over 14,000 some pages of documents I'm told to this Committee alone. We've turned over 50,000 to 60,000 documents in total to various committees and the Independent Counsel. We are not hiding anything.

This President made a decision early on to have as open and as much cooperation as possible, and I think it is fair to say, and that the historical record will show that there has not been a White House that has been more cooperative than this White House.

I would just refer you, Mr. Ben-Veniste, to an article written on Sunday, January 28, 1986, by Beth Nolan and John Podesta, in which a diary of then-President Bush was sought, and it was requested, apparently it was included in the framework of a request that was issued in 1987, was found in September 1992, but was not turned over to the appropriate Independent Counsel until December 1992. That's approximately——

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Well, I think we have already reviewed that article and that fact situation, so let me focus really on the situation, if I may, before us today, Mr. Ickes.

With respect to the production of documents the day before yesterday, that was a compendium of documents which had been in part turned over to the White House Counsel's Office?

Mr. ICKES. Yes.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. And if I understand your testimony correctly, the balance of the relevant documents, you were under the impression, had already been turned over and when an additional scrub down of all documents was again requested, it was determined by comparing the documents in your possession to what had been turned over by White House Counsel's Office, that there were additional documents that had not, up to that point, been turned over from your files. Is that correct?

Mr. ICKES. That is correct. I was under a mistaken impression, and I apologize to this Committee, that I had turned those documents over. But when I went back through, I pulled all of my files, I think it was last Thursday, I left them in my office because I was leaving on a trip with the President, and I had Ms. Sherburne, I informed Ms. Sherburne and my own attorneys to go through all of my files to see if there was anything in there that was responsive that had not been turned over.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Now, I think it is the appropriate business of the Committee, and I will attempt to do that, to review the actual documents. Let's look at them, see what's in them, and receive your explanation, to the best of your recollection, as to what occurred at the time. And then we can all make a determination as to the relative importance of this material to the matters under which we are charged with investigating. So let's turn to your notes of January 16, 1994, if I may.

Mr. ICKES. That starts with S20790, Mr. Ben-Veniste?

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Yes.

Mr. ICKES. OK, I have those.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. That was a meeting which took place outside of the White House?

Mr. ICKES. That's correct. It took place at Vernon Jordan's home.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. The persons who participated in that meeting?

Mr. ICKES. I can only tell you what my notes show. I think they are fairly complete. There was Mr. Jordan, Mr. Kendall, Susan Thomases, Kirk O'Donnell, who is a partner in Mr. Jordan's firm, myself, Maggie Williams, George Stephanopoulos, and Pat Griffin. There may well have been others, but I can only recall what I have on my notes, Mr. Ben-Veniste.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. All right. Now will you go through the notes and translate them for us, if you will, and add your recollections as you go through them as to what the substance of that meeting entailed?

Mr. ICKES. Basically the purpose of that meeting was to get——

First of all, I would like to point out that the President, by that time, by the 16th of January, it's my recollection that he had already asked his Attorney General to appoint a Special Counsel.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. I believe there is a letter reflecting that decision as having been made as of that date.

Mr. ICKES. Basically the purpose of that meeting as I recall, Mr. Ben-Veniste, I think it was instigated by me, was to get, review the whole situation. We were under a great deal of questioning by the press during that period of time.

The President had called for a Special Counsel, and it was to get the views of some people who were not involved in the day to day who might have a broader perspective on it, such as Mr. Jordan, Mr. O'Donnell, Mr. Kendall, Ms. Thomases, and others, to see what their perspective of the various situations were and that was, as you can see from these notes, we went down and discussed a variety of different issues.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. To perhaps refresh your recollection and to ensure that the record is accurate on this point, we have a letter which is dated January 12, 1994, from Mr. Nussbaum to Attorney General Reno, requesting the appointment of a Special Counsel 4 days before this meeting took place. So please go on.

Mr. ICKES. How do you want me to proceed? You want me to just go down through the notes?

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Why don't you go through the notes and indicate, since the notes are, of course, not complete sentences and to some extent difficult to read, what they indicate and what you recall of the substance of the conversation.

Mr. ICKES. I will tell you at this point, Mr. Ben-Veniste, I do not recall much other than what the notes themselves indicate. I do recall the nature and the substance and the purpose of the meeting. The specific conversations I am basically going to be limited to my notes.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Well, it is my intention that for the purposes of the substance of this Committee's investigation, what we're all about, rather than spend all our time on the question of how the notes were discovered, the reasons which you have indicated as to why they were not produced earlier, we have that.

Now, I think the important thing is to see what is in the notes, look at that very carefully, and get your best recollection about those events.

Mr. ICKES. Well, one issue that was being discussed at that time was the release of documents. And as you recall, there had been a subpoena that had been negotiated between Mr. Kendall and the Department of Justice in late December of the preceding year, and I think the notes say here, "release of documents: on the advice of counsel; and totally . . ." it probably should read "total" but "totally cooperation." And I take that to mean that there was, that the discussion there was that there should be complete and total cooperation as had been promised by the President with respect to the release of documents.

The next item, Number 2, "Statute of limitations." I am just reading now so that you all can get a sense of what is said here, "no allegation that the Clintons have broken any law and therefore"—obviously I trailed off and started taking a new note—"we don't know what civil refers to, always exception for found." I think that meant "fraud." And my understanding was, although I'm no expert in this area of law, that notwithstanding the statute of limitations, which had been discussed extensively by Members of the Senate up here at that time, that there was an exception for fraud. Again, I can't go beyond the discussion here. I don't have a specific recollection.

Number 3, "We should spend." I think as I read my handwriting, it should be "We should speak." And the question there is who should speak and in what terms. A lot of people at the White House were talking about Whitewater at that time. Some were informed, some were misinformed. Quite frankly, we were getting hammered by the press because of misinformation, not wittingly but inadvertently was coming out of the White House, and one thing we wanted to do was to limit the number of people who were speaking about Whitewater so that, and when I use Whitewater, I use that in a broad generic sense, so that accurate information would be coming out from the White House.

And so I think the reference to "shut down White House in answering" basically meant restricting the number of people who were responding to the press regarding these matters. "Op ed. OK, no problem legally." I think that there was a discussion about whether an op ed piece could be done and should be done, and whether it was a problem, and the answer there I think is that there was no problem legally.

Now, I am at somewhat a disadvantage, Mr. Ben-Veniste, because I have an unredacted portion.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. We've reviewed all of the——

Mr. ICKES. What is the next item that you want me to refer to?

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. We should provide you with the same document that we have.

Mr. ICKES. You may have. I have not looked through. Bear with me for one moment.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Might I say, Mr. Chairman, and I note Senator Hatch has been very interested in this issue as well, that we have reviewed all the redacted portions in this document, and we have concluded that the redactions are appropriately made.

Mr. ICKES. I now have a redacted document in front of me. The next item——

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. And when I say we, I mean, Minority staff, Mr. Chairman.

Mr. ICKES. The next item that I have on the redacted portion says, Number 4, "Congress." The rest of it's redacted, is my understanding.

Going to the next page at the top, it says, "Consensus that White House stop talking, refer everything to Special Counsel. Don't refer to DK." I think the initials DK refer to David Kendall. And again I think there was consensus not necessarily adhered to but that the White House stop talking as much as it was and especially through as many voices as it was and that was something that we were attempting to do.

And I think, as I recall, there was discussion just about referring questions as much as possible to the then-Special Counsel who had been called for, I think had not yet been appointed, but had been called for.

The next item is "DK facts." I think that that is a reference, as I recall, to David Kendall, who basically gave a recitation of pertinent facts.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. We have received in this Committee, Mr. Kendall's summary and his chronology of the Whitewater facts, and this seems to be a shortened version of that. There is nothing that I see remarkable in that recitation. If I am incorrect, I know Mr. Chertoff will correct me. Let's turn to the next portion.

Mr. ICKES. Going on then, Mr. Ben-Veniste, to the next page, again I think that this is basically a continuation of the recitation of facts that Mr. Kendall gave at that meeting. I will go down them if you want, but again.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. With respect to the Rose Law Firm, would you read your notes there? Right. This is on S20792.

Mr. ICKES. Wait just a moment. OK, you are now on the next page?

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Right.

Mr. ICKES. I'm sorry. "Rose Law Firm? 1985 retain (15 months retainer), try to get Arkansas Security Commissioner to approve issuance of preferred stock." I think that refers to the representation that they were giving, making before Ms. Schaffer.

Next line or next block is "to permit Madison Guaranty to act as security. Bassett approved but only if it improved its capital account." Again, I can't go much beyond that, but my understanding is, based on what I've heard and what I've learned, that the Rose Law Firm was representing Madison Guaranty before Ms. Bassett, who was the Securities Commissioner at that time.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. We are still in the recitation of facts given by Mr. Kendall at this point?

Mr. ICKES. That I think is fair. It does not indicate that, but I think it's fair to say that. I don't want to say that absolutely but it appears to be, Mr. Ben-Veniste.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. OK. Now pick up, if you will, on the next page.

Mr. ICKES. And the first line of that is what? By 1992, all White House?

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Right.

Mr. ICKES. OK. Do you want me just to continue reading that?

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Yes.

Mr. ICKES. Yes. "By 1992, all White"—presumably referring to Whitewater—"loans paid off. Losses not taken—primarily to avoid possible IRS audit during 1992 campaign." Next line is "Three years to amend returns maybe they will claim it." Next line is "They did take some interest deductions during prior years."

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Do you recall anything in addition to your notes with respect to that discussion?

Mr. ICKES. I do not. I'm not sure whether that is part of a Kendall recitation or whether that was part of the discussion.

It strikes me, as I look at this now, especially based on the testimony last summer, that this was probably in error because I think that the losses they were talking about were to be taken in 1993. But again my notes show what they show. This may well have been an allegation that people were talking about. I just have no recollection of how it came up.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Then there is a circle with some handwriting. What does that say?

Mr. ICKES. It says, "political argument." That is next to the phrase, "They did take some interest deductions during prior years." I can't, I literally cannot recall what that means. The notes speak for themselves. I'm afraid I can't expand on it, Mr. Ben-Veniste.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. OK. Then go on.

Mr. ICKES. Item Number 3, "Legal costs of BC/HRC." Referring to the President and to Mrs. Clinton. "VJ," referring to Mr. Jordan, "do nothing now. HI," referring to myself, "urged that the right people get handle and answer on this." And then over to the right hand side, the block says, "Public will resent it if HRC abandons health care and focuses on"—sentence trails off.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Do you have a recollection of what that was about?

Mr. ICKES. I think focusing on Whitewater and what was going on in connection with Whitewater. She was obviously, a lot of questions were being asked about her and especially the Rose Law Firm representation of Madison Guaranty at that time, as I recall.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Continue on, please.

Mr. ICKES. Item Number 4, "HRC," referring again to Mrs. Clinton, "as lawyer on this. She can't be diverted from health care otherwise press/public will think White," meaning Whitewater, "is a big issue if she isn't involved with health." Kirk O'Donnell, that's "KOD," I'm sure refers to Mr. O'Donnell, "feels strongly about this."

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. And then beyond that?

Mr. ICKES. Number 5, "Betsey Wright. Pat G," I think referring to Pat Griffin, "A. Wexler," I assume refers to Anne Wexler. It was my understanding that Ms. Wright was working at Ms. Wexler's firm at that time. I have no idea what that was about. All I can do is tell you what's on the notes.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Go on.

Mr. ICKES. The next one is item Number 6, which is "House Banking Committee."

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. That's redacted. Then there's 20794.

Mr. ICKES. Which I do not—wait a moment, Mr. Ben-Veniste.

Item Number 7, "Independent Counsel statute. Wait until SC," presumably referring to Special Counsel, "is appointed. Then discuss whether we want it permitted to have SC," meaning Special Counsel, "considered as IC," presumably referring to Independent Counsel, "or not." That Independent Counsel statute had been basically blocked by the Republicans, as you know, and there was a discussion whether or not it was going to be reenacted.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Go on.

Mr. ICKES. Number 8, "Reconvene this group on regular basis." Presumably referring to the group that was meeting in that room. My recollection is that it was never reconvened.

Number 9, "Op ed." Referring presumably to an op ed piece. "Maybe do this, maybe not, no strong feelings on this." Incomplete sentence. Don't know what that really refers to.

The next item, PG 10.

And then the final item is Number 11, "Calls from press. All calls to GS," referring to George Stephanopoulos, "we are moving on."

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. All right. Now that concludes the notes for that meeting. Is there anything else that you recall about the meeting that was not reflected in the notes?

Mr. ICKES. Not that I recall, Mr. Ben-Veniste.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. So this was again, if I understand your testimony, a session that involved people who were outside of the day-to-day business of the White House and this issue, to have them listen to this factual recitation and exchange some ideas about how to proceed?

Mr. ICKES. Yes. It was an attempt quite frankly to get outside perspective including people who were involved in the day to day, but also including people who were not involved in the day to day, might have a different perspective on things.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Now last week when Mr. Gearan was before us, there was an issue about discussions prior to the 12th when the President made the determination, or at least communicated the determination through counsel that a Special Counsel ought to be appointed as to the position of Attorney General Reno. And there was much discussion, it seemed like hours, over a phrase in Mr. Gearan's notes to the effect that Attorney General Reno had closed the door on the appointment of a Special Counsel. Do you recall that discussion?

Mr. ICKES. Well again, this happened well over 2 years ago. I'm not sure I recall the specific discussion. I would also point out that those are Mr. Gearan's notes, not my notes.

I do know that there was considerable discussion in the press, among other things, in early January, that the Attorney General was very reluctant to appoint a Special Counsel. And I think the understanding was based, in some part, on either her statements or the statements of her press spokesmen, that she was waiting to see if the Congress would reenact the Independent Counsel statute, so that she would not have to appoint a Special Counsel.

Apparently, she had reservations about appointing a Special Counsel and it was also my understanding that she had already appointed one or two career Federal prosecutors, one of whom, at least, was a Republican and had been a former U.S. attorney, to initiate and open an investigation into the so-called Whitewater matter.

Senator SARBANES. And there was considerable discussion and debate at the time about the appointment of a Special Counsel, was there not?

Mr. ICKES. There was considerable, Senator Sarbanes, yes.

Senator SARBANES. In fact, on January 11th, Chairman D'Amato, Senator Dole, and some other colleagues, both in the House and Senate, wrote to Attorney General Reno about this very issue. The letter starts off:

We regret that you have rejected Congressional request to appoint a Special Counsel to examine the allegations of potential misconduct that have recently surfaced concerning Madison Guaranty Savings & Loan and the Whitewater Development Corporation.

It goes on to, in effect, urge her to appoint a Special Counsel.

In fact, I think when we had Mr. Gearan here, we had quotes from Senator Dole from one of the Sunday talk shows where he had raised the point of appointing a Special Counsel. So this was a matter that was very much in the forefront of the press discussion at the time, was it not?

Mr. ICKES. There was a great deal of press inquiry about it. There was, as I recall, leading newspapers, such as The New York Times, The Wall Street Journal, The Washington Post, and others were at least questioning why Special Counsel was not appointed. In fact, I think it is fair to say that at some point during early January, those editorials were calling for the appointment of Special Counsel. And so the answer is yes. There was a great deal of discussion, Senator Sarbanes.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. And taken from the letter that Senator Sarbanes has just referred to, where it was certainly the perception of Senator Dole and Senator D'Amato and others, that Ms. Reno had rejected, by that point, calls to appoint Special Counsel. Would it not be fair to characterize her position at that point as having closed the door?

Mr. ICKES. Well, again, I don't want to characterize Mr. Gearan's notes. I think it is fair to say that based on what I knew and was reading at the time, that it was certainly my understanding that the Attorney General was reluctant, at the very least, and basically it said that she was not inclined to appoint a Special Counsel.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Now while these notes of Mr. Gearan are interesting in sort of a historical way about what the discussion was about the appointment of a Special Counsel to investigate. Indeed, we have had in this Committee since the fall of 1995, at least, and I refer to document 7301 from the Justice Department, Ms. Reno's own handwritten notes from January 1994, indicating her thinking on this. If we could turn to the second page of those notes. I believe they say:

If I appoint the person, she or he not independent, I will continue to be blamed. The DOJ has to review expenditures. It's not an Independent Counsel.

Thus, in the Whitewater case—I am going to be damned if I do and damned if I don't.

My solution—Do it the Right Way. Make sure the investigation is put in the hands of career prosecutors who are experienced, who have served under different Administrations.

To bring in a Special Prosecutor, close prosecution—

I assume that meant close the on-going prosecution by the Justice Department.

—gear up, start up is simply not in best interests of case. Disruption and delay.

I take it that those notes contemporaneously made by the Attorney General of the United States, which were prescient in the fact that after Mr. Fiske was appointed and well underway and receiving the praise of most fair-minded people about the job he was doing, he was then replaced, and the argument was made just as the Attorney General had predicted, that because she had appointed him, there was some taint associated with it.

I see my time has expired, Mr. Chairman.

Mr. ICKES. Mr. Chairman, would you indulge me in a 5-minute break?

The CHAIRMAN. Sure. We'll take a 5-minute break.

Mr. ICKES. Thank you.

[Recess.]

The CHAIRMAN. Senator Hatch.

OPENING COMMENTS OF SENATOR ORRIN G. HATCH

Senator HATCH. Thank you.

Mr. Ickes, I'd like to thank you for appearing before the Committee today. I, like many others, have been somewhat dismayed by the fact that we received even more notes from the White House late Tuesday evening. I'm not unhappy that we received the notes because they are responsive to the Special Committee's request, but I think all of us are concerned about the timing.

Next week, the Special Committee's Resolution will expire. And in light of that fact, with notes trickling out of the White House, some 2 and 2½ years late, I can see no other way than to extend the Committee's jurisdiction so it can fulfill its Constitutional duty. I think anything less than that would be a dereliction of our Constitutional duty.

We just cannot be expected to wrap up this investigation when we're still receiving, just as we did Tuesday night, important, very important information and documents from the White House. So I hope you understand that.

Today, I'd like to ask you about several meetings you attended in January 1994, in which the appointment of a Special Prosecutor or Independent Counsel was discussed. And as you are aware, Mark Gearan took extensive notes at those meetings.

Were you aware, Mr. Ickes, that Mrs. Clinton adamantly opposed the appointment of an Independent Counsel during, at, or near the time of those meetings, or even before?

Mr. ICKES. I was aware that she, as did Senator Dole, had very strong, which is already replete on the record from Mr. Gearan's testimony, had very strong reservations about the appointment of Special Counsel or Independent Counsel. Those terms were used interchangeably.

Senator HATCH. But I asked you, was she opposed to it at one time or another?

Mr. ICKES. She had very, very grave reservations, Senator.

Senator HATCH. Did you ever discuss the appointment of a Special Prosecutor or an Independent Counsel with either President or Mrs. Clinton?

Mr. ICKES. I'm sorry, I didn't hear you.

Senator HATCH. Did you ever personally discuss the appointment of a Special Prosecutor or an Independent Counsel with either the President or Mrs. Clinton?

Mr. ICKES. Yes. I had discussions with them, as did other members of the staff.

Senator HATCH. During this January 4th meeting, Mr. Gearan's notes reflect that the appointment of an Independent Counsel was debated. And at page 20566, those notes state that Mrs. Clinton entered the room and said, "Looks like a meeting I might be interested in." Now my question to you is this. Did Mrs. Clinton express concerns during that meeting that an Independent Counsel should not be appointed?

Mr. ICKES. Mrs.—as I recall—I don't know when the date of that meeting—

Senator HATCH. Well, whatever, that or near that time.

Mr. ICKES. It was in early January, Senator. As I recall, Mrs. Clinton did join one meeting in which there were a group of senior

White House people. There was a discussion about the pros and cons of appointing a Special or Independent Counsel and she had some observations on it. She had, as you know, served on the Whitewater—I'm sorry, the Watergate Committee—but she had concerns and expressed those concerns.

Senator HATCH. Did she make any particular comments regarding the appointment of a Special Prosecutor or Independent Counsel, other than expressing her concerns?

Mr. ICKES. As I recall, her concerns were: Number 1, that they, meaning she and her husband, had done nothing wrong. Number 2, there was no predicate for the appointment of an Independent or Special Counsel, and she was concerned about the fact that if mere allegations were sufficient, then you'd have Special Counsels being appointed any time somebody raised an allegation, without laying the required predicate.

Senator HATCH. Mr. Gearan's notes, as you know, suggest that such a conversation did take place. Because on page 20569 of Mr. Gearan's notes, he records that Mr. and Mrs. Clinton—the President and Mrs. Clinton were adamantly opposed to an Independent Counsel being appointed to investigate Whitewater.

During a January 7th meeting, Mr. Gearan reported that you, Mr. Ickes, said or he reported you as saying that a major problem with the Independent Counsel is that "HRC (Hillary Rodham Clinton) adamantly opposed" the appointment of a Special Prosecutor. Now that statement's recorded on page 20576 of Mr. Gearan's notes. Do you recall that?

Mr. ICKES. I don't recall the word adamant. I do recall on occasion saying, because it was well known, that Mrs. Clinton had very, very grave reservations.

Senator HATCH. Mr. Gearan's notes also record that you said that "discussion of counsel is the biggest f'ing waste of time." Apparently because the Clintons opposed the appointment. Now it seems to me that you would have made that comment only if you believed that President and Mrs. Clinton were opposed to a Special Prosecutor's appointment. At least, that's what I think is a fair interpretation if Mr. Gearan has the quote exactly right.

Mr. ICKES. Well, again, Senator, these are his notes, not mine. All I can say is that there were a number of people in the White House, including the First Lady, and I think to a lesser extent the President, who had serious questions and serious reservations about the need or necessity of appointing a Special Counsel. I think adamantly opposed is not a characterization that I would have used, but again those are Mr. Gearan's notes, not mine.

Senator HATCH. Well, see, in my opinion, the appointment of an Independent Counsel has not been a waste of time. I, myself, have problems with that through the years because I think sometimes it's over used, but in this particular case it doesn't appear that it's a waste of time.

This past Tuesday, two more indictments were issued by the Independent Counsel charging that Herbie Branscombe and Robert Hill, two bankers, were involved in illegally funneling funds through the Clinton Gubernatorial Campaign.

And as you are already aware, the Independent Counsel's investigation has led to Grand Jury indictments on at least 21 different counts against James McGregor—excuse me, James McDougal, and the Sitting Governor of Arkansas, Jim Guy Tucker.

What I find particularly disturbing, the investigation rooted out scandal within the Justice Department. The former number three official at the Justice Department, Webb Hubbell, was convicted and is now serving time in prison.

So the Independent Counsel's investigation, of course, went on to several other indictments, and it may even lead to more charges against others, so naturally these are things that I am concerned about as Chairman of the Judiciary Committee.

Let me just ask this. I am particularly concerned that attempts were made to influence the appointment of an Independent Counsel or the scope of the Independent Counsel's investigation. Now, Mr. Ickes, did you discuss with the President or Mrs. Clinton, or anyone else in the White House, that a major problem with the appointment of an Independent Counsel was that such a person could not be controlled?

Mr. ICKES. There was certainly discussion by members of the staff, some members of the staff, Bernie Nussbaum and others, that historically the scope and timing that it took Independent Counsels or Special Counsels to complete their work was extraordinarily long, and it was not unusual, in their view, for Independent Counsels to go beyond their original mandate. That's what they felt, and they expressed those views, so there certainly was discussion about historically what Independent Counsels had done, and people had different views on that.

But there is, I think the critical point to make, Senator, is that the President ultimately decided to appoint Special Counsel or asked the Attorney General to appoint Special Counsel with no restrictions whatsoever on jurisdiction or scope.

Senator HATCH. Well, again, if Mr. Gearan's notes are to be believed, and I presume that they were accurately taken at the time, his notes record that several White House officials, including you, argued that an Independent Counsel should not be sought because such a person or counsel could not be "controlled," and that word did bother me. Do you recall making any comments like that, or anybody else making comments like that at or near that period of time?

Mr. ICKES. Senator, if you would indulge me for just one moment before answering that question, which I am perfectly prepared to answer.

Senator HATCH. Sure.

Mr. ICKES. Going back to document 20569, where it says, "Discussion of counsel is the biggest f'ing waste of time."

Senator HATCH. Right.

Mr. ICKES. I think Mr. Gearan has testified, and again he took these notes, I don't have a distinct recollection of these discussions word by word, but I think that he testified not that the appointment of a Special Counsel would be a waste of a time, but that the discussion in the context of these meetings, which were formed and which were being held to try to deal with the press, to respond to the press was a waste of time, given what he viewed at least as the attitude of the President and the First Lady.

Again, if you could turn me to the page where you apparently were quoting me about Special Counsel?

Senator HATCH. It would be, I think——

Mr. ICKES. I apologize. I wasn't on the page when you were.

Senator HATCH. I think it's 20567.

Mr. ICKES. 567?

Senator HATCH. Right in the middle where it says, "Subject to no control." And then I would say 20575 where it says, "We cannot affect the scope of the prosecutor." Those are two areas that I was referring to.

Mr. ICKES. Well, again, Senator, I don't think that these notes on those 2 pages are attributable to me. There is no question that there was a broad-ranging discussion, as there should be in the nature of Special Counsels. What the history had been on them, and people, different people in the White House, different advisers, both in and outside the White House, had very different views on it.

But I think, again, there were some who were concerned that Independent Counsels, the history had been that they went beyond their mandate, took an enormous length of time, and raised those concerns when giving advice to the President. But I think what ultimately counts is what the President in fact did.

Senator HATCH. My time is up, Mr. Chairman.

The CHAIRMAN. Senator Sarbanes.

Senator SARBANES. Mr. Chairman, I'm going to yield to Senator Dodd, but before I do that, I do want to say, Senator Hatch said that the two people indicted in Arkansas in the last day or so were illegally funneling funds to the Clinton campaign. I don't think that's accurate. What they were charged with was misapplication of bank funds, making false entries in bank records, and failing to report transactions to the Internal Revenue Service. In fact, Mr. Starr's office——

Senator HATCH. What do you call that? Maybe I got it wrong but my understanding was that there was some $7,000 that they would not give to the campaign until they discussed with the Governor what they wanted to get done.

Senator SARBANES. We ought to get it accurate. Mr. Starr's office issued a news release which says, "The indictment does not assert criminal wrongdoing by Clinton."

Senator HATCH. Well, no. I didn't mean to imply that the President committed a crime.

Senator SARBANES. Well, I thought that——

Senator HATCH. I'm glad you did because if that's the way it was construed, it certainly wasn't meant that way. But I have to say that it raises some problems and it raises some worries in everybody's mind just what kind of a State do they operate down there. I mean, these hearings have just gone on and on about different things that have gone on down there that you just have to question. And who's at fault, I think, we will have to leave that up to Independent Counsel.

Senator SARBANES. I think we need to be careful with the assertions that are made here, particularly when the Independent Counsel, himself, has issued a release in which he says, "The indictment does not assert criminal wrongdoing by the President."

Senator HATCH. I want to make it clear that I did not make any assertion that the Clintons had done anything wrong. I brought it out that they were charged with illegally funneling funds through the Clinton Gubernatorial Campaign. That doesn't say anything about then-Governor Clinton, but I think that's accurate.

Senator SARBANES. Well, that's not what they were charged with, I would say to the Senator.

Senator HATCH. What? If the money didn't go to the campaign, I would like to know where it went.

Senator SARBANES. The charge was the reimbursement from the bank and the Independent Counsel has said, in his release, that he was not charging any wrongdoing by the President.

Senator Dodd.

OPENING COMMENTS OF SENATOR CHRISTOPHER J. DODD

Senator DODD. Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

First of all, let me say how much I agree with my colleague from Utah. These hearings have gone on and on and on. And hopefully that's not going to be the case interminably.

You know, Mr. Chairman, it just occurs to me and, obviously it has been stated before, but it may be helpful to reiterate it. I mean, we're looking here at a voluminous amount of documentation that's come to this Committee over these many months now. I heard the number mentioned 14,000, and I think actually the number is higher than that if you go back to other sets of hearings.

I don't recall, other than some cases where there was a legitimate Constitutional controversy over Executive Privilege, that we have had to issue any subpoenas where there's been a legitimate legal argument. As I recall, I think every single witness that has appeared before this Committee has come voluntarily, without exception.

I have been in Congress 20 years and I don't recall any Administration over the past 20 years that has complied with an investigation to the extent this Administration has.

In previous hearings, and many Members of this Committee have served on other committees, we've gone through incredible ordeals in trying to get witnesses to appear before Congressional Committees where there have been other investigations.

We also recall vividly shredding parties by Oliver North. I recall Fawn Hall stuffing documents into her boots to sneak them out of the White House. We had 18.5 minute gaps on tapes. So when we're looking at obstruction of justice issues, we have some wonderful examples to compare under previous Administrations.

Now it's regrettable that we didn't get all of these documents exactly when we wanted them, and it's a legitimate question to raise what's in these documents that we're getting? Is there anything in these documents? How they were handled, that would indicate that there was something that was being hidden? Is there some reason they weren't turned over?

While we can regret that we didn't get them all when we wanted to, we need to look at the documents themselves, in my view, and determine whether there's anything in those documents that would contradict information that we already have.

So I hope we would keep our eye on the ball here, and again I'm certain colleagues are going to raise the issue about why these weren't turned over earlier, but I think in answering that question, and examining the documentation can be of tremendous, tremendous help to us.

Now let me ask you, Mr. Ickes, if I can, some very basic questions about this issue of the documents we are getting today. Did you deliberately hide or withhold these documents in your office that we're getting?

Mr. ICKES. Absolutely not. If I had, they wouldn't have been turned over. As I explained before, I was under the mistaken impression, and I regret it and I apologize to the Committee, that I had turned all of those documents over, all of which are dated I think in January and February of 1994, to both the White House Counsel and my own counsel, and it was not until the letter came down from this Committee dated I think the 15th of February of this year, asking for my notes that my lawyer, Mr. Bennett, asked me to do a complete review of all of my files again, which I did. Then I left those files for both my lawyer and White House Counsel to look at. But there was no attempt whatsoever to keep documents from this Committee or to hide documents.

Senator DODD. Are you voluntarily appearing here this morning?

Mr. ICKES. I am. I think I am.

Senator DODD. Well, voluntarily I meant in terms of, obviously, not under subpoena.

To the best of your knowledge—you have been over these documents over the last several days, I presume, in preparation for this hearing this morning; is that true?

Mr. ICKES. I have reviewed the documents with my lawyers, yes.

Senator DODD. Is there anything that you have seen in these documents that contradicts earlier statements or earlier evidence that this Committee has received?

Mr. ICKES. Not to my knowledge.

Senator DODD. Anything you saw in them, and you went, holy cow, boy, this is really going to hurt us?

Mr. ICKES. No, not to my knowledge. I mean, obviously people can put different interpretations and different glosses on words, but to my knowledge and from my viewpoint, the answer is no, Senator.

Senator DODD. Well, I know we play gotcha up here a lot with witnesses to try and snare people, but I think we needed to get to the bottom line. Again, I'll emphasize the point. I regret deeply we didn't have all these documents at the time we did, because obviously that raises the issue, why didn't you get them, what are you hiding, what are you trying to keep from the Committee.

I think it's legitimate to raise that issue, but it's just as important that Members of this Committee, in my view, review those documents and determine whether there's anything in there that would lend credence to the argument that matters are being intentionally withheld, if there's nothing in those documents that contradict what this Committee's already been informed of, in fact, things that may corroborate what the Committee already knows, then I think you have to look at the testimony about why the documents were not forthcoming or we didn't get them as early as we did in that light. I just want to emphasize that bottom-line point.

Now a lot has been made of the Mark Gearan memos, and we have been over them, and I think you made the point yourself, but I want to emphasize it again. Maybe, Mr. Chairman, we might put up on whatever you call this thing, this television screen——

The CHAIRMAN. The Elmo.

Senator DODD. Elmo, the document we were discussing, it's the Gearan document and I don't have the number in front of me. It says, "Discussion of counsel is the biggest waste of time." I just want to emphasize, I think we went over this with Mr. Gearan. It was the discussion of the counsel that was a waste of time.

I made the point last week, and I will emphasize it here again today, I can understand why people not from Washington might be a bit confused about why people may be discussing their concerns about whether there's going to be an Independent Counsel named.

But for the life of me, I don't understand why anybody on this Committee is shocked that people may be discussing what may happen if an Independent Counsel is named. I mean, this is not great news normally. When people in public life find out that there may be an Independent Counsel named, you normally would have a good discussion in your office, I presume, with your staff about the implications of that.

So apparently at this point here, the discussion of the Counsel, some issues have been resolved and that's why it was a waste of time. Is that correct? Is that your recollection?

Mr. ICKES. Well, again, Senator, I didn't take these notes, but I think in the context of this meeting that the President and others were discussing this with their top staff, the business of this working group, for lack of a better phrase, was to gather information so that we could respond to the press. And it was my view that overly extended discussions about Special Counsel and whether or not they should be appointed was a waste of time in that group, not that Special Counsel would be a waste of time.

Senator DODD. I thank you, Mr. Ickes.

I'll just turn back the balance of my time.

The CHAIRMAN. Thank you, Senator.

I'm just going to make an observation before I recognize Senator Faircloth. I don't think it's unreasonable. As a matter of fact, I think given the manner in which some of these documents have been produced, we're not just talking about notes. I'm talking about the last ones we got from Mr. Ickes just 2 nights ago.

We're talking about memos, we're talking about assignments. It is inconceivable to me that these materials were not furnished sooner and that there would be any reason to question the appropriateness of our response when we requested these materials in October. It raises reasonable questions. When notes are just submitted that cover two meetings, and we know that there were a series of meetings over 2 weeks in which tasks were given, and the witness himself was kind of the manager of this group, I question whether we've received all the notes at the present time.

I think it goes to concerns that Mr. Chertoff raised initially. I find it very troubling because this has not happened only once. Again, we're not talking about lay people, we're talking about lawyers, we're talking about serious matters not inconsequential ones. These materials should have been turned over.

Another point is whether the notes that were turned over were sanitized? Are these all the notes? Now I don't understand how you have notes on two dates but you don't have notes on the other dates. It raises questions.

Senator DODD. Mr. Chairman, I just want to make the observation, I say raising the question I think is legitimate. I think you have the right to raise the question, but I also think in the context of raising the question, after 2 years of these hearings going on, that we have not had any real, except on a Constitutional issue, every witness has appeared voluntarily, thousands of documents turned over. I think we ought to put it in that context. You and I recall certainly Administrations where every single document was a fight. That hasn't been the case here.

So, again, I think you're absolutely correct in raising the question to Mr. Ickes and Mr. Gearan, why didn't we get these documents earlier? What happened that we didn't get them? I agree with you in raising the question. But I think we also then have to answer the question when we look what's in the memos in the context of what we already know. If there's contradiction in those memos, then your argument or the supposition that there may have been something going on here has credence. If it doesn't, then I think this Committee has an obligation to point out as well that while we're disappointed we didn't get the documents, that certainly there's nothing in here that contradicts what we already know.

That's my point and I understand your point. Raising it is legitimate, but we also have an obligation to try and answer that question here as the bottom line issue.

The CHAIRMAN. Well, that's what we are going to attempt to do, and I appreciate the Senator's observation.

Senator Faircloth.

OPENING COMMENTS OF SENATOR LAUCH FAIRCLOTH

Senator FAIRCLOTH. Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

Mr. Ickes, did you see The New York Times editorial of December 20th that President Clinton had a handwritten note on that said, "Bassett did a good job in campaign on this—can she now?" Have you seen that?

Mr. ICKES. I have seen it today, Senator. It was provided in the documents that were given to me presumably by the Committee.

Senator FAIRCLOTH. You had not seen it before?

Mr. ICKES. I can't say, as a fact, that I have seen it before. I may well have. I probably did, but I can't recall when or where.

Senator FAIRCLOTH. What discussions were held in the White House in regard to Ms. Schaffer's story? The President said she did a good job. Would you tell me what discussions you had or might have had in regard to Ms. Schaffer's story? He says she did a good job in the campaign, can she now? In other words, she told a good story then, can she still tell it? What conversations did you have?

Mr. ICKES. Well, there were conversations about Ms. Schaffer. Mr. Gearan's notes relate those, among others. I don't recall having many conversations with the President about Ms. Schaffer. She had, I think, given an interview or documents to a New York Times reporter early in 1992. There were questions here in this New York Times editorial about whether she had acted in a fair and impartial way. I gather this is the issue they were raising with respect to some of the decisions that she made with respect to Madison Guaranty.

Senator FAIRCLOTH. Let me ask you. Mr. Gearan's notes on January 7th at the Whitewater group meeting at the White House, you stated, "Beverly Bassett is so f---ing important, if we f--- this up, we're done." Well, just to stop right there, what do you mean, we're done? What does that mean? The Clinton Administration's done? What do you mean, we're done.

Mr. ICKES. What page are you on, Senator?

Senator FAIRCLOTH. What page am I on? Page 576.

Mr. ICKES. Well, again, Senator, these are Mr. Gearan's notes, not mine. But Ms. Schaffer was obviously, as indicated by this editorial that you have referred to, and subsequent articles and editorials, as I recall during that time, her rulings and decisions with respect to Madison Guaranty had been drawn into serious question by members of the press and others.

There was concern, I think, one, as to what the facts and circumstances were. I mean, we were up here in Washington, we were not down in Arkansas and there was a basic concern to make sure that the information that we were giving out at the White House in connection with Beverly Bassett Schaffer, as well as other items and matters that we were being questioned about, was true and accurate. We wanted to find out what the facts and circumstances were so that we could give out full and complete information.

Senator FAIRCLOTH. All right. But then you say, "Let's not talk it to death, let's just get it done." Then you say, "We can't send PB, BL, MW, it will come out." What will come out?

Mr. ICKES. I think the reference there is that those individuals were closely connected with the White House. PB, I think refers to Paul Begala. MW refers to Michael Waldman.

Senator FAIRCLOTH. Well, whoever they were, what's going to come out? What were you hiding? If there's something's going to come out, you had to have hidden something to begin with.

Mr. ICKES. No, it was not hiding, Senator. What I was concerned about there was the suggestion by some that people, someone from the White House go down and talk to Ms. Schaffer directly to get as much information about the facts and circumstances involved in her relationship with Madison Guaranty, both before, when she was representing it, as well as when she was the Securities Commissioner. And it was my view that while there was nothing wrong with doing that, that it would come out and it would be used for highly-partisan purposes.

Senator FAIRCLOTH. All right. You were certainly aware that Donald Mackay from the Attorney General's Office was already in Little Rock and was interviewing and had interviewed Ms. Bassett?

Mr. ICKES. I am not sure that I was aware of that at that time, Senator.

Senator FAIRCLOTH. Would you have sent PB, BL, whoever you might send, had you been aware that Mr. Mackay was down there from the U.S. Attorney's Office?

Mr. ICKES. It was my recommendation that nobody be sent, Senator.

Senator FAIRCLOTH. That nobody be sent?

Mr. ICKES. That was my recommendation.

Senator FAIRCLOTH. "Let's not talk it to death, let's get it done." What did that mean?

Mr. ICKES. My view was, Senator, that we should not send people who were connected with the White House to talk to Ms. Schaffer. As far as I know, no one was sent from the White House to talk to Ms. Schaffer.

Senator FAIRCLOTH. How about, you said there was a list of people we could send. You said, Tisdale, Skip, whoever Skip is, WH and PB.

Mr. ICKES. Again, I am not sure that I said those names. I think that those names may well have been suggested by others.

Senator FAIRCLOTH. Well, Mr. Gearan said you did. Who is Skip?

Mr. ICKES. Skip Rutherford is someone who resides in Arkansas, has known the President, First Lady, and Mr. McLarty for a number of years, and was assisting Mr. McLarty at that time on an ad hoc basis.

Senator FAIRCLOTH. In other words, you could send these people and they wouldn't get caught? It will not come out if we send Skip or Tisdale or these other people. You said we can't send PB, BL, and these other people, it will come out. But then we get it, make sure, then you say item by item make sure her story is correct. And then you suggest sending these other people, Tisdale, Skip, and PB, so that it won't come out.

Mr. ICKES. I don't, I don't think, Senator, that that was necessarily my suggestion. I think they may have been names—this was notes of a discussion going back and forth. It is not at all clear that I suggested that, given the fact that I was recommending against sending people down. I suggest that I was probably not in favor of sending anyone.

Senator FAIRCLOTH. You knew Donald Mackay was down there at the time from the Justice Department?

Mr. ICKES. I am not going to say that as a fact. I may well have been aware of it.

Senator FAIRCLOTH. I have listened to you, Mr. Ickes, be questioned by the attorneys. I have heard the testimony here as we dig and probe. I'm old enough to remember when your father went to the Interior as Secretary. He took the most scandal-ridden Department of Government from the Teapot Dome and he straightened it out. Do you remember what his nickname was? I know you were a young boy when he died, but do you remember, you have read, I am sure, in the history of your father, do you remember what his nickname was?

Mr. ICKES. Well, he had a lot of them, some of them probably not repeatable here, but the one you're referring to—

Senator FAIRCLOTH. No, you are dodging the issue. They are all repeatable. He was known as Honest Harold because he—

Mr. ICKES. He was also known as the old curmudgeon.

Senator FAIRCLOTH. But Honest Harold was what he was known as. He spent $6 billion of PWA money without a hint of a scandal.

Let me ask you a question, and I don't want a speech. If God would have granted him to have been in that room, what would he have said to you? Boy, you are doing a good job, or would he have said, you are in the wrong crowd, get out of here? And I don't want a speech.

Mr. ICKES. Do you want an answer, Senator?

Senator FAIRCLOTH. Yes.

Mr. ICKES. I think he would have approved of what I was doing because we were doing nothing wrong, and have done nothing wrong, Senator.

Senator FAIRCLOTH. I don't have any further questions.

The CHAIRMAN. Mr. Chertoff, the remaining time.

Mr. CHERTOFF. I just want to focus, Mr. Ickes, on this issue concerning discussions around the Independent Counsel. Am I correct that Mr. Kendall was involved in discussions with the White House about the appointment of the Independent Counsel?

Mr. ICKES. He was.

Mr. CHERTOFF. That the President's private attorney was in contact with you about the wisdom of appointing an Independent Counsel?

Mr. ICKES. There were discussions.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Did Mr. Kendall actually draft the letter that Mr. Nussbaum sent to the Attorney General?

Mr. ICKES. I don't know that as a fact. He may well have.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Let's establish it as a fact. Let's go to your production of documents, S20800, I'm sorry, 801.

Mr. ICKES. I am sorry. Bear with me one moment, because the documents that were given to me were not in order. You are looking for?

Mr. CHERTOFF. I'm looking for the draft letter to Janet Reno. It's attached to a sheet of paper which says, "Should an Independent Counsel be requested?"

Mr. ICKES. I have it.

Mr. CHERTOFF. At the top page of that memo, it says 1/12/94. Are these arguments of pro and con Independent Counsel arguments given to you by David Kendall?

Mr. ICKES. I simply don't know. That is my handwriting. Whether they were conveyed to me by Kendall or whether that is an indication that they should have been given to Kendall, I simply don't know.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. You have the drafts attached, 20801.

The CHAIRMAN. The examination of this issue is going to take a little time. The Minority has noted that the red light is on. We are going to come back to it.

Senator Sarbanes.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Are we going to expand our Resolution to include Teapot Dome?

[Laughter.]

I think we could find something.

Senator DODD. I was being facetious, Mr. Chairman.

The CHAIRMAN. I could understand that. We need a little humor. And I think—

Senator DODD. We can move out Teapot Dome, you think.

The CHAIRMAN. Possibly. But we could expand it. I don't think we've been very expansive in terms of what we've been trying to do. We're going to continue.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Mr. Ickes, let me direct your attention to the areas that the Senator from North Carolina raised with you regarding Beverly Bassett Schaffer. Let's review where that matter stood at the point that you considered it in January 1994. At that time, is it correct that there were allegations that had resurfaced in the press which had been raised previously during the 1992 Primary Campaign regarding actions that Ms. Bassett Schaffer took back in the 1980's regarding Madison Guaranty Savings & Loan?

Mr. ICKES. Yes.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. During the 1992 campaign, is it not correct, Mr. Ickes, that Beverly Bassett Schaffer issued statements which were consistent with the proposition that she had done nothing wrong with respect to the matters that were brought to her attention for regulatory consideration regarding Madison Guaranty Savings & Loan?

Mr. ICKES. That she had issued statements in 1992?

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Yes.

Mr. ICKES. That is my recollection. I can't cite you chapter and verse, but it's certainly my recollection that she did.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Indeed, she has testified here, and everyone in her department at the time has testified here in open hearings under oath. We have reviewed all the correspondence. We have reviewed the Rose Law Firm legal file regarding the actions that were taken vis-à-vis Madison Guaranty and the Arkansas Securities Department.

The conclusion of which, that indeed nothing untoward occurred. She took no improper action. The Federal Home Loan Bank Board regulators charged with supervising Madison have so stated under oath. No one has come here to testify that Ms. Schaffer did anything wrong back in the 1980's vis-à-vis Madison Guaranty, or for that matter, anything else.

Now having that in mind, we forward slightly in time to 1994. The issue again is raised in the media. You are sitting in a group considering what to do. The President has looked at a New York Times editorial, and has made a note to the effect that Ms. Bassett has handled this matter very well previously, and she'd do it again. So now the issue is, not can we somehow get to Ms. Bassett to get her to tell a story that we like? The question is, in view of the fact that she has been surrounded by the national media, has in her words been stalked and interfered with, can we encourage her to once again come forward to relate the truth as she knows it, wasn't that the objective of the meeting?

Mr. ICKES. That was the primary objective, Mr. Ben-Veniste. But in addition, there were complicated areas, especially if you were in Washington dealing with Arkansas matters. We were being asked questions that we did not necessarily know the full and complete answer to.

There was some suggestion, I think in Mr. Gearan's notes, that even had independent securities lawyers take a look to see if things were all on the up and up. But basically, we wanted her to step forward and tell her story again. She had had, I think, a difficult time with the press attention, and was reluctant to do so.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. So the discussion about whether someone should be dispatched had to do with the political realities of whether the White House would be criticized if someone from the White House were dispatched to try to encourage Ms. Bassett Schaffer to again speak out on this issue?

Mr. ICKES. Exactly.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. That is the substance of the concern noted in Mr. Gearan's notes; is that correct?

Mr. ICKES. Certainly it's a concern that I had.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. The notion that Mr. Mackay, the Department of Justice career investigator who had been appointed by the Attorney General to investigate these matters, that Mr. Mackay was in Little Rock interviewing Ms. Bassett Schaffer is nowhere substantiated in the record here. There's no indication that that was a matter of interest to Mr. Mackay. I believe the opposite was true. Mr. Mackay was looking into issues relating to David Hale and his prosecution for defrauding the Small Business Administration, and was also looking into the criminal referrals made by the RTC regarding Madison Guaranty Savings & Loan.

So the issues relating to the Arkansas Securities Department, to my knowledge, were not under review by Mr. Mackay in any way, shape or form at that point. But even if they had been, there would be nothing improper in encouraging Ms. Bassett Schaffer to come forward on the public record or elsewhere, and tell the truth as she knew it.

Now when you talk about an item-by-item review, I take it the White House under these circumstances, and those involved in this discussion, were not content merely with having Ms. Bassett Schaffer review the facts as she knew them, but that you would independently seek to get some expert opinion on Arkansas securities law, and the state of affairs regarding Federal Home Loan Bank regulation, what was going on in the country and so forth back in the mid-1980's; is that correct?

Mr. ICKES. That is correct. We were being asked any number of questions, many of which we could not answer or verify, as Mr. Gearan has stated. He was the Communication Director at that time. He was very concerned, as we all were, about the credibility of the White House. And misstatements of fact can be blown way out of proportion. But the fact is, we had an obligation to try to get as much accurate information as we could.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. In addition to what has been marked S 1139 et seq. which is not before you, I'm sure, but is a memo from Ms. Bassett Schaffer regarding Madison Guaranty Savings & Loan, and deals with a very detailed 14-page chronology of events, we have also been supplied with S 20589 which appears to be a January 11, 1994 memo. I wonder whether that could be provided to Mr. Ickes from Jake Sewirt, if I'm pronouncing his name correctly?

Mr. ICKES. You are.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. The subject being preferred stock.

Mr. ICKES. I have the document.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Is it correct that this 2-page document which details a number of issues relating clearly to the appropriateness of Ms. Bassett Schaffer's decisions, and what was going on in the rest of the country, and what was going on with the regulators back in the mid-1980's, that this was in response to the suggestion growing out of the Whitewater Response Team that an independent review be made of the appropriateness of the actions taken by the Arkansas Securities Department, the law involved, and what was going on both in Arkansas and throughout the country, contemporaneous with Ms. Bassett Schaffer's actions?

Mr. ICKES. That's correct, Mr. Ben-Veniste.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. And the conclusion was, in addition to the fact that the issuance of preferred stock was something which was being applauded by Federal regulators as a way to increase the capital equity of savings and loans throughout the United States, that it appeared that Ms. Bassett Schaffer's conditional agreement in theory to the issuance of preferred stock was, in fact, as a practical matter, never acted upon with regard to Madison Guaranty Savings & Loan because she had set a precondition regarding the financial stability of the savings and loan, which that thrift was never able to comply with?

Mr. ICKES. That's my understanding.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Therefore, both with respect to the issue of getting Ms. Bassett Schaffer to come forward again, tell the truth as she knew it, and to do the comparative analysis and the legal analysis, which in turn resulted in corroboration of the appropriateness of Ms. Bassett's actions, all of those things you viewed as correct and appropriate things for the White House to do, given the press attention that had refocused on this matter?

Mr. ICKES. Precisely. I think the people here can't appreciate the amount of press attention that was being focused on this whole issue, and in particular Ms. Schaffer dealing with an issue that was in Arkansas, dealing with areas of law that we did not have any access to.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. I see my time has expired, Mr. Chairman.

The CHAIRMAN. Senator Mack.

OPENING COMMENTS OF SENATOR CONNIE MACK

Senator MACK. Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

I'm going to start in an area that I initially had not intended to, but there were some comments made that raised this concern. It has to do with Mr. Mackay being in Arkansas. You all were aware that he was in Arkansas?

Mr. ICKES. I can't say as a fact, Senator, that I was aware at that time. I undoubtedly was.

Senator MACK. Help me a little bit more with that. You can't say as a fact. Was there any discussion about the fact that he might have been in Arkansas at this time?

Mr. ICKES. There may well have been. As I sit here today remembering back well over 2 years ago, I can't say as a fact there was discussion. It would not surprise me if there were.

Senator MACK. If it had been known that Mr. Mackay was there, I would assume you all would have understood he was there because of the nine criminal referrals?

Mr. ICKES. I'm not prepared to assume anything on that. I'm not sure that the delineation of what he was looking at was known or talked about at any great length in the White House. Again, I can't recall as a fact any of those circumstances, Senator.

Senator MACK. The reason I raise this, frankly, is that I was trying to make some sense. And again, I realize that these are not your notes. But if you disagree with the characterization that Mr. Gearan has put on your comments—I'm thinking particularly of, "Beverly Bassett is so f---ing important, if we f--- this up, we're done." I'm trying to figure out—I gather that was said with some passion, apparently made some kind of impression on Mr. Gearan.

Let me just lay out where I was going with that. If you all knew that Mackay was down there investigating Madison, it seems to me the contact with Schaffer becomes very significant. I hate to say this again, but being a banker, I don't know what is permitted. But I suspect that there is something wrong with contacting an individual who is a witness or a potential witness in an investigation, and you all have expressed deep concern for making a direct contact that's connected to the White House. In fact, I think you went on to say that you were not in favor of sending anyone. Let me ask you this question. Were you in favor of making any contact at all?

Mr. ICKES. As best I recall, I think my view was that we should not try to make contact. But again, Senator, I don't think there is anything illegal about making a contact. My concern was perception, and how it might be used later on.

Senator MACK. Did Mr. Waldman just make a contact on his own, then?

Mr. ICKES. I'm not sure that he made a contact.

Senator MACK. What about Rutherford?

Mr. ICKES. I am not sure he made a contact. But again, Mr. Rutherford—

Senator MACK. According to Ms. Schaffer, there were contacts from Rutherford, Lindsey, and Tisdale. So there were contacts. At least that's what she indicated.

Mr. ICKES. I was unaware of those. Again, Rutherford and Tisdale lived in Arkansas. They know Ms. Schaffer well. I don't know what the nature of the contacts were, what was said, et cetera.

Senator MACK. I want to start over again. You've been very careful up to now to say that you were not in favor of sending anyone down there. But you're now saying that you were not in favor of there being any contact at all?

Mr. ICKES. I think that was my general view. Quite frankly, I did not know contacts had been made. And I certainly don't know what was said in connection with those contacts.

Senator MACK. So you are saying that these contacts that were made, they were unknown to you. So you are suggesting that you are not aware of any information coming back from those people who made contacts?

Mr. ICKES. As I sit here today, I don't recall any.

Senator MACK. In your earlier testimony, I think you said something—don't recall having many conversations with the President about Ms. Schaffer. So you had some conversations with the President with respect to Ms. Schaffer?

Mr. ICKES. I am confident I had some. I can't tell you when, where, who was present. But I am confident that I did.

Senator MACK. I gather you are saying as well, though, that you made no report back to the President with respect to what Ms. Schaffer had to say after there were contacts?

Mr. ICKES. Senator, I do not recall knowing of any contacts that were made, nor do I know when they were made, nor do I know what was said.

Senator MACK. I guess I'm a little bit surprised that you wouldn't have known that Ms. Schaffer had testified to the fact that there were three contacts—Rutherford, Lindsey, and Tisdale. I assume you have been following this fairly closely?

Mr. ICKES. I follow it. I don't follow it day by day or word by word.

Senator MACK. Again, I want to try to get very specific on this. You did not direct, imply, insinuate that it would be a good idea for someone to contact someone in Arkansas, to make this contact with Ms. Schaffer?

Mr. ICKES. As I sit here today, I do not recall that. And as I think Mr. Gearan knows for a fact, I was against sending people down from the White House.

Senator MACK. I know you've said that over and over again, that you were against sending someone down. I think there are several reasons why one can kind of come up with why you wouldn't want to send someone down. But the implication clearly is there now, at least from my perspective, that since you didn't want to send somebody down where there would be this direct contact, what we do is make some behind-the-scenes contact, and I'm curious. I don't know whether it would be interesting to ask Rutherford who suggested to him that he make the contact. I think what he's going to testify to is that Waldman made that contact. It will be interesting to ask Mr. Waldman who suggested to him that that contact be made.

Mr. ICKES. Again, I don't know. You'll have to ask Mr. Rutherford or Mr. Waldman.

My concern, as I said, was a political concern. As far as I knew then and as far as I know now, there was nothing illegal or untoward in having someone talk to Beverly Bassett Schaffer and try to obtain facts and circumstances surrounding her relationship with Madison Guaranty.

Senator MACK. As I said before, attorneys can certainly send that one out. I just found it kind of interesting that, at the same time that Mr. Mackay was in Arkansas with respect to an investigation of Madison, and I suspect maybe with the criminal referrals—I'm not sure about that—that there would be these kinds of contacts taking place. That certainly raises the specter, I think, of the White House interfering with an investigation.

Mr. ICKES. Again, Senator, let me assure you that the White House had no intention, and to my knowledge has not interfered with any investigation. The fact is that Beverly Bassett Schaffer basically was saying that she had done the appropriate thing, that there had not been a conflict of interest. I think that's been borne out by several Federal and State organizations or agencies.

So again, there was nothing she did wrong. There were allegations being raised at that point, that favoritism had been shown, but I think the record shows that favoritism was not shown, and that she acted entirely properly.

Senator MACK. Again, you sent no one from the White House. You were not involved in either instructing or implying that there should be a contact. I think you testified that you were opposed to any contact, period?

Mr. ICKES. That is my recollection.

Senator MACK. Again, these are Mr. Gearan's notes. These notes reflect that he is suggesting that you said these things. "We can't send BP, BL and W. It will come out." And then, "Item-by-item, make sure her story's OK." Clearly, there was an implication there that somebody's going to be talking with her.

Mr. ICKES. I don't think there's any implication whatsoever in that regard. I mean, there's certainly an implication, but I don't agree that that is necessarily the only implication.

As Mr. Sewirt's memorandum indicates, we were trying to take steps to verify whether the nature of what she had done was out of the way or unprecedented, and I don't know where Mr. Sewirt got his information. He may well have talked to Beverly Bassett Schaffer. I doubt that he did, from the nature of this memorandum.

Senator MACK. What do you think the names "Tisdale and Lindsey's firm, Skip, question mark, White House, pass, PB friend, New York lawyer" mean? I'm under the impression that these are potential contacts, people who can contact Schaffer. What is your recollection as to what that means?

Mr. ICKES. Well, as I say, I didn't take these notes. I don't have a very distinct recollection, if any, of the particular conversation. I can only assume that those were names that were suggested around the table in connection with possibly contacting Beverly Bassett Schaffer. But as far as I know, I gather that some people did contact her. But as far as I know, as far as I can recall, I did not ask anyone to contact her. I was very concerned about the possible political fallout of it.

The CHAIRMAN. I'm going to ask you to bear with me, Senator, put the green light on and an additional 4 minutes, so we'll go to 15-minute rounds, since we're now down to three Senators. You'll have an additional 4 minutes.

Senator MACK. I don't know that I need that.

The CHAIRMAN. That's all right.

Senator MACK. I just want to continue probing on this.

The CHAIRMAN. I want you to continue.

Senator MACK. You have been fairly central. I got the impression from earlier comments that you in essence were engaged in these meetings, and your notes were reflecting giving assignments to various people.

There is the editorial that the President has made, the now-famous notation on, which indicates he thinks it's pretty important. "Bassett did a good job in campaign on this—can she now?" That implies that the President is interested in whether there can be a contact to see how she's doing.

All the evidence suggests that, in fact, the President raised the concern. You all discussed it at your meetings. There are notes that I think are clear, that at least I can suggest from those notes that there were going to be contacts. In fact, contacts were made. You at the center of all this say that you had nothing to do with the contacts. Nobody reported back to you about contacts. You know nothing of the President knowing of any response coming back from these contacts. I just frankly find that pretty hard to believe.

Mr. ICKES. Senator, all I can tell you is my best recollection. I have no recollection of urging contacts. And my recollection, I think, corroborated by Mr. Gearan's notes, that I had very grave reservations about contacts being made. I'm not saying that contacts were not made. They may well have been. But that, you'll have to ask other people about.

Senator MACK. Are you suggesting that after you had made these, I guess—I would gather, again from these notes, there were some pretty impassioned feelings expressed. Are you surprised, frankly, that there were these contacts after you were so forceful in saying that they shouldn't be done?

Mr. ICKES. I was only expressing my view as to whether or not contacts should be made, Senator.

Senator MACK. Did the rest of the group agree that there should not be contacts?

Mr. ICKES. I think there was general agreement there.

Senator MACK. Who was in disagreement?

Mr. ICKES. I don't recall. But again, Senator, I think the critical point to make is, my concern was political, not legal. There was nothing illegal, as far as I knew then, or as far as I know now, about anyone contacting Beverly Bassett Schaffer. It would have been illegal, obviously, to try to change her story, and to get her to talk about things that she didn't agree with, or to change her story in any way. The fact of the matter is, as Mr. Ben-Veniste has pointed out, her story and what she did was favorable with respect to the White House's position.

What we were concerned about was twofold: Making sure that we knew the facts and circumstances, number one; and as a result of that, you have the memo that Jake Sewirt did. And number two was to see if she would again come forward and talk to the press. She'd had a very difficult time, apparently. I wasn't there at the time, but apparently, she'd had a very difficult time with the press in early 1992.

Senator MACK. There was apparently an interview that Ms. Schaffer gave to an AP reporter, where she was asked about her interpretation of the meeting that we've been referring to. Are you familiar with that?

Mr. ICKES. I'm not. I'd like to see a copy of it.

Senator MACK. The only reason I ask it that way is because I saw you nodding. I thought maybe you were implying that you were aware of this interview.

Mr. ICKES. Let me see it first. Now what page are you looking at, Senator?

Senator MACK. I am on the second page, the third paragraph down. As per her interpretation of the meeting, Schaffer said, "It looks to me like they were trying to figure out, 'Who can talk to her? Who is her friend?' They were desperate to try to find a way of getting questions about all this, to deal with it."

Mr. ICKES. Right.

Senator MACK. I think that's an interesting observation of someone who is kind of a principal in this, that looked at these notes and kind of came to the same conclusion that I came to, but apparently totally different from your perspective, that she looked—

Mr. ICKES. Right.

Senator MACK. It also refers in here—again, were you aware of this? Had you seen this before?

Mr. ICKES. I think that I have seen this very recently. I have not seen it until the last couple of days. I've seen it in a different form.

Senator MACK. Again it surprises me in that you told me a minute ago that you were not aware of any contacts, because the next three paragraphs go down and explain the three contacts. One was by Lindsey at the Arkansas basketball game; two was by Skip Rutherford, and the other was John Tisdale. So I'm getting mixed stories from you with respect to your knowledge of these contacts.

Mr. ICKES. Now that I look at this document, I think that I have seen this in a different form, in the AP. I don't recall seeing this literally until 2 or 3 days ago, at the earliest.

Senator MACK. Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

The CHAIRMAN. Senator Sarbanes.

Senator SARBANES. Mr. Chairman, I want for just a moment to address this question of the production of documents, and some of the assertions earlier that there might be a deliberate pattern of evasion.

First of all, I was interested in the letter that Ms. Sherburne sent to the Committee when these documents were furnished, in which she says in one of the relevant paragraphs:

We regret that we failed to identify this material sooner. There was a mistaken belief that the material had been provided to the Council, and then it was discovered in the files. In order to be able to assure ourselves and the Committee that there has been no other oversight, we have undertaken to verify that all relevant documents provided to the Council's Office by White House staff beginning in March 1994, have been reviewed and produced to this Committee with responses.

Further, we are confirming the White House files of certain former White House officials have been reviewed. We are working to complete this verification quickly. And in the event we identify any other documents, we will provide them to the Committee promptly.

Now the amount of document request here, of course, has been extraordinary; and the amount of document production has been extraordinary. And in evaluating all of this, I think it's important to keep in mind—and I submit for the record an article, an op ed piece from The New York Times entitled Docudrama by Sydney Herman.

Let me just quote from that briefly. This is Mr. Herman, who's a lawyer and apparently a former partner of Kenneth Starr's, writing in The New York Times on January 27th:

Documents that are relevant to an investigation are found in an unexpected place 6 months after they were first sought. A shocking development?

Absolutely not. In most major pieces of litigation, files turn up late. One side or the other always thinks of making something of the late appearance, but these lawyers know the truth: It could just as easily happen to them.

Despite diligent searches, important papers in large organizations are always turning up after the initial and follow-up searches.

Then later, he goes on to say:

My former partner, Kenneth Starr, knows all this. As Independent Counsel in the Whitewater investigation, he will take it into account.

But the American people have no reason to know that this is a normal occurrence; it is not part of their everyday experience. Reporters really don't have any reason to know this either, or they may know and simply choose to ignore it.

When documents show up belatedly, even in private quarters, there is simply nothing unusual about it.

I put that in the record to give us some context as we try to evaluate this question of document production. I along with others would wish that all documents came in right at the beginning, immediately. But it doesn't simply work that way. The OTS itself sent us a letter about documents that turned up later, after they had been requested. And in fact, I brought that to the Committee's attention at an earlier time, and included those documents in the record as well.

So, I think it's important to keep some perspective on this as we continue to deal with the very broad requests that this Committee has made for documents.

Senator Dodd.

[No response.]

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Mr. Ickes, since we keep coming back to Beverly Bassett Schaffer, let me again state—and I mentioned this just a moment ago informally to Senator Mack, who had to leave—that the law is that no one owns a witness, even if the Department of Justice was seeking to interview, or indeed, had interviewed Ms. Schaffer in connection with any investigation they were conducting.

It would have been entirely appropriate for someone interested in that matter to send a representative to interview Ms. Bassett, or to encourage Ms. Bassett to come forward publicly.

Only if there was some corrupt intent to have her change what she said from the true version of events, would there be anything untoward or improper. Indeed, there is a substantial body of case law that suggests that an attorney representing a client who has an important stake in the matter who neglects to interview an important fact witness, may well be guilty of malpractice of law.

So let's be absolutely clear here, and perhaps this has all flowed from the suggestion last week. I think in the heat of the moment, some misstatements were made about the law, that Ms. Bassett was somehow radioactive, and no one could approach her. That is nonsense.

Now, Mr. Waldman has been alluded to. He has given testimony, last evening in deposition. His testimony is that he made no approach to Ms. Bassett. So that should be clarified. And I think that will come out in due course.

Mr. Lindsey has testified at some length about the fact that, following the President's comments on the newspaper article you were showing, he talked, not with Ms. Bassett, but to Ms. Bassett's husband, Archie Schaffer. Let me read Mr. Lindsey's testimony before this Committee, in response to Senator Faircloth's question:

Senator FAIRCLOTH. Would you tell us what was discussed in plain language, just you tell me?

Mr. LINDSEY. Yes, sir. Beverly Bassett during the campaign had put out, spoken to the press, spoken to Mr. Gerth. In fact, I later learned, wrote three memos to Mr. Gerth describing what her role had been during the late 1980's in the regulation of Madison Guaranty.

As I say, I've reviewed the records; I reviewed a chronology of what she did, what occurred. I believe that any reasonable person who looks at that will find that she went out of her way to try to bring this to the proper regulator's attention, and to get action. She communicated that during the campaign. Obviously, we wanted her to continue to communicate that. She was reluctant to do so. She was reluctant for several reasons.

Now, Mr. Lindsey is alluding to his conversations with Archie Schaffer:

Number one, I think she was reluctant because she had spent so much time with Mr. Gerth, and she felt like the treatment that she received in The New York Times article and in other articles was not fair, did not reflect the information she provided.

Another reason was, during the same time period, there were people who basically were, I will use the word stalking because I believe Ms. Bassett has used that word. In fact, one of your current employees, Mr. Bossie, went to Fayetteville in early January 1994, and according to Ms. Bassett stalked her from one place to another.

Senator FAIRCLOTH. He was not an employee of mine.

Mr. LINDSEY. That's right. He is now.

Senator FAIRCLOTH. I didn't know him.

Mr. LINDSEY. He was working for Citizens United. Floyd Brown's organization, I believe, at that time.

So the testimony was quite clear from Mr. Lindsey before this Committee, indeed, that there was an attempt to get Ms. Bassett to come forward. We've heard that, and Mr. Lindsey has been subjected to extensive examination on that subject.

Senator DODD. Could I inquire, by the way, Mr. Chairman, I gather this has been distributed here today. It just occurred to me, I am looking at it here, and I see where Counsel raised the name of one of the staff here, Mr. Bossie. There's a letter—I don't know what the date of this letter is—there's no date on it, from a Floyd Brown, President of something called Citizens United.

The reason I raise it with you, Mr. Chairman, is a couple of things. If you don't have it, I'll let you have this copy here. The letter says a couple of things that I think ought to be of concern to everyone on the Committee. This is a "Dear Fellow American" letter. Paragraph three or four: "Our top investigator, David Bossie, is on the inside directing the probe, a Special Assistant to Senator Faircloth of the U.S. Senate Whitewater Committee."

First of all, I don't know if Mr. Chertoff would like to know someone else is directing the probe here, but our top investigator, is he employed by Citizens United, and employed by the Congress?

This is a fundraising letter in which Mr. Brown, who many may recall was the author of the Willie Horton ads, by the way, to give you some idea of his political credentials. But I quote him from his letter, the last page of a 4-page letter. "I already have Whitewater briefings scheduled for Members of Congress going on." Then there is a solicitation of $100, $500, and $1,000. You know, if we're going to be supporting these outside groups who have staff members working for outside groups as investigators on the Committee, I think it's something the Committee ought to look at or am I off-base on that, Mr. Chairman?

The CHAIRMAN. Well, Senator, if we're going to hold the Committee responsible for every group that writes letters or takes positions on the activity of the Committee, we would be in bad shape. This is the first time I've seen this letter. I don't know Floyd Brown.

Senator DODD. I don't know him, either.

The CHAIRMAN. I've never had contact with him. The reason I feel compelled to say that is because if we're going to do this, let's take a look. It says at the bottom of the first page—this was just handed to me. And again, I thank Senator Sarbanes for handing it to me. I don't know how it even came into this hearing. I understand that the White House released this today.

Senator DODD. It was sent to thousands of people.

The CHAIRMAN. I wish they would get the information we have requested and stop scouring for things to divert attention; and that's pretty obvious. The failure to produce these documents is a very serious matter.

Ms. Sherburne is in attendance. If you had these documents that Mr. Ickes had, you would have produced them.

Senator DODD. Mr. Chairman, I'm asking you a question.

The CHAIRMAN. Let me just say, with the assistance of Citizens United, it says:

Senator Faircloth is determined to find out. He's asked Whitewater Committee Chairman Al D'Amato to call Hillary Rodham Clinton before the Committee in which she will be forced to answer questions under oath.

But Senator D'Amato declines to call the First Lady to appear. In my opinion, Senator D'Amato is worried that he lacks sufficient public support to call the First Lady in front of the proceedings that might subject her to future criminal procedures.

That explains why I have been getting these phone calls in my office berating me the last couple of days, I really have. They want me to call Floyd Brown—not Floyd Brown. Who's that fellow? Larry Nichols? I won't be swayed by Brown, or Nichols, or anybody else. And I think you know this, Senator. You are my friend and colleague.

Senator DODD. My concern is that we have a staff member here on the Committee who is not the top investigator.

The CHAIRMAN. Sure, and they said I am afraid to do what I have done, and I am going to characterize you and others. We cannot respond to the Browns and others of the world in terms of how they characterize us. Indeed, this investigation is not being run by anyone other than the Committee. Certainly, Mr. Bossie is not running this. But you can't prevent some from making a claim, and saying they have somebody in here.

Again, I think it is appropriate to move forward. We're going to be thorough, we're going to be comprehensive. It may be painful at times, but we will get the facts as best we can and be fair.

Senator DODD. You can understand, Mr. Chairman, whether it's the White House or others of us here, when they see a letter from Citizens United, a guy who has a reputation that is pretty bad—

The CHAIRMAN. Gee, if I put in every editorial comment, I could cite people in the media. You saw one that was just here, she left a little while ago. She's written the most vile and detestable things about me, about the manner in which—

Senator DODD. This is a fundraising letter, and identifies a staff member. This Committee is their top investigator. That seems to me something you might want to look at.

The CHAIRMAN. Let's look at it and find out if he is a member of their group. He's certainly not our top investigator. He's not on the Committee.

Senator DODD. He's their top investigator.

The CHAIRMAN. Are we going to say that this Committee is responsible for every person who sends out a fundraising letter?

Senator SARBANES. Senator Dodd does raise an important point.

Senator DODD. If a member of my staff working for an outside group raising money for Whitewater, Members of Congress would raise the ceiling.

The CHAIRMAN. Would you believe it or not? They actually send fundraising letters to say, "So-and-so—let's defeat him or her." We have all been the subject of that. I don't find this shocking, because there's no merit to it, it is part of the process. We can't control, Senator, every group that goes out.

Senator DODD. I know, Mr. Chairman, but we have testimony from a witness that talks about Mr. Bossie, to use their words now, not mine, "stalking" a witness, employed by this Committee, who's now called in the letter their top investigator, by groups soliciting $1,000 contributions to go after Mrs. Clinton. Somebody ought to look at that.

The CHAIRMAN. Yes. OK.

Mr. Chertoff.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

I want to get back to January 1994, Mr. Ickes. I have before you a memorandum which is dated 1/12/94, Kendall, in your handwriting, talks about whether an Independent Counsel should be requested by the White House.

Mr. ICKES. That's 20797, Mr. Chertoff?

Mr. CHERTOFF. Correct. And you don't know whether you got this from Kendall, or you sent it to Kendall; correct?

Mr. ICKES. I don't know. To the best of my recollection, I don't.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Did you write it?

Mr. ICKES. No, I did not. As far as I know, I did not write it.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You see under Roman numeral III, it talks about "The wisdom of attempting to impose limitations, desirability of limiting the investigation." Did you discuss that with Mr. Kendall?

Mr. ICKES. I don't recall whether I discussed this document with Mr. Kendall or not.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Attached to this package of documents is S20801 and 802, which is a draft of a letter to the Honorable Janet Reno which requests a preliminary investigation by Special Counsel.

Mr. ICKES. Mr. Chairman, let me tell you what I have here. I have 20798, 20799, and then I have 20800. And that's it.

Mr. CHERTOFF. There is another one, 801 and 802. I will get you the documents.

Mr. ICKES. Wait a minute. OK. We are looking now at what, 801 and 802?

Mr. CHERTOFF. 801 and 802, right. That's a draft letter to the Honorable Janet Reno that concludes with a suggestion that a preliminary investigation begin with respect to the appointment of a Special Counsel. It says in the top right-hand corner, there's a notation. Is it your handwriting?

Mr. ICKES. Generally seem to be, yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. It says, "DK draft."

Mr. ICKES. Yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Does that mean David Kendall wrote this draft?

Mr. ICKES. I don't know whether it meant that he wrote this draft. It may well.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Was it the way you operated in the Whitewater response to you in the White House, that in considering what position the White House ought to take on an Independent Counsel, you solicited the input of the President's private attorney with respect to the actual form of the letter that was going to be sent to the Attorney General?

Mr. ICKES. I don't know. I am not saying that I solicited this. I doubt that I did. As I said before, Mr. Chertoff, a lot of people who were advising the President, both inside the Government and outside the Government, had a variety of different views with respect to Independent or Special Counsel, as he was called in those days.

Mr. CHERTOFF. But you included Mr. Kendall in the discussion, and in fact, you included Mr. Kendall in the discussion of the exact form which the letter ought to take.

Mr. ICKES. I don't know if I included him, or whether he drafted this on his own.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You think he came unsolicited over the transom?

Mr. ICKES. He may well have drafted it on his own, and sent it to me. Assuming that he drafted it—and I don't know that as a fact, Mr. Chertoff.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Can we assume that when you wrote "DK draft" at the top, that that refers to David Kendall?

Mr. ICKES. We can assume that refers to David Kendall. That does not automatically mean he drafted the letter. I'm not saying he didn't. I don't know whether he did or whether he didn't.

The CHAIRMAN. You sent it to him, though, right? It's one or the other. If he did not draft this, then what is the only reasonable conclusion that one can come to? That you then sent it to him?

Mr. ICKES. I don't know whether I did, or whether I didn't.

Mr. CHERTOFF. But the point is, Mr. Ickes, there's only two possibilities in the universe of logic.

Mr. ICKES. I assume that I am here to answer questions under oath to the best of my recollection, not to speculate.

Mr. CHERTOFF. But we're asking about a notation and a writing that you made in your own handwriting. I am not asking what Mr. Gearan said, or Tom Jones said. I am asking you what you wrote. And my question to you is, does your notation, "DK draft" indicate either that you received it from Kendall or that you sent it to Kendall? Which is it?

Mr. ICKES. I don't know. I've testified that I don't know.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Now let's move on to another document.

Mr. ICKES. Furthermore, what's the point? Are you saying—

The CHAIRMAN. That's not your problem.

Mr. ICKES. Are you saying Mr. Kendall doesn't have a right to give his views about this?

Mr. CHERTOFF. I'll tell you what I'm saying, Mr. Ickes. I'm suggesting that there's a difference between a private defense attorney writing the letter under his own name to the Attorney General about a matter involving a client, which every attorney is entitled to do, and that same private defense attorney being invited to sit with White House policymakers in deciding what official position the White House is going to be taking on the Independent Counsel.

Particularly, Mr. Ickes, because we have heard testimony from Mr. Eggleston that 2 months earlier, the whole point of him sitting down with Mr. Kendall and Mr. Nussbaum was precisely to separate the private sphere and the public sphere, that they were to be separate areas of responsibility. But I want to continue on this.

Senator DODD. One observation.

Mr. ICKES. Are you saying it's illegal for the private attorney to have done this, assuming that he did do it? Is that what you are saying? I'm just trying to get a drift of where you're headed.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Mr. Ickes, did he participate in the discussion about the scope of the Independent Counsel, and how the Independent Counsel's charter were to be set forth?

Mr. ICKES. Would you repeat the question?

Mr. CHERTOFF. Did Mr. Kendall participate in the discussions with you and the White House Counsel's Office about how to prepare the letter that was going to go to the Attorney General to delineate what would be requested in terms of the Special Counsel?

Mr. ICKES. I have no knowledge of that.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You don't know whether Mr. Kendall participated in it?

Mr. ICKES. In the discussions about the letter that went to the Attorney General? No, I don't.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You don't know whether he had input in some written form?

Mr. ICKES. He may well have. I don't know.

Mr. CHERTOFF. And you can't interpret for us what this "DK draft" means that you wrote in your own hand?

Mr. ICKES. I've told you to the best of my knowledge that "DK draft" refers to David Kendall draft. He may well have drafted this. I don't know as a fact, as I sit here today—let me finish, Mr. Chertoff—whether or not he did.

Mr. CHERTOFF. And it got into your file?

Mr. ICKES. What?

Mr. CHERTOFF. It got into your files; right? This is a production from your file.

Mr. ICKES. It was in my files.

Mr. CHERTOFF. And the fact is, it was in the files that were not produced until a few days ago; right?

Mr. ICKES. They were produced when they were produced.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Within the last week; right?

Mr. ICKES. They were produced when they were produced.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You don't want to answer that, do you, Mr. Ickes?

Mr. ICKES. I don't know when these were produced.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Do you know when you produced them to the White House Counsel?

Mr. ICKES. Mr. Chertoff, if you say these were produced 2 days ago, I'll take your word for it.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Let's move on to S20884, it is dated 1/10/94, Confidential, Second Draft, Summary of Arguments re Whitewater. Who wrote this?

Mr. ICKES. Wait just a moment.

The CHAIRMAN. The documents are in chronological order?

Mr. ICKES. Chronological order, or page order.

The CHAIRMAN. Chronological order in terms of the numbers that they indicate.

Mr. ICKES. This is dated when?

Mr. CHERTOFF. This is dated January 10, 1994.

Mr. ICKES. OK. I think I have it. This is dated 1/10/94, 20884?
Mr. CHERTOFF. Correct. This came from your files as well. Did you write this?

Mr. ICKES. No, I did not write this.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Who wrote it?

Mr. ICKES. I have no idea.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Was it someone in the White House?

Mr. ICKES. It may well have been. I literally don't know. It may well have been somebody in the White House.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Let me begin at the beginning. It says, "Summary of Arguments re Whitewater," and, "No Special Counsel: No. 1—For this position." Then there's a list of arguments about why there shouldn't be a Special Counsel.

In addition to some of the things we've heard discussed in the hearing about the policy considerations, there's a very interesting consideration that's under letter F. It reads as follows: "A SC investigation may result in focus on friends and associates of the President, begin to 'squeeze' them, and may subject some to indictment."

You understood, I take it, that the term "squeeze" them refers to the possibility that people could get, in the vernacular, kind of jammed up with criminal prosecutions, and might be squeezed, to have them turn and cooperate with the Government?

Mr. ICKES. I didn't write this memo. I'm not sure what the term "squeeze" meant.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You kept it in your file; right?

Mr. ICKES. The mere fact that I kept it in my file doesn't necessarily mean I knew what the term meant.

Mr. CHERTOFF. At the time you received the memo, presumably you knew who the author was; right?

Mr. ICKES. I'm not sure that I did.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You didn't try to find out what this memo, what this term "squeeze" meant?

Mr. ICKES. As far as I know, I have no recollection of trying to find out what the term "squeeze" meant.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Were there discussions with, say Mr. Waldman or Mr. Nussbaum about the fact that it was a Special Counsel investigating here? Some of the people around the President might get hurt? Was there discussion in Whitewater response meetings with Mr. Waldman or Mr. Nussbaum or anybody else who attended the meetings that a Special Counsel investigation might hurt some of the friends and associates around the Clintons?

Mr. ICKES. There may well have been. I don't recall any particular discussion. What I would like to do is to point out, on this particular document that you've referred to, Mr. Chertoff, that this is basically, as I look at it, is an options. It's laying out all the possible options for and against, Mr. Chertoff.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You're not answering my question.

Mr. ICKES. Let me just finish, if you don't mind. The mere fact that it refers to the fact that some friends and associates of the President begin to get squeezed I think in no way indicates that they were referring to this President, or his President.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Are we discussing Abraham Lincoln here or some other President? Which President? Are you telling us that you think this memo didn't have anything to do with this President?

Mr. ICKES. Do you want me to answer, Mr. Chertoff?

Mr. CHERTOFF. Yes.

Mr. ICKES. As I read this memorandum, Mr. Chertoff, this was trying to lay out all of the different arguments of what might happen, of what could happen based on the history of past Independent Counsels.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Now in the discussion, because we also have in Mr. Gearan's notes notations that on the 5th of January—I'm just going to summarize here—that Mr. Nussbaum had raised the issue of the bad-hearted prosecutor who might find things around people close, around the President. I want to ask you, in any of these discussions, when the following names came up of people that might be squeezed, or might be hurt, or might be the subject of investigations, did Mr. McDougal's name come up?

Mr. ICKES. I'm sure that a lot of names came up.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Did Branscombe come up? Did Temper come up? Did Hill come up? Did Wade come up?

Mr. ICKES. Mr. Chertoff, I suspect that a lot of different names came up in the course of the discussions here.

Mr. CHERTOFF. There came a point in time where, notwithstanding the First Lady's earlier strong opposition to a Special Counsel, a decision was made to write a letter to the Attorney General suggesting that a Special Counsel be appointed; right?

Mr. ICKES. I was not involved in that letter. I assume that there was such a letter.

Mr. CHERTOFF. I take it that one of the reasons that happened was because there was an understanding that, if Congress passed the statute authorizing an Independent Counsel by law, that the Attorney General might on her own go ahead and appoint an Independent Counsel, or request an Independent Counsel, but it would be appointed by a three-judge court; right?

Mr. ICKES. Are you asking me if that was the state of mind of the people who wrote the letter?

Mr. CHERTOFF. I'm asking you if that came up in discussions of the Whitewater Response Team.

Mr. ICKES. I don't recall.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Didn't it come up in discussion that you actually considered or discussed who the judges would be that would be making the appointment of the Independent Counsel if you waited for the statute to get passed, as opposed to requesting Special Counsel to be appointed by the Attorney General?

Mr. ICKES. I'm sure I don't remember any specific discussion, Mr. Chertoff. But I'm sure that when the subject of Independent Counsel came up, there undoubtedly was a discussion of the process, and who would be involved in that process.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Once the letter was written, or once the Attorney General decided to appoint a Special Counsel, that issue moved off the radar screen. But that wasn't the only investigation you all were considering in the Whitewater Response Team, was it?

Mr. ICKES. I don't know what you're referring to.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You were considering civil investigations, as well as the criminal investigation; right?

Mr. ICKES. In the Whitewater Response Team, we were considering all matters that were being asked of us by the press.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Well, more than just the press, because once the matter of the criminal investigation passed to the jurisdiction of the Special Counsel, there was still the question of whether there would be a civil investigation by the RTC that might touch on these matters; is that correct?

Mr. ICKES. As I recall. I don't know what period of time you're talking about, Mr. Chertoff. But as I recall, that was a matter of discussion in the press, as well as by Members of the Senate.

Mr. CHERTOFF. The Whitewater group actually focused on the issue of what the statute of limitations for civil actions would be, as early as the 9th of January, 1994; isn't that right?

Mr. ICKES. What document are you looking at?

Mr. CHERTOFF. I'm looking at your memo of the 9th of January, 1994, where it says, "assignments." If you can pause for a second, it's at S20888.

Mr. ICKES. I apologize. I thought these things—this is the one of January 10th, Mr. Chertoff? Or is there going to be a light on, Mr. Chertoff?

The CHAIRMAN. I don't run the time when he is looking for the documents. I could waste 15 minutes for him looking for one document.

Mr. ICKES. Mr. Chertoff, I have both in front of me now, one dated the 10th and one dated the 9th.

Mr. CHERTOFF. The one dated the 9th says, "Memo, Re: Statute of Limitations for Civil Action. Counsel assigned 1/8." Is that right?

Mr. ICKES. The memo dated the 9th, item number nine?

Mr. CHERTOFF. That's item number 11.

Mr. ICKES. I'm sorry. Yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. As of January 8, 1994, you had assigned an attorney to do a memo on the statute of limitations for civil actions; is that correct?

Mr. ICKES. Yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. In fact, it had come up in discussion on January 8th because, as you previously told us, this memo was a distillation of your notes of these conversations; right?

Mr. ICKES. Yes, and as I recall, the statute of limitations was being discussed at that time.

Mr. CHERTOFF. So you asked for a memo on January 8th; right? Then it appears again on your memo of January 10th, once again, that you reiterate that this is one of the events, or one of the issues, where there's a pending assignment; is that correct?

Mr. ICKES. That's correct.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Then, as we observed earlier with respect to your handwritten notes on the first page of your notes on the January 16th meeting, the subject of the statute of limitations came up at the meeting at Vernon Jordan's house; is that correct?

Mr. ICKES. According to those notes, it did.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Then you, in fact, even got a memo from Mr. Ickes on January 17th—I'm sorry, from Mr. Eggleston to you? Mr. Eggleston wrote you a memo on January 17, 1994, discussing the statute of limitations?

Mr. ICKES. That's document 9908?

Mr. CHERTOFF. Right.

Mr. ICKES. Yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. So we had all this attention to the statute of limitations. Now, I must ask you this. Two weeks after you got that memo from Mr. Eggleston, you had a meeting on February 2nd with Mr. Altman where we were told, 2 years ago, that the purpose of the meeting was to have Mr. Altman come in and brief the White House on the law involving the statute of limitations.

At the time we were asking questions 2 years ago, of course, we didn't have that January 17th memo. We didn't have all these other notes. We were kind of groping, like blind men.

But in any case, you were asked a question about this February 2nd meeting by the RTC investigators. I want to give you a portion of your sworn deposition taken on July 15, 1994, before the Department of Treasury, Office of Inspector General investigators. I want to direct your attention to page 7. Just take a moment to find that.

Mr. ICKES. I found it.

Mr. CHERTOFF. I will read you the following questions and answers, at page 7, line 3:

Question: Would this be February 2nd, 1994, this meeting?

Answer: It would have been around that time.

Question: You said Mr. McLarty was there?

Answer: It was in his office. He was there in his office. It's a fairly large office by White House standards and I recall his being near his desk at the other end of the room. I don't recall his participating in the meeting and my best recollection is that he left his office soon after the meeting started.

Question: So did he participate at all in the meeting?

Answer: Not to my—not to my recollection.

Question: What was discussed at that meeting?

This is February 2nd, now, Mr. Ickes, 2 weeks after you got the memo from Eggleston, and more than 2 weeks after all these discussions that we have in these memos have been covered.

Answer: Mr. Altman, as I recall, raised the issue of the upcoming—the possible—well, not the possible, but the fact that the statute of limitations, which I knew nothing about at the time, of the RTC in connection with an investigation that was apparently being conducted by the RTC on Madison Whitewater was about to expire.

I want to underscore and direct your attention in particular to the phrase that says, "the statute of limitations, which I knew nothing about at the time." I want you to compare that with the memo you received 2 weeks earlier, at your specific direction and request, that in fact stated on page 2—Mr. Eggleston stated that the statute of limitations would run out on any possible tort claim on March 2, 1994.

I want to ask you, Mr. Ickes, with respect to this deposition you gave before the RTC, were those the answers you gave to those questions? Is this an accurate transcription of your sworn testimony as you gave it in 1994?

Mr. ICKES. As far as I know, sir.

Mr. CHERTOFF. My time is up.

The CHAIRMAN. Senator Sarbanes.

Senator SARBANES. Are we going to take a break for lunch, Mr. Chairman?

The CHAIRMAN. We still have quite a few questions, but we will take a short lunch break and resume promptly at 2:15 p.m.

[Whereupon, at 1:40 p.m., a lunch recess was taken, to resume at 2:15 p.m.]

AFTERNOON SESSION

The CHAIRMAN. The Committee will come to order.

Mr. Ben-Veniste.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

Mr. Ickes, first let me address an issue about which much was made before our luncheon break. And that is the question of Mr. Kendall, an attorney in the private practice of the law, supplying a draft letter for consideration by White House Counsel regarding appointment or a request to the Attorney General to appoint a Special Counsel. First, is there any rule or regulation that you know of that has been recently enacted that forecloses the President or his Counsel from receiving advice from any nongovernment source?

Mr. ICKES. Well, I'm not much of a lawyer, Mr. Ben-Veniste, but none that I know of.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. It is kind of surprising to hear that there would be any suggestion that Presidents and their Counsel do not rely on people outside Government to provide advice and thoughts.

Mr. ICKES. This President, and it is certainly my understanding historically, that other Presidents have relied on the broadest range of advice from both inside and outside the Government on the broadest range of matters.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. So what we're really talking about here is discussions within the White House and, indeed, we've talked about 2 weeks of intense meetings. I see meetings occurring from January 4th through January 8th, and then some assignments thereafter. I don't see where that's 2 weeks. But there are meetings in January that surround this question, among others, of appointment of an Independent Counsel. The first reaction, and we will get to some of the reasons for this, from the First Lady and perhaps the President, is an unfavorable reaction to the notion of this kind of appointment, given the circumstances predicated or allegedly predicated such an appointment.

Eventually, what happens is the President, through his Counsel, asks his Attorney General to appoint a Special Counsel to investigate these matters in which the President is interested. Correct?

Mr. ICKES. Correct.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. This is a proposition that has been sponsored, among other people, by Republican leaders of the Congress, including the Chairman of this Committee and Senator Dole, in correspondence that we have reviewed with you. Correct?

Mr. ICKES. Correct.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. So that at this point, the newspapers are clamoring for the appointment of a Special Counsel. The Republican leaders of the Congress are taking the same position, and now the President is taking the same position. The only person that we are hearing who is opposed to it is the Attorney General herself. The reason she's opposed to it are borne out by history, which is that no matter how terrific an appointment I make, and she made a terrific appointment, in my view, in Robert Fiske, a former U.S. Attorney from the Southern District of New York, who did an outstanding job during his service as Special Counsel. And her predictions came true with the passage of the Independent Counsel Act by the Congress when a three-judge panel removed Mr. Fiske simply because Ms. Reno had appointed him.

Mr. ICKES. Exactly.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. In fact, just to show that nobody is really infallible, I have an editorial from December 26, 1993, of The New York Times, which says:

Ms. Reno has refused—relating to the appointment of a Special Counsel—arguing that any Special Prosecutor she appointed would be seen as less than fully independent.

Nonsense. Her appointee would be perceived as independent if he or she had a reputation for courage, competence, and integrity.

Well, of course, her appointment was widely hailed by Members and, indeed, the Chairman of this Committee and others, people respected in the legal community and in Washington as well. Yet, despite The New York Times' prediction that it would be nonsense, that appointment was overturned by a special court of the U.S. Court of Appeals, solely on the basis of the fact that it was an appointment made by the Attorney General.

So let me now go again into the facts of what occurred and whether these documents recently obtained are indeed remarkable in providing information that we did not know about previously. Or whether, in fact, this is just more of the same information that has been written about for the last 2 years, at least.

First of all, the question of whether the White House, or at least the senior staff, opposed the appointment of a Special Counsel, initially, in considering the options that were available. In fact, Mrs. Clinton, in her press conference of April 24, 1994, was specific, was she not, in terms of her reaction against the appointment?

Mr. ICKES. She was. She said, as I recall that press conference, that she had—and I'm paraphrasing—at the very least, very, very grave reservations about it. And she may have even said that she was opposed to it, as were other advisers to her husband.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. What were the reasons that were given in the discussion in which you participated for the opposition to the appointment of Special Counsel?

Mr. ICKES. I think, to try to summarize, and there were a lot of discussions back and forth, Mr. Ben-Veniste, to summarize, I think there were three or four points that were made.

Number 1, that there was no evidence of wrong-doing sufficient to warrant the appointment of a Special Counsel.

Number 2, sort of a corollary to that, that if a Special Counsel were appointed based on mere allegations without some showing of wrong-doing, that it would set a bad precedent and that we would have Special Counsels appointed at the drop of any allegation.

Number 3, it was the First Lady's very strongly held view then, as it is now, that neither she nor the President had done anything wrong; and therefore, there was no reason for a Special Counsel. Others argued that, in the past, Special Counsels or Independent Counsels, had gone beyond, had taken an overlong time to carry out their mandate, one. Two, had gone beyond their mandate, and I think that Senator Dole felt very strongly on that issue and during 1992, had raised that on more than one occasion when the Independent Counsel statute was up.

And then, finally, there was the Attorney General, who is known for her independence, had appointed or designated, whatever the right term is, several career prosecutors within the Department of Justice to conduct a full-blown, as I understand it, no-holds-barred investigation of this situation.

So those were the basic arguments. There may have been some backing and forthgoing, but I think that those were the basic points that were made.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. And despite the initial discussions and oppositions, within a very short period of time, the determination was made that a request would go to the Attorney General, who had been extremely reluctant and perhaps had, in the words of Mr. Gearan, closed the door all but a crack. Maybe closed it, but not locked it and bolted it. That in spite of her previous announced views, that she should go forward and appoint the Special Counsel.

Mr. ICKES. That's correct.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Now the notion that this is new, I think, can be best reviewed from a standpoint of looking at the newspaper stories from back in January 1994, when all of this occurred, and looking at the newspaper story from last week. We've taken some extracts out. Maybe we could put these up on the Elmo. Let's read first from a story which appeared in The Washington Post.

Senator DODD. Can you make that clear? I can't read it.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Let's just focus in on the first two paragraphs, then it will be larger. This is from the January 7, 1994, Washington Post:

With the start of the New Year, the White House launched a major internal effort to fight back against mounting criticism of the way it has handled inquiries into President Clinton's Arkansas land investments. A high-powered damage control squad was appointed, under the direction of new Deputy Chief of Staff Harold Ickes, and daily strategy sessions began.

Here is the same lead paragraph from the February 16, 1996, Washington Post:

Four days into the New Year of 1994, top White House aides gathered in the office of then-Chief of Staff Thomas F. "Mack" McLarty for the first meeting of the "Whitewater Response Team," created to deal with a controversy that was mushrooming by the day.

Then look at the second paragraph from the 1994 story:

White House Chief of Staff Thomas F. "Mack" McLarty designated Ickes to lead the new team, composed of Bruce Lindsey, Clinton's long-time Arkansas political aide, Counselor David R. Gergen, Senior Adviser George Stephanopoulos, White House Communications Director Mark Gearan, and outside political advisers such as Paul Begala and James Carville.

And then from the story last week:

They talked about news stories raising new allegations of financial misdeeds by the President and the First Lady back in Arkansas, about demands for documents and a Grand Jury probe. But most of all they focused on the increasing demands for the appointment of an Independent Counsel. David R. Gergen, the old Washington hand among them—who had served several Administrations, including the Nixon White House—observed that such investigations tend to "take on a life of their own."

So the notion that there was this Response Team, the issues that they were covering, the fact that Mrs. Clinton opposed the appointment of an Independent Counsel, all of that was written about 2 years ago. It is reflected in the documents that we have from Mr. Gearan and from you and from other materials which we have had well before that. But the issue which I think Senator Dodd quite properly has raised here is whether there's anything new or indeed, important, for purposes of our inquiry in the materials that we have just received.

Now the issue has been raised, I believe by my friend, Mr. Chertoff, in his questioning before the lunch break, about whether there was something sinister or inappropriate or untoward in a discussion of the appointment of a Special Counsel as opposed to waiting until such point that the Independent Counsel statute might be enacted and then the appointment of an Independent Counsel pursuant to the provisions of whatever that statute might be. Do you recall that discussion?

Mr. ICKES. I recall the discussion shortly before our lunch break, yes.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Well, under those circumstances, could you relate, if you will, your recollection of, rather than this hypothetical discussion of what might happen under a law not yet enacted, what were the actual realities of the circumstance and who was calling for the appointment of a Special Counsel back in January 1994?

Mr. ICKES. Well, other than for the press and a number of Members of the Congress, there were people inside of the White House who felt that that was the better way to go, that ultimately, it was going to end up there in any case, and why not go ahead and call for the appointment of a Special Counsel?

Whether or not a statute that would permit the appointment, if that's the right phrase, of Independent Counsel, would be enacted or not and if so, when, was very much up in the air.

And there was concern voiced by some people that if the Attorney General appointed a Special Counsel, would that then end up with that investigation starting to get underway, and then a three-judge court, assuming the former model was re-enacted for the Independent Counsel, would a three-judge court then put in place a new person who would have to start the investigation, not necessarily all over again, but certainly pick up.

Those were some of the arguments that were weighed back and forth and different people had different opinions on that, and some of them very strongly held opinions, as it should be when you are advising the President of the United States.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Thank you.

Mr. Chairman, my time is up.

The CHAIRMAN. Mr. Chertoff.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Mr. Ickes, are you telling us that you welcomed the manner in which the career prosecutors at the Justice Department were conducting their investigation of Madison Guaranty and Whitewater in December and early January of 1993 and 1994?

Mr. ICKES. I didn't say I welcomed it or didn't welcome it. I said it was a fact that the Attorney General had designated one or more career prosecutors, some of them Republican of some outstanding note, and former U.S. Attorneys, to conduct an investigation into this matter. I didn't know the scope of it or anything like that.

Mr. CHERTOFF. But you were angry about it.

Mr. ICKES. What?

Mr. CHERTOFF. You didn't like the way they were conducting the investigation.

Mr. ICKES. No, that's not true, Mr. Chertoff.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Well, Mr. Gearan records—

The CHAIRMAN. Refer to the page.

Mr. CHERTOFF. It's Mr. Gearan's notes, S 20579.

Mr. ICKES. 20579?

Mr. CHERTOFF. Right. It's a meeting in the Ward Room.

The CHAIRMAN. Let's wait until he gets it. Do you have it?

Mr. ICKES. Bear with me one moment. I'm getting there, got it.

Mr. CHERTOFF. "Whitewater, 8 January, Ward Room. BN argue against Special Prosecutor." Then there are the initials, HI, which Mr. Gearan has indicated is you.

Mr. ICKES. Yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. "Alan Carver at DOJ, bad guy." Why did you say Mr. Carver was a bad guy?

Mr. ICKES. First of all, these are not my notes. I am not at all confident I said that, number one. Number two is I didn't know Mr. Carver. To this date, I wouldn't know him if he came in this hearing room, as far as I know, I have never met him. I may well have been saying something that I heard somebody else say. But, in any event, he was conducting an investigation and I had no problem with the investigation he was conducting. I didn't know the limit of it, but the Attorney General had appointed him and he was carrying on.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Did you say he was a tough guy?

Mr. ICKES. What?

Mr. CHERTOFF. Did you say he was a tough guy?

Mr. ICKES. I don't recall saying anything about Mr. Carver because I don't know whether he's a tough guy or not. It may well have been that I was quoting somebody else.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Well, Mr. Gearan was usually accurate enough in most cases to even replicate the blue language. So let's continue on here. "When Kendall called, when he called on speakerphone, were two FBI agents and Jim Nixon." What was that about?

Mr. ICKES. My understanding was and, again, I do not know where I got this from—perhaps Mr. Kendall—that when he called to talk to either Mr. Carver or whoever, that either two FBI agents were on or that they were brought into the room while he was speaking to them. That was my understanding. I wasn't there, so I don't know what the facts were.

Mr. CHERTOFF. But you repeated this. You repeated this in the meeting.

Mr. ICKES. It appears that I may well have repeated it.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Why did you find it worth repeating?

Mr. ICKES. What?

Mr. CHERTOFF. Why did you find it worth repeating?

Mr. ICKES. Well, I think as Chairman D'Amato pointed out, that he might have used a little stronger language had he been on the phone with somebody and the Justice Department and FBI agents were also on the phone.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Really, Mr. Ickes? You think that it's really that outrageous to have a conversation if you're a prosecutor and have FBI agents in on the conversation, too?

Mr. ICKES. I didn't say it was outrageous. I just said that stronger—I'm just following Chairman D'Amato's lead that—

Mr. CHERTOFF. Let's not follow—

Mr. ICKES. Let me just finish this.

Mr. CHERTOFF. I want your opinion.

Mr. ICKES. You asked me a question. I'm answering it.

The CHAIRMAN. Nonresponsive.

Mr. ICKES. I am answering it. As Chairman D'Amato said, he would probably have used even stronger language.

Mr. CHERTOFF. We are not concerned with what anybody else said. Did it upset you to hear that there were two FBI agents on the phone, on the speakerphone in the conversation?

Mr. ICKES. I think that if I am on the phone with somebody thinking that I am having a private conversation and other people are listening to it, I would be unhappy.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You are not suggesting that what happened here was that the agents and Jim Nixon were on the phone unbeknownst to Kendall?

Mr. ICKES. I don't know what they were.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Then you go on to say, "Those guys are f---ing us blue." What did you mean by that?

Mr. ICKES. I think that—where are you looking now?

Mr. CHERTOFF. Right in the section next to the initials HI.

Mr. ICKES. Again, I don't recall saying that. If I said it, it was that they were probably doing an effective job.

Mr. CHERTOFF. That they were doing an effective job? The expression, "f---ing us blue," means doing an effective job?

Mr. ICKES. Again, I don't recall saying that. But if I said it, it's probably what it meant.

Mr. CHERTOFF. I mean, have you ever used the expression—I can only imagine what kind of conversations. Have you ever used the expression, "f---ing us blue," to compliment someone on doing an effective job? What did you mean by this? This is striking—

Mr. ICKES. I've testified to what I—

Senator DODD. Mr. Chairman, this strikes me as sort of one of those expressions that sort of speaks for itself.

Mr. CHERTOFF. But evidently, it speaks to Mr. Ickes much differently than it speaks to everybody else.

Senator DODD. All right. Let's move on, though. This is—

Mr. CHERTOFF. What we're talking about here, Mr. Ickes, is not your use of language, but it is an attitude that's manifested in Mr. Gearan's notes. You don't know of any reason that Mr. Gearan had to lie in his notes or to mislead in his notes, do you?

Mr. ICKES. Mr. Gearan, I don't believe that he lied, but he took these notes and people hear different things at different times.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Well, he was the Director of Communications, do you have reason to believe he was inaccurate in his ability to recall things or inaccurate in his ability to express himself? He's a very effective communicator, isn't he?

Mr. ICKES. It depends on how you look at it. I think he's quite effective.

Mr. CHERTOFF. I mean, he wouldn't have been the Director of Communications if he wasn't capable of understanding and speaking English well. Right?

Mr. ICKES. I understand, Mr. Chertoff. But taking notes, different people take different notes in different ways.

Mr. CHERTOFF. So your testimony is that you didn't say that Alan Carver at DOJ was a bad guy and you didn't express your hostility and anger at the Department of Justice in the way that they were conducting this investigation?

Mr. ICKES. Mr. Chertoff, I've testified to what I've said.

Mr. CHERTOFF. I don't think you, to be quite honest with you, have squarely answered the question. And I want to suggest to you, Mr. Ickes—

Mr. ICKES. Well, Mr. Chertoff, I've answered the question.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Let me ask you the question.

Mr. ICKES. You may not like the answer, but I've answered it.

Mr. CHERTOFF. No. I want to suggest to you, Mr. Ickes, that the clear and unmistakable thrust of the notes is that you were expressing in very strong language your hostility and anger at the investigators at the Department of Justice.

Senator DODD. Mr. Chairman, again—

The CHAIRMAN. Now, Senator.

Senator DODD. No, I'm going to object. Counsel is not a Senator.

The CHAIRMAN. No, he's not.

Senator DODD. He's not a Senator.

The CHAIRMAN. Well, he's trying to get a responsive answer from Mr. Ickes.

Senator DODD. He's not a Senator. That's fine.

The CHAIRMAN. That's right, he is not, but he is our Counsel and I have not interrupted when you're asking questions.

Senator DODD. He doesn't editorialize.

The CHAIRMAN. Put the light on. Mr. Ickes, are you suggesting that you had no feelings one way or the other way about the conduct of this investigation?

Mr. ICKES. Mr. Chairman, I didn't know Mr. Carver. He was a career appointee.

The CHAIRMAN. That's not what I asked you.

Mr. ICKES. Mr. Chairman.

The CHAIRMAN. You had a meeting.

Mr. ICKES. Do you want me to answer?

The CHAIRMAN. At that meeting people were making their feelings known about what was taking place. I look at that meeting and it says—you tell me. Can you read that? "Whitewater, January 8th." Did you have a meeting in the Ward Room, January 8th?

Mr. ICKES. I don't recall. I assume we did.

The CHAIRMAN. That is a disingenuous answer. You had a whole series of meetings.

Mr. ICKES. I assume we did, Mr. Chairman.

The CHAIRMAN. Mr. Ben-Veniste just went through a whole series of meetings. It was public. You were the head of this team. You were appointed by Mr. McLarty, isn't that true?

Mr. ICKES. I don't even know what date the meeting was.

The CHAIRMAN. January 8, 1994.

Mr. ICKES. I don't know what date it was. I don't know what day it was in the week. I assume—

The CHAIRMAN. And you don't even know, when you say that someone's "f--ing you blue" what you meant. You say that was complimentary, that they were doing a good job. You want the Committee to believe that when someone took your notes down and in that kind of language, given the fact that just before you called them bad guys, given the fact that you just explained that, and now you suggest to us that you had no feelings about this, that they were just doing their job. Is that what you would like us to believe?

Mr. ICKES. Do you want me to answer the question?

The CHAIRMAN. Yes.

Mr. ICKES. I think there was a concern, Mr. Chairman, on the part of some that FBI agents were listening in on a conversation with the President's private counsel. It's not at all clear to me that the private counsel knew that. You'll have to call him about that and ask him about that.

The CHAIRMAN. But you recounted this. You characterized this Mr. Carver who you didn't know as a bad guy, didn't you?

Mr. ICKES. Those are not my notes, Mr. Chairman.

The CHAIRMAN. I know they are not your notes, but you were at that meeting. You have no recollection of this meeting? This was an everyday occurrence? This was something that happened regularly? Were you at the meeting?

Mr. ICKES. Are you ready for me to answer?

The CHAIRMAN. Yes. Were you at the meeting?

Mr. ICKES. I assume I was at the meeting.

The CHAIRMAN. Do you recall a conversation with respect to a Special Prosecutor?

Mr. ICKES. I don't recall this particular conversation. But I have no reason to believe that there was not some conversation about the Special Prosecutor. It wasn't a Special Prosecutor, first of all.

The CHAIRMAN. Bernie Nussbaum argued against the appointment of a Special Prosecutor during the meeting of January 8th.

Mr. ICKES. I thought you were referring to Mr. Carver as the Special Prosecutor.

The CHAIRMAN. No. Let's move down to where it says HI, Harold Ickes; right? Mr. Gearan suggested that this reflects your statements and he said, you indicated that "Alan Carver at DOJ was a bad guy." You said that at some point in time you learned about this phone call with people listening in. You don't know who told you, but you learned about it. Is that why you characterized him as a bad guy?

Mr. ICKES. I do not know if that was my characterization, Mr. Chairman, or whether I was repeating something that somebody else had said.

The CHAIRMAN. OK.

Mr. ICKES. Which I testified to already.

The CHAIRMAN. Were you repeating something else when you said, "Those guys are f---ing us blue"? Or was that your feeling?

Mr. ICKES. Assuming that I said that—

The CHAIRMAN. Yes.

Mr. ICKES. —it was probably my view.

The CHAIRMAN. Well, you are the only person at these meetings that ever was quoted using that expression.

Mr. ICKES. Can I finish my answer?

Senator SARBANES. Well, let him finish his answer.

Mr. ICKES. Mr. Chairman.

The CHAIRMAN. Yes, certainly, Mr. Ickes.

Mr. ICKES. Thank you.

The CHAIRMAN. You're welcome.

Mr. ICKES. I think the fact that FBI agents were listening in on a private—well, why do you find that so amusing, Mr. Chairman?

The CHAIRMAN. You've told us that many times. I'm asking you whether you said, "Those guys are f---ing us blue"? Did you say it or didn't you? You think he made this up?

Mr. ICKES. Mr. Chairman, if you think what I am saying is so funny—

The CHAIRMAN. I think it is disturbing. Your explanation to this Committee is disingenuous.

Mr. ICKES. My explanation is my explanation, Mr. Chairman.

The CHAIRMAN. Yes, that's right, but it isn't convincing.

Mr. ICKES. You're welcome to your view, Mr. Chairman.

The CHAIRMAN. You come before this Committee and you want us to believe that when someone is quoted in this manner—and, by the way, only you used such expletives during these meetings. He's not confusing you with someone else. You characterize people as doing what is reflected in the notes, but that's a sign of admiration and an indication that they're just doing their job effectively?

Mr. ICKES. Mr. Chairman, I'll repeat for the fourth time. I don't know whether I said this or not. These are not my notes, and I could well have been repeating what others said.

The CHAIRMAN. Oh, about these guys doing this in this way.

Mr. ICKES. That's right.

The CHAIRMAN. OK.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Now, Mr. Ickes, I want to direct your attention to the notes of Ms. Sherburne and Ms. Chestin about your conversations with the President and the First Lady at the latter part of February or the early part of March 1994, which are S20783, 20784, and 20786.

Mr. ICKES. Bear with me one moment, please. OK, I have 20783. Is that what you're—

Mr. CHERTOFF. And 20784 and 20786.

Mr. ICKES. Wait just a moment please. 784 and 786. OK, I have them.

Mr. CHERTOFF. And they are two sets of notes of the same—

Senator DODD. Mr. Chairman, can I just inquire in this? As I understand it, just for clarity purposes, these notes are of a conversation that Ms. Sabrin or Sabrine—

Mr. CHERTOFF. No. These are two sets of notes taken by Ms. Chestin and Ms. Sherburne, who were at the White House Counsel's Office.

Senator DODD. Well, who are they talking to?

Mr. CHERTOFF. My understanding is it was information conveyed to them by Mr. Ickes' attorney.

Senator DODD. All right. That's Ms. Sabrin; right?

Mr. CHERTOFF. I don't know which attorney it was. If it was Ms. Sabrin, it was Ms. Sabrin.

Senator DODD. Well, now, just for clarity—

The CHAIRMAN. Well, for clarity, I see Mr. Bennett is indicating that it was Ms. Sabrin?

Mr. BENNETT. Yes, Mr. Chairman, Sabrin works with me.

The CHAIRMAN. OK.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Well, then, it was Ms. Sabrin who conveyed this information on behalf of Mr. Ickes to White House Counsel's Office while they were in the course of conducting what they have testified to was an internal review or an examination——

Senator DODD. You're getting ahead of me a little bit. So it's Ms. Sabrin talking to Ms. Chestin.

Mr. CHERTOFF. And to Ms. Sherburne.

Senator DODD. And Ms. Sherburne is in the room as well.

Mr. CHERTOFF. And both of them record separately their notes of what was relayed to them on behalf of Mr. Ickes.

Senator DODD. But those are the only three people in the room, these notes.

The CHAIRMAN. We don't know if those are the only three people, but we understand who took the notes.

Senator DODD. OK.

Mr. CHERTOFF. So, now——

Mr. BENNETT. Mr. Chairman, those were the only three.

The CHAIRMAN. OK.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Fine.

Senator DODD. Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

Mr. CHERTOFF. By the way, Mr. Ickes, you'll acknowledge for the record that Mr. Bennett and Ms. Sabrin were your attorneys during July 1994, with respect to this matter. Correct?

Mr. ICKES. They were, yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. They were authorized to speak on your behalf; is that right?

Mr. ICKES. They spoke on my behalf, yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Now going to the notes, "Late February (2/26 or 27), HI has conversation with WJC in which WJC asks lots of questions re: RTC procedures, whether HRC and WJC exposed." Ms. Chestin very similarly writes—"Late February (2/26 or 27)," possibly, probably. "HI conversation with President who asks serious questions re: procedure RTC, can Rose, HRC, BC be held liable." I would like to know, Mr. Ickes, what was said in this conversation or conversations with the President concerning RTC procedures and whether Rose, HRC, or BC could be held liable or exposed?

Mr. ICKES. May I talked to my attorney for a moment, please?

The CHAIRMAN. Certainly.

Mr. ICKES. I'm sorry, would you repeat the question?

Mr. CHERTOFF. What was said in this conversation or these conversations?

Mr. ICKES. In the conversations referred to here?

Mr. CHERTOFF. Yes.

Mr. ICKES. I don't recall having those kinds of conversations with the President, as I've testified on innumerable occasions before. I did talk to the President at some point and to the First Lady at some point about the statute of limitations. I don't know whether it was during February or whether it was during March. I don't know when the conversations took place. I don't know who was present. And as far as my recollection was, there was probably no more than one conversation with each.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Did you have a conversation with the President about whether Mrs. Clinton and the President could be held liable?

Mr. ICKES. Not as far as I can recall.

Mr. CHERTOFF. So you dispute the accuracy of the account contained in these notes?

Mr. ICKES. Mr. Chertoff, I wasn't at this meeting. I don't know the context of the questions that were asked. All I can tell you is what I recall then when I testified before this Committee, both in deposition and before this Committee in full hearing, and what I have testified to on other occasions.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Did you know your attorneys were going to have a conversation with the White House Counsel's Office in connection with the White House Counsel's review?

Mr. ICKES. I'm not sure I did.

Mr. CHERTOFF. I think maybe we're going to have to pursue some other witnesses on this, then, because I understand—well, it's interesting. I understand you essentially to be taking the position inconsistent with the notes.

Let me continue. "HI asked NE to draft memo which NE did in 12 hours." We've already examined your prior testimony in the deposition about this memo. But I want to get to the substance here. Ms. Chestin also says—"HI asked NE to write memo. Did within 12 hours." Did you ask Neal Eggleston to write a memo about the RTC and the Rose Law Firm procedures, and did he do so in about 12 hours? Is that true?

Mr. ICKES. I think I've testified before, Mr. Chertoff, that I did ask him at some point to write a memo and he did.

Mr. CHERTOFF. So you do——

Mr. ICKES. Whether it was in 12 hours or not, I don't know.

Mr. CHERTOFF. So you do remember asking him to write a memo about RTC procedures and the Rose Law Firm.

Mr. ICKES. I do recall asking him that.

Mr. CHERTOFF. And then it continues, "HI made revisions." Now that's the Sherburne version. And the Chestin——

Mr. ICKES. OK. What page are you on?

Mr. CHERTOFF. I'm still on 783 going into 784.

Mr. ICKES. OK.

Mr. CHERTOFF. "HI made revisions, sends to HRC 3/1. DR, don't recall discussing." And the Chestin version is, "HI asked NE couple questions, follow-up points, 3/1 HRC only. No recollection discussing with her or sending to President." Do you remember making revisions in the memo?

Mr. ICKES. I don't recall making revisions. I may well have, but I don't recall making them.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You sent it to the First Lady; right?

Mr. ICKES. I have testified extensively, Mr. Chertoff, that I may well have sent a memo to the First Lady. There was a long discussion, as you know, because you have questioned me quite closely on this, as to whether the memo had, in fact, been sent because my cover memo, the so-called transmittal memo, was not necessarily, was not in the form that I typically would send a memo. But I don't dispute that I may well have sent it to the First Lady.

Mr. CHERTOFF. But in fact, as the notes indicate, you did send this memo, didn't you? And you knew it in the summer of 1994 that you had sent the memo. Correct?

Mr. ICKES. Mr. Chertoff, as I say, I wasn't in this conversation. Ms. Sherburne and Ms. Chestin are not my attorneys. These are the notes that they took. You'll have to talk to them about that. I can only recall what I recall, and I've testified extensively to that.

I did not deny that I may well have sent that memo to the First Lady and I've testified about that extensively.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Ms. Sherburne then goes on to say, "HRC asked HI a few questions. Think after received memo." Did Mrs. Clinton ask you a few questions about the memo?

Mr. ICKES. I have no recollection—

The CHAIRMAN. I'm going to ask that we curtail this. I think it's better that we finish a particular area, but the Minority insists on strictly observing the red light, so we'll do that. I do not believe that's in the best interest of moving the hearings, but we will yield.

Senator Sarbanes.

Senator SARBANES. Mr. Chairman, we just have a fundamental difference of opinion. I think the only way we can have an orderly process is to follow the procedure that was laid out in the Resolution of the Committee. Now departing from that procedure by the Chairman of his own volition doesn't contribute to an orderly process, and I just think we ought to just follow the process.

The CHAIRMAN. I have not departed from my own volition and I have permitted extending time, nor have I even once, notwithstanding that the light on a number of occasions has flashed red, interrupted or attempt to interrupt. But I thought that we would have a better flow and be able to finish this.

However, I understand the nature of why some Members of the Committee may not want the details to be brought out in a manner in which they become more understandable. It will just take more time. We will be here later. It was my hope to attempt to finish this at 5:00 p.m., but we'll stay here and take whatever extra time it takes to finish this.

So, Senator Sarbanes.

Senator SARBANES. Well, I have no problem with that.

The CHAIRMAN. Fine. I understand.

Senator SARBANES. I mean, under our procedure, we can alternate back and forth with regular rounds.

The CHAIRMAN. Right. You can continue to read anything into the record that has nothing to do with examining the witness or trying to get new facts, but just kill time so you extend it longer. I'm suggesting to you I believe that's a technique that's being used.

Senator SARBANES. Well, I don't think we have done that, Mr. Chairman. I have sat here for days and Mr. Chertoff has said, I have one more question to ask, and then have it go on for 10 or 15 minutes. I have indicated to you on previous occasions, well before this witness ever came, that I didn't think that was contributing to an orderly process in this Committee, and that all of this could be avoided if we simply followed the clock and the procedures. All I'm asking for is to act in accordance with the Committee's processes and not to depart from them. That's all.

Senator Dodd.

Senator DODD. Just maybe a quick point. I wanted to go back. I thought I had it in front of me here, the memo dated 1/10/94. This is 20884. This is the memo that lists out the options, the summary arguments re Whitewater. No Special Counsel is the first heading, and then it goes, the second page, against this position, and so forth. Mr. Chertoff, I think, asked a lot of questions about subparagraph F on that first page. Do you have that in front of you, Mr. Ickes? Do you have that memo?

Mr. ICKES. Yes. This is the one that's captioned, "Should an Independent Counsel Be Requested By White House?"

Senator DODD. No. The one I'm looking at here is "Confidential, Second Draft, Summary of Arguments re Whitewater."

Mr. ICKES. Yes, I have it.

Senator DODD. What I want to get at is—this is something, this is a procedure not uncommon to me. We do this in our office on issues. I don't presume I'm unique in this. There are matters that come up that are controversial and I solicit positions pro and con on what are the issues that could possibly come up? What are all the things you possibly do?

What I'm trying to get from you, is this sort of a standard operating procedure that you or others use at the White House on matters of some controversy where you solicit opinion memos that argue for and against a position within the same memo?

Mr. ICKES. Senator Dodd, this is a process that is used in the White House with respect to a vast array of issues, including Whitewater, as well as other substantive issues that are dealing with the President. I mean, we would be negligent, the staff would be negligent, in my view, and disserving the President if all the arguments were not laid out before him. And typically, you have people with very strong opinions on a variety of different subjects and the President solicits those opinions. He wants to hear them. That's what he's there for.

Senator DODD. So this is the pro and con, and the date of that is 1/10/94.

Mr. ICKES. It is.

Senator DODD. There's a second document that is entitled, and I think you started to read it, "Should an Independent Counsel Be Requested by the White House?"

Mr. ICKES. Yes.

Senator DODD. The date on that I have is 1/12/94. Is that your handwriting?

Mr. ICKES. That is my handwriting, Senator.

Senator DODD. Then I notice there's a letter dated January 12, 1994, signed by Mr. Bernard Nussbaum to the Attorney General.

Now the two previous memos deal with the discussion of whether or not an Independent Counsel ought to be requested. That's on the 10th of January and on the 12th of January.

Mr. ICKES. Yes.

Senator DODD. On the 12th of January, a letter goes from Mr. Nussbaum, as I read it, to the Attorney General, in fact, making that request, that an Independent or Special Counsel be appointed. Is that correct?

Mr. ICKES. That's correct. I don't happen to have that in my possession but that's what I read.

Senator DODD. Well, the reason I raise that again, those people may have just dropped in and heard this lengthy discussion about paragraph F in a memo that lays out all the various things that can happen or could happen or options and so forth, and then look at another memo and there's a tremendous preoccupation.

Within 48 hours of that, you have a letter going from the legal counsel to the President requesting the Special Counsel. Very little reference has been made of that by the Majority on this side, but it seems to me you need to look and say, yes, there was this debate going on, a discussion going on. But within 48 hours of that memo's discussion, the letter goes making the request.

I just want to make the point because sometimes you can just get lost in the minutia of all of this and you have to get to the bottom line of it. What happened? You had a lengthy memo, lengthy debate, all these notes and a lot of colorful language going back and forth. What happens? Forget being a lawyer. What does the average person say? What happens at the end of this? At the end of this, 48 hours later, a letter goes out saying, appoint the Special Counsel. That's what happens. So all of these discussions, all of this debate, all of this argument goes around for several days here and within 48 hours, that's what happens. Is that not the case?

Mr. ICKES. That is exactly the case and the President instructed Bernie Nussbaum ask the Attorney General to appoint a Special Counsel. As far as I knew, at that point, she was still reluctant to, but ultimately did so.

Senator DODD. Mr. Ben-Veniste.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Let me turn to page S20579, about which there has been so much discussion, the notes involving the career Justice Department attorney who was appointed by the Attorney General to take over the investigation, Mr. Carver.

Now first of all, it seems to me in listening to the discussion about this, that in the beginning, senior people at the White House expressed concern over the notion that a Special Counsel should be appointed, given the fact that the allegations were unsubstantiated, the Clintons hadn't been charged with any wrong-doing, and the trigger mechanism, if this had been the statute, in effect, would not have been met. And other questions about the scope and history about Special Counsels having been appointed before, all seem to militate against the appointment of a Special Counsel.

Now much criticism has been leveled because there was concern about the unfettered scope of a Special Counsel and how much time a Special Counsel might take in conducting his or her investigation. And all of that has been laid at your doorstep at the Administration for having questioned in the first place the appointment of a Special Counsel.

In looking at this material, and particularly with respect to Mr. Carver's notes, I shudder to think about what the reaction might have been if you had embraced with open arms the appointment of a Special Counsel because then the argument would have been made, oh, Mr. Carver is too tough. Let's get the Attorney General to appoint somebody we like. The Attorney General can then control that person. We would be very happy with the appointment of a Special Counsel.

If the reverse position had been taken, is what I am saying, imagine the reaction politically now as you sit here testifying before this Committee because Mr. Carver had been doing a tough, independent job. Do you see that point?

Mr. ICKES. I understand the point.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. So that here we are sitting, considering—isn't that a shame that the White House didn't say, oh, yes, let's get a Special Counsel. That would be terrific.

If the notes had reflected all of that and the observation about Mr. Carver's performance, then the argument would be made, but this is all a big cover-up, the appointment of Special Counsel.

This is don't throw me in the briar patch. We'd love a Special Counsel to get this tough Carver off our backs.

Let me now go to the question of Mr. Carver and the observation that was made, whether it was relayed to you or someone.

I have to tell you that, contrary to my friend, Mr. Chertoff, in doing this sort of trial work that involves contact with U.S. Attorneys and Assistant U.S. Attorneys and FBI agents for well over 25 years now, I have never had an instance where an Assistant U.S. Attorney has required FBI agents to participate in a telephone conversation, lawyer to lawyer.

So whoever made this observation, whether Carver was being overly cautious, or whether the agents were listening in without having been announced, or whether they had been listening in for a time and then their participation was announced as the conversation proceeded, or any other possible combination of those possibilities, it seems to me, yes, that's quite unusual for two lawyers talking on the phone to then have the Government lawyer put FBI agents on the phone with counsel, much less Counsel to the President of the United States.

First of all, on your observation, I find that, from my own experience, which is not insubstantial in this area, this was, indeed, an unusual event.

Second, the question raised in the colorful language in which it was reportedly raised by Mr. Gearan, simply indicates that the White House recognized that the Justice Department attorneys handling this matter were certainly independent of the White House, that they were unafraid to do things the way they wanted to, and that they were going to have a full and independent investigation conducted. All of which supports the notion that, in the first instance, the suggestion that these people were competent, capable, and fully prepared to conduct an independent investigation without the appointment of Special Counsel, was warranted.

Putting all these things together, as Senator Dodd has pointed out, it appears to me that the discussion of the pros and cons, the various possibilities here, were all essentially overwhelmed by the inevitable political reality, that under the circumstances, someone from outside the process was going to have to be appointed. The President recognized that, took the step offensively, as it was, came forward, and had his Counsel write a letter to a reluctant Attorney General requesting the appointment of an outside attorney to head up this investigation.

Mr. ICKES. That generally is a fair summary.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Senator Sarbanes.

Senator SARBANES. Were you aware at the time—I see my time is up. I'll wait until the next round.

The CHAIRMAN. Before I go to Mr. Chertoff, I'd like to make the observation that that was one of the most incomplete summaries of what took place relating to the public domain. It would lead one to believe that there was not a huge clamor for the appointment of an Independent Counsel. It would totally eliminate the fact that both Senator Bradley and Senator Moynihan, had come out and said that an Independent Counsel should be selected.

It would have us believe if one were to look at the notes and read what took place privately, that we have no idea expressed in the strongest of terms by numerous people, that Mr. Gearan notes that Mrs. Clinton was adamantly opposed.

It had nothing to do with whether the Attorney General was for or against it. And yes, certainly the memoranda and documents Senator Dodd has pointed out are something that was not unordinary. That is something you would want to know the pros and cons about. I concede that. But it is an absolute contrivance to think that when someone expresses his opinion in such graphic and descriptive language, describing people as bad guys and saying what these people are really trying to do, that what that really means is they are doing a good job. That's just absolutely unreasonable. And for someone to suggest that that's what they meant, again, strains credibility, it is not worthy of belief, and casts doubts on the rest of that person's testimony. Now that's my observation.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

I want to ask you with respect to this memo of March 1, that you passed up to the First Lady, which had attached to it this February 28th memo by Mr. Eggleston, why did you have Mr. Eggleston write the memo?

Mr. ICKES. Just bear with me a moment. You are not talking about my 1 March memo?

Mr. CHERTOFF. With the attached February 28th analysis of the Rose Law Firm issues. Why did you have Mr. Eggleston write the memo?

Mr. ICKES. As best I can recall, Mr. Chertoff, and I think I have testified to this earlier, but as best I can recall, there had been a report issued by the FDIC earlier in the month. Let me just check the date on this—yes. And there had also been a report, I think, issued by the RTC. Both of those reports, as I recall, dealt with the so-called conflict of interest between the Rose Firm, or the possible conflict of interest between the Rose Law Firm and Madison Guaranty. Don't hold me to this, but this is my best recollection.

Then, as I recall, there was an article or an editorial—I forget which—which I think appeared in The Wall Street Journal sometime later in the month that I read. And I think the President may have read it.

I certainly did not know all the ins and outs about it. The President may have asked me some questions about it. I don't recall. But based on those reports and that either editorial or newspaper article, I had asked Mr. Eggleston to write a memo.

Mr. CHERTOFF. What questions did the President ask you?

Mr. ICKES. I don't recall, Mr. Chertoff.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Well, did he ask you questions about whether he or Mrs. Clinton could be held liable?

Mr. ICKES. I don't recall.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Did he ask you questions about whether the Rose Law Firm could be held liable?

Mr. ICKES. I don't recall.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Now with respect to this description in Ms. Sherburne's notes and Ms. Chestin's notes of their conversation with your lawyer, where it's stated rather positively that your lawyer told the two White House Counsel that you had a conversation in which WJC asked lots of questions about RTC procedures and whether HRC and WJC were exposed or could be held liable.

Now is that the conversation or conversations that you are referring to when you say you may have had some conversation with the President concerning some Wall Street Journal article?

Mr. ICKES. You're on page 783, Mr. Chertoff?

Mr. CHERTOFF. Right.

Mr. ICKES. Well, again, I didn't write these notes. I don't know what they're in reference—

Mr. CHERTOFF. Does that refresh your memory?

Mr. ICKES. It doesn't refresh my memory because I wasn't involved in this meeting. I didn't take these notes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Mr. Ickes, you were actually supervising Ms. Sherburne, am I correct, at the time in July 1994?

Mr. ICKES. Well, actually, Lloyd Cutler, I think at this time, was supervising Ms. Sherburne, although from the Chief of Staff's office, I was the point person.

Mr. CHERTOFF. All right. And you didn't come personally to be interviewed on this subject? You sent your lawyer instead to convey the facts?

Mr. ICKES. I wasn't interviewed by whom?

Mr. CHERTOFF. In other words, were you interviewed personally by Ms. Sherburne and Ms. Chestin?

Mr. ICKES. As I recall, I was because I think that Mr. Cutler was conducting an inquiry within the White House as to the facts and circumstances surrounding especially White House-Treasury contacts, as they were known.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Well, how is it that it was your lawyer who was giving information concerning this meeting and this memorandum, rather than you personally?

Mr. ICKES. How was it?

Mr. CHERTOFF. Yes. How did it turn out to be the case that rather than coming to you and asking you these questions, Ms. Sherburne and Ms. Chestin met with your lawyer instead?

Mr. ICKES. You'll have to ask them.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You didn't have anything to do with that?

Mr. ICKES. I don't recall having anything to do with it.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Were you available to Ms. Sherburne and Ms. Chestin to answer questions? I'm just wondering. See, what's striking is this, Mr. Ickes. Everybody else who apparently was interviewed that I'm aware of that we received notes or documents or material from the White House Counsel's Office, when we looked at this question last year, they went around and they interviewed all the other principals personally, directly.

This is the first time I can see a situation where some of the facts that we're getting in their notes, a lawyer is interposed between them. And I'm having difficulty understanding why it is that the White House Counsel's Office would settle to get the information through the lawyer, which now gives you the ability to argue to us that somehow, you're not to be held responsible because you weren't there.

Do you follow what I'm saying? I'm wondering whether that's an unusual set-up for conducting an investigation, to give someone the ability to have a conduit so that they can step away if they have to or distance themselves. Do you know of anybody else who had that arrangement?

Mr. ICKES. Wait a minute. You've asked a lot of questions here. Do you want to start them one by one?

Mr. CHERTOFF. How is it that you wound up having your lawyer convey this information rather than you, personally?

Mr. ICKES. I didn't have my lawyer convey it. And I was interviewed personally by Ms. Sherburne and Ms. Chestin.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Did they ask you questions about this?

Mr. ICKES. I don't recall.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Do we have those notes, do you know? I'm going to ask Ms. Sherburne, do we have those notes?

Ms. SHERBURNE. We reviewed those notes, Mike, in the fall.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Well, I don't want to put you—

Ms. SHERBURNE. Those are notes that we talked about. The passages that you were interested in were called after your own review of all the notes, including the notes of our interview with Mr. Ickes, you identified the passages of our notes with Ms. Sabrin. We interviewed Ms. Sabrin because at the time Mr. Ickes was unavailable and we were proceeding with our inquiry at that time. You've only identified Ms. Sabrin—

Mr. CHERTOFF. OK. Fine. So now, why were you unavailable, Mr. Ickes? What was the source of the unavailability at this time? See, my question—

Mr. ICKES. Do you want me to answer the question or are you going to go on?

Mr. CHERTOFF. In what way were you unavailable during July and August of 1994, to be asked questions directly?

Mr. ICKES. Mr. Chertoff, I don't know what day it was. I may have been out of town. I travel with the President a lot. They may have decided that—I don't know what the facts and circumstances are. You're asking about something I have no idea about. All I do know is the following—that I distinctly recall being interviewed by Ms. Sherburne and Ms. Chestin.

Mr. CHERTOFF. But these questions were asked not in that interview, but in a subsequent occasion to your lawyer.

Mr. ICKES. I don't know whether it was prior or subsequent. All I know is that they were asked of my lawyer.

Mr. CHERTOFF. And you have no reason, by the way, to believe that your lawyer would have been attempting to mislead or would have been inaccurate in any way in conveying the information that she was conveying; right? So far as you know.

Mr. ICKES. I don't know what information she conveyed. Somebody else took these notes. I wasn't present, and I don't know the context.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Now did you become aware—I take it that you familiarized—

The CHAIRMAN. At this point in time, because I have difficulty in following this, Ms. Sherburne, we will send you a letter. I am not suggesting that you or the White House in connection with this matter, have improperly withheld notes. As you indicated, Counsel saw them, did not make a request. I'm going to make a specific request for those notes, the interview that you conducted with Mr. Ickes. So would you make those available to us, please?

Ms. SHERBURNE. Senator, I'd be happy to make them available. The CHAIRMAN. Thank you.

Ms. SHERBURNE. I think the reason that Mr. Chertoff didn't request them is because we didn't question Mr. Ickes on this subject in that interview. We frankly didn't see its relevance or meaning to the inquiry, and we didn't pursue it.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Well, since it came up later and it wasn't done directly, I think it's interesting that it was done in a way that apparently allows Mr. Ickes now to distance himself. But I don't want to stick on this point.

Ms. SHERBURNE. The interview with Ms. Sabrin occurred first. Mr. Ickes' interview was following that.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Well, I don't want to start your examination now, Ms. Sherburne.

Senator SARBANES. Ms. Sherburne, what was the order of those interviews, again?

Ms. SHERBURNE. The first interview was with Ms. Sabrin.

Senator SARBANES. All right.

Ms. SHERBURNE. If you'll remember, in July 1994, we had a very compressed time period in which to conduct these interviews. So we were trying to schedule them. Mr. Ickes' schedule was not—it was difficult coordinating his schedule with our interview schedule. And so, in order to get the information we needed, we spoke to his lawyer. Then later, when he became available, we interviewed—

Senator SARBANES. And you interviewed him directly, though.

Ms. SHERBURNE. That is correct.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Ms. Sherburne, I take it you had no reason to believe that what Ms. Sabrin was telling you was inaccurate. Right?

Ms. SHERBURNE. We were asking Ms. Sabrin questions and I had reason to believe that she was reviewing information she had collected from a variety of sources. I don't know what her source of information was for this sort of thing.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Well, I don't want to—

Mr. BENNETT. Mr. Chairman, since we've been in this—

The CHAIRMAN. Yes, counsel? Right.

Mr. BENNETT. Could I just take 30 seconds?

The CHAIRMAN. Certainly.

Mr. BENNETT. I appreciate it, Mr. Chairman.

The CHAIRMAN. Why don't you sit at—

Senator DODD. Use the microphone.

Mr. BENNETT. I do appreciate it. But I do think that it's of interest to the Committee to clarify.

The CHAIRMAN. Sure.

Mr. BENNETT. First of all, Ms. Sabrin was never interviewed at all. It was simply a conversation that White House Counsel talked to Ms. Sabrin of my office. I should state for the record that we never authorized Ms. Sherburne or anyone else in the White House and, frankly, we're quite surprised that conversations between lawyers would be provided. But it has been provided. I only say that because I think the record should be complete. But there was no interview of us and there was no effort on our part to insulate Mr. Ickes in any way. He's always been available and has fully answered the questions to the best of his ability.

Thank you.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Well, I will tell you, because this issue is going to come up later, I guess we will have to try to track down what appear to be very clear recollections that are being conveyed at a point in time in one location—

The CHAIRMAN. Please sit down, Mr. Ickes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. —whereas, in another location, namely, in a Senate deposition, we're getting a much different degree of recollection. But I don't want to spend the time quarreling about it. We can address that at another point.

I want to ask you, Mr. Ickes, whether in January and February of 1994, you became aware from learning the facts as they pertained either to the Rose Law Firm conflict of interest issue or to any other aspect of Madison, that a man by the name of Seth Ward was one of the individuals whose name came up in this Madison Rose Law Firm set of issues?

Mr. ICKES. During what period of time?

Mr. CHERTOFF. January and February of 1994?

Mr. ICKES. I can't say as a fact. I assume so. It's a name that's certainly familiar to me and it may well have come up during that period of time.

Mr. CHERTOFF. He, in fact, had been your client when you were in private practice. Correct?

Mr. ICKES. In what respect?

Mr. CHERTOFF. Well, was there a company named POM, that you did legal work for when you were in private practice?

Mr. ICKES. I did. For a very short period of time, I did represent POM.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Did he have any kind of relationship with POM?

Mr. ICKES. I know what I read in the papers, that he did apparently have some relationship with POM. I do not think at the time, I'm not positive of this—this was a long time ago, so you're taxing a frail memory—that he—POM was referred to me by Mrs. Clinton. It is or was at that time, in the mid-1980's, a maker of parking meters, I think one of the largest in the country.

Mrs. Clinton asked me to represent them in connection with some work in New York. It was a very, very short representation in terms of time and modest beyond belief in terms of fees. I am not at all sure that I knew at that time—I'm not saying I didn't—but I'm not at all sure that I knew at that time that Seth Ward was connected with it.

Mr. CHERTOFF. The issue of POM, didn't it in fact come up in the whole set of questions raised about whether there was a conflict of interest with the Rose Law Firm?

Mr. ICKES. It may have. I don't recall, but it may well have.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Was there a point where you yourself wondered whether you were the appropriate person to be involved in dealing with this issue of Rose Law Firm conflicts or Whitewater, when you became aware of the fact that POM and Mrs. Clinton and the Rose Law Firm's representation of POM, had in fact become part of what was being looked at by the RTC and FDIC?

Mr. ICKES. It may well have been. As I sit here today, I have no recollection of that, Mr. Chertoff. But I'm not saying that it didn't come up.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Well, when was the period of time that you represented POM?

Mr. ICKES. As I recall, it was in the mid-1980's. I'm not positive of that, but I think it was in the mid-1980's.

Mr. CHERTOFF. And that was referred to you by Mrs. Clinton?

Mr. ICKES. It was referred to me by Mrs. Clinton, or let me try to be more precise. It was referred to me either by Mrs. Clinton or by somebody in her law firm who used her name. I don't recall exactly which.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Now did you have discussion with the First Lady concerning the RTC or FDIC investigations which you testified earlier were the background against which you had Mr. Eggleston prepare this February 28th memo?

Mr. ICKES. Did I discuss the investigations?

Mr. CHERTOFF. Yes.

Mr. ICKES. Or the FDIC and the RTC investigations?

Mr. CHERTOFF. Did you discuss the reports with her? The reports were transmitted up the line attached to your transmittal letter and Mr. Eggleston's memo.

Mr. ICKES. Right.

Mr. CHERTOFF. In fact, the very first paragraph of your March 1st transmittal memo talks about the attachment of the FDIC report and the RTC report. Did you discuss these reports with Mrs. Clinton?

Mr. ICKES. I don't recall discussing. I may well have, but I don't recall discussing the reports with her.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Did you review the reports in order to be prepared to discuss it with her?

Mr. ICKES. I think I reviewed the reports. I do not recall reviewing them in order to have a conversation with her about them. I may well have had a conversation. I don't recall having one, however.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Did you review them in order to be prepared to have a conversation with her?

Mr. ICKES. No. I think I've just said that I did not.

Mr. CHERTOFF. I want to turn your attention now to the Gearan notes. Before I move into this section, why don't I wait until I get a fresh 10 minutes.

The CHAIRMAN. Senator Sarbanes.

Senator SARBANES. Carol.

OPENING COMMENTS OF SENATOR CAROL MOSELEY-BRAUN

Senator MOSELEY-BRAUN. Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

I would like to ask a question. And I don't know if it's appropriate to ask the question of the witness or of the Chair. But when I was home this last weekend, one of the things that people would ask me most about is how much is this costing the taxpayers and how much money is involved in this whole effort? And we know from just the kind of compilation of materials by this Committee, we've already spent of official Government money about $30 million on these hearings.

The CHAIRMAN. No, not on these hearings.

Senator MOSELEY-BRAUN. I'm sorry. On this issue, the total. Independent Counsel, $23 million—

The CHAIRMAN. Yes. But with respect to the Committee, our authorization, and we have not exceeded that, is about $900,000 that we have spent to date. Our total authorization—

Senator MOSELEY-BRAUN. $1.3 million, $1,350,000 for the Senate?

The CHAIRMAN. No. I think it was $950,000.

Senator SARBANES. We spent $400,000 in the previous Congress.

Senator MOSELEY-BRAUN. Right.

Senator SARBANES. Then another $950,000 in this Congress.

Senator MOSELEY-BRAUN. $1.3 million.

The CHAIRMAN. $1.3 million.

Senator MOSELEY-BRAUN. Then the Pillsbury Report was about $3.6 million.

The CHAIRMAN. Well, that was not this Committee.

Senator MOSELEY-BRAUN. I understand.

The CHAIRMAN. You have to be careful because—

Senator MOSELEY-BRAUN. I understand, and I am going somewhere else.

The CHAIRMAN. Certainly.

Senator MOSELEY-BRAUN. And $24 million for the Independent Counsel. But the thing that really got me, Mr. Chairman, and I have a specific question to ask about this, this fundraising letter from Citizens United is a fundraising letter from the people that put out the Willie Horton campaigns, which is bad enough. But what really distresses me, Mr. Chairman, is that it refers to a member of the Senate staff working on this Committee, as a, "top investigator," for this fundraising group.

It say, "our top investigator is on the inside working on this Committee." Then it goes on—wait, let me find that part—"our Citizens United investigators," again referring to investigators, "in Washington have run out of funds and must pay their expenses. So if there's any way you can please send some money. A major donation of $100, $250, $500, or $1,000 would be a blow to the White House," et cetera.

Now, my question is do we have members working for this Committee that are getting paid or somehow being supported by this fundraising group?

The CHAIRMAN. The first I heard of this was earlier today, even of this letter. But I do believe that my colleague is correct in raising the question whether any Members of this Committee or any who have access and who are working on behalf of Senators to the Committee, have any outside employment with this group or any other groups. And I will ascertain whether that is the case. I do not believe it's the case, but I will look into it.

Senator MOSELEY-BRAUN. Well, I'd like—

The CHAIRMAN. No, I'll ask.

Senator MOSELEY-BRAUN. I'd like the letter to go into the record, Mr. Chairman, or the fundraising letter, because it's 4 pages. But I call your attention particularly on the first page, very clear—our top investigator is on the inside directing the probe. Now that's very serious business, Mr. Chairman. I have to believe that if not only taxpayer dollars are going for this, but we have outside groups out fundraising based on having people on the inside of this Committee involved with this, we have another set of major problems that I think warrant your looking into.

So I would very much appreciate——

The CHAIRMAN. Senator, I have just made inquiry. But I will get it in writing so that, for the record, we can indicate what the employment status is of the individual raised. But I've been informed by a staffer—I just raised the question—that the individual mentioned does not and is not employed and receives no compensation from this group.

Senator MOSELEY-BRAUN. I would very much like you to look into that, if you would.

The CHAIRMAN. Yes, certainly.

Senator MOSELEY-BRAUN. I look forward to your response. I would like this fundraising business to go into the mail. It's really scurrilous, in my opinion. But the idea——

The CHAIRMAN. Well, if you notice, and I mentioned before that they attack just about everything that moves in order to raise funds. That's not unusual.

Senator MOSELEY-BRAUN. Yes, I understand.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chairman himself also has been attacked.

Senator MOSELEY-BRAUN. The real issue of concern is whether or not this fundraising group has somebody, "on the inside directing the probe."

The CHAIRMAN. Certainly.

Senator MOSELEY-BRAUN. And so if you would look into that, I would appreciate it. I'll yield the rest of my time back to Senator Sarbanes or to Mr. Ben-Veniste.

Senator SARBANES. Mr. Chairman, in the course of ascertaining the employment status, I think we also need to ascertain whether there's any relationship there that would enable this group to make this assertion in this fundraising letter on the basis of some connection with a staff member of the Committee.

The CHAIRMAN. Well, Senator, on its face——

Senator SARBANES. No, let me finish, Mr. Chairman.

The CHAIRMAN. Certainly.

Senator SARBANES. The treatment of you in the fundraising letter is 180-degrees different than the treatment of the staff member. They're focusing on you for people to direct these petitions to you and also, at the same time, they tell them, don't just do the petition. Send us money. So they have this set-up here where they sign a petition that they send in to them, which is then, I think, to be transmitted to you, and at the same time, they're to make a contribution. But the use of the staff person is asserting that they have an inside into the investigation that's taking place here.

Senator MOSELEY-BRAUN. Directing the investigation.

Senator SARBANES. Pardon?

Senator MOSELEY-BRAUN. Directing the investigation.

The CHAIRMAN. Well, we know that's not true. I mean, that's just not true.

Senator SARBANES. But that's the assertion, and they are using that, obviously, as a basis for their fundraising. Now they may be completely misstating things, but I think it's important to look into them in order to ascertain what the situation is. It's made more complicated because it is my understanding that Mr. Bossie did have a relationship with this organization over quite a period of time and was a very important and essential part of its functioning. So I think there is something that needs to be examined here.

Senator MOSELEY-BRAUN. Again, I yield the rest of my time to Mr. Ben-Veniste.

Thank you.

The CHAIRMAN. First, I make the observation again that I have ascertained that the staffer no longer has a relationship, nor did he ever have a relationship once he terminated with that group.

Second, as it relates to the claims made by the group, there are groups that make claims every day. I don't think the Committee can or should be in the position of attempting to ascertain the reliability of the claims that various groups make, or the accuracy of their statements.

Certainly, as it relates to whether somebody is employed, that is absolutely something that we will do. I've learned again that that person—and I've learned it verbally—has no connection with this particular group at this time. But I will get that in writing with definiteness and make it part of the record and submit it—

Senator DODD. Mr. Chairman.

Senator SARBANES. Mr. Chairman.

Senator DODD. If I might inquire as well on this point. We've had a couple of occasions when—because we have a lot of sensitive material that Counsel has to deal with. It's a question, too, whether or not anybody has access to that information and then shares that information.

I think that, because of the prior relationship and given the very public nature of this fundraising request and the particular note of the relationship, there have been instances where we have seen leaks and so forth.

The Chairman has been very firm on the issue, and I commend him for it, on warning people about what happens if they're caught releasing or giving out information. And I realize that the most important one would be whether or not you have a financial relationship. But I would respectfully inquire as to whether or not any information gets shared.

Given the previous history here, that becomes a means by which information is then pumped into a letter and becomes part of the fundraising technique as well.

The CHAIRMAN. Well, let me say that I will make it a point to ascertain whether information, nonpublic information, has been shared and we will make it a point, and I think we've said this to all of our staffers, that we expect nonpublic information not to be shared with anyone.

Senator DODD. You've been very good on that. Appreciate it.

The CHAIRMAN. We have been pretty fortunate. There have been some unfortunate slips. I think sometimes people try to curry favor with one another. But I think, basically, the Committee staff has done a good job on both sides.

I will now recognize Mr. Chertoff.

Senator MOSELEY-BRAUN. Mr. Chairman, no, no. Please, if I may, before you go to Mr. Chertoff.

The CHAIRMAN. Certainly.

Senator MOSELEY-BRAUN. I understand this is the Senate and we say nice things and call each other, my friend, as we say nasty things about each other sometimes. But the fact of the matter is that this is a very serious statement. It's a very serious statement that goes to the heart of this body.

I am very concerned, not only about the remuneration, which is more than just a salary, but this statement is that this group's top investigator is on the inside. Now, I think we have to look at the relationship issue here as well.

The CHAIRMAN. I said we would.

Senator MOSELEY-BRAUN. We know we have had problems with leaks and the like. But leaks—obviously, if an outside group's top investigator is on the inside, it kind of goes without saying that that's probably where some of the leaks come from. But the point I think is that it undermines all the other good work of the other good staff, people who are trying to do their job and trying to be faithful to their responsibilities to the Senate and to this Committee, if we have someone who can be, even in any stretch of the imagination, described by an inflammatory group or an inflammatory statement by a group like this, as our top investigator, on the inside.

That's very troubling to me. And I would very much like you to, when you ask the question, you probe as much as you can into the nature of the relationship, if the relationship has terminated, when it terminated, what was the relationship before, whether or not the Members of this Committee knew about that relationship before this individual started working on the inside. I think those are very pertinent questions to an issue that we have spent this much time and money getting at.

The CHAIRMAN. Let me say that I will take the Senator's questions that you want answered and they will be asked exactly in the manner that you have just enunciated. So I'm not going to attempt to repeat verbatim. But I'm going to take that from the record and this way we'll have that.

I will note for the record, though, that the individual in question, I have been informed, has terminated his relationship prior to coming to work for one of the Senators on this Committee, does not work, per se, for the Special Committee, but works for one of the Senators. He's on his personal staff. I think that's an important point to make. But I also believe that the questions put forth by the Senator are important to ascertain. We will ascertain them.

Senator MOSELEY-BRAUN. But, Mr. Chairman, if he is on the Federal payroll, he can't be described as a top investigator for this group that's asking people to send in $1,000.

The CHAIRMAN. You know, Senator, now we're trying to evaluate the validity of their remarks. I don't believe they're accurate.

Senator MOSELEY-BRAUN. Well, we can get the validity from the statement that you're going to get.

The CHAIRMAN. I'm going to do that.

Senator MOSELEY-BRAUN. And I believe you are. Thank you.

The CHAIRMAN. I'm going to do that. I'm going to ask exactly the questions that you put forth in terms of what was the relationship, has it been terminated, when was it terminated, and we'll get an answer for the Committee. The Committee is entitled to that.

Mr. Chertoff.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

Mr. Ickes, I want to ask you, before we resume with what we have been talking about, since we have you here, your name crops up as someone who may have been in the residence during the period of the latter part of July 1995, into the middle part of August, 1995. So I am going to ask you a question that we have asked other people. Have you ever been in a room which is described as the Book Room on the third floor of the residence? Namely, a location in which there are books, gifts, and other things of that sort? And I will confine myself to the time period to include July and August, 1995.

Mr. ICKES. The answer is no.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Have you, before January 4, 1996, seen these billing records of the Rose Law Firm? And I'll send them down to you to look at. For the record, these are the billing records which were furnished to the Committee in early January of this year.

Mr. ICKES. Mr. Chertoff, I don't recall ever seeing these before. Unless one was printed in a newspaper—

Mr. CHERTOFF. But putting aside the newspapers.

Mr. ICKES. Yes. I don't recall ever seeing those before.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Do you have any knowledge about how billing records came to be, putting aside what you have read in the papers or heard on the media, do you have any knowledge of how the billing records came to be in the Book Room in the summer of 1995?

Mr. ICKES. I have no knowledge.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Now let me direct your attention, Mr. Ickes, to the notes that Mr. Gearan made, in particular, of a meeting on January 7, 1994, which are contained, in particular, on pages 20576 and 20577.

Mr. ICKES. OK. I have those, Mr. Chertoff.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Now to just set the context, on 20576, attributed to you is the statement, "Beverly Bassett is so f---ing important, if we f--- this up, we're done." Do you dispute that you made that statement?

Mr. ICKES. I don't recall making the statement. On the other hand, this is what Mr. Gearan's notes show.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Do you agree that you believed at the time in substance that "Beverly Bassett was f---ing important, if we f--- this up, we're done"? Does that reflect the sentiment or belief you had at that period of time when you were having discussions with the Whitewater Response Team?

Mr. ICKES. As I sit here today, Mr. Chertoff, I don't recall having those sentiments. I do concede or I agree that she was important because we were being asked a lot of questions by reporters about her. There were editorials about her. So the fact is that since she was being talked about in the press, we were being peppered by the press with questions, she was important.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Now then, on the next page, still attributed to you—and the way Mr. Gearan organizes his notes, there's an attribution and a dash and then text. On this last page, there's an attribution to you and a dash and then the next attribution is at the bottom, Quinn dash arm's length. Did Mr. Quinn attend these meetings of the Whitewater Response Team?

Mr. ICKES. Not that I recall. I'm not saying that he didn't, but I literally have no recollection of his attending those.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Focusing on what's attributed to you, it indicates, we can't send PB, BL, MW. It will come out. I take it your position at the meetings was that you didn't want to have someone from the White House or someone closely associated with the White House going down to talk to Ms. Bassett because it would come out and be embarrassing in some way?

Mr. ICKES. As I've testified before, Mr. Chertoff, earlier today, my concern was that there was nothing illegal with anyone contacting Ms. Bassett, but if somebody from the White House did contact her, it could be used politically or from a public relations point of view in a very adverse way.

Mr. CHERTOFF. How would it be adverse?

Mr. ICKES. What?

Mr. CHERTOFF. How would it be adverse?

Mr. ICKES. Because people would say—my concern was that some people could say that these contacts for the purpose of trying to influence her. Influence her in what way? Who knows? I mean, what she had said was she had told the truth, as far as we knew, that she had done nothing wrong, notwithstanding the allegations that were being raised in editorials in December 1993 and early 1994. But it was my view, better not to have somebody from the White House go and contact her.

Mr. CHERTOFF. So your belief was that if someone from the White House were in touch with her or were known to be in touch with her, that could create an appearance that there was an effort to influence her. Is that your basic thrust?

Mr. ICKES. I was concerned that some people could raise that as an issue.

Mr. CHERTOFF. So your position, then, was no one acting on behalf of the White House ought to try to contact her.

Mr. ICKES. I thought it was the better part of discretion not to.

Mr. CHERTOFF. But then the conversation goes on to say, item by item, make sure her story is OK. What does that mean? What does that refer to?

Mr. ICKES. Well, again, I didn't write those words, Mr. Chertoff. As I've testified before today, we wanted to make, we were being asked a lot of questions about her and her decisions or rulings, whatever one wants to call them.

Major newspapers were raising serious questions as to whether there had been arm's-length treatment by her with respect to Madison Guaranty, especially since Mrs. Clinton's law firm was then representing Madison Guaranty. We wanted to make sure that we knew what the facts were to the extent possible. I think that Mr. Siewert's memorandum is evidence of that.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Then there's a notation of make sure her story's OK. There's a list of three possible people—Tisdale in Lindsey firm, Skip, and PB friend New York lawyer. Is it your testimony that those were people who were going to make sure her story was legally correct?

Mr. ICKES. No, that's not my testimony. In fact, I've testified just to the opposite earlier today.

Mr. CHERTOFF. What was their job?

Mr. ICKES. What?

Mr. CHERTOFF. What was their function going to be?

Mr. ICKES. I don't know what their function was going to be. As I testified earlier today, Mr. Chertoff, I don't know whether I raised those names or whether other people raised those names. There were a number of people in these meetings and I suspect that other—first of all, I didn't write this. Second of all, other people may well have raised these as names as people who might possibly contact her.

Mr. CHERTOFF. For what reason?

Mr. ICKES. What?

Mr. CHERTOFF. For what reason?

Mr. ICKES. We wanted to find out as much information as possible, Mr. Chertoff. There was nothing illegal in contacting her and we wanted to find out as much information as possible about the facts and circumstances. The fact that the Siewert memorandum is evidence of that—

Mr. CHERTOFF. Wait a minute, Mr. Ickes. You're straying outside the bounds of the question. The question is really very simple. Your testimony is you take the position no one ought to contact her because it could create an appearance problem with some people. But then in the same conversation, the issue arises of alternative people who might contact her. And the only difference seems to be whether they're people who are obviously affiliated with the White House or whether they're people whose affiliation with the White House is remote and might not be detected.

Mr. ICKES. Mr. Chertoff, I don't know who raised those names. I didn't take those notes. It's not at all clear to me that I raised those names. Others may have raised them.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Do you think you didn't hear this part of the conversation?

Mr. ICKES. What?

Mr. CHERTOFF. Do you think you didn't hear this part of the conversation?

Mr. ICKES. I don't know whether I heard this part of the conversation or not. All I'm telling you is that I didn't take those notes. I don't know whether I raised those names or not. There were a number of other people in the room.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Did you chime in when someone said, well, let's send somebody from Arkansas to talk to her?

Mr. ICKES. I think my general position was better not to have people contact Ms. Bassett.

Mr. CHERTOFF. In fact, Mr. Rutherford did contact Ms. Bassett; is that right?

Mr. ICKES. According to this newspaper article, apparently, he did.

Mr. CHERTOFF. And your testimony—

Mr. ICKES. But I point out that they live in the same town, they live in the same State, and I suspect that they've known each other for many, many, many, many years.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Your testimony is that you were unaware of that?

Mr. ICKES. To the best of my recollection, I will testify to the best of my recollection as I sit here today. I was unaware of it.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Mr. Tisdale contacted her and you were unaware of that, too?

Mr. ICKES. To the best of my recollection as I sit here today.

Mr. CHERTOFF. PB is that Paul Begala, or in this context, is it Paul Berry?

Mr. ICKES. Paul, who?

Mr. CHERTOFF. Berry—B-e-r-r-y.

Mr. ICKES. I don't recognize the latter name. It could be either one. I don't recognize Paul Berry's name.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Berry—B-e-r-r-y.

Mr. ICKES. B-e-r-r-y?

Mr. CHERTOFF. Yes.

Mr. ICKES. I don't recognize that name. But it could be Paul Begala.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You don't recognize Paul Berry to be someone who has known the President for a long time from back in Arkansas?

Mr. ICKES. I do not recognize the name, Mr. Chertoff.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Were you present in the White House when Ms. Bassett was a visitor there in January 1994, would have been invited to attend a movie screening?

Mr. ICKES. Was I present in the White House?

Mr. CHERTOFF. Yes.

Mr. ICKES. I was employed by the White House.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Were you present with her or were you aware of the fact that she was at the White House in January 1994, attending a movie screening with the President?

Mr. ICKES. At the time?

Mr. CHERTOFF. Yes, at the time.

Mr. ICKES. Not that I recall. I do not think that I was aware that she was here.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Did you become aware of it afterwards?

Mr. ICKES. I don't recall becoming aware. I may well have.

Mr. CHERTOFF. The next page of the notes is a conversation the next day. And you report—

Mr. ICKES. You're on what page? I'm sorry.

Mr. CHERTOFF. I'm on 20578.

Mr. ICKES. OK.

The CHAIRMAN. "7 January, Mack's office, Whitewater, attributed to you. To try to reopen it is impossible. POTUS can't. Staff can't. Christopher to talk to FLOTUS. Bob Barnett." POTUS is the President of the United States, in the typical vernacular of the White House?

Mr. ICKES. Yes. Yes, that's the vernacular.

Mr. CHERTOFF. FLOTUS is the First Lady of the United States?

Mr. ICKES. Yes, that's correct.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You reported to the people in the Whitewater Response Team on this date that, at least as of this point in time, it was impossible to reopen the question of an Independent Counsel with the First Lady. Is that correct?

Mr. ICKES. I wouldn't say I reported that. Again, these are not my notes. These are not in quotes. These are characterizations and notes taken by Mr. Gearan. But there is no question that at that time the First Lady had extraordinarily grave reservations about the appointment of a Special Counsel for the reasons that I've already articulated. And I think it is fair to say that the President shared to some extent in that view.

Mr. CHERTOFF. The note indicates, though, that the President himself couldn't reopen the issue with the First Lady. Is that true?

Mr. ICKES. Well, again, I don't recall saying that. That's Mr. Gearan's notes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Is it true? Is that in fact the case?

Mr. ICKES. Is what true?

Mr. CHERTOFF. That the President, at least as of January 7th, was himself unable to reopen this question of the Independent Counsel, the Special Counsel, with the First Lady?

Mr. ICKES. First of all, I don't know, number one.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You don't know.

Mr. ICKES. Number two is that he is the President and he was the one who ultimately instructed his Counsel, Bernard Nussbaum, to ask the Attorney General to appoint a Special Counsel.

Mr. CHERTOFF. But my question was, as of this point in time, several days before that letter was written to the Attorney General, was the state of play such that the President himself was unable to reopen this question with the First Lady?

Mr. ICKES. Mr. Chertoff, I didn't write the notes. I don't know what the phrase, reopened it, means. He is the President of the United States. He made the decision to request Special Counsel and Special Counsel was, in fact, appointed.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Did Warren Christopher get asked to talk to the First Lady?

Mr. ICKES. I have no—I don't know whether he did or whether he didn't.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Was he asked to talk to the First Lady?

Mr. ICKES. I testified just a moment ago. I don't know whether he was or whether he wasn't.

Mr. CHERTOFF. So you didn't ask him.

Mr. ICKES. I have no recollection of asking the Secretary to talk to Mrs. Clinton.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Did someone say to you that they were going to ask Mr. Christopher to talk to the First Lady?

Mr. ICKES. They may well have. I don't recall.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Later, at the bottom of the notes, and this goes back to that discussion or series of questions we had earlier concerning the memo where one of the objections to a Special Counsel was the notion of such a person squeezing friends and associates of the President.

Mr. ICKES. OK. You're on what page? I'm sorry, Mr. Chertoff.

Mr. CHERTOFF. I'm still on page 20578.

Mr. ICKES. Seven, what?

Mr. CHERTOFF. Page 20578.

Mr. ICKES. 78. OK.

Mr. CHERTOFF. It's the same page we've been on.

Mr. ICKES. Bear with me, I'm getting there. Got it.

Mr. CHERTOFF. It's the same page we've been on for the last few minutes. You don't have to leave it yet. I want to remind you about the testimony we had a little earlier, which, one of the arguments against the Special Counsel was that that prosecutor might squeeze friends and associates of the President and might subject some of them to indictment. There's a notation at the bottom where Mr. Nussbaum talks about indictments will be Betsey Wright. Do you remember Mr. Nussbaum saying that?

Mr. ICKES. I don't remember Mr. Nussbaum saying it. All I know is what I read in Mr. Gearan's testimony about that.

Mr. CHERTOFF. So you have no independent memory about that?

Mr. ICKES. I have no independent memory.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Did you attend all the Whitewater Response Team meetings?

Mr. ICKES. To my knowledge, I did.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Again, just to make it clear, there were, at least during the first 2-week period, at least one, if not two, a day; is that right?

Mr. ICKES. That's correct.

Mr. CHERTOFF. At least, would you agree with me there would have been in the first half of January, about a dozen meetings?

Mr. ICKES. I don't want to put a number on it. There were a number of meetings.

Mr. CHERTOFF. One of the early meetings is the meeting in which Mr. Nussbaum described the difference between the good-hearted prosecutor and the good-hearted Nussbaum and the bad-hearted prosecutor. Do you remember that?

Mr. ICKES. I don't recall that. All I know about that is what I read in Mr. Gearan's testimony. Again, he took these notes.

I just want to point out to you, Mr. Chertoff, that this was not the only thing that I was doing. I had been brought down and asked to join the White House staff to manage the health care effort, which was a mammoth effort I knew was getting very much involved in that.

So this was not the only—I understand for the purposes of this Committee that you're focused very much entirely on this effort here, and I'm not criticizing you for that. But the fact of the matter was I usually get into the White House at 6:00 in the morning. I often do not leave until 9:00 or 10:00 at night.

This was not the only thing that I was involved in. It was a serious matter and I was paying a considerable amount of attention to it. But I had a lot of other things that I was paying attention to while I was at the White House at that time, including the upcoming general elections.

Mr. CHERTOFF. The upcoming general elections? You were paying attention to them in January 1994?

Mr. ICKES. Indeed.

Mr. CHERTOFF. For the upcoming general elections. So you were paying attention to that in January 1994?

Mr. ICKES. Indeed.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Mr. Ickes, there was a connection in your mind actually in January 1994, between the Whitewater matter and the health care initiative. Is that correct?

Mr. ICKES. There was a concern about the focus of the First Lady, yes. That was discussed.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Did Margaret Williams attend meetings of the Whitewater Response Team?

Mr. ICKES. I'm sorry. I didn't hear you.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Margaret Williams. Did she attend meetings?

Mr. ICKES. On occasion. I don't recall her as attending all of them, but she did attend some.

Mr. CHERTOFF. She was a regular member of the Whitewater Response Team group?

Mr. ICKES. I don't know what you mean by "regular." As I testified, to my best recollection, she did not attend all of them, but she attended some.

Mr. CHERTOFF. I want to go back, but I have run out of time. I'll go back to your deposition.

The CHAIRMAN. Senator Sarbanes.

Senator SARBANES. Mr. Ickes, when did you come down and begin your responsibilities at the White House?

Mr. ICKES. As I recall, Senator, I came down on the first Monday in January. I think it was literally the first working day of the first week in January 1994.

Senator SARBANES. As soon as you arrived, this Whitewater issue and the question of appointing a Special Counsel was front and center in the press, was it not?

Mr. ICKES. It was. And I knew very little about it.

Senator SARBANES. The suggestion or the innuendo is, since this group was meeting every day, that somehow there's something wrong with that. But on January 3rd, there is an article in the press reporting on Senator Dole's appearance on NBC the day before, on Sunday, where he accused Reno of dragging her feet on appointment of an Independent Counsel, and said, "It is high time that she did what she knows she should do."

Dole—and this is the article—is angry at a lengthy probe of the Iran-Contra affair during the Reagan Administration, has led a GOP effort on Capitol Hill to block reinstatement of the post-Watergate law providing for court appointment of Independent Counsel to investigate wrongdoing by high-level Government officials. In fact, Senator Dole and others were quite outspoken in their opposition to the Independent Counsel. He was quoted as saying:

In far too many instances, the investigations conducted by Independent Counsels have turned out to be partisan political fishing expeditions, expeditions which have accomplished nothing more than wasting millions of tax dollars.

Another time, he said:

The statute placed no limits on the amount of time and money an Independent Counsel can spend on his target, nor does it monitor the motives behind the counsel's actions. It has allowed someone like Lawrence Walsh to go down every blind alley pursuing more conspiracy theories than Oliver Stone.

Now nevertheless, with these misgivings about the Independent Counsel that involved redoing the statute—and that was not then in place—Dole said yesterday:

Without the law, Reno could use her authority as Attorney General to appoint an outside counsel to handle the case, which is currently being investigated by career Government employees.

A similar proposal was made by Representative Leach. Justice Department spokesman Carl Stern said:

Anyone Reno appointed would be under her supervision and influence rather than serving independently by court appointments, as the law intended. Unlike Dole, Reno supports restoration of the Independent Counsel law, which was approved late last year by the Senate, and slated for consideration this year by the House.

This was on the agenda, in effect, when you arrived, was it not?

Mr. ICKES. Very much so, Senator; so much so that Mack McLarty asked me, barely after I had stepped off the plane into the White House, to devote a lot of attention to it.

Senator SARBANES. In fact, the attention was heightened on the 11th of January with a letter from Senator Dole and the Chairman and others to Attorney General Reno saying:

We regret that you have rejected Congressional requests to appoint a Special Counsel to examine the allegations of potential misconduct that have recently surfaced.

Then goes on to urge her to go ahead and appoint a Special Counsel, which was, of course, the very issue that was being discussed by your group over this period of time. Is that correct?

Mr. ICKES. Exactly. Senator, if one had a compilation of the editorial opinions at that time from across the country, there was a growing drumbeat from major newspapers, starting with The New York Times, The Washington Post, The Wall Street Journal, and papers further west, to have Special Counsel appointed.

Senator SARBANES. Now on the 12th of January, the Counsel to the President, Mr. Nussbaum, sent a letter to Janet Reno, and I quote it:

Dear Madam Attorney General:

The President has directed me to request you to appoint as Special Counsel a respected, impartial and qualified attorney who is not a Member of the Department of Justice or an employee of the Federal Government, to conduct an appropriate independent investigation of the Whitewater matter and report to the American people.

That was on January 12th. And as I understand it, Attorney General Reno, I think, on the 20th if I'm not mistaken, announced the appointment of a Special Counsel. Is that correct?

Mr. ICKES. That's my recollection. I think, Senator although I do not have that letter in front of me, that there was in no way any restrictions requested with respect to scope or anything else.

Senator SARBANES. That is a good point, because that was pursued earlier with a suggestion that there was an effort to perhaps intrude in upon the authorities of the Attorney General in this matter. This is the letter and it's very short, two-paragraphs. I read the first paragraph. The second paragraph says:

In view of the gravity of the President's responsibilities and the need for a prompt resolution, I respectfully request that this investigation be conducted as expeditiously as possible.

Very truly yours,

Bernard Nussbaum, Counsel to the President.

That's the extent of the letter that went to the Attorney General requesting the appointment of a Special Counsel.

Senator Dodd.

Senator DODD. I thank my colleague.

I guess I was struck—I had forgotten this. You said it was the first Monday in January you joined the White House in 1994?

Mr. ICKES. As I recall, Senator Dodd, it was not graven in my mind, but I think it was the first Monday of January 1994.

Senator DODD. So when we look at all these notes and memos now that we've gone over here ad nauseam here today of this 5th, 6th, 7th, 8th of January, you'd been at the White House all of a maximum of 7 days, maybe less.

Mr. ICKES. Not only that, I probably knew less about Whitewater than anyone around. I found it completely—unlike my wife, who followed it closely—I found it very, very confusing. And it took too much time to read all the accounts in the newspapers. So I literally had read one or two articles about it.

Senator DODD. Again, I think there's the assumption probably by an awful lot of people that you had been in the White House going back to the very first days of the Administration. So in fact, all of this swirling information around—you were hurled into this; so a lot of the names of the people they are talking about, the Carvers and so forth—I was wondering myself I guess, a while back, why you might not know these people. Now I know why you didn't know them. You hadn't really been here before.

Mr. ICKES. I'd come up with the President very early in the Administration, not in an official capacity, and then had gone back to New York. But this was literally the first week I was there. And again, I want to emphasize this was not the only thing that was under my jurisdiction. I had the political apparatus of the White House under my jurisdiction, and most importantly, or as importantly, the President's health care initiative, which was this very important issue that we were trying to move at that point.

Senator DODD. I appreciate that. We should maybe have made more of that. I guess the assumption is that everyone knew it. I guess they did, but they didn't relate it. So here we've had you now on the witness stand here for about 6 hours, going over basically events around those 2 or 3 days, and these notes. And we've gone back over and over and over and over again.

My response—and again, I appreciate what people think. But as I listen to all of this, the end of it, in the context of what these hearings are all about, my response to basically what I've heard is, "So what?" Because frankly, as the Senator from Maryland has pointed out, you got the request from the President on the 12th. You got the appointment on the 20th. And we've spent an awful lot of time here talking about memos back and forth, and discussions and dates that all amount to nothing, because in fact the request is made by the President and the Attorney General names Mr. Fiske. And Mr. Fiske is widely applauded by virtually everybody from both sides of the aisle in Congress, Republicans and Democrats alike.

Mr. ICKES. He received a lot of praise from both sides.

Senator DODD. So we've gone through all these excruciating details in these memos, and that's why I say, "So what?" at the end of this. I don't know what we've established here, except for the fact that at the end of the day, this President calls for the appointment of a Special Counsel and the Attorney General does it, all within hours almost, if you want to look at it in this context. All this debate going on inside the White House with someone who'd been there for about 3 days.

Mr. ICKES. I don't disagree with you, although it's your prerogative to make those statements. I would point out it is somewhat interesting that this body, I think, has had 1 day of hearing on Medicare and some 50 days' hearing on this issue. But that obviously is a set of priorities.

Senator DODD. Some of us have made that point up here. I don't have any more questions for you, Mr. Ickes.

I've had the privilege of working with you on a number of issues over the last year or so. I wonder about people sitting out there watching, someone who comes to town in the first 3 or 4 days in Washington. And I wonder about people on our own staffs who write memos and notes, and future White Houses where people rely on people having candid discussions and sharing observations.

Boy, you watch this process unfold, you ought to shake your head. I don't know how many more people we're going to attract to come down to work in the government if we put people who are there in a wringer like this all the time. I don't think we serve ourselves well.

But nonetheless, that's this Senator's lone observation on all of this. I thank you for being here. I think you've done a good job. I think you've done a good job today as well, and I appreciate your presence here.

Mr. ICKES. Thank you.

Senator DODD. Mr. Chairman, I don't have any more questions.

Senator SARBANES. Mr. Ben-Veniste.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Let me fill the record a little more completely on questions that were asked you about matters involving two subjects, the first of which being the question you were asked relating to page 578 of these notes regarding Betsey Wright, where you indicated you had no recollection of any mention being made of Ms. Wright.

We do have the benefit, however, of Mr. Gearan's testimony, which he gave at page 27 of these hearings on February 15th, where he said in response to this question:

Mr. CHERTOFF. Now this was Mr. Nussbaum discussing kind of the worst case scenario that might come out; right? Is that right, if there was an Independent Counsel?

Mr. GEARAN: No. Mr. Chertoff, I think I owe it to Betsey Wright and to the Members of this Committee to say that at no time was I present at any conversation where Mr. Nussbaum suggested that there is any basis for Ms. Wright to be charged with anything like this. He was using this as an extreme example of someone who would be shot by the unguided missile, if you will. That this would be an extreme example of an unwarranted prosecution.

The fact is that the pros and cons were being discussed candidly, as Senator Dodd said, without some view that Big Brother, as it were, would be peeking over your shoulder; and then, subjecting these candid conversations about the history of the Independent Counsel and what the powers were in that office under the Administrations of various people who held the position of Independent Counsel or Special Prosecutor and the like—that similarly, the issue about whether people would be squeezed, or whether some individual or another would be attacked by such a person was, if I understand the testimony, used in a very hypothetical way to illustrate some of the problems that had occurred in the past associated with various of the Independent Counsel.

Mr. ICKES. That certainly is my recollection.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Finally with respect to the question of Ms. Schaffer being invited to the White House in January, and having attended the screening of a film at the White House, we have the benefit of Ms. Schaffer's testimony, who was questioned at page 239 of the hearing transcript of January 25, 1996. And her testimony was, in substance—I believe you all can check on this—but my recollection of the substance of her testimony is that she spoke briefly with the President, that the President apologized that she had been put through all of the aggravation, as it were, of being pursued by the media by reason of her experience in the mid-1980's with Madison Bank; and that he apologized that he and she might have to go through that again. There's no suggestion that you were present, or had any conversation with Ms. Bassett at that time?

Mr. ICKES. I don't think I have ever met her. I don't recall ever having met her.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Nothing further, Mr. Chairman.

Mr. ICKES. Mr. Chairman, would you indulge me in a 10-minute break?

The CHAIRMAN. Yes, sure. We'll take a 10-minute break.

[Recess.]

The CHAIRMAN. Before I turn to Mr. Chertoff, I would like to read something into the record. Because more often than not, people ask me, "So what? What happens even if some of the things we're looking into may turn out to be the case?" And I'm not saying they will or they won't. But "What's the big deal?" I think that's been a question asked, and I think there's a very interesting observation—let me read it—entitled "Whitewater Paper Chase."

The excitement of Iowa and New Hampshire have diverted attention from the Senate Whitewater Committee and its investigation into Rose Law Firm's migrating files. Naturally, this pleases the White House and its allies, who hope to use the interregnum . . .

Hmm, I like that word—

. . . to let their "So what?" arguments take root. David Kendall, the Clintons' private attorney, says that the curious paper trail is just "one of the meaningless mysteries of Whitewater."

There are mysteries here, but they are not meaningless. That should be clear to anyone with the patience to walk through the known chronology.

I must admit here, there is a long chronology, and it's difficult to follow. But I think it is important, and certainly the obligation of this Committee, to do that. The article goes on to list a number of important occurrences and days starting in the mid-1980's, when Mrs. Clinton performed legal work for Madison Guaranty. I'll go to the second part of the editorial:

In August 1995, according to her Senate testimony, Carolyn Huber, a secretary, came across a stack of papers in a room near the living quarters. They reposed in her office until January 4th, when Ms. Huber realized that the papers might be copies of the long-sought billing records. She notified senior officials, whereupon the White House released the records to Mr. Starr and Congress.

Mr. Kendall has told the Committee that "we may never know" how those records found their way to the White House. He also faulted Ms. Huber's memory in an apparent attempt to broaden the timeframe in which she discovered the records, and thus the number of people who might have placed them in the Book Room.

The White House argues that the peregrinations of these papers add up to nothing. But notice where the facts point. Documents relating to Mrs. Clinton's legal work for Madison were vetted for political sensitivity by two people who later became senior Government officials, Mr. Hubbell and Mr. Foster. They were given to Mr. Foster and wound up in the White House living quarters. Another set of documents were stored in the basement of the Justice Department's third-ranking official, Mr. Hubbell, who was looking out for the Clintons' political interests, not his law enforcement duties. When the records were subpoenaed, numerous White House officials had to know of their existence, and possibly of their whereabouts. Yet the subpoenas were ignored.

The White House argues that these files will show conduct that was innocent and ethical, that they contain no evidence of misdeeds, as some Republicans suspect the Clintons of: Mixing personal and campaign funds, bending State regulatory policy to help their partners and contributors, and underpaying taxes on all the money invested on their behalf in Whitewater.

Perhaps the files would show that there was no cover-up associated with moving and storing these files. But inanimate objects do not move themselves. So it's pointless to ask Senators and the Independent Prosecutor to fold their inquiry on the basis of the facts that have emerged so far. To do so would be a dereliction of their duties.

That was an editorial from The New York Times just this past week, February 17, 1996. So I just suggest we're not talking about partisanship. The same response has been contained, I think, with the same views in most of the Nation's leading newspapers: The Times, The Post, and Newsday it goes on.

We have a duty to move forward, and all the protestations to the contrary, and all the charges of politicizing will do nothing more than make cloudy the matter. If some people want to do that, it is their right. This is a country where they can say what they want, but we're going to continue.

I hope we can do it in an atmosphere that is less partisan—there is a time for partisanship—and attempt to try to get the facts as quickly as we can. We owe that to the American people: To do it quickly, to do it thoroughly, and to be fair.

Now, I also have to say—and I'm not going to direct these comments to you, Mr. Ickes—I am going to say that we've had numerous witnesses here. Some have been absolutely as candid and as honest as they can be. Some have had what I call a memory fault that is just not believable. Some cannot recall specific events and times and dates, and I certainly understand that. So we have to weigh this.

I think most of our witnesses have been very accurate. But there has been a pattern of a number of people having selective memory lapses. And when we look into that pattern, we notice that these witnesses were involved in important events, that dates and times put them at important places, that there were important phone calls coming to people at various times that they're scheduled to be at a particular place, to come to Washington at a time that they ordinarily would not, to meet with an important person and they have no recollection of any of this, it's strange.

I use that as an example. It strains credibility, and it's the kind of thing that will not deter the Committee, but will encourage us, because it's just not reasonable.

For some of these events, not to be recalled, again, no one could recall all of them. It would be impossible. But when surrounded by the facts and circumstances and memos, and in some cases documents that people wrote themselves, their own notes, these events, should be outstanding in anyone's mind.

When there is a regular pattern of, "I don't recall, I don't remember." I think that's an indication of a failure to be responsive. That makes it difficult. But we will continue, notwithstanding.

Mr. Chertoff.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

Senator MOSELEY-BRAUN. Mr. Chertoff, if you don't mind—and again, I don't want to further any politicization of this event than has already occurred. But it seems to me in the first instance that we have to restrain ourselves from making conclusory statements and making speeches about the situation, particularly when we have witnesses. And second, yes, there have been problems. We've been hearing—going through them in the documents showing up, there have been problems.

Hopefully, the fullness of our investigation and our questioning will allow us to get to the very bottom of everything, one way or the other, for good or for ill. But I have to say, Mr. Chairman, there have been an awful lot of people who have been called on to do their best, and they've tried. So when a conclusory statement is made. He's now saying these things are terrible, they're suspicious, they make us even more suspicious. That's one side of it.

And it is a point, I guess, that has been made over and over again by the media and others. But I think some recognition ought to be given those individuals who have tried, who have complied with this Committee, have gone back and searched records, records that most people would have lost, or not known were around.

This has been a very exacting kind of exercise, as it should be. But to in one breath castigate people for not meeting the Committee's standards, and not at the same time recognize those people and those efforts that did, I think doesn't exactly leave this in as nonpolitical a footing as the Committee Chairman and I know the Ranking Member, and the other Members of this Committee, would like to see.

The CHAIRMAN. I think the Senator makes a good point. That's why I attempted to say that there have been many who have endeavored, and many, through no fault of their own—there are incidents you cannot personally recall, particularly when you ask them to go back 10 years or 11 years. That is quite true.

But I wanted to put this editorial in the record. Certainly The New York Times, I don't think, has a vested political interest one way or the other. I think when they call for us to complete our work, it's a very powerful message. Some editorial writers on both sides take different points of view. I understand that. We could fill the record with these things, but I thought this was of some note.

Mr. Chertoff.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

Mr. Ickes, you were asked your start date in the White House—I think you told us it was approximately the first Monday of 1994. But am I correct that you actually had been at the White House, not as an employee, but as a visitor at various times in 1993?

Mr. ICKES. Yes. I can't recall when. I think you're probably right. I had come down for one or two events as a visitor.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Did you have a special pass of some kind in 1993 that allowed you access in and out of the White House?

Mr. ICKES. No. I think that on each occasion that I came down, as I recall, Mr. Chertoff, I had to be waved in through the Secret Service.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You had no pass in 1993 that you carried that allowed you access that would not be granted to ordinary people?

Mr. ICKES. I may have. I don't recall it. I may have. I know that when I came, just to give you a brief history—when I came, I came up when the President-elect and Mrs. Clinton came up. And I was here for about 1 or 2 weeks. I may have gotten a hard pass then and kept it. I literally do not recall. I don't know.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Were you involved, by the way, during the campaign, in any Whitewater-related issues?

Mr. ICKES. No, I was not. I mean, I had heard the name Whitewater, but I was not involved in any meetings that I recall about Whitewater, and literally knew nothing about it. I knew that it involved a piece of land somewhere in Arkansas.

Mr. CHERTOFF. When I say Whitewater, I'm including Madison and the Rose Law Firm. You were not involved in any meetings in the campaign period involving Madison?

Mr. ICKES. Not that I recall. I was focused—I was working as Warren Christopher's Deputy at that time, during the transition, and was focused primarily on staffing situations.

Mr. CHERTOFF. I'm asking about the campaign. During the campaign, were you involved with any meetings that had to do with Rose or Madison?

Mr. ICKES. Not that I recall. Just so the record is corrected, I'm reminded that I did have a hard pass when I came up right after the transition. But it was subsequently pulled. It was revoked.

Mr. CHERTOFF. When was it revoked?

Mr. ICKES. I don't know, but if you want that record I will get it for you.

Mr. CHERTOFF. I think we'd appreciate that.

Mr. ICKES. OK.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Mr. Ickes, I want to focus your attention. You had raised the issue of the things you were doing in January 1994, apart from this. I want to put all this in perspective because I do think it's important.

We have established that, notwithstanding the debate and discussion about whether to have a Special Counsel in the first couple of weeks of 1994, there was eventually a tremendous amount of public pressure in the press on both sides of both parties in Congress insisting that there be a Special Counsel appointed. You don't disagree with that?

Mr. ICKES. You're given to understatement on that.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Finally, notwithstanding all the discussion about the pros and cons and the good and bad and the risks and the advantages, a Special Counsel was appointed by Attorney General Reno, correct?

Mr. ICKES. At the specific request of the President.

Mr. CHERTOFF. But it was also the case that, as we have established, that there remained open the issue of this civil investigation as to which you had made requests to get information concerning the statute of limitations as early as January 8, 1994, which was within a matter of days after you arrived at the White House, because we've seen that in your assigned memorandum, correct?

Mr. ICKES. You're referring to the RTC?

Mr. CHERTOFF. Right.

Mr. ICKES. Yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. That was not something that was preempted, or taken care of by the appointment of Special Counsel?

Mr. ICKES. As far as I know, it was not.

Mr. CHERTOFF. That was a matter that was going to be decided by, ultimately it was going to be under the supervision of the person who ran the RTC; right?

Mr. ICKES. At that time, in January, I was very unfamiliar—I would say almost completely unfamiliar with the process of the RTC. I came to learn that, yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. The person who was in charge of the RTC at that point in time was Roger Altman; right?

Mr. ICKES. It was. I don't recall all the mechanics of it, but he was, I think, the acting head. I am not sure that was the correct title.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You knew Roger Altman from even before 1994; is that right?

Mr. ICKES. I had known him very casually, Mr. Chertoff, in connection with New York, but had never worked with him in any sense.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Had you ever dealt with him in his official capacity as Deputy Treasury Secretary during 1993?

Mr. ICKES. During 1993? I think I had one meeting with him. I can't recall when it was.

Mr. CHERTOFF. That was on a matter where you were representing someone in private practice?

Mr. ICKES. Yes. As I recall, it was.

Mr. CHERTOFF. So in 1994, even after the Special Counsel was appointed, there was this whole civil RTC investigation which was going to be supervised by Altman, or under the general authority of Roger Altman. That's the person whom you met with on February 2nd, along with Mr. Nussbaum, Ms. Hanson, and Mr. Eggleston in the White House; is that correct?

Mr. ICKES. Yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Now during the same period of time——

Mr. ICKES. February 1994?

Mr. CHERTOFF. February 2, 1994.

Mr. ICKES. Yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. During this same period of time while this RTC civil investigation is open, the statute of limitations is going to run at the end of February, the beginning of March. You were concerned, were you not, that this was affecting the First Lady's ability to carry out the responsibilities she had with respect to health care?

Mr. ICKES. The RTC specifically, or Whitewater generally?

Mr. CHERTOFF. Whitewater generally.

Mr. ICKES. Whitewater generally, it was certainly something that was being discussed by senior members of the White House staff.

Mr. CHERTOFF. What was discussed that was having an effect upon the First Lady's ability to focus and concentrate on health care; is that right?

Mr. ICKES. There was concern about that among the staff.

Mr. CHERTOFF. That concern came from the observations of Mrs. Clinton and discussions with Mrs. Clinton, correct?

Mr. ICKES. I'm not sure it came from observations or discussions. I think that the staff was concerned that she had been designated by the President to head up the health care initiative. It was a very important initiative, and a large one, as you know. There was concern that Whitewater generally, as currently defined, would have a diversionary effect from the health care initiative.

Mr. CHERTOFF. This was discussed at the Whitewater Response Team meetings?

Mr. ICKES. I think it probably was. I don't recall any specific discussions, but I would be surprised if it wasn't, let me put it that way.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Now, we have a contemporaneous diary record of Mr. Altman from early January 1994, in which he indicates that he was told that on Whitewater, HRC was "paralyzed" by it if we don't solve this "within the next 2 days." We don't have to worry about her schedule on health care.

You recall yourself, do you not, from your meeting on January 16th, at Mr. Jordan's house that you had expressed a concern about the need not to have Mrs. Clinton appear to be distracted by Whitewater. Isn't that in your notes?

Mr. ICKES. I don't have them here. I'd have to find them. I'll take your word for it. Wait just a moment. What page?

Mr. CHERTOFF. 20793.

Mr. ICKES. Just a moment. I'm looking at item number 4. Is that the one you're looking at, Mr. Chertoff?

Mr. CHERTOFF. I'm looking at item number 3 and 4.

Mr. ICKES. Yes. Item number 3 dealt with legal costs. Item number 4 dealt with HRC as lawyer on this, et cetera. Kirk O'Donnell felt quite strongly about that, according to my notes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Now were you aware that Ms. Williams had communicated this concept to Mr. Altman in January 1994?

Mr. ICKES. You're now referring to Mr. Altman's diary; correct?

Mr. CHERTOFF. Correct.

Mr. ICKES. What's the date of this diary?

Mr. CHERTOFF. It's either the 11th or the 4th of 1994.

Mr. ICKES. I see. OK.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Were you aware that Ms. Williams, who attended Whitewater Response Team meetings, had communicated the notion to Mr. Altman that Mrs. Clinton was paralyzed by Whitewater, and that it was something that needed to be addressed, or "you don't have to worry about her schedule on health care"?

Mr. ICKES. I don't think that I was. To the best of my recollection, Mr. Altman was not part of the Whitewater Response Team. And Ms. Williams may well have discussed this with him. I don't recall being part of that discussion, nor do I recall being informed about it.

Mr. CHERTOFF. But Mr. Altman was part of the health care effort, right?

Mr. ICKES. Yes, he was part of the health care.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Mr. Altman's diary goes on to say, "Maggie's strong inference was that the White House was trying to negotiate the scope of an Independent Counsel with Reno, and having enormous difficulty." Do you remember this inference being drawn in the Whitewater Response Team meetings?

Mr. ICKES. I do not. As I recall Mr. Altman's testimony, I think before this Committee, he went to great lengths basically to say that that was an inference that he himself drew. I think suggested very strongly, if not stated, that there was no basis in fact for it.

Mr. CHERTOFF. So in other words, he tried to eat his words, basically?

Mr. ICKES. That's your characterization.

Mr. CHERTOFF. The next line goes, "HRC doesn't want (the counsel) poking into 20 years of public life in Arkansas." Do you remember that notion being expressed in the Whitewater Response Team meetings?

Mr. ICKES. I don't remember that notion. Again, this is coming from Mr. Altman's diaries. I don't remember it, but I would say to you I wouldn't want anyone poking around in 20 years of my life.

Mr. CHERTOFF. I'm not going to touch that, Mr. Ickes.

Do you remember also in January 1994, in your assignments of January 9th—

Mr. ICKES. You're looking now at the assignment sheet?

Mr. CHERTOFF. Yes. 2758. This is one of the two relics of your notes that you were keeping with respect to this Whitewater Response Team.

Mr. ICKES. That was the 9th or the 10th?

Mr. CHERTOFF. You have two, the 9th or the 10th.

Mr. ICKES. I have them here.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Am I correct that these are the only surviving documents from the notes that you kept of the Whitewater Response Team meetings?

Mr. ICKES. Yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Which means that on no other days did you keep any notes?

Mr. ICKES. I don't recall keeping notes. I recall keeping notes on these assignments, having them typed up.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You don't recall keeping notes on the meetings?

Mr. ICKES. What?

Mr. CHERTOFF. You don't recall keeping notes on the Whitewater Response Team meetings?

Mr. ICKES. That's what I've testified to.

Mr. CHERTOFF. I'm sorry. I want to make sure we are 100 percent clear. Apart from assignment sheets, did you keep notes of the Whitewater Response Team meetings?

Mr. ICKES. The only notes I recall, Mr. Chertoff, were notes that I kept that were the basis for these two documents that have been turned over.

Mr. CHERTOFF. So you only kept 2 days of notes; is that it?

Mr. ICKES. That's what I've testified to.

Mr. CHERTOFF. And the other days, nothing was worth keeping records of? The other 14 days, or 12 days, where you were having meetings, you didn't keep any notes or any records?

Mr. ICKES. Mr. Chertoff, my function was to chair those meetings, and to make assignments, and to make sure that people were gathering information so that there could be an accurate response. I myself was not responding to the press. That was the responsibility of people like Mr. Gearan and others.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Again, Mr. Ickes, that was not my question. My question is very simply this. Did you regularly take notes at the meetings of the Whitewater Response Team?

Mr. ICKES. The notes I took were reduced to type, these type-written memos, Mr. Chertoff.

Mr. CHERTOFF. These two memos, one for the 9th and one for the 10th, are the only memos that you know of that reflect notes or records of the Whitewater Response Team meetings?

Mr. ICKES. The only memos that I know of, yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Are there other notes that you know of, besides these two memos, that relate to the Whitewater Response Team meetings?

Mr. ICKES. Obviously, Mr. Gearan took a lot of notes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Of yours?

Mr. ICKES. Not that I know of.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Now on item 14 on this November 9th memo, there's a reference. It says here, "Reference in 1/8 press that Chris Wade, Arkansas realtor"——

Mr. ICKES. You're on the January 9th document?

Mr. CHERTOFF. That's right. Second page, item 14. "Reference in 1/8 press that Chris Wade"——

Senator SARBANES. Where are you reading from?

Mr. CHERTOFF. 20759.

Mr. ICKES. That's document 20889?

Mr. CHERTOFF. No, document 20759, January 9, 1994. You may have it under a different Bates number.

Mr. ICKES. I'm sorry.

Mr. CHERTOFF. It's your January 9, 1994 assignments.

Mr. ICKES. January 9th. Yes, I have it listed as 20888.

Mr. CHERTOFF. That's fine. We will use that one. Second page, paragraph 14.

Mr. ICKES. Yes.

The CHAIRMAN. I am going to ask that we suspend just for a moment, because the red light's come on. We will come back to that at the appropriate time.

Senator Sarbanes.

Senator SARBANES. Mr. Ickes, you were asked this question about Altman's diary, about Hillary Clinton doesn't want poking around in 20 years' life in Arkansas just now by Mr. Chertoff?

I just again want to, because this is being portrayed somehow as a sort of invalid or irresponsible position.

Now, Senator Dole has had a lot to say about this Independent Counsel idea. I just want to put those quotes in the record here.

On January 9, 1989, the St. Louis Post/Dispatch: "The whole Independent Counsel theory ought to be reviewed by Congress. They seem to have an unending license to do somebody in."

In August 1992, in The Washington Times, he said: "In far too many instances, the investigations conducted by the Independent Counsel have turned out to be partisan, political, fishing expeditions, expeditions which have accomplished nothing more than wasting millions of tax dollars."

Another time, of course, he attacked Lawrence Walsh. He said, "Lawrence Walsh is completely out of control," said Dole. "Now he wants to turn his 6 years of incompetence into a personal vendetta against President Bush."

In May 1993, "The statute placed no limit on the amount of time and money an Independent Counsel can spend on his target, nor does it monitor the motives behind the counsel's actions. It has allowed someone like Lawrence Walsh to go down every blind alley, pursuing more conspiracy theories than Oliver Stone."

Senator Cochran said, "Independent Counsels have too much power and too little accountability. They are beyond the reach of anybody, any power on earth."

Now despite all of these statements, it was the position in the White House, as of the 12th of January, that Reno ought to appoint a Special Counsel; is that not correct?

Mr. ICKES. Yes.

Senator SARBANES. It's also the White House positions that the Independent Counsel statute ought to be reauthorized; was it not?

Mr. ICKES. That's correct, Senator. Yes. As I recall, it was.

Senator SARBANES. And in the end, the Independent Counsel statute was reauthorized, and we're now proceeding under that Counsel. These notes have come in. Gearan's notes came in. We've had extensive questioning with respect to those notes. Gearan was here a whole day. You've been here a whole day, now 7 hours, since we started at 10 this morning.

Yet, as we work through these notes and question them, I don't see any improprieties. Obviously, there was a lot of concern. You were under a lot of pressure from the press and others with respect to how to proceed in the early part of 1994. But you know, I frankly wish the notes had come sooner, because I don't think there's anything in the notes. And I would have avoided this whole notion that somehow the notes were being withheld for some purpose. To my mind, I see nothing, no reason in these notes, why they would be withheld, deliberately withheld.

We've worked it over now for 7 hours. We have your explanation and Ms. Sherburne's as to what happened. We have Mr. Gearan's explanation with respect to his notes. In both instances, as we work our way through the notes, I mean, we see concern about press inquiries, political implications; but I don't see any illegalities present in any of these notes. That's just a statement. You don't have to respond.

Mr. Chairman, how much longer do we have?

The CHAIRMAN. We might be able to do it in 15 or 20 minutes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. While we're on this memo of January 9th here, which is one of the memos that we only got a few days ago, "Item 14. Reference in 1/8 press that Chris Wade, Arkansas realtor, has document re Whitewater, but won't release unless President Clinton asks for them to be released. MW assigned 1/8." What was the assignment?

Mr. ICKES. I don't recall. I think the assignment was to find out about it. What might be involved, I have no idea.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Did you tell Mr. Waldman what you wanted him to do?

Mr. ICKES. Undoubtedly I did. I probably asked him to find out what he could about this document.

Mr. CHERTOFF. By contacting Mr. Wade?

Mr. ICKES. I don't recall asking him to contact Mr. Wade, but I might have.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Did he find out?

Mr. ICKES. I don't recall as I sit here today.

Mr. CHERTOFF. What was the upshot?

Mr. ICKES. As I sit here today, I do not know, Mr. Chertoff.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Do you have any record or notes about what the upshot was with respect to the document that Mr. Wade wouldn't release?

Mr. ICKES. No, not that I recall.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Did you ask Mr. Waldman to contact Skip Rutherford about Beverly Bassett?

Mr. ICKES. Not that I recall.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Is there any record you have in your possession that might shed light upon any contact you had with Mr. Waldman about getting in touch with Mr. Rutherford?

Mr. ICKES. All the records I have I think have been submitted to you.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You had numerous meetings with Mr. Kendall during January and February; right?

Mr. ICKES. I had a number of meetings.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Did you keep notes of those meetings?

Mr. ICKES. I did not.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Is there a reason you didn't keep notes of those meetings?

Mr. ICKES. There was no need for me to.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Unlike the Whitewater response situation where you did keep notes because it was assignments?

Mr. ICKES. Yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. By the way, if I look at this January 9th memo, this is the January 9, 1994 assignments. I gather, because you're very organized, you put it at footnote two at the bottom. Whenever a 2 appears, it indicates the date the assignment was made.

You have, for example, various assignments that appear to have been parceled out on January 6th, January 7th, and January 8th. Where are the assignment memoranda for those days?

Mr. ICKES. They're all consolidated into these.

Mr. CHERTOFF. So there would have been notes on the 6th, 7th, and 8th, as well as the 9th? And all of those were consolidated into this?

Mr. ICKES. Into these.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Into this memo?

Mr. ICKES. As far as I can recall, yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. In fact, is it fair to say there would likely have been some notes for every day in which there was a meeting relating to the Whitewater Response Team?

Mr. ICKES. There may well have been. But as I say, once they were reduced to typing, or to the typewritten memo, I had no more need for them.

Mr. CHERTOFF. I'll yield to the Chairman.

The CHAIRMAN. Mr. Ickes, if you could go to Mr. Gearan's type-written notes, can you identify those? They must be about 15 pages, handwritten notes, excuse me. A handwritten—

Mr. ICKES. I have those, Mr. Chairman.

The CHAIRMAN. About two-thirds of the way back in the packet, under S20576—

Mr. ICKES. I have it.

The CHAIRMAN. We've gone over this before. But would you go to 0575, the page in front of that? The bottom of the page says, "Meeting of attorneys outside of White House." No, you know what? It's on 076, excuse me.

Mr. ICKES. 076?

The CHAIRMAN. Excuse me, the bottom of the page. You have HI—obviously, we understand, these are Mr. Gearan's notes, they're not your notes, OK. But he's identified you, HI. Meetings of attorneys outside of White House, all right?

Then he says, basically that you're indicating that Beverly Bassett is very important, and that this has to be done, and it's important; right? Is that a reasonable interpretation? "Let's not talk it to death. Let's just get it done." Right?

Mr. ICKES. That's basically what it says, yes.

The CHAIRMAN. We're skipping all of the hyperbole?

Mr. ICKES. Yes.

The CHAIRMAN. Let's go to the next page. That's where I got a little off. Again—

Mr. ICKES. You're now going to 77, Mr. Chairman?

The CHAIRMAN. Right, 77, in which again Mr. Gearan identifies yourself, HI. He says, "We can't send PB, BL, MW. It will come out." Who is PB?

Mr. ICKES. As best as I can recollect, it's probably Paul Begala.

The CHAIRMAN. BL?

Mr. ICKES. BL undoubtedly refers to Bruce Lindsey.

The CHAIRMAN. And MW?

Mr. ICKES. I think refers to Michael Waldman.

The CHAIRMAN. Obviously, we've had extended discourse between yourself and Mr. Chertoff on that. You have indicated—and if I am paraphrasing you the wrong way, I want to get this straight in my own mind.

You're concerned that if someone such as Mr. Waldman or Mr. Lindsey or Mr. Begala went down to check out this story with her, and to meet with her, that the media may interpret that the White House was attempting to influence her or meet with her, and it might appear inappropriate. Is that a fair—

Mr. ICKES. The media, or others.

The CHAIRMAN. It might appear to the media and to others inappropriate?

Mr. ICKES. Right. There was nothing in my view, Mr. Chairman nothing inappropriate about having somebody meet with her. But I was concerned about, for lack of a better phrase, the adverse public relations that might come out of that.

The CHAIRMAN. I understand that.

It goes on, and it says, "Item by item, make sure her story is OK." So in other words, whatever she has said previously in the campaign, whatever she said after the campaign, that's the story, and there's no problems; right?

Mr. ICKES. Basically, yes. Again, Mr. Chairman, you have to remember that we were in Washington at the time. There were a very large number of press questions coming in. Major papers were editorializing about maybe that she had shown favoritism. We had to respond to those questions. This is something that happened in Arkansas. We basically wanted to know that the facts that we were giving out were in fact the accurate facts. The credibility of the White House was involved.

The CHAIRMAN. If you're giving out incorrect facts or information, it could be a real problem; right?

Mr. ICKES. It can be.

The CHAIRMAN. It could have been. It's not a trick question.

Mr. ICKES. It's not a trick question, and, look. We have an obligation to give out accurate information.

The CHAIRMAN. The next one, it says "Tisdale? In Lindsey firm." Would it be fair to say that you were concerned because—you weren't concerned. Somebody was concerned that they used Tisdale to make contact with Ms. Schaffer if that came out? There's a question. Do you use Tisdale?

Mr. ICKES. Again, Mr. Chairman, I didn't write these notes, which you recognize. I don't know whether I said this, or whether somebody else said this. There were a number of people in the room in these discussions. Somebody may have raised these names, and questions may have been raised by others in the room. Hence, Mr. Gearan wrote it—

The CHAIRMAN. About the appropriateness of using them?

Mr. ICKES. Not the appropriateness, but again the possible adverse public relations spin that might be contributed by people. Were they used because of their relationships with others in the White House?

The CHAIRMAN. You see, here is the problem. You have "Skip? WH." That's Skip Rutherford, a friend of the Clintons down in Arkansas. "BP friend, New York lawyer. Quinn, arm's length." That's to keep him arm's length. Mr. Waldman testifies that he did, in fact, call Skip Rutherford about Ms. Schaffer, and a possible trip to Arkansas. Why did he do that?

Mr. ICKES. I don't know. You'll have to ask him.

The CHAIRMAN. Waldman worked for Gearan; right?

Mr. ICKES. At that point in time, I think Waldman was in the Communications Department, yes.

The CHAIRMAN. He was part of this team?

Mr. ICKES. He was certainly involved in these meetings on a regular basis.

The CHAIRMAN. Right. You see, you get done saying how important it is to get on top of this thing. The President sends a memo, basically a memo because he says in his notes, get on top of this, stay on top of this, or words to that effect. Indeed thereafter, this comes up in one of these meetings, January 7th, or whenever the date is. This starts in after. They say, who do we send? And they say, don't send somebody from the White House as such; but Michael Waldman goes ahead and contacts Mr. Rutherford.

Now let me ask you. They're reporting to you. They're telling you what's going on. You're meeting regularly. Did he get back to you? Did he tell you? Did anyone tell you about this?

Mr. ICKES. I have no recollection that he did.

The CHAIRMAN. You have no recollection that he got hold of Rutherford? You didn't tell them to get hold of Rutherford?

Mr. ICKES. I have no recollection of asking him to get ahold of Rutherford. He may have done it on his own. He knew about the firm. All of us had worked in Arkansas during the campaign and through the transition. And Rutherford was a frequent visitor at the White House.

The CHAIRMAN. You see, I'm looking at this in light of the fact that this was a communique from the President of the United States that resulted, eventually that communique being the President's handwritten notes on the December editorial of The New York Times, as it related to Bassett. "Stay on top of this."

We see these notes in which they say very clearly, "This thing is going to blow up. We'd better stay on top of it." Then here's a discussion, who we can't send, and then, "Item by item, make sure her story is OK." Then Tisdale, Lindsey, Skip Rutherford—what do we have here? Waldman knows—we know that he does make contact. But you say you didn't order him to make contact.

Mr. ICKES. I don't know whether he did or whether he didn't. I have no recollection of it.

The CHAIRMAN. I think yesterday he gave his deposition. Michael Waldman testified that he did indeed call Skip Rutherford about Ms. Schaffer, and a possible trip to Arkansas.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Mr. Chairman, we haven't seen the transcript of this, but I'm advised—I wasn't at the depo—but that his testimony did not concern that memo.

The CHAIRMAN. I understood that it did. Alison took that. But the fact is that from Ms. Bassett's statement, she said that Mr. Rutherford did contact her. So you see, I have to ask, who in the White House, and indeed made that contact? Waldman says he made the contact. Who told him to do that? Was he at a high enough level that he would just go out and do this? And then when he made the contact, did he report back?

Mr. ICKES. First of all, Mr. Chairman, I don't have any recollection of him contacting or calling back. I do know that this AP story that you referred to earlier apparently—well, not apparently—says that it was Ms. Schaffer's husband who was called by Skip Rutherford. But in any event, I have no recollection of telling Mr. Waldman to contact either Skip Rutherford, or certainly Ms. Schaffer. I had reservations about it. I stress again, there was nothing illegal about it. But I had concerns about the possible adverse public relations aspect.

The White House is not a monolithic creature. Sometimes people go off and do things on their own.

The CHAIRMAN. Would he have told Mr. Lindsey about this?

Mr. ICKES. He may have.

The CHAIRMAN. Here's where I have a problem. The importance at that time of this situation involving Beverly Bassett Schaffer is obvious. It's obvious from the notes here. It's obvious from the fact that the President wrote about it. He said, "Stay on top of this."

It's obvious that there was not only an attempt, but indeed as it related to somebody meeting with Beverly Bassett Schaffer's husband.

Speaking about that, we had testimony. She testified to it. And it seems to me that as the head of this team, you would be able to reflect on what took place. We don't see that. Yet, for example, in that memorandum of January 9th, you go through copious, painstaking identification of who was tasked to do what? I'm just wondering how it is that there's no report with respect to this rather important assignment?

Mr. ICKES. Mr. Chairman, my view is not shared by everyone in the group. It was my view that it would be the better part of discretion not to have White House people contact Ms. Schaffer, although there was absolutely nothing illegal, untoward, or unethical about having a contact made, especially in view of the fact that what she had said was supportive of Mrs. Clinton's relationship as a lawyer with Madison Guaranty. That is not to say that some people didn't go off and make phone calls on their own. I can't vouch for that.

All I can tell you is, as I sit here today, I have no recollection of Michael Waldman contacting Skip Rutherford, or telling me that he had. I'm not saying that he didn't. I'm not even saying that he may have told me. But I have no recollection of it.

The CHAIRMAN. Two questions, and we'll wrap it up.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Just a couple of quick things.

Mr. Ickes, first of all, in the course of the discussion about issues with Beverly Bassett Schaffer in January and February of 1994, was there a discussion about her communications with Mrs. Clinton concerning something called Southern Development Bank?

Mr. ICKES. I'm sorry. Would you repeat that?

Mr. CHERTOFF. In the course of the discussions at the White-water Response Team in January and February of 1994 about Beverly Bassett, was there discussion about communication between Beverly Bassett and Mrs. Clinton concerning Southern Development Bank?

Mr. ICKES. Not that I recall.

Senator SARBANES. That's not part of our scope, Mr. Chairman.

Mr. CHERTOFF. What was the answer?

Mr. ICKES. Not that I recall.

Mr. CHERTOFF. It doesn't ring a bell?

Mr. ICKES. It does not ring a bell with me.

Mr. CHERTOFF. I also want to direct your attention to a period of time of the campaign. I want to make sure we're quite clear on this, because you just testified a moment ago, I believe. You were in Arkansas during the campaign from time to time?

Mr. ICKES. Let me be very precise about that. I was in Arkansas after the general election of 1992, where I was working with now Secretary of State Warren Christopher as his top Deputy with respect to the transition. I had been in Arkansas from time to time during the campaign, literally on a 1- or 2-day foray.

I'm sorry—literally just one last piece of information. Others, I don't want to vouch for Michael Waldman. I'd have to check with him, or you'd have to check with him. It is my recollection, however, that Michael Waldman probably was in Arkansas at least during the general election campaign, and maybe even during the primary campaign. I was not.

Mr. CHERTOFF. I want to know, during the campaign or during the transition in 1992, were you present in the campaign office with people who, to your knowledge or observation, were reviewing Rose Law Firm files?

Mr. ICKES. Were they reviewing—was I present when people were in my presence reviewing?

Mr. CHERTOFF. Yes, correct.

Mr. ICKES. I have no recollection of it. The most I knew about Whitewater is that it had to do with a river and a piece of land.

Mr. CHERTOFF. When you look at your memorandum of March 1st to the First Lady, which is accompanied by the memo to you from Mr. Eggleston, that begins at S7288.

Mr. ICKES. OK. 7288. I have that.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Now the memo that Mr. Eggleston prepared for you is in the form of questions and answers. Am I correct that you furnished Mr. Eggleston with the questions you wanted him to answer?

Mr. ICKES. I don't remember the precise conversation. As I testified here today, I think that as I recall, the genesis of this memo was three things. One, the two documents that are appended to it, the FDIC report, the RTC report, as well as what I recall—I may be in error on this—either an article or an editorial in The Wall Street Journal, about which I think the President may have asked me questions. I know that I read it and was confused, and I asked him to prepare the memo.

Mr. CHERTOFF. If you will turn to page 6 of the memo, which is S7292. You will see the last question that was posed here, and answered.

Mr. ICKES. Wait just a moment. I'm on the wrong page, 7292?

Mr. CHERTOFF. Right, page 6.

Mr. ICKES. Yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. The last question posed in the memo reads as follows: "Now that Mr. Altman as Acting CEO of the RTC has recused himself from further involvement in Madison Guaranty matters, who at the RTC will be the decisionmaker on whether to bring a civil action arising out of the failure of Madison Guaranty?" Is that one of the questions the President asked you?

Mr. ICKES. I see. You're reading the indented part.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Yes, the question. I will read it again. "Now that Mr. Altman as Acting CEO of the RTC has recused himself from further involvement in Madison Guaranty matters, who at the RTC will be the decisionmaker on whether to bring a civil action arising out of the failure of Madison Guaranty?" Is that a question the President asked you?

Mr. ICKES. I don't recall him asking me that. He may well have, but I don't recall it.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Why did you request that Mr. Eggleston give you an answer to that question?

Mr. ICKES. I wanted to have as much information as possible.

Mr. CHERTOFF. What was the significance in your mind now at the end of February, after having gone through this issue with Altman and the recusal, and identifying who the decisionmaker would be on whether there was going to be a case brought by the RTC with respect to the Rose Law Firm? Why did you care who the identity of the decisionmaker is?

Mr. ICKES. As I recall the sequence of events, Mr. Chertoff, Mr. Altman had recused himself.

Mr. CHERTOFF. On the 26th?

Mr. ICKES. On the 25th, I think.

Mr. CHERTOFF. 25th, 26th, yes. Why did you need to know? Why were you concerned?

Mr. ICKES. I wasn't concerned. I just wanted to know as a matter of information.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Finally, Mr. Ickes, I just want to ask you this. I gather that the memorandum of January 9, 1994, and the memorandum of January 10, 1994, which are assignments, was meant to be circulated to the entire Whitewater group.

Mr. ICKES. You're looking now at the memorandum of the 9th?

Mr. CHERTOFF. Right, yes. Would it be fair to say that there would have been at least a half-dozen copies of this that would have been circulated around to the people who were the regular attendees of the group?

Mr. ICKES. I think it's fair to say, Mr. Chertoff, that these circulated to those to whom assignments had been made. It may well have circulated to others in the group.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Well, what's interesting here, I think, is that we have received two copies of this in the last 2 weeks. One of these was contained in the files that Mr. Altman discovered very, very recently. And one was contained in your files. I don't believe—I'm sure I'll be corrected if I'm wrong—that we have ever seen these memos in anybody else's files, or in any prior production. Were these supposed to be held in any particularly confidential way?

Mr. ICKES. Were these supposed to be held confidentially?

Mr. CHERTOFF. Yes.

Mr. ICKES. I think there was a general working assumption that the work and the proceedings of the Whitewater working group was to be held basically within that group, obviously. Other people knew about it. I was reporting on a regular basis to Mr. McLarty, et cetera. I don't think these were confidential, maybe, in the sense that you're using them. But we would ask people not to just sort of leave them around.

Mr. CHERTOFF. I want to ask you this, I want to move to the present time. In your capacity now as the Deputy White House Chief of Staff to whom Ms. Sherburne reports, have you been involved at all in the making of policy decisions about how documents are being produced?

Mr. ICKES. She keeps me informed, basically. That is, in my view, a question for lawyers to decide who are skilled in that area. And Ms. Sherburne runs the Whitewater team inside the White House. She does report to me. She keeps me informed on a regular basis. But with respect to those kinds of matters, those are matters that lawyers far more qualified than I should make. She and Jack Quinn, who is now the Counsel, as you know, are very much involved in that.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Is it correct as the paper reported today that Mr. Panetta only very recently has established a team of lawyers now who will be responsible for ensuring that production is complied with?

Mr. ICKES. I have not read the paper, and I've not talked to Mr. Panetta for 3 or 4 days. I would doubt that report, but I haven't read the paper. There has been a team of lawyers in place under the leadership of Ms. Sherburne, and they have been responsible for overseeing this matter, and for the production of documents, and in my view, doing a very good job of it.

The CHAIRMAN. Senator Sarbanes.

Senator SARBANES. Apparently the Counsel on both sides who took Waldman's deposition have differing recollections, because our Counsel says that Waldman said that he did not talk with Beverly Bassett Schaffer. And in any event—

The CHAIRMAN. Rutherford was the person who then made contact with either Ms. Schaffer or with her husband.

Senator SARBANES. I think he also said he wasn't aware of anyone making contact.

The CHAIRMAN. That's right. In other words, the contact with Rutherford, for the purposes thereafter of making contact with Beverly Bassett Schaffer—

Senator SARBANES. Waldman was not aware of that. Ah, there's a difference of opinion.

The CHAIRMAN. Waldman contacted Rutherford, is that correct? You are saying no. We'll have Waldman here, and we'll see the depositions. We'll know tomorrow.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Mr. Chairman, the news report that talks about Mr. Rutherford's contact, was contact not to Ms. Schaffer, but to Ms. Schaffer's husband, Archie Schaffer.

The CHAIRMAN. That's a pretty good contact. And I don't think at this hour, we want to begin splitting hairs.

Mr. Ben-Veniste, they thought they would speak to the husband in order to speak to Ms. Schaffer, because she was very upset and didn't want to speak to anybody. So they did speak to Archie.

Senator SARBANES. I want to make the observation, since it's already come up. She felt strongly, apparently, that she had been stalked by Mr. Bossie.

The CHAIRMAN. Senator, that's inflammatory. That's not a fact.

Senator SARBANES. She stated it herself when she was here.

The CHAIRMAN. There's been unfortunately an attempt today—very unfairly, but we will get the information and place it in the record—to impune Mr. Bossie and to attempt to say that he's still working for that group.

He's indicated to me just a short time ago that he terminated his relationship with that group, that he wasn't aware of that letter, that he was upset that that letter was sent out, and does not reflect his sentiments. We will have those answers in writing fully for the record, so that all of the Members will have the opportunity to review it.

I'm not happy with a letter like that, which claims that any one of our Members does such things. But again let me say that there will be letters from various groups who don't think we are aggressive enough, who think that we should cease, that will characterize activities of various Members of the Committee, of staff of the Committee in one way or the other. We just don't have control over that. Certainly we have an obligation if there is some kind of charge that may impune the integrity of the Committee to look into that. We will and we will have a full response with respect to that.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. If I may, Mr. Chairman, the point that I was making is that the news story that raises all of this about Mr. Rutherford's contact indicates that the contact was made by Mr. Rutherford to Archie Schaffer, who was then asked whether he thought his wife, Ms. Bassett Schaffer, would agree to have a press conference on her connection to the Madison Guaranty matter.

So all of this—and I have the sense that I am in the movie Groundhog Day again.

The CHAIRMAN. We're going to go over it again, because you see, when you bring it up like that, I'm going to say, "I said to the witness, the thing that concerned me—and I have it written here—is, Michael Waldman testified, and that was in his deposition, that he did in fact call Skip Rutherford and Ms. Schaffer about a possible trip to Arkansas." He says he didn't go to meet with her, but it's clear from Ms. Bassett's statement that Mr. Rutherford did indeed contact her husband. I said her, but let me be more precise—through her husband. I wanted to know whether Mr. Ickes assigned this task to Mr. Waldman.

Now, let's go to the essence of what the Chair attempted to elicit. My question is, how is it that Waldman undertook this, and did he report to Mr. Ickes? Mr. Ickes says he didn't assign him. Mr. Ickes indicates he has no recollection of him reporting back to him. But the fact of the matter is that Mr. Waldman did reach out to Skip Rutherford for the purposes of making contact with Ms. Schaffer, whether through her directly or through her husband.

Now come on. You'll bring it up and I'll have to respond fully. This will take another 10 minutes.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. If I may, Mr. Chairman, I know you don't mean to interrupt me. But with respect to all of this, are you aware of whether Ms. Bassett Schaffer did have a press conference in January?

Mr. ICKES. As I sit here today, I have no recollection of it, Mr. Ben-Veniste.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. The record indicates here—we have been at this for many, many, many hours, and looked at all the documents—that Ms. Schaffer has been consistent all along in the statement that she made, that her contacts with Madison Bank were appropriate. That has been corroborated by the Federal regulators who reviewed her contact. That the matter about which she was contacted never bore fruit, because she placed a prerequisite in the road toward Madison issuing preferred stock. That never happened.

So now we are at the point of looking at whether an individual from the White House, directly or indirectly, contacted somebody else to determine whether Ms. Bassett Schaffer would have a press conference to say the same thing that she said before. That's basically it. Is there anything that strikes you as remotely improper in that series of events, Mr. Ickes?

Mr. ICKES. Nothing improper about it. As I say, I thought there was nothing. And to this day, I think there's nothing improper about having people contact Ms. Bassett Schaffer even if she were a potential witness. But I have already explained the grounds on which I have very deep reservations.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. We have now reviewed all the documents that have been provided. You've been questioned now for 7½ hours on anything that is remotely interesting about those documents. I have to tell you that I haven't found anything new or startling or remarkable about them.

I want to thank you for your patience here today.

The CHAIRMAN. Since we are discussing conclusions, and everyone has a right to do that, Mr. Chertoff would like to make his observations about what we found that wasn't known before.

I will tell you this. It raises very real questions to me as it relates to the production of documents from other witnesses. And I mentioned this last week. When I get a document as detailed as the memos of January 9th and 10th, in which Mr. Ickes' tasks various assignments, and we get, I think, from only one other witness or two others a copy of this memo, I say: What happened to those files? What happened to that information? What happened to the information that would have been accumulated in carrying out the various tasks covered by that memo of the 9th and 10th? Why hasn't that information been provided? Where is it? Was this information which was obviously sensitive and important and called for a task force, thrown away, discarded, lost? What took place? Those are not questions I asked Mr. Ickes. But these are questions that I think any reasonable person who is asking for information would raise. So I have a number of questions and we could go on.

Mr. Chertoff, you can make a couple of quick observations, and we can go back and forth. Go ahead.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

Because I keep hearing over and over again this refrain that there's nothing new and startling. And I will tell you, since Mr. Ben-Veniste opened the door on it, that I have a vivid recollection of a deposition 2 years ago under oath which I read you portions of, in which both sides were trying to find out what was in the state of mind of people in the White House when they met with Roger Altman on February 2nd to try to keep him in charge of this investigation, and while the clock was running out on the statute of limitations on the civil case.

I'll tell you, if that clock had run out, none of the things about the billing records, or what was actually done—none of that would ever have been found out or seen the light of day. And specifically, in order to find out whether it was part of the intention of the plan in the White House to run the clock out on the statute of limitations, both Mr. Codinha, who was the Democratic Counsel, and I asked specifically again and again about discussions involving the statute of limitations.

In terms of what was produced in this set of notes, I have vividly in my mind a set of questions about whether any of Mr. Ickes' notes contained the words "statute of limitations." And I can still hear the answer: No, he doesn't recall statute of limitations in any of the notes except in the press clips. Imagine my surprise and shock to get the notes, and on page 1, it says "statute of limitations." Memo after memo talks about an assignment for statute of limitations. That startled me, and that is new.

The CHAIRMAN. Mr. Ben-Veniste, do you have a last concluding remark?

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. If the mention of statute of limitations is the smoking gun from these documents, then I'm prepared to say, let's call it a day.

The CHAIRMAN. I don't think anybody said smoking gun, but I think Counsel did indicate that that was new.

I want to thank the witness. I want to thank both Counsels because this is not easy. Neither Mr. Ben-Veniste nor Mr. Chertoff have easy jobs. You have to balance the interests of your respective Members of the Committee.

I want to say the same to my colleague Senator Sarbanes, attempting to do the business of the Committee, attempting to seek the facts without being overbearing one way or the other. It's not easy. Sometimes we can go amiss. But we're going to try to do the best we can to continue in this effort. So I want to pay particular attention to the staff, the staff on both sides, Minority and Majority, who have done, I think, an outstanding job day in and day out. There may be some wrinkles at times, but I think it is worthwhile saying that both our Chief Counsels and the people who work for them have done an outstanding job.

Senator SARBANES. Mr. Chairman, what is next week?

The CHAIRMAN. Our next meeting will be Wednesday at 10:00 o'clock. We have a number of witnesses from Arkansas that relates to, I think, the matter of—

Mr. CHERTOFF. Certain leases that were State leases of Madison.

Senator SARBANES. Do we know who the witnesses are?

Mr. CHERTOFF. It's the witnesses that were essentially going to be on for this Wednesday, but there was a scheduling problem with one of the witnesses. Their names are in the original list we gave out the previous week.

Senator SARBANES. There's no meeting on Tuesday?

The CHAIRMAN. No.

Senator SARBANES. Is there a meeting on Thursday?

The CHAIRMAN. I would hope we could take this matter on Tuesday, certainly by Thursday, and hope that that leadership would work out a manner by which to undertake the question of the Committee's continued work, in order to complete it.

So it would be my hope that sometime we could schedule debate on the matter Tuesday. Again, it seems to me that there's a time-frame there. I don't know if we want to agree to a time limit. That's up to the leadership. I understand their offices have been in contact with one another. And as pursuant to the initial enabling legislation, that is something they have to do before we move to the Floor. But it would be my intention to move to the Floor, either on Tuesday or Thursday, with respect to the question of the continued work of the Committee.

Senator SARBANES. Is the Chairman preparing a Resolution that will be taken up?

The CHAIRMAN. It would be my intent to go forward with the Resolution. However, it would be dangerous to do that without the leadership. And I believe that the legislative authority requires that the Majority and Minority leaders meet in consultation to decide the course of action to take.

It would be my hope that after those consultations, I would hope that they could work out an agreement whereby the Committee could continue its work. If not, it would be my intention to move a memorandum or a Resolution to the Floor. We have not drawn that Resolution. Again we will sit with our leadership in consultation to see what they deem might be appropriate to deal with this question.

Senator SARBANES. There's not such a Resolution available to look at.

The CHAIRMAN. Not that I'm aware of. I think we have spoken generally about continuing. Yet we've talked about generally a sum of $600,000. And without setting a specific time, so that we don't run into a situation where there may be some who might be intent on running out the clock, it would be my hope—and I've said before—that after the conclusion of the trial in Little Rock, which starts on March 4th—at least it's scheduled to, and there are a number of key witnesses that I believe are necessary for us to get testimony. Mr. Wade is one of them. I believe his lawyer has indicated that he would plead the Fifth Amendment.

There is a question of immunity for Mr. Wade. There is a question, obviously—we were very careful in the memo not to intrude on the Special Counsel, that it would appear that we would have to get the Special Counsel's acquiescence. We have not raised that question with him. It wouldn't be appropriate.

But we would in all likelihood ask the Special Counsel if he had any objection to us granting immunity to a number of witnesses after he is done with them. If he has no problem with that, that is one way we could proceed to get the testimony from these various witnesses.

So here we have one, Mr. Wade, who raises the Fifth Amendment, his lawyer does. We are prohibited from even bringing him in because his attorney has put us on notice that he would raise the Fifth Amendment.

We stand in recess until Wednesday at 10:00 o'clock.

[Whereupon, at 5:50 p.m., the hearing was recessed, to reconvene at 10:00 a.m. on Wednesday, February 28, 1996.]

Re: Harold Ickes Testimony of February
22, 1996

Dear Senator D'Amato and Senator Sarbanes:

Pursuant to the notice and instructions provided to us by the Committee, we will shortly be submitting certain pages from the draft transcript of the above-referenced testimony of our client, Harold Ickes, marked to show appropriate corrections and clarifications.

In the course of reviewing the transcript, however, it has become apparent that the limitations the Committee places on making corrections -- which permit modifications only under very narrow circumstances -- do not provide an opportunity to address the numerous mischaracterizations of the record and unfounded assumptions of fact contained in statements preceding many of the questions or sometimes, incorporated in them. Accordingly, any corrections we submit would not and could not include all the clarifications that would be necessary to respond to all such inaccurate statements or inferences.

A few illustrations will suffice to demonstrate our concern. At several points, for example, it was suggested that the White House was "acutely aware" of or unduly concerned with the statute of limitations as applied to the RTC investigation of Madison Guaranty, and that there was an intentional plan by the White House to let the statute run out. This simply is not supported by the documents in question, which showed that the statute of limitations was just one of numerous items on the Whitewater response group's agenda, and that the White House understood that the statute could always be extended. Most importantly, it ignores the fact that the President signed into law on February 12, 1994 a bill extending the statute of limitations.

Similarly mischaracterizations and baseless speculation preceded questions to Mr. Ickes about his interview by White House Counsel in July 1994. For example, it was stated that Mr. Ickes did not submit to an interview by White House Counsel -- when Committee staff was aware that he did -- and that private counsel were intentionally "interposed" between the witness and White House counsel for some nefarious reason, when there is absolutely no basis for that inference in the record. Other incorrect speculation was stated as fact in connection with questions relating to events preceding Mr. Ickes' Senate deposition in July 1994.

This kind of interrogation leads us to conclude much of the questioning had nothing to do with fact-finding or legislative oversight, and everything to do, in Senator Dodd's words, with playing "gottcha" to try to enare witnesses. This is similar to what occurred during Mr. Ickes' deposition, when counsel refused to show the witness his own notes from the February 2 meeting to refresh his recollection. An inquiry truly aimed at establishing the facts would want to make sure a witness's recollection was refreshed by accurate, contemporaneous notes -- not to trip him up and have him guess at answers.

Dear Mr. Bennett:

I write in response to your letter of March 25, 1996, to the Whitewater Special Committee regarding Harold Ickes' testimony at the Committee's hearing on February 22, 1996. As you requested, your letter will be included in the official record of the Committee's proceedings.

Alterations to Committee transcripts are permitted to correct grammatical errors, obvious errors of fact and errors in transcription. Mr. Ickes, like all other witnesses, was questioned under oath and on the record. The Committee does not authorize witnesses to use the errata sheet to change the substance their testimony after the fact. That practice would defeat the purpose of taking sworn testimony.

Mr. Ickes was represented by experienced counsel during his testimony. He certainly had every opportunity during the day-long hearing to make any statements, modifications, or clarifications regarding the subject matters covered by his testimony.

Aside from vague and unsupported protestations, your letter raised three specific issues. We believe that none has any merit.

First, you complained about Committee counsel's question to Mr. Ickes regarding the relevance of the statute of limitations to the investigation in January 1994. The following exchange appears at pages 35-36 of the transcript:

Q: [O]ne of the issues was whether in January of 1994, one of the considerations in the mind of the people at the White House who ultimately met with Mr. Altman was an acute awareness of the fact that the statute of limitations on the RTC investigation of Madison and the Rose law Firm was going to expire at the end of February unless there was an extension, and that had a great deal of relevance to the discussions with Mr. Altman in terms of his recusal. Do you remember that being the issue that was on the table?

A: I do. I remember a number of Senators up there talking about it at great length.

Mr. Ickes thus confirmed that the statute of limitations as applied to the RTC investigation of Madison Guaranty was a relevant issue for the White House.

Second, you complained about the characterization that a private lawyer was interposed between Mr. Ickes and the White House Counsel's office. Mr. Ickes defended himself against any such charge: "I didn't have my lawyer convey it. And I was interviewed personally by Ms. Sherburne and Ms. Cheston." (Hrg., 2/22/96, p. 184). During the same testimony, however, Mr. Ickes himself used his lawyer as a shield from any knowledge about the meeting with the White House Counsel's office: "I don't know what information she conveyed. Somebody else took those notes. I wasn't present. I don't know the context." (Hrg., 2/22/96, p. 185).

Third, you complained that William Codinha, then Democratic Special Counsel to the Senate Banking Committee, did not show Mr. Ickes his notes of a February 2, 1994, meeting when Mr. Ickes was deposed on July 24, 1994. However, Mr. Ickes specifically testified that he had previously reviewed his notes (Ickes dep., 7/24/94, pp. 231-232), and Mr. Ickes reaffirmed this testimony before the Committee:

Q: Now, this is the question. I will go back to line 2. What was the content of those notes?

I have no idea, I have to look that up.

Did you review those notes before you made a production to Mr. Fiske?

Answer: I did.

Did you review those notes before the production as made here?

Answer: Yes.

Now, Mr. Ickes, you had an opportunity actually to make corrections in the deposition, didn't you?

A: As I recall, I did.

Q: Okay. And do you have reason to believe that the printed record of your answers is incorrect?

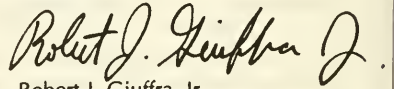

A: I'm not disputing the answer. I'm disputing the interpretation of the word.

(Hrg., 2/22/96, p. 34).

1998

It is ironic that Mr. Ickes is complaining about not seeing notes that he testified he had reviewed. As you no doubt recall, notes in Mr. Ickes' possession in 1994, long requested and subpoenaed by the Committee, were not produced until February 20, 1996.

Re: Testimony of Harold Ickes, February 22, 1996

Dear Senator D'Amato and Senator Sarbanes:

Enclosed, per our previous correspondence, please find corrections to selected pages of the transcript of Harold Ickes' testimony of February 22, 1996. We ask that these corrections be incorporated in the official record of the Committee's proceedings.

On March 26, 1996, Chief Banking Committee Counsel Robert J. Giuffra, Jr. wrote to advise us that our letter of March 25, 1996 would also be included in the official record, which we greatly appreciate. Mr. Giuffra also took issue with several of the points we made in that letter. While we do not agree with Mr. Giuffra's responses, we do not intend at this time to replot that ground. We do, however, wish to address one new assertion that Mr. Giuffra made, namely, the suggestion that any of the documents produced by the White House on February 20, 1996 from Mr. Ickes' files should have been produced in response to the Committee's 1994 document request. We vigorously dispute this.

There appears to be a misimpression that the Committee's 1994 document request related generally to Whitewater, or to the RTC investigation or the statute of limitations, regardless of whether a communication or contact with a Treasury Department official was involved. It clearly did not. The Committee's request of June 22, 1994 specifically sought documents relating to "communications between officials of the White House and the Department of Treasury or the Resolution Trust Corporation relating to" Whitewater or Madison. This request tracked the resolution of inquiry under which the Banking Committee was operating at the time.¹

None of the new material produced from Mr. Ickes' files on February 20 related to White House-Treasury contacts. Indeed, the vast majority of the documents dated from January 1994 -- before any such contacts involving Mr. Ickes. They therefore could not, and did not, relate to communications between White House personnel and Treasury or RTC officials.²

² One document that was produced in its entirety on February 20, 1996 (#S020789) does contain a single reference to the contacts, but that reference was in fact produced to the Committee in July 1994 in a redacted version of the document. See X000533. In addition, we have recently learned that an unredacted version of this document was in fact produced to the Committee by the White House on November 2, 1995 (#S9845). Accordingly, this document was produced as appropriate, when called for by the Committee.

To underscore that the Committee's 1994 request was limited to White House-Treasury contacts, one need look no further than comments made by then-Chairman Senator Donald Riegle, during the Committee's August 4, 1994 hearing. The issue before the Chairman at the time was the proper scope of inquiry into document #S007288-7313, the Neil Eggleston memorandum of February 28, 1994. That memorandum, as you are aware, dealt with the FDIC and RTC investigations into Madison/Whitewater, the statute of limitations, and the Rose Firm. The document was initially produced to the Committee in redacted form, because the White House concluded that those matters were not called for by the document request. At the hearing, the Committee was provided with the full document. However, the Chairman still limited questioning to the final section concerning the ramifications of Mr. Altman's February 25, 1994 recusal, and advised the witness that he should restrict his responses to only that part of the memo, as that part alone was within the Committee's charter. (See Transcript of Hearing (Aug. 4, 1994) at 310-312.) As the Chairman's comments and actions made clear, matters relating generally to the RTC investigation of Madison or generally to the statute of limitations were not at the time material to the Committee's resolution of inquiry or responsive to its document request.

Additionally, we note that the Committee did not generally request records Mr. Ickes kept of the Whitewater Response Group until February 15, 1996, even though it had been aware of their existence since Mr. Ickes' deposition in 1994. This further indicates that the Committee recognized that these documents were not, as a broad category, responsive to previous Committee requests.

Finally, as you know, the White House Counsel's office took responsibility for producing White House documents responsive to Committee requests directed to individual White House personnel, including Mr. Ickes. In March 1994, in response to an Independent Counsel subpoena regarding White House-Treasury contacts, Mr. Ickes made a sweep of his files and turned over anything arguably responsive to both his personal counsel and to the White House Counsel's Office. The White House Counsel's staff later culled that group for documents responsive to the Committee's June 1994 request. Two of the documents produced to the Committee on February 20, 1996 -- including the January 16, 1994 notes of a meeting regarding Whitewater held in a private home -- were among those given to White House Counsel in March 1994. When the Counsel's Office undertook to respond to the Committee's June 1994 request, it evidently determined that these documents were not responsive -- a conclusion with which we would have concurred.

As Mr. Ickes explained when he testified, he deeply regrets that the documents produced in February 1996 were not provided to the Committee earlier, but his failure to do so was wholly inadvertent, and he had no intention to conceal anything from the Committee. We do not agree, however, that these documents were "long requested" or "long . . . subpoenaed by the Committee," or with the suggestion that any of these documents should have been produced in 1994.

Dear Mr. Bennett:

The Special Committee to Investigate Whitewater Development Corporation and Related Matters has received your letter of April 18, 1996 to Chairman D'Amato and Senator Sarbanes regarding Mr. Harold Ickes' testimony to the Committee on February 22, 1996. As requested, your letter will be included in the record of the Special Committee's proceedings.

You requested that the Special Committee make certain corrections in the transcript of Mr. Ickes' February 22, 1996 testimony. As you know, the Special Committee's rules permit alterations of its transcripts only to correct grammatical errors, obvious errors of fact and errors in transcription. Many of your requested corrections exceed these parameters and would change substantively Mr. Ickes' testimony to the Special Committee. Accordingly, Chairman D'Amato has instructed the Special Committee's editor, Edward Malan, to make the corrections you requested on pages 67, 74, 143, 167, 182, and 259 of the transcript, but not those requested on pages 29, 30, 32, 100, and 239 of the transcript. Enclosed is Chairman D'Amato's memorandum to Mr. Malan to that effect.

In lieu of altering the transcript of Mr. Ickes' testimony on page 239, the Special Committee will take note that you have advised the Special Committee that Mr. Ickes had a White House pass that was revoked in September 1993.

Your April 16, 1996 letter states that none of the documents produced by the White House from Mr. Ickes' files on February 20, 1996 was covered by the June 22, 1994 request for documents from the Committee on Banking, Housing, and Urban Affairs. The record is to the contrary.

Robert S. Bennett, Esq.
April 22, 1996

The Banking Committee's June 22, 1994 letter to Mr. Ickes, a copy of which is attached, requested all records, regardless of format, in Mr. Ickes' custody, control, or possession "that relate in any manner" to communications between the White House and the Department of the Treasury or the Resolution Trust Corporation ("RTC") concerning Whitewater Development Corporation ("Whitewater") or Madison Guaranty Savings and Loan Association ("Madison"). This request encompassed not only documents specifically referencing White House-Treasury contacts, as your letter asserts, but also records that were more generally relevant to such contacts--including records that reflect, refer, or relate to the subject matters discussed in the meetings and communications between White House and Treasury or RTC officials. Cf. Morales v. Trans World Airlines, Inc., 504 U.S. 374, 383 (1992) (adopting a broad interpretation of "relating to").

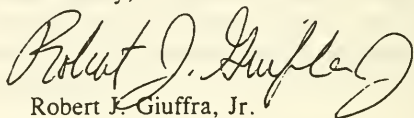

There can be little doubt that notes and documents relating to the statute of limitations governing claims brought by the RTC arising from the failure of Madison were relevant to the White House-Treasury contacts. Mr. Ickes himself acknowledged this fact when he testified to the Banking Committee on August 4, 1994. His opening statement to the Banking Committee dealt almost entirely with the statute of limitations and his state of knowledge with respect to this issue prior to and after the February 2, 1994 meeting between White House officials and Treasury and RTC officials Roger Altman and Jean Hanson. See S. Hrg. 103-889, Vol. IV, HEARINGS RELATING TO MADISON GUARANTY S&L AND THE WHITEWATER DEVELOPMENT CORPORATION--WASHINGTON, DC PHASE, pp. 353-355. Therefore, the Banking Committee's June 22, 1994 document request encompassed documents numbered S9908-S9911, produced to the Special Committee on November 2, 1995, and documents numbered S20819, S20888, S20790, produced to the Special Committee on February 20, 1996.

Finally, your April 16, 1996 letter states that the Special Committee did not request notes and records relating to the Whitewater Response Group until February 15, 1996. The record is to the contrary. On August 25, 1995, the Special Committee requested from the White House all records, in whatever format, that relate in any manner to, among other things, Whitewater and Madison. This request was repeated in the Special Committee's October 30, 1995 subpoena commanding production of all such records. Obviously, records and notes of the self-described Whitewater Response Team relate to Whitewater and Madison.

Robert S. Bennett, Esq.
Page 3

In any event, Mr. Ickes testified to the Banking Committee in 1994 that, despite having reviewed his records prior to their production to the Special Counsel and the Banking Committee, Mr. Ickes did not recall any reference to the issue of the statute of limitations in his notes. (Ickes dep., 7/24/94, pp. 231-232). The Special Committee does not, as you suggest, bear the burden of identifying specific notes that are responsive to its request and subpoena, especially given Mr. Ickes' prior testimony about such notes.

Sincerely,

Dear Mr. Ickes:

On June 21, 1994, the Senate passed Senate Resolution 229, a copy of which is enclosed, directing the Committee on Banking, Housing, and Urban Affairs to conduct hearings on matters specified in the resolution.

In preparation for the hearings, we request that you provide to the Committee all records that are within your custody, control, or possession, regardless of format, that relate in any manner to the following subjects:

- (a) communications between officials of the White House and the Department of the Treasury or the Resolution Trust Corporation relating to the Whitewater Development Corporation and the Madison Guaranty Savings and Loan Association;
- (b) the Park Service Police investigation into the death of Vincent Foster; and
- (c) the way in which White House officials handled documents in the office of Vincent Foster at the time of his death.

These records should be delivered to Kelly Cordes, the Committee's Chief Clerk, 534 Dirksen Senate Office Building. As you know, Senate Resolution 229 provides that public hearings on this matter begin no later than July 29, 1994. Therefore, it is necessary that these documents be received by the Committee no later than July 1, 1994, and prior to that date, if possible. Please provide us, together with the delivery of documents, with a list of the records that you are submitting so that the Committee and you have a common list of the records supplied by you.

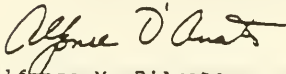

Harold Ickes

If you at one time had records on the matters listed above, but have provided them to someone else, please advise us in writing, by July 1, 1994, to whom you provided those records and furnish us a list of the records provided.

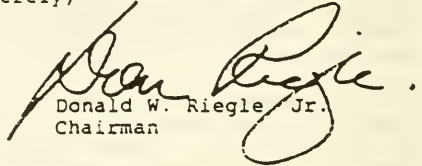

If you have any questions concerning this request, please call Michael Davidson, Senate Legal Counsel, at 224-4435. This request is, of course, an initial request and may be supplemented by additional ones. If you will be represented in these proceedings, please advise us of the name, address, and telephone number of your counsel.

Your cooperation in this matter is greatly appreciated.

Re: Harold Ickes' February 22, 1996 Testimony

Dear Senators D'Amato and Senator Sarbanes:

We write in response to a letter from Committee Counsel Robert J. Giuffra, Jr., transmitting a memorandum from Senator D'Amato to Edward M. Malan in which the Chairman directs Mr. Malan to refrain from making certain specified corrections in the transcript of the above-referenced testimony by our client, Harold Ickes.

We object to the Committee's refusal to include certain clarifications to Mr. Ickes' testimony, as requested by us. Mr. Giuffra asserts that the rules permit corrections only for grammatical errors, obvious errors of fact and errors in transcription, and thus certain of the changes we requested were disallowed. However, the directions provided by the Committee also permitted "minor clarifying changes. . . if they do not change the original statement." In the changes that were disallowed, no alteration was made to the substance of the original statement; in almost all cases, words were simply added to them for purposes of clarification. Accordingly, they are permitted under the rules, and we urge that they be included. If not, we would at a minimum ask that the corrections we proposed, which were attached to our letter of April 18, 1996, be included in the record along with that letter, so that the public record at least will reflect that Mr. Ickes attempted to assure the record was accurate and complete.

Chairman
Hon. Paul Sarbanes,

In that respect, it is significant that several of the clarifications that were disallowed seek to reiterate the fact that Mr. Ickes reviewed documents in March 1994 and turned them over to counsel at that time. The clarifications are not needed to correct Mr. Ickes' responses so much as to correct misimpressions that may have been created by the way counsel framed his questions to Mr. Ickes. The Committee, moreover, has no reason to doubt that the clarifications are accurate and correct as to those facts. Accordingly, the Committee's refusal to allow these changes only gives support to those who claim that some on the Committee are engaged in a game of "gottcha," and are less concerned about accuracy and completeness.

As to Mr. Giuffra's other comments about the scope of the Committee's June 22, 1994 document request, the record, including Chairman Riegle's comments at August 4, 1994 hearing, speaks for itself. The request was reasonably understood by all at the time to be limited to documents specifically relating to White House-Treasury contacts, and we will not revisit the issue here.

Again, we ask that this letter be included in the official record of the Committee.

Sincerely,

A handwritten signature in dark ink, appearing to read "Bob Bennett", written over the typed name.

RE: Resolution Trust Corporation

Attached is a copy of W. Neil Eggleston's 28 February 1994 memorandum to me regarding certain issues involving the RTC and the Rose Law Firm ("Rose"). Attached to that memo are copies of the FDIC report, dated 17 February 1994, concerning possible conflicts of interest regarding Rose's representation of the FDIC against Madison Guaranty, and the RTC's 8 February 1994 report concerning the same subject.

It is my understanding that shortly after Roger Altman met with Bernie Nussbaum, me and others concerning the RTC statute of limitations, he received an opinion from an ethics officer of the Treasury Department that he, as the acting head of RTC, did not have to recuse himself from matters involving Rose/Madison Guaranty. I will confirm this situation.

Please let me know if you want to discuss the attached.

the IG will adopt the broadest possible interpretation of its mandate.

2. The RTC Report.

The RTC report was released on February 25, 1994 by Senator D'Amato.

The RTC report differs in two major respects from the FDIC report. First, the RTC did not interview any Rose law firm attorneys. The RTC reviewed RTC records and interviewed RTC employees only. Second, the report is factual only. The report reached no conclusion on whether the Rose law firm had a conflict. As the report describes its scope, "This investigation focused only on whether or not Rose disclosed its previous representation of Madison to the FDIC and RTC."

The RTC concluded that Rose did not disclose either its prior representation of Madison Guaranty or Mr. Hubbell's relationship with Mr. Ward.¹ The report acknowledges, however, that within a few months of the retention, the supervisory FDIC attorney, Ms. Breslaw, was made aware of Mr. Hubbell's relationship with Mr. Ward. Ms. Breslaw determined that no conflict existed.

The RTC did not hire the Rose law firm; rather, the retention by the FDIC took place before the RTC was even in existence. Further, the RTC acknowledges in its report that it had no outside conflicts committee, nor regulations, guidance or policy on conflicts until after 1989.

The conclusion of the RTC report is that the matter was referred to the Office of the General Counsel (Ellen Kulka) for any action that it deems appropriate.²

¹ An ultimate finding that Rose had not disclosed either the prior representation of Madison Guaranty or the Ward relationship would be a finding that Mr. Hubbell was not truthful in his recollection. Mr. Hubbell told the FDIC when it was preparing its report that he advised FDIC attorneys about the prior Rose representation of Madison Guaranty and believes that he also advised the government attorneys about his relationship with Mr. Ward. Mr. Hubbell was not interviewed by the RTC attorneys during the preparation of their report.

² As noted above, the RTC report only addressed the factual issues of representation and disclosure. The report did not attempt to apply the facts to any applicable conflicts rules or regulations. It is not clear what the RTC General Counsel, Ms. Kulka, will do with the report. The RTC has an Outside Counsel's (continued...)

At the hearing, Mr. Altman agreed to refer the RTC report to the RTC IG for review.

What sanction could be imposed if the FDIC/RTC finds that the Rose law firm had a conflict of interest or an appearance of a conflict in handling the Frost & Co. litigation in 1989 and failed to disclose that conflict?

As noted above, it is not clear whether the FDIC or the RTC will review this matter under an actual conflict standard or an appearance of a conflict standard. It would seem that to impose any sanction, the IG would have to decide that the Rose firm violated a duty that was in existence at the time, not a duty that later became more strict.

The most severe sanction that would likely flow from a finding that the Rose law firm had a duty to disclose its prior representation of Madison Guaranty and its relationship with Mr. Ward and that it breached that duty would be that the Rose law firm would be permanently barred from any further work for the RTC or the FDIC (and possibly other banking regulators). Lesser sanctions imposed by the regulatory agencies might also be possible, such as a temporary bar.

Under the facts as we now understand them, it would seem quite unlikely that the RTC could bring a civil action against the Rose firm or any of its attorneys for failure to disclose the conflict. To prevail, the RTC would have to show fraud or intentional misconduct that caused substantial loss to the institution or unjust enrichment to the Rose firm. The RTC could only really show fraud or intentional misconduct if it could demonstrate that the Rose law firm "threw" the Frost & Co. litigation because of its prior representation of Madison Guaranty. → How did we get this info? Any with Treas

Criminal liability for the Rose firm would seem even more remote. To prevail, the Special Counsel would have to show that Rose acted with intent to defraud the savings and loan or wilfully made false statements to the FDIC/RTC through its failure to disclose the conflict.

What civil matters is the RTC investigating, who can it sue, and why didn't we hear anything about a civil investigation until late 1993?

²(...continued)

Conflicts Committee to which she could refer the report. She could presumably also refer the report with a recommendation to the RTC Acting CEO Jack Ryan for action.

The RTC is investigating whether it has a civil tort action against anyone who caused a loss to Madison Guaranty. This would include insiders such as James and Susan McDougal and members of the Board of Madison. It also includes professionals who provided service to Madison Guaranty, such as the Rose law firm, other law firms, and accounting firms. The Frost & Co. suit is an example of a suit against a professional service provider that caused loss to Madison Guaranty through a negligent audit. The RTC could also sue outsiders, including the President and Mrs. Clinton, if the RTC found that the outsiders worked with insiders illegally to divert assets of the savings and loan. For example, if the RTC believed that the Clinton campaign knowingly received diverted Madison assets at the April 1985 fundraiser or that the Clintons knowingly received other diverted Madison Guaranty assets through Whitewater, it could bring suit. The RTC commonly sues the recipient of a loan where it has information that the borrower knew that the loan was improper.

Under the legislation creating the RTC in 1989, the RTC as conservator of a failed savings and loan had to bring a tort claim within three years of the time the RTC (or FDIC as predecessor) took over the institution. The FDIC took over Madison Guaranty on February 28, 1989. Thus, all torts had to be brought by February 28, 1992. That day passed during the campaign.

The Resolution Trust Corporation Completion Act, signed by the President on December 17, 1993, ~~revived the possibility of a civil action.~~ Under that legislation, a narrow class of torts--those that were fraudulent or involved intentional misconduct and that either caused substantial loss to the institution or unjust enrichment to the defendant--were revived. The statute extended the limitations period such that this category of tort could be brought within five years of the time the RTC took over the institution.¹ Moreover, the statute specifically provided that the five year period would apply even if the three year limitations period had already run.¹

¹ The statute of limitations for crimes involving financial institutions is 10 years from the date the illegal conduct occurred, regardless of when the RTC took over the institution.

As a result, the RTC would not have been looking into a possible civil suit involving Madison Guaranty after February 1992 and before the passage of the statute last fall. In late 1993 and early 1994, Senator D'Amato and Rep. Leach recognized that the legislation had revived the possibility of an RTC lawsuit in the Madison matter. Both took to the floor of their respective chambers, aggressively urging the RTC to commence an action before the statute expired. In early 1994, the RTC--then faced with a statute of limitations that would run by the end of February--hired the San Francisco-based law firm of Pillsbury, Madison and Sutro to assist it in determining whether to bring any civil actions arising out of Madison.'

In February 1994, the statute of limitations was extended once again, through the life of the RTC, which is expected to expire on December 31, 1995.

Now that Mr. Altman as Acting CEO of the RTC has recused himself from further involvement in Madison Guaranty matters, who at the RTC will be the decision-maker on whether to bring a civil action arising out of the failure of Madison Guaranty?

Following his testimony before the Senate Banking Committee on Thursday, Mr. Altman recused himself as Acting CEO of the RTC from any further involvement in Madison Guaranty/Whitewater matters.

' The partner at Pillsbury assigned to this matter is Jay Stephens, a Republican who was a member of the Reagan and Bush administrations. From 1981 to April 1986, Mr. Stephens was a political appointee at the Justice Department. By 1986, he had become Associate Deputy Attorney General. From April 1986 through March 1988, he was Deputy Counsel to the President. In that capacity, he had a role in the Iran/Contra Affair. After published reports that Oliver North had shredded documents, Mr. Stephens called Fawn Hall. When she denied (falsely) that any improper shredding had taken place, Mr. Stephens accepted her denial, and the White House issued a statement denying the shredding.

In March 1988, President Reagan appointed Mr. Stephens to be U.S. Attorney for the District of Columbia. When President Clinton sought the removal of all U.S. Attorneys in April 1993, Mr. Stephens called a press conference at which he suggested that the President was acting to frustrate the investigation of Rep. Rostenkowski. At the time, Senator Dole called for hearings into what he termed the "March massacre." Until January 1994, Mr. Stephens had been considering running for the Senate.

The top official at the RTC who will be making these decisions on Madison Guaranty is Jack Ryan. Mr. Ryan was formerly with the Office of Thrift Supervision. He is a career official. His principal advisor will be Ellen Kulka, now General Counsel of the RTC, who also came from OTS. Ms. Kulka is also a career official.

We intend to nominate a person for the position of CEO of the RTC within the next few weeks. We can anticipate that any person the President nominates will be pressured to recuse from any Madison-related matters. If the person refuses to recuse and is confirmed, then that person will become the decision maker. If that person is forced to recuse to achieve confirmation, then Jack Ryan would remain the decision-maker on Madison matters at the RTC.

MEMORANDUM TO: Chairman Howe

FROM: Douglas H. Jones Doug H. Jones
Acting General Counsel

SUBJECT: Report on the Retention of the Rose Law Firm

As you requested, we have reviewed the FDIC's 1989 retention of the Rose Law Firm with respect to Madison Guaranty Savings and Loan. ~~Attached is a report on our review and findings.~~ As you can see from the report, we found no basis to conclude that the retention involved a conflict of interest by the law firm. Accordingly, we are not recommending any sanctions against the firm.

LEGAL DIVISION REPORT ON THE RETENTION OF THE ROSE LAW FIRM FOR THE MADISON GUARANTY SAVINGS AND LOAN CONSERVATORSHIP

The purpose of this report is to review the facts and circumstances surrounding the retention of the Rose Law Firm (the "Firm") for the representation of the conservatorship of Madison Guaranty Savings & Loan (the "Conservatorship" and the "S&L", respectively) in litigation against the Frost & Co. ("Frost") accounting firm. It explores (1) whether the Firm's prior representation of the S&L before the Arkansas Securities Commissioner constituted a conflict of interest; (2) whether the litigation against the Conservatorship by the father-in-law of the Firm partner in charge of the Frost litigation was a conflict of interest; and (3) whether any action against the Firm is warranted.

Assertions have been made that the Firm had conflicts of interest that should have prohibited it from representing the Conservatorship and the FDIC in the Frost litigation. We have reviewed the time period in which the FDIC was responsible for managing the Conservatorship (from February 28, 1989 through August 9, 1989, when the Resolution Trust Corporation was established) to determine the facts related to the Firm's retention. As a part of our review, we looked at all relevant internal FDIC and RTC materials from that time, reviewed relevant materials identified by the Firm, and interviewed each of the participants and others who were involved with the Conservatorship.

As detailed below, based on the information available to us, we have found no basis to conclude that under the then applicable rules either situation involved a conflict of interest. Accordingly, we recommend no sanctions against the Firm.

Background

On February 7, 1989, the FDIC entered into an agreement with the Federal Savings and Loan Insurance Corporation ("FSLIC") to act as agent for the FSLIC in any receivership or conservatorship appointed for an insured savings association after January 1, 1989. On February 28, 1989, FSLIC was appointed conservator for the Madison Guaranty Savings & Loan. Pursuant to the agreement with the FSLIC, the FDIC was appointed the managing agent for the Conservatorship. In that role, the FDIC was required to marshal the institution's assets and pursue all claims by and defend those against the S&L. Among the litigation existing at the S&L at that time was a suit against the institution's former auditor, Frost & Co. As managing agent, it was the FDIC's responsibility to determine whether that suit had any value and, if so, to continue the pursuit of the action. The FDIC's formal role ended on August 9, 1989, with the creation of the RTC, whose function was to serve as receiver or conservator for any S&L closed after January 1, 1989.

The Firm's Prior Representation

In 1985, the Firm represented the S&L before the Arkansas Securities Commissioner on two matters: a plan to issue a $3 million private placement of preferred stock in the S&L, on which the Commissioner was asked to issue an opinion; and an application by which the S&L, assuming it raised the capital, sought to set up a service corporation that would become a wholly-owned broker dealer of securities. The opinion was issued on May 14, 1985 and the Commissioner approved the service corporation on September 20, 1985, although placing a condition on the approval that the S&L must raise the capital by December 31, 1985. The capital was never raised and the plan was not implemented. There were no communications between the Commissioner's staff and the Firm after 1985 with respect to the securities placement or the plan.

Part of the submission in support of these two applications was an audit of the financial statements of the S&L performed by Frost for calendar year 1984. Certain adjustments to these financial statements were questioned by the Commissioner's office. The records of the Commissioner's office show that the effect of those adjustments was explained in letters from Frost and John Lathan, the S&L's chief executive officer, attached to a letter from the Firm on July 25, 1985. There is no indication that the Firm retained the auditor, assisted in any way in the audit or took any position as to the quality of the audit.

In 1988, the S&L initiated litigation against Frost charging that the auditor had been negligent, reckless and breached its contract by failing to fairly represent the S&L's financial condition in the 1984 and 1985 audits. The S&L was represented in the litigation by the law firm of Gerrish and McCreehy.

The Gerrish firm also was involved in defending directors and officers of failed banks in actions instituted by the FDIC. After FDIC was appointed managing agent of the Conservatorship, the FDIC staff attorney responsible for the Frost litigation concluded that, pursuant to FDIC policy, the firm had a conflict of interest with the FDIC and had to be replaced. The staff attorney also concluded that few firms in Arkansas had the experience and capacity to do accounting malpractice work, which is considered to be complex in nature. The staff attorney first considered the Arkansas law firm of Wright, Lindsey & Jennings, which had represented FDIC in other matters, but it too had a conflict of interest. The staff attorney then contacted the Rose firm based on previous work done by the firm on behalf of the FDIC in connection with the Corning Bank failure.¹

The FDIC's Legal Division continued to provide legal support to the RTC with staff dedicated to RTC legal matters until September 1991, when all RTC legal matters were assumed by a newly created Legal Division within the RTC comprised of the FDIC staff formerly dedicated to RTC work.

The staff attorney contacted a partner of the firm (based on the staff attorney's recollection, probably Webster Hubbell) and asked the firm to take over representation. The staff attorney is sure the firm would have been asked about any conflicts of interest, but due to the passage of time has no specific recollection of making that request or any response that may have been made. Richard Donovan, a partner with the firm who worked on the case, states that he recalls Mr. Hubbell having advised the staff attorney of prior representation of the S&L on a matter involving the Arkansas Securities Commissioner. Mr. Hubbell's recollection differs. He recalls advising the staff attorney very generally that the firm had done a small amount of work for the S&L years earlier, but that he did not view that as amounting to a conflict. He believes the work he was aware of was lending and collection work. He says he does not believe he was aware of the earlier securities work at that time, so he does not believe he discussed it with the staff attorney then. The FDIC staff attorney has no recollection of the issue being raised and says that if it had been it would have been discussed with the attorney's supervisor. The supervisor has no recollection of the issue being raised.

¹ While the firm had sent a letter to the FDIC dated February 28, 1989, soliciting work relating to any S&L failures, it does not appear the staff attorney was aware of that letter or that it influenced her decision to ask the firm to represent the FDIC. Also, assertions have been made that the letter may have been deceptive and misled the FDIC regarding prior representation because it stated "the firm does not represent any savings and loan association in state or federal regulatory matters." However, the letter also states "[f]rom time to time we have provided specialized service to some savings and loan associations in such areas as employment discrimination, work-out of participation loans and bankruptcy." The firm also acknowledged in the letter that there may be individual transactions or situations where a conflict of interest could arise.

The Existence of a Suit Involving Mr. Rubbell's Family

At the time the conservator was appointed (and when the firm was retained), Mr. Rubbell's father-in-law, Seth Ward, Sr., was involved in litigation with the S&L. Mr. Rubbell's father-in-law had obtained a judgment of roughly $470,000 for commissions allegedly owed him by the S&L for the sale of real estate on behalf of Madison Financial Corporation, a subsidiary of the S&L. That case was then on appeal.

Mr. Rubbell says he was aware of the Ward litigation but he did not view it as a conflict. He says he believes he did advise the staff attorney about it, but he cannot be certain. The staff attorney does not recall whether the Ward relationship was raised at the time of the firm's retention in March of 1989. However, another FDIC staff attorney became aware of the relationship and informed the staff attorney on the case, in a letter dated June 8, 1989. At that time, the second staff attorney expressed concern that Mr. Rubbell would have access to information through his representation that could be damaging to the litigation involving Mr. Ward. After reviewing the facts, the staff attorney responsible for the Frost litigation concluded that the facts did not pose a conflict. On June 23, 1989, the staff attorney wrote to the FDIC's Managing Agent for the Conservatorship concerning the Rubbell/Ward relationship, stating that Mr. Rubbell had not represented Mr. Ward in the past and he would not do so in the future.³ Mr. Rubbell then sent a letter to the FDIC Managing Agent, dated June 28, 1989, in which he affirmed that he had not and would not in the future represent Mr. Ward in the dispute with the S&L.⁴ Mr. Rubbell also confirmed in an interview that he had not drafted any documents that were involved in the Ward litigation.

³ The staff attorney's letter also noted that the primary attorney in the case was Richard Donovan, not Mr. Rubbell, and stated that Mr. Rubbell was involved only in an indirect way. Based on discussions with the staff attorney, this was meant to indicate that Mr. Donovan, as the junior partner on the case, would do most of the day-to-day work. Based on fee bills for the case, Mr. Rubbell performed a significant amount of work.

⁴ The issue was raised again after Mr. Rubbell's letter when an FDIC credit specialist sent a memorandum to his supervisor expressing concern about the relationship and seeking senior level review of the situation. This memorandum also was called to the attention of the FDIC's Regional Counsel indicating that this should be "a Washington issue" because the staff attorney responsible for the Frost litigation was based in Washington, D.C. No further action appears to have resulted from these subsequent memoranda.

As an added precaution, according to Mr. Hubbell, Mr. Donovan and Gary Speed, another partner at the firm who worked on the Frost case, the firm imposed an informal, unwritten procedure in connection with the Frost litigation that kept Mr. Hubbell from having access to information about his father-in-law. According to Messrs. Donovan and Hubbell, Mr. Hubbell was not allowed access to material such as an investigative report done by the S&L's prior attorneys, and he was kept out of several depositions when information concerning Mr. Ward's loans was expected to be involved. Mr. Speed states that Mr. Hubbell would leave the room if Mr. Ward's name came up during discussions, and that he and Mr. Donovan would not discuss Mr. Ward in the presence of Mr. Hubbell.

Analysis

Criteria for Determining Whether a Conflict Exists

The standards governing the professional conduct of attorneys, including issues relating to actual and potential conflicts of interest, are set forth in codes or rules of professional responsibility and conduct adopted by the various states. Many states have adopted, or have patterned their rules on, the American Bar Association's Model Rules of Professional Conduct ("the Model Rules"). Arkansas adopted the Model Rules as its rules of conduct for attorneys in 1985. The Model Rules generally prohibit an attorney from representing a client where the attorney also represents or previously represented another client whose interests are adverse to the first client. The Model Rules provide that a client may waive a conflict of interest by consenting to the representation after consultation with the attorney and provided the attorney reasonably believes the representation will not adversely affect the relationship with the other client. MODEL RULES OF PROFESSIONAL CONDUCT Rule 1.7. Under the Model Rules, and all the state rules of which we are aware, it is the attorney, not the client, who has the primary responsibility to identify conflicts of interest when approached with a request to represent a client with respect to a new matter.⁵

⁵ Notwithstanding that the responsibility to identify any potential conflicts rests principally with the attorney, in 1990 the FDIC Legal Division adopted comprehensive policies and procedures governing the retention of law firms and the waiver of actual or potential conflicts of interest. In 1989, the FDIC's conflicts procedures, however, were less formal. Prior to their retention, firms generally were required to respond to a series of questions regarding past and current representations. Unfortunately, in early 1989, due to the tremendous increase in workload as a result of the FDIC's added FSLIC responsibilities,

The relevant provisions under the Arkansas rules of professional conduct provide that:

"A lawyer shall not represent a client if the representation of that client will be directly adverse to another client, unless: (1) the lawyer reasonably believes the representation will not adversely affect the relationship with the other client; and (2) each client consents after consultation"; and

"A lawyer shall not represent a client if the representation of that client may be materially limited by the lawyer's responsibilities to another client or to a third person, or by the lawyer's own interests, unless: (1) the lawyer reasonably believes the representation will not be adversely affected; and (2) the client consents after consultation."

The Firm's Prior Representation

The information regarding whether the Firm disclosed that it had represented the S&L on the prior securities matter is unclear. The more important question, however, is whether a conflict of interest existed that should have been disclosed before the firm agreed to represent the conservator.

In essence, the Firm represented the S&L's interests before the Securities Commissioner in 1985 and it was representing the S&L's interests (on behalf of the S&L's conservator) in 1989. Previous representation of an institution by itself does not create a conflict when a subsequent conservator is appointed for the institution. There is no indication in the records, or based on our review, that the Firm did anything more with respect to the audit in question than take it at face value in its representation in 1985. There did not appear to be any divergence of interest between their representation in 1985 and 1989. As a consequence, the Firm's representation in 1985 was not "directly adverse" to its representation of the Conservatorship in 1989.

In addition, we have found no evidence that the Firm had a close relationship with the S&L which might call into question its independence. The Firm did not serve as general counsel or exclusive or frequent counsel for the S&L. In addition, no member of the Firm served in any senior managerial or directorial such inquiries were not always documented. In this instance, there are no documents showing what inquiry was made of the Firm.

relationship with the S&L prior to its failure.

Under the Model Rules, disclosure of prior representation such as involved here may not be required. However, where a firm is aware of such a prior relationship, we would expect it to convey that information to our staff to assist in determining whether to retain the firm. It is not clear whether the information was conveyed to the FDIC staff at the time. However, based on our review, we do not believe the prior representation represented a conflict of interest.

The Existence of a Suit Involving Mr. Hubbell's Family

It is uncertain whether the Hubbell/Ward relationship was disclosed at the time of retention. Nevertheless, it was clearly discussed within three months after retention and the staff attorney concluded there was no conflict. That assessment appears to be correct.

Mr. Hubbell had not represented Mr. Ward so there was no conflict of representation directly adverse to the Conservatorship. Also, Mr. Hubbell's representation of the FDIC did not appear to have any effect on Mr. Ward. Under Arkansas rules, unless Mr. Hubbell's representation of the Conservatorship would be "materially limited" by his "responsibilities to" his father-in-law or his own personal interests, no disclosure was required. Also, FDIC procedures, at that time, would not have required the disclosure of the relationship.

While concern was expressed by some FDIC staff shortly after the firm's retention that Mr. Hubbell would have access to information that could benefit his father-in-law, there is no indication any such information was transferred. Moreover, Arkansas rules of professional conduct (as do all state rules of conduct) prohibit an attorney from revealing information relating to representation of a client, unless the client consents after consultation. As a precaution, the firm apparently imposed its own informal "firewall" to prevent information regarding Mr. Ward from being passed on to Mr. Hubbell. Also, the FDIC's procedures at that time did not require disclosure of a relationship such as existed with respect to Mr. Hubbell and his father-in-law.

Therefore, no actual conflict appears to have existed. While in this case it is unclear whether advance disclosure was made and there was no requirement that Mr. Hubbell's relationship be disclosed, we want to emphasize that on an issue as subjective as this, we believe the better course would have been for the attorney to make clear and full disclosure in writing to the FDIC and let the FDIC as client determine whether in its judgment the representation at issue was likely to affect its interests.

adversely.⁶ Nevertheless, that was not specifically required at the time and, when disclosure was made, the FDIC determined the representation was not adverse.

Conclusion

In 1989, the Legal Division lacked formal procedures regarding the determination of conflicts of interest and, at the same time, the Division's staff was experiencing an enormous increase in workload due to the rapidly expanding duties of the FDIC. As a consequence, in hindsight documentation regarding the retention of the firm is more limited than would be ideally hoped for. However, based on our review, we have found no basis to determine that either of the alleged instances involved a conflict of interest.

Therefore, we see no basis to recommend any sanctions against the firm.

S 007302

⁶ In 1990, the FDIC adopted formal procedures to deal with conflicts which emphasized that waivers must be sought even where there is only the "appearance" of a conflict. Also, in 1990, the supreme court of Arkansas recognized that although the "appearance of impropriety" is no longer specifically a part of the state's rules of professional conduct the principle is still a part of the rules. ROSE LAW FIRM
OCOS FILE NUMBER: T94002-WX

I. BACKGROUND:

This investigation was initiated based on accounts in The Washington Times and The Washington Post concerning a possible conflict of interest involving the Rose Law Firm (Rose), Little Rock, Arkansas.

Alleged Conflict:

1. In 1984 and 1985, Rose represented Madison Guaranty Savings and Loan Association (Madison) before the Arkansas Securities Commissioner. In its representation of Madison, the law firm presented and relied upon an audit report issued by Frost & Company (Frost) on Madison. The law firm represented Madison in its attempt to obtain authorization from the Commissioner to issue a class of preferred stock and to engage brokerage activities.

2. In 1987, after the failure of Madison, the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation (FDIC) hired Rose to sue Frost for accounting malpractice in auditing the Madison books in 1984 and 1985. The Frost audit was the same one previously used by Rose in making a case for Madison before the Arkansas Securities Commissioner in 1985.

Scope of the Investigation: This investigation focused on whether or not Rose disclosed its previous representation of Madison to the FDIC and RTC. Interviews of current or former Rose Law Firm attorneys who may be knowledgeable of this matter were not conducted.

II. ROSE LAW FIRM'S REPRESENTATION OF MADISON SAVINGS & LOAN:

Charles F. Handley, Financial Examiner Supervisor, Arkansas Securities Department, provided documentation that established that Rose did represent Madison before the Department during 1984 and 1985:

1. Attachment 1 is a copy of a letter from the law firm, dated April 30, 1985, to Mr. Handley. The letter identified Hillary Rodham Clinton or Richard Massey as the first point of contact for further information.

2. Attachment 2 is a copy of a handwritten memorandum dated May 6, 1985, addressed to "Brady." The unknown author of the memorandum instructed "Brady" to "please review and draft response to Hillary."

3. Attachment 3 is a copy of an office routing slip dated May 6, 1985, from "Charles" referring to an April 30, 1985, letter.

S 007306

Rose Law Firm

letter from the firm setting forth Madison's plan to issue preferred stock and a legal opinion that Madison could issue such stock. The author expressed doubt that Madison could enter into such a business practice.

4. Attachment 4 is a letter, dated May 14, 1985, from Beverly Bassett, Savings and Loan Supervisor, to Ms. Clinton, relevant to the authorization and issuance of a class of preferred stock by Madison. Ms. Bassett's letter stated she agreed with Ms. Clinton's conclusion that Arkansas law expressed state chartered associations the power to authorize and issue preferred stock.

5. Attachment 5 is a letter, dated July 10, 1985, from Mr. Massey, Rose, to various officials of the Arkansas Securities Commission, relevant to Madison's application to engage in brokerage activities. Mr. Massey stated in his letter that either he or Ms. Clinton could be contacted if there were any questions.

6. Attachment 6 is a memorandum, dated July 17, 1985, from Mr. Handley to Ms. Bassett and Nancy Jones regarding Madison's application to form a second-tier, wholly-owned corporation, to engage in securities broker-dealer business. Mr. Handley expressed his concern about adjustments made to Madison's net worth by Madison's accountants in the December 1984 audited financial statement.

7. Attachment 7 is a letter, dated July 23, 1985, from Mr. Massey to various officials of the Arkansas Savings & Loan Supervisory Board, relevant to Madison's application to engage in brokerage activities. The letter essentially disagreed with Mr. Handley's previous letter of July 17, 1985.

SUMMARY: Rose did represent Madison prior to the failure of the savings and loan.

III. ROSE LAW FIRM REPRESENTATION OF THE FDIC/RTC:

A. April A. Breslaw, Attorney, Professional Liability Section, RTC, Washington, D.C., provided information and documentation to support that Rose did represent the FDIC/RTC Madison against Frost.

1. In 1988, Madison filed an accounting malpractice lawsuit against Frost. In 1989, Madison went into conservatorship. At that time, Ms. Breslaw, Attorney, FDIC Directors and Officers Liability Section, replaced Madison's counsel with Rose. The law firm was retained to continue pursuing the accountant malpractice suit against Frost (Attachments 8 and 9).

Rose Law Firm

5 007307

2. Ms. Breslaw stated that the lawsuit filed by Rose on behalf of the FDIC (and subsequently the RTC) and Madison centered on the fact that Frost, during their 1984-1985 audit, failed to detect that Madison was insolvent (Attachment 10).

3. Ms. Breslaw stated that the case was settled in 1991 for $1,025,000 (Attachment 10).

4. Ms. Breslaw provided several of the law firm's billings to FDIC/RTC for its representation in the matter of FDIC/RTC v. Frost & Company and Madison Guaranty Savings and Loan Association (Attachment 11).

5. Further, Ms. Breslaw obtained written confirmation from Rose that the firm billed the FDIC/RTC for a total of $400,879.55 in the matter FDIC/RTC v. Frost & Company and Madison Guaranty Savings and Loan Association (Attachment 12).

8. In addition to Madison, Rose represented and continues to represent the RTC in legal matters involving institutions other than Madison (Attachment 13).

SUMMARY: Rose represented the FDIC and the RTC. In one particular matter, the firm pursued a malpractice suit against Frost for negligence in determining the true financial condition of the Madison during its audit of the institution.

IV. POSSIBLE CONFLICTS:

A. Frost Matter: Rose represented Madison before the Arkansas Securities Department. That representation involved S&L's attempts to obtain authorization to issue preferred stock and to engage in brokerage services. The firm utilized the Frost audit of Madison's condition to support the request for authorization.

1. Later, Rose was retained by the FDIC (and subsequently the RTC) to pursue an accountant malpractice suit against Frost. The particular issue of the suit was the defective audit which failed to detect that Madison was insolvent.

B. Ward Matters:

1. In 1989, all files pertaining to the accountant malpractice suit filed against Frost and Company were delivered to Rose, specifically Webb Hubbell, a staff attorney (Attachment 14).

2. Mr. Hubbell is the son-in-law of Seth Ward, a Madison "insider", who obtained a judgement against Madison approximately $177,000 in 1989. Mr. Hubbell was present at trial of the Seth Ward matter and appeared to have been an interested (indirectly) participant in the Ward proceedings (Attachment 15).

3. The judgement was appealed by the FDIC. Sue Strayhorn, FDIC Litigation Coordinator for Madison, advised that if a new trial was granted, information contained in the Frost audit files (of which Mr. Hubbell had knowledge) could be damaging to the FDIC case against Mr. Hubbell's father-in-law. Ms. Strayhorn brought this to the attention of Paul Jeddalo, FDIC Staff Attorney, in order to make him aware of the situation (Attachment 15).

4. This possible conflict was also raised by Ken Schneck, Madison's Credit Specialist. In addition to the Seth Ward matter, Mr. Schneck also stated that Mr. Hubbell's brother-in-law, Seth Ward II, had also filed suit against Madison. Mr. Schneck stated that during the course of the Frost suit, practices and procedures used in Madison's day-to-day operations would surely be examined. As such, Mr. Hubbell would be privy to this detailed information. Mr. Schneck suggested that it would be naive to think none of this information would be revealed to Mr. Hubbell's family (Attachment 15).

5. Ms. Breslaw responded to the concerns of Mr. Jeddalo, Ms. Strayhorn, and Mr. Schneck. On June 23, 1990, in a letter to David Paulson, Managing Agent, Madison, she informed him of nothing to warrant taking the Frost matter away from Rose (Attachment 17).

SUMMARY: Based on the information obtained to date, none of the above two matters were disclosed by Rose. (See Section below for further disclosure discussion.) The matter involving Seth Ward was brought to the attention of the staff attorney Madison, April Breslaw, by FDIC attorneys. Ms. Breslaw subsequently determined that no conflict existed. It should be noted that at this time, 1989, there was no Outside Conflict Committee and there were no regulations, policy, or guidance regarding conflict matters. The process, according to Ms. Breslaw, was that informal and situations were handled as they came to the attention of the staff attorney who handled that particular institution.

V. DISCLOSURES MADE BY THE ROSE LAW FIRM:

A. On October 3, 1990, Mr. Hubbell executed a Legal Services Agreement on behalf of Rose with the FDIC. Mr. Hubbell certified that, as part of its agreement with the FDIC, the firm would update any conflicts information in its annual report

000032

Rose Law Firm

S 007309

~~the FDIC. No disclosures were made by Rose at this time (Attachment 13).~~

B. On August 24, 1992, Mr. Hubbell, in a letter to the RTC provided detailed information on Rose. Mr. Hubbell stated that the firm's prior representation of the FDIC/RTC included Madison Guaranty Savings & Loan. No disclosure was made that the firm represented Madison prior to FDIC/RTC involvement.

1. In his letter, Mr. Hubbell disclosed an unrelated conflict involving a former member's alleged conflict of interest in acting as both borrower and attorney in connection with his personal credit arrangements at FirstSouth. The claim was subsequently settled and the member withdrew from the firm in March 1988.

2. Attached to Mr. Hubbell's letter was an RTC Fitness and Integrity Certification which fully disclosed details of the conflict involving the former member of the firm (Attachment 1).

C. On December 1, 1992, Mr. Hubbell executed a Legal Services Agreement with the RTC and stated the firm had no conflicts of interest with the RTC or FDIC (Attachment 20).

D. Ms. Breslaw, formerly FDIC and currently with the RTC advised that she has no recollection that the Rose Law Firm verbally disclosed to her its prior representation of Madison. Ms. Breslaw further stated she had no documentation regarding conversation wherein Mr. Hubbell told her about the firm's prior representation of Madison (Attachment 21).

SUMMARY: Rose disclosed one conflict of interest which is unrelated to the Frost or Ward matters. No documentation was found regarding a disclosure of either the Frost or the Ward matters.

VII. SUMMARY:

A. Rose represented Madison prior to its failure. In one particular matter, the firm represented Madison before the Arkansas Securities Department in the S&L's attempt to obtain authorization to issue stock and engage in brokerage activities. The firm's representation relied upon the Frost audit report.

B. Rose represented the FDIC/RTC subsequent to the fail of Madison. In one particular matter, the firm was retained pursue an accountant malpractice suit against Frost for failure to detect the insolvency of Madison.

C. Rose did not disclose its representation of Madison before the Arkansas Securities Department to the FDIC/RTC.

MEMORANDUM FOR HAROLD ICKES
DEPUTY CHIEF OF STAFF

FROM: W. NEIL EGGLESTON
ASSOCIATE COUNSEL TO THE PRESIDENT

RE: WHITEWATER--FDIC AND RTC ROSE LAW FIRM ISSUES

The recent release of the FDIC and RTC reports addressing the possible conflict of interest of the Rose law firm in its representation of Madison Guaranty raises a number of issues.

~~What did the FDIC and RTC conclude, and why does it seem that their conclusions are inconsistent?~~

1. The FDIC Report.

The FDIC report was released on or about February 17, 1994. It was drafted by the Legal Division of the FDIC, and presented to FDIC Acting Chairman Hove, a Republican.

Frost & Co. was Madison Guaranty's accounting firm in 1984 and 1985. In that capacity, it prepared certain audited financial reports for Madison. The Rose firm used the 1985 audited financial statement in connection with its representation of Madison Guaranty before the Arkansas Securities Commission.

~~Madison Guaranty sued Frost & Co. in 1988 for the negligent preparation of financial statements. At the time, Madison was represented by the Gerrish firm. McDougal had been forced out of the management of Madison in the summer of 1986. When the FDIC took over Madison Guaranty in February 1989, it determined that the Gerrish firm had a conflict. In March 1989, the FDIC therefore replaced the Gerrish firm with the Rose law firm.~~

The FDIC report reviewed the time period in which the FDIC was responsible for the conservatorship of Madison Guaranty, from February 28, 1989 to August 9, 1989 (when the RTC was created and took over the conservatorship of failed savings and loans). The FDIC was thus the entity that retained the Rose law firm to pursue the Frost & Co. litigation. The FDIC report reviewed relevant FDIC and RTC documents and interviewed participants, including FDIC and RTC employees and Rose law firm lawyers.

On the factual issue of whether the Rose law firm had disclosed to the FDIC its prior representation of Madison Guaranty, ~~the FDIC concluded that the record was unclear.~~ The report nevertheless concluded that no conflict existed between the Rose law firm's prior representation of Madison Guaranty and its representation of the FDIC in the Frost & Co. litigation. The report concluded that the firm's representation in 1985 was not "directly adverse" to the representation in 1989.

The FDIC based its conclusion on two grounds. First, it stated that there was no evidence that the firm had any involvement in the creation of the Frost & Co. audit report that became the subject of the 1989 litigation. Second, it stated "we have found no evidence that the Firm had a close relationship with the S&L which might call into question its independence." ~~This was one of the sentences that Senator D'Amato attacked so bitterly at the Senate Banking Committee hearing.~~

On the issue of whether Mr. Hubbell had disclosed his relationship with his father-in-law, Seth Ward, who was then in ~~litigation with Madison Guaranty,~~ the FDIC stated that it was uncertain whether Mr. Hubbell had disclosed the relationship before the FDIC retained the Rose law firm. Nevertheless, the relationship was plainly known to the FDIC within three months of retention. Mr. Hubbell agreed to the creation of an internal firm "firewall" to guard against him receiving information that might be of use to his father-in-law. At the hearing, Senator Faircloth ridiculed what he called an "Arkansas firewall" through which he claimed light and heat could easily penetrate.

At the hearing, Chairman Hove testified that in 1989, FDIC standards required an actual conflict before the agency would bar a retention. Today, the FDIC's standards are much tougher and would bar a retention on the showing of an ~~"appearance of a conflict of interest."~~ Chairman Hove testified that under today's standards, the Rose law firm facts would present an appearance of a conflict.

~~Chairman Hove agreed to have the FDIC Inspector General~~ ("IG") look into the conflict issue. It was somewhat unclear at the hearing whether the IG would look only at the process by which the FDIC arrived at its decision or would review the substantive issue. It was also unclear whether the IG would apply the actual conflict standard or the appearance of a conflict standard in its review. We should assume, however, that

Further, it did not report possible conflicts involving the brother-in-law and father-in-law of Webb Hubbell, staff attorney at Rose. Both Seth Ward and Seth Ward, II, had filed suits against Madison. The FDIC became aware of this matter, but Ms. Breslaw, the FDIC attorney assigned to the Madison matters, determined that a conflict did not exist.

D. Ms. Breslaw, who was subsequently assigned to the RTC, did retain Rose in 1989 to represent the FDIC/RTC at Madison. Ms. Breslaw did not recall anyone at the firm telling her that the firm had previously represented Madison. No documentation was found which reflected that the firm had disclosed the representation.

E. A F&I Certification and Legal Services Agreements were reviewed and disclosed the firm did not disclose the Froot and Ward matters.

VII. DISPOSITION OF THIS REPORT:

A. This report is provided to the Office of the General Counsel for any action it deems appropriate.

B. This investigation was coordinated with the FDIC, who conducted a separate, independent investigation of these same matters. The FDIC investigating attorney is John Downing.

MEMORANDUM

TO: The First Lady CONFIDENTIAL
FROM: Harold Ickes
DATE: 1 March 1994
RE: Resolution Trust Corporation

It is my understanding that shortly after Roger Altman met with Bernie Nussbaum, me and others concerning the RTC statute of limitations, he received an opinion from an ethics officer of the Treasury Department that he, as the acting head of RTC, did not have to recuse himself from matters involving Rose/Madison Guaranty. I will confirm this situation.

2 MR. CODINHA: Good afternoon, Mr. Ickes. I'll be
3 giving you some overall instructions about what's going to 4 happen, telling your attorney how he can get a look at the 5 deposition after it's done and then we'll be starting on 6 your deposition. I understand that we're going to break so
7 that you can leave at 4:00. What time do you need to 8 leave?

9 MR. BENNETT: We can go right through.

10 MR. CODINHA: So you don't need to break at 11 4:00?

12 MR. BENNETT: We don't need to break at 4:00. I
13 would like, if possible, to finish by 7:30.

14 MR. CODINHA: We'll attempt to finish this as 15 quickly as possible.

16 Mr. Ickes, my name is J. William Codinha. I'm 17 special counsel to the Senate Banking Committee and I'm 18 working on the conducting of an investigation of Senate
19 Resolution 229 into whether improper conduct occurred
20 regarding A, communications between officials of the White
21 House and the Department of the Treasury or the Resolution
22 Trust Corporation relating to the Whitewater Development

1 Corporation and the Madison Guaranty Savings & Loan
2 Association; B, the Park Service Police investigation into
3 the death of White House Deputy Counsel Vincent Foster; and
4 C, the way in which White House officials handled documents
5 in the office of White House Deputy Counsel Vincent Foster
6 at the time of his death.

7 I will tell you, based on the information we have 8 developed in the committee, we believe only A will apply to 9 you, so I likely will not be asking you about B and C under 10 the resolution. At this time, we have had Senate
11 Resolution 229 marked as an exhibit, and it will be the 12 first exhibit in this case.

13 (Ickes Exhibit 1 identified.)

14 MR. CODINHA: I'm joined by Beth O'Neill-Maloney,
15 who is working for me for the majority side in this case,
16 and sitting at the end of the table is Michael Chertoff,
17 who is the Republican special counsel to the committee.

18 This deposition is being taken as a result of a
19 written request from the Senate Banking Committee from the 20 chairman and the ranking member, Senator D'Amato. The 21 deposition is in advance of hearings scheduled to begin on 22 July 29, 1994, and I would advise you that you are likely

1 to be called before the Senate Banking Committee at those
2 hearings. In telling you that, I'm trying to give you a
3 little advance warning so you can plan your schedule.

4 MR. BENNETT: Do we know when he's likely to be 5 called?

6 MR. CODINHA: I would say it would not be this 7 coming week, not starting this week, but I believe it would
8 be the week after that. There's some likelihood although 9 the dates have not been set yet.

10 MR. BENNETT: You will talk to us to 11 accommodate --

12 MR. CODINHA: Oh, yes. We will contact you
13 through your attorneys and we will also notify the White
14 House and they will do the coordination.

15 MR. BENNETT: Thank you.

16 MR. CODINHA: Let me talk a little about the 17 conduct of the deposition. You will be placed under oath
18 and at that time I'll be asking you a series of questions
19 and you'll be expected to give honest and truthful answers
20 to those questions. If you don't understand a question
21 that I've asked you, tell me that. Identify the portion of 22 the question you don't understand and I'll attempt to

1 rephrase it.

2 Your attorney may make an objection as to the 3 form of the question. If that's done, I may ask your 4 attorney to rephrase the question in a way that's
5 satisfactory to him. If it's acceptable to me, it will be 6 asked that way. Otherwise I may ask for you to answer the 7 question I have asked.

8 The stenographer is going to prepare a record of 9 all the questions, answers and any objections taken at this
10 deposition. The transcript of the deposition will be kept 11 committee confidential until the commencement of the 12 hearings, at which time the members will decide how to 13 handle this transcript.

14 You may confer with your counsel at any time
15 during this deposition and although I will tell you that 16 the stenographer will make a note that you're conferring 17 with counsel, it should not deter you in any fashion from 18 talking to your lawyer. You're here represented by counsel
19 and if you want to talk to him, you may talk to him. For 20 the record, counsel will you just identify yourself for the 21 record.

22 MR. BENNETT: Robert S. Bennett.

1 MR. CODINHA: And --

2 MS. SABRIN: Amy R. Sabrin.

3 MR. CODINHA: Mr. Ickes, what we have told
4 counsel -- I'm sorry, what we have told witnesses who have
5 appeared with counsel is that if more than one counsel
6 appear with them, one counsel may speak at the deposition.
7 The other counsel is not to speak at the deposition.

8 Mr. Bennett, who will speak at this deposition?

9 MR. BENNETT: I'll speak.

10 MR. CODINHA: We follow that as a practice;
11 otherwise, lots of people are talking and the stenographer
12 has a problem getting it and we have a problem following
13 it.

14 We will take breaks during the deposition.
15 Usually about every hour and a half or two hours we'll take 16 a break. However, I will advise you that depositions can 17 be tiring and if at any time during the deposition you want
18 a break that isn't a scheduled break, just say I need a
19 break and we'll take a break. There won't be any question
20 as to whether you can get it or not.

21 The other thing I will tell you is if at any time
22 you feel your answers are getting less accurate because you

1 become tired or you just need some space to think about it,
2 tell your lawyer or tell me and we'll take a break.

3 Now, the deposition, after it's prepared, will be
4 kept committee confidential. However, if your attorney
5 wants to review it or if you want to review it, you have to
6 make arrangements with Kelly Cordes at 224-1568 to read
7 it. It's usually prepared the day after your testimony is 8 done. At latest, it will be Tuesday. I suspect very 9 strongly that this will be ready tomorrow.

10 It may be reviewed during ordinary business hours
11 at the offices of the Senate Banking Committee, and 12 ordinary business hours are 9:00 to 5:00. You will not be 13 getting a copy of this transcript unless and until it is 14 released to the public. However, as I said, you can review
15 it.

16 There will be a jurat page supplied for you to 17 make corrections. Your attorney can explain a jurat page.
18 That will allow you to make changes; for instance, if a 19 person's name is used and it's misspelled, that can be 20 changed, minor corrections in transcription, if there's 21 some grammatical change you wish to make.

22 However, I will tell you if there are changes

1 made in the substance of an answer, for instance, a yes
 2 changing to a no, that may require you to be brought back
 3 in and redeposed, and I want to make you aware of that. It
 4 should not deter you, however, from making changes. Since
 5 some counsel believe that they can make changes in the 6 deposition themselves, we have clarified, if changes are 7 made on the jurat page, they are to be made by the witness,
 8 not by counsel.

9 The scope of this deposition will be strictly
 10 limited to the scope of the hearings as defined in Senate
 11 Resolution 229. Counsel, as I've said, may make objections
 12 to the form of question and those will be addressed here.
 13 There's a special objection I'd like to tell you about, and 14 that is that an objection is proper if the subject matter
 15 of the question is outside the scope of Senate Resolution
 16 229. In the event that a scope objection is made and not 17 resolved on the record, the question will be asked for the 18 record and held until the conclusion of the deposition, at 19 which time it will be brought to the attention of the 20 chairman, Senator Riegle, or his designee, for a final and 21 binding determination as to whether an answer is required.
 22 If a scope objection is made, please do not

1 answer the question unless you are advised the objection
 2 has been resolved, so we'll just hold that question.

3 Now, having heard what I've said, do you
 4 understand the terms of this deposition?

5 THE WITNESS: I think so.

6 MR. CODINHA: Will the stenographer swear in the 7 witness, please.

8 Whereupon,

9 HAROLD M. ICKES

10 was called as a witness and, having first been duly sworn,
 11 was examined and testified as follows:

12 EXAMINATION

13 BY MR. CODINHA:

14 Q Mr. Ickes, for the record, would you tell us your 15 whole name.

16 A Harold Ickes.

17 Q Do you have a middle initial, sir?

18 A M as in Mary.

19 Q How do you spell your last name?

20 A I-c-k-e-s.

21 Q What is your date of birth, sir?

22 A

1 Q And what is your Social Security number?

2 A

3 Q Where do you live?

4 A

5 Q And where in Washington?

6 A

7 Q With whom do you live there?

8 A

9 Q Prior to coming here today, did you talk to

10 anyone besides your counsel about the subject matter of 11 your deposition?

12 A I'm not sure -- come here.

13 (Witness conferred with counsel.)

14 About the subject matter of the deposition --

15 initially, at least, is contacts. Have I talked to 16 anybody?

17 Q Yes.

18 A I've talked to a number of people.

19 Q Have you talked to anybody since you became aware

20 that the Senate is going to depose you since June 22 or

21 shortly thereafter when you received a letter advising you

22 that you may be deposed?

1 And not your counsel, I'm not interested in

2 conversations you had with counsel.

3 MR. BENNETT: I guess the problem he's having is

4 if the thrust of the question is has he talked to people

5 about the substance of what they have testified to or

6 gotten direction as to what he will testify to, the answer

7 is no. This is a matter of discussion generally.

8 THE WITNESS: Exactly. I have not talked to 9 people about the substance but obviously -- not

10 obviously -- there was discussion about just the process

11 and the procedure.

12 MR. BENNETT: I mean, he gets calls from the 13 press, which part of his responsibilities are to deal with,

14 so these are subject matters he's coping with.

15 Let me make it clear to you, we have advised him

16 that we did not want him talking to individual witnesses

17 about their testimony and whatever, and I have no reason to 18 believe that has not been complied with.

19 BY MR. CODINHA:

20 Q Let me ask you that question: Have you talked to 21 individual witnesses about their testimony?

22 A No.

1 Q Did you receive a letter from the Senate Banking
2 Committee requesting production of documents on or about
3 June 22?

4 A I recall such a letter, and I turned it over to
5 Mr. Bennett.

6 Q Did you produce documents independently of the 7 White House producing documents?

8 MR. BENNETT: No.

9 BY MR. CODINHA:

10 Q Did you attempt to see whether you had any such
11 documents that fit within the June 22 letter?

12 A I discussed it with Mr. Bennett and whatever he 13 produced is what complied with the letter, as far as I
14 know.

15 Q Prior to coming here for this deposition today,
16 did you review any documents in preparation of the 17 deposition?

18 MR. BENNETT: Other than what I -- how I prepared
19 him for this?

20 BY MR. CODINHA:

21 Q I want to know if you looked at any documents.
22 I'm not asking you who prepared them for you.

1 A Other than what I looked at with Mr. Bennett and
2 at the House interview yesterday or the interview by the
3 House committee, the answer is no.

4 Q And what documents did you look at?

5 A I looked at --

6 MR. BENNETT: I'm going to let him tell you what
7 he looked at that was shown to him by the House, but not
8 get into what I may or may not have shown him in our
9 meetings.

10 THE WITNESS: As I recall, I looked at what was 11 reported to be a typewritten transcription of a diary made,
12 or part of a diary made by Mr. Steiner and there was a 13 memo -- at least a copy of a memo purportedly from me to 14 the first lady which had attached to it -- which was 15 represented to me as having attached to it, although I
16 didn't see it, a redacted memo, but the memo -- my memo to 17 the first lady was shown to me -- the memo that was 18 attached to that memo was not shown to me. It was reported
19 that -- it was represented there was such a memo. It was 20 heavily redacted but it was not shown to me.

21 What else was shown yesterday?

22 MR. BENNETT: Calendars, appointment books.

1 THE WITNESS: Oh, yes. Calendars -- apparently,
2 there was a calendar that was stated by one of the 3 counsels -- Mr. Bentsen's calendars for a certain period of 4 time during 1994, and a page or two pages from my 5 calendar. I guess there was a page from my calendar as 6 well as a copy of what was represented to me to be one of 7 my schedules that I carry around.

8 MR. BENNETT: Keep your voice up.

9 THE WITNESS: I'm sorry. Just yell.

10 BY MR. CODINHA:

11 Q In anticipation of -- do you recall any other
12 documents that you reviewed?

13 A I reviewed a letter from Mr. Altman, a 14 handwritten letter from Mr. Altman to the president, which 15 I recall receiving after the cutoff date of the subpoena
16 from Mr. Fiske.

17 Q Do you recall any other documents you reviewed in 18 anticipation of this deposition?

19 A Not that I recall, no.

20 Q Were you shown any documents which purported to 21 be the diary or scrapbook of Mr. Altman?

22 A I don't think I saw anything from --

1 MR. BENNETT: Just answer.

2 THE WITNESS: I'm sorry. I don't think I saw
3 anything from Mr. Altman. I don't recall it.

4 BY MR. CODINHA:

5 Q In early July, I believe the Senate Banking
6 Committee sent you a letter request that you come in for 7 this deposition. And I believe you were asked to bring a
8 copy of your curriculum vitae or your CV along. I say "I
9 believe" because some witnesses didn't get that request.
10 Did you not get that request?

11 A I don't recall. I turned the letter over to 12 Mr. Bennett. I have not looked at it since.

13 MR. BENNETT: We will send you one.

14 MR. CODINHA: What I'd like you to do is send a
15 copy of the CV and that will be marked as the next exhibit
16 to the deposition.

17 MR. BENNETT: Fine.

18 BY MR. CODINHA:

19 Q The single question I ask about the CV, without 20 reviewing it, is whether it's accurate. So I'm putting 21 that question to you in anticipation of receiving the CV.
22 Please review it for accuracy and then it will become a

1 part of the record.

2 Have you been interviewed or given testimony to
3 any other investigative body that is investigating the 4 subject matter of Senate Resolution 229?

5 A I have.

6 Q And what investigatory agencies have you given
7 testimony to?

8 A As I recall, it was a joint interview recently by 9 someone from the Treasury Department. I think it was from 10 the Inspector General's office at the Treasury Department
11 and at that same interview, someone from the Office of 12 Government Ethics.

13 Q Have you been interviewed by any other
14 investigative agency?

15 A No.

16 MR. BENNETT: Just the special counsel,
17 Mr. Fiske. We're not quite sure how you --

18 MR. CODINHA: That's fine.

19 THE WITNESS: And the House yesterday.

20 BY MR. CODINHA:

21 Q Have you given any other interviews to any
22 inquirers about the subject matter of Senate Resolution

1 229, such as the White House?

2 A Yes.

3 Q With respect to the Treasury IG's office and
4 Office of Government Ethics interview, when did that take 5 place?

6 A About a week ago.

7 Q Was that interview transcribed?

8 A It was.

9 Q And have you received a copy of the 10 transcription?

11 A Yes.

12 Q Have you reviewed a copy of the transcription?

13 A Yes.

14 Q Do you object to us, the Senate, having a copy of 15 that interview?

16 MR. BENNETT: I don't have any objection to it.

17 MR. CODINHA: We would request at this time that 18 we get a copy of that.

19 MR. BENNETT: And we'll make it a part of this
20 record?

21 MR. CODINHA: Yes. I would tell you that 22 anything we request, either by a letter request or at this

1 deposition will become a part of the record.

2 MR. BENNETT: Fine.

3 BY MR. CODINHA:

4 Q With respect to the Office of Independent
5 Counsel, when were you interviewed by them? That's 6 Mr. Fiske's group.

7 A I don't know that I was.

8 MR. BENNETT: Well, it was a grand jury
9 appearance. He was not interviewed. I assume you don't 10 mind me correcting on these preliminary.

11 MR. CODINHA: No, I don't object to that.

12 THE WITNESS: I wasn't taking that in the context
13 of an interview.

14 MR. BENNETT: He wasn't interviewed. He just 15 made a cold grand jury appearance.

16 BY MR. CODINHA:

17 Q Following the grand jury appearance, were you
18 asked to sit down or speak with any investigators from 19 Mr. Fiske's group, either FBI investigators or other
20 investigators and discuss your testimony?

21 A No, not that I recall.

22 Q You say you've already given testimony to a House

20

1 inquiry investigators?

2 A Yesterday.

3 Q And was a transcription of that taken?

4 A Not to my knowledge.

5 Q Was anyone taking notes at that inquiry?

6 A Yes.

7 Q You indicated that you had given information to 8 the White House. When did that take place?

9 A That took place the same, about a week ago, the 10 same day as I was interviewed by the Treasury IG and 11 representative from the Office of Government Ethics.

12 Q Did it take place at the same time or separately?

13 A No, separately. It took place shortly before the 14 interview by Treasury IG.

15 Q Who did the interview?

16 A Two lawyers with the White House counsel's
17 office. Jane Sherbourne and Sheila --

18 Q Cheston?

19 A Yes, Cheston.

20 Q Was Mr. Cutler present at that interview?

21 A He was not.

22 Q Were you shown any documents at that interview?

1 A I don't recall being shown any. It may have
2 been, but I don't recall any documents.

3 Q Did you now recall any other investigatory
4 agencies that have interviewed you?

5 A No.

6 Q Let me turn your attention to the position you
7 now hold with the government. What is the title of that
8 position?

9 A I'm an assistant to the president and deputy 10 chief of staff.

11 Q When did you take that position or those 12 positions?

13 A During the beginning of the first week of January
14 of 1994.

15 Q Prior to the first week of January of '94 when 16 you took those positions, had you held any other position
17 in the administration beginning from January 20th of 1993?

18 A No, I had not.

19 Q Prior to holding that position, had you played
20 any unpaid roles with the administration beginning after
21 January 20, 1993?

22 A For a very short period of time, some 10 days to 22

1 two weeks maximum, as I recall, I was working in the White
2 House.

3 Q When did that 10-day, two-week period occur?

4 A It started with the 20th of January and ran on.

5 Q You were there from the 20th of January, 1993 for 6 10 days or two weeks?

7 A Very late January or very early February when I
8 went back to New York.

9 Q What role were you playing at that time?

10 A I had been involved in the transition effort in 11 Little Rock. I was the deputy to Warren Christopher, and I
12 came up basically to follow up on some of the work I had 13 been doing there in helping staff the White House, and 14 basically that's what I was doing.

15 Q To the best of your knowledge, how did it come
16 about that you became an assistant to the president and
17 deputy chief of staff?

18 A I was asked by the president and by Mr. McLarty,
19 who was then the chief of staff.

20 Q Had you known Mr. McLarty before being asked to 21 be his deputy chief of staff?

22 A Yes.

1 Q And had you known the president before he asked
2 you -- strike that.

3 For how long a time had you known the president
4 before he asked you to become an assistant?

5 A Since the early 1970s.

6 Q How had you known the president, in what 7 capacity, if any?

8 A A friend.

9 Q You're a friend of his. And had you maintained a
10 friendship with the president between the early 1970s and 11 the time he became president?

12 A Yes.

13 Q As advisor to the president -- I'm sorry, as 14 assistant to the president, what are your duties and 15 responsibilities?

16 A My primary responsibilities are to coordinate the 17 president's health care initiative. I also coordinate the 18 White House's role in the 1994 elections as well as the 19 relationship -- the White House's relationship to political 20 efforts generally and to the Democratic National 21 Committee.

22 And when I first came there, I had some

1 responsibility with respect to dealing with the press and
2 responding to the press on what is known generally as
3 Whitewater matters. A number of other things will come up
4 during the course of a day or week but those are my primary
5 responsibilities.

6 Q As assistant to the president, to whom do you
7 report?

8 A I report -- well, as assistant to the president
9 deputy chief of staff, I report to the chief of staff.

10 Q Let me ask you, is your whole title assistant to 11 the president, deputy chief of staff?

12 A Either dash, or and.

13 Q Those are not separate roles, but they're one
14 role?

15 A They're one role, yes.

16 Q As far as you know, did anyone have that position
17 before you took it?

18 A Yes.

19 Q Who was that position?

20 A Immediately before me, I think it was Roy Neel,
21 N-e-e-l, I think. Let me add for clarification, there is a
22 second deputy chief of staff by the name of Phil Lader,

1 L-a-d-e-r.

2 Q So you report to the chief of staff in your role
3 as assistant to the president and deputy chief of staff?

4 A Yes.

5 Q Do you report to anyone else?

6 A No. I report to the chief of staff.

7 Q Do you report to the President of the United
8 States?

9 A Well, all of us report to the President of the 10 United States.

11 Q Do you report directly to the president or 12 through the chief of staff?

13 A It depends on the subject matter and the 14 situation at hand. Sometimes I speak directly with the 15 president. Most of my time, however, I speak directly with 16 the chief of staff.

17 Q In the White House hierarchical structure, there
18 is counsel to the president. Do you report to the counsel
19 to the president?

20 A I don't report to the counsel of the president.
21 I speak with the counsel of the president.

22 Q In terms of the White House hierarchical

1 structure, are you on equal footing with counsel to the 2 president or above that or below that, if you know?

3 A I think it depends upon the subject matter of the 4 question.

5 Q So on legal matters, the counsel to the president
6 would be on a higher matter but on general matters, you
7 would be on either the same level or you might be higher?

8 A Exactly.

9 Q With respect to senior advisors to the president
10 and the hierarchical structure, do you report to senior
11 advisors to the president?

12 A Again, it depends upon the subject matter. If 13 it's a subject matter directly within the scope of another
14 senior advisor, I don't know whether I would use the term
15 "report," but I would certainly discuss and perhaps 16 report. It really depends upon the circumstances.

17 Q With respect to the issue of Whitewater, would 18 you report to senior advisors to the president -- strike
19 that.

20 Are there senior advisors to the president to 21 whom you would report?

22 A To the chief of staff.

1 Q The chief of staff has a title of chief of
2 staff. I'm now talking about senior advisors to the 3 president, such as Bruce Lindsey.

4 A I wouldn't report to him. I would discuss
5 matters with him, but I would not report to him. I
6 reported, on Whitewater I reported to the chief of staff,
7 who is also a senior advisor.

8 Q Are you aware of whether Mr. Stephanopoulos is a
9 senior advisor to the president?

10 A There's no title. Senior -- I don't think 11 there's a title "senior advisor." It is a judgment that is 12 reached, I think, by others, but Mr. Stephanopoulos would 13 be considered, in my view, a senior advisor to the 14 president.

15 Q On the matter of Whitewater, would you report to 16 Mr. Stephanopoulos on matters?

17 A No. I would discuss matters with him.

18 Q Did you consider Mr. Lindsey on the matter of 19 Whitewater to be in the hierarchical structure equal to 20 you?

21 A With respect to what matters?

22 Q Whitewater.

1 A He was very knowledgeable about Whitewater. I
2 didn't report to Mr. Lindsey, but I certainly discussed
3 matters with him.

4 Q And with respect to Mr. Stephanopoulos, on the 5 hierarchical structure with respect to the subject matter
6 of Whitewater, did you consider him above or on the same
7 level as you were?

8 A Same level.

9 Q I have been using a term here, "Whitewater," and 10 let me perhaps define it. As I am going to be asking you
11 questions, I'm going to use two terms. One is Whitewater
12 Development Corporation. Another is the Madison Guaranty
13 Savings & Loan Association. For convenience's sake, I may 14 only refer to them as Whitewater and Madison and with the 15 permission of your lawyer and yourself, I will do that if 16 there's no objection.

17 When did you first -- strike that.

18 You've been responding to questions about
19 Whitewater. When did you first become aware of Whitewater?

20 A Let me say, I have not been interpreting 21 Whitewater as you've just defined it. When did I first
22 become aware of it? Through general press accounts on a

1 very ad hoc basis during the course of 1993. I first heard
2 of Whitewater during the either primary or general election
3 campaign of 1992.

4 Q With respect to Madison, when did you first --
5 when, if ever, did you first become aware of Madison?

6 A It was sometime during 1993 through newspaper
7 accounts.

8 Q Before coming to work at the White House in the 9 first week of January of 1994, did you do any work for the 10 White House, perhaps in the fall or early winter up through 11 December of 1993, with respect to Whitewater or Madison?

12 A No.

13 Q Were you consulted by anyone in the White House
14 with respect to Whitewater or Madison during that time
15 period?

16 A I don't recall being consulted.

17 Q Are you aware -- as we sit here today, are you
18 aware of a 1992 -- let me withdraw the question.

19 Do you know what the initials RTC stand for?

20 A I think in this context, I assume they stand for 21 Resolution Trust Corporation.

22 Q And that's what I mean by that. As we sit here

1 today, are you aware of a 1992 criminal referral concerning
2 Madison, which mentions the Clintons?

3 A As I sit here today?

4 Q Yes.

5 A Yes.

6 Q When did you first become aware of that?

7 A It was not until 1994, and I think to the best of 8 my recollection, it was not until sometime in February of 9 1994, and I can't place it any closer than that.

10 Q And what was the -- how did you become aware of 11 the 1992 RTC criminal referral?

12 A It was either through -- I don't know which came 13 first, either through a press account or someone telling
14 me -- somebody who works in the White House telling me
15 about it and I couldn't tell you who, when or what time.

16 Q Putting aside the press account for the moment,
17 if it were someone in the White House, do you recall how it
18 came about that that was being discussed?

19 A I don't.

20 Q Do you recall whether it was someone from the 21 White House counsel's office or some other office of the 22 White House?

1 A No. As I said, I don't know who, when or where.

2 Q What did you come to know about the 1992 RTC
3 criminal referral in February of 1994?

4 A Come to know through any source?

5 Q First, what did you come to know and then I'll
6 ask you about the source of that information.

7 A Generally, that there had been -- my
8 understanding is there had been a criminal referral or at 9 least a proposed criminal referral which had been, I think,
10 rejected either by RTC or by the Justice Department and
11 there was, I gather, or my understanding was there was a
12 subsequent reopening of that. I don't know the final 13 disposition on that.

14 Q Have you now told me all you can recall of what 15 you knew about the 1992 criminal referral?

16 A That's the essence of it.

17 Q Do you recall the source of your information,
18 that it had been rejected by the RTC or by Justice?

19 A My recollection, as I sit here today, it was 20 either through somebody in the White House or through a
21 press account, and I couldn't tell you which came first.

22 Q Did you have -- did that cause you to ask why the

1 referral had been rejected by the RTC or Justice to the 2 individual who was telling you about it?

3 A Not that I recall.

4 Q Did you have any curiosity as to why that had
5 been rejected by the RTC or Justice?

6 A I think I had read it in a press account of why
7 it had been rejected and I didn't probe beyond that.

8 Q Do you recall today what that press account of 9 why it had been rejected?

10 A I don't.

11 Q You also indicated that you might have had 12 conversation about the reopening of that referral. Do you
13 recall what was said to you about the reopening of that 14 referral?

15 A I don't recall any specific conversation. It is 16 my recollection that it was reopened, and I either learned
17 of that through an account or accounts of somebody in the 18 White House or through the press. I don't know which came 19 first.

20 Q Do you recall questioning at that time why the 21 referral had been reopened?

22 A I recall either questioning or learning about it

1 through press accounts.

2 Q Did you learn the reason why the referral had
3 been reopened?

4 A Well, I read press accounts of why it had been
5 opened.

6 Q What's your understand today of why it had been 7 reopened?

8 A My understanding is -- as I recall, people in --
9 RTC employees in Kansas City asked that it be reopened or 10 developed additional information. I don't recall the exact
11 nature and circumstances of it being reopened.

12 Q Do you recall whether you discussed the fact that
13 RTC employees in Kansas City had requests that the 1992
14 criminal referral be reopened? Did you discuss that with 15 anyone in the White House?

16 A I may well have. I don't recall any specific 17 instance.

18 Q As we sit here today, are you aware that there
19 were a second set of nine RTC criminal referrals which were 20 made in 1993 concerning Madison which also mentioned the 21 Clintons?

22 A Second set of nine?

1 Q A second set of nine criminal referrals.

2 A No, it's the first time I heard either the second
3 set or nine.

4 Q When you were responding to my earlier questions,
5 and I was asking you about the 1992 referral, as we sit
6 here today, do you recall it was a 1992 referral that was 7 being discussed?

8 A It could have been 1993. I don't recall.

9 Q At some point, did you learn about a meeting
10 which occurred on September 29th of 1993 that involved the 11 Treasury Department and the White House?

12 A I learned about it, yes.

13 Q And when was the first time you learned about the 14 September 29th meeting?

15 A As I recall, it was sometime during the month of 16 February. It could have been January, but I recall it
17 being during the month of February.

18 Q What were the circumstances under which you
19 learned about the September 29th meeting?

20 A It could have been either through somebody --

21 MR. BENNETT: Don't speculate. He's entitled to 22 full and complete answers, but could -- don't speculate.

1 THE WITNESS: I don't recall.

2 BY MR. CODINHA:

3 Q As best you can recall today, how do you believe
4 you found out about the September 29th meeting?

5 MR. BENNETT: You can answer it if you can answer
6 it.

7 THE WITNESS: It was either through an individual
8 in the White House or through a press account.

9 BY MR. CODINHA:

10 Q Do you recall any individual in the White House
11 who told you about the September 29th meeting?

12 A As I sit here today, no.

13 Q It has been reported that Mr. -- strike that.

14 The committee has developed evidence that 15 Mr. Nussbaum attended the September 29th meeting. Do you
16 recall Mr. Nussbaum telling you that he was at the 17 September 29th meeting?

18 A He may well have. I don't recall specifically.

19 Q The committee has developed evidence that 20 Mr. Sloan, Mr. Clifford Sloan -- do you know who Clifford 21 Sloan is?

22 A I do.

1 Q Let me take a step back and I apologize for
2 this. Do you know who Bernard Nussbaum is?

3 A I do.

4 Q And was he counsel to the president when you
5 arrived at the White House?

6 A He was.

7 Q Do you know who Clifford Sloan is?

8 A I do.

9 Q Who did you know Clifford Sloan to be?

10 A I don't know his exact title, but I think he was 11 an associate or assistant counsel to the president.

12 Q He worked in the legal office?

13 A He worked in the counsel's office.

14 Q With respect to Mr. Sloan, do you recall
15 discussing with Mr. Sloan the September 29th meeting?

16 A I don't have a specific recollection of it. I
17 may well have.

18 Q In your discussions with people at the White
19 House who you can't now recall, do you recall the subject
20 matter of the September 29th meeting being discussed?

21 A When you say the "subject matter" --

22 MR. BENNETT: He's not sure he had

1 conversations. He said conversations or the press. But
2 what you're asking him is if there were conversations?

3 BY MR. CODINHA:

4 Q Is it helpful at all to you in remembering
5 whether or not conversations occurred in the White House
6 with respect to the September 29th meeting?

7 A There were conversations. I can't place the 8 time, date or who.

9 Q Now, with respect to those conversations, what 10 were you told by people in the White House occurred at the 11 September 29th meeting?

12 A I don't recall any detailed conversations about 13 what occurred at the September meeting.

14 Q Do you recall general conversations of what 15 occurred at the September meeting?

16 A No.

17 Q Do you recall conversations of who was involved
18 at the September meeting -- strike that -- of who was 19 present at the September meeting?

20 A Yes.

21 Q Who do you recall who you were told was present
22 at the September 29 meeting?

1 A I don't recall being told by anyone who was
2 present. I recall there being press account and discussion
3 revolving around those press accounts.

4 Q Do you recall being told by anyone at the White
5 House that individuals from the Department of the Treasury
6 were present at the meeting?

7 A I recall discussions about who was present at 8 those meetings.

9 Q And the discussions, did they revolve around the 10 fact that officials from the Department of Treasury were 11 present?

12 A Yes, that had been reported in the press.

13 Q And was that then discussed at the White House
14 after it had been reported in the press?

15 A It was.

16 Q Did people confirm that people from -- did people
17 at the White House confirm that people from the Department
18 of Treasury had been present at the September 29th meeting?

19 A I don't recall any direct confirmation to me.

20 Q Was there discussion which was, in your presence,
21 as to the appropriateness of people from the Treasury being
22 present at the September 29th meeting?

1 A It had been raised in the press and I think there
2 was discussion around it.

3 Q Who was having that discussion?

4 A I don't recall.

5 Q Was this just general corridor discussion, or was 6 this discussion that was being held at meetings?

7 A Basically corridor discussion, as far as I was 8 concerned.

9 Q Were you able to determine from the general
10 corridor discussions what had been discussed at the 11 September 29th meeting?

12 A No.

13 Q Did you ever ask Mr. Nussbaum what had been
14 discussed at the September 29th meeting?

15 A I may have. I don't recall that I did.

16 Q Did you ever ask Mr. Sloan what had been
17 discussed at the September 29th meeting?

18 A Same answer.

19 Q Do you know who Neil Eggleston is?

20 A I do.

21 Q And did you know him to be a lawyer in the 22 department of the counsel to the president?

1 A Yes.

2 Q The legal office.

3 A Yes.

4 Q Did you discuss with Mr. Eggleston the subject
5 matter of the September 29th meeting?

6 A I don't recall having any specific discussions
7 with him about the subject matter.

8 Q Did you become aware of a meeting which took 9 place on October 14th of 1993 at the White House?

10 A I don't know the exact date. I recall that there
11 was discussion about an October meeting.

12 Q And where did that discussion take place?

13 A I'm sorry?

14 Q Did that discussion at the place at the White
15 House?

16 A I don't think I confirmed there was a
17 discussion. I said I became aware of it. I became 18 aware -- let me back up. I became aware of a meeting in 19 October.

20 Q And how did you become aware of a meeting in 21 October?

22 A I don't recall whether it was through a press

1 account or through one or more individuals in the White
2 House discussing it.

3 Q If it were through one or more individuals in the 4 White House discussing it, who would those individuals have
5 been, if you can recall?

6 A I don't recall.

7 Q Did you come to find out who was present at the 8 October meeting?

9 A As I recall, I did. As I sit here today, I
10 couldn't tell you who they were.

11 Q Did you come to find out that Mr. Nussbaum was
12 present at the October meeting?

13 A I could well have. I don't recall.

14 Q Did you come to find out that Mr. Sloan was 15 present at the October meeting?

16 A Same answer.

17 Q Did you come to find out whether Mr. Eggleston
18 present at the meeting?

19 A Same answer.

20 Q Did you come to find out whether Mr. Gearan was 21 present at the October meeting?

22 A Same answer.

1 Q To the best of your memory, when did you first
2 become aware of the October meeting?

3 A I think it was sometime in February, and there
4 had been -- I think there had been a press account or press
5 accounts about it.

6 Q Did you become aware whether any people from the 7 Treasury Department were present at the October meeting?

8 A As I recall, there had been Treasury people. I
9 couldn't tell you their names. That's the answer.

10 Q Did you know who Josh Steiner was?

11 A At what time?

12 Q In February of 1994.

13 A Yes, I did.

14 Q Did you know that he was chief of staff to 15 Secretary Bentsen of the Treasury?

16 A That's what I had been told.

17 Q And previously to that, he had been the principal
18 assistant to Roger Altman who was deputy secretary of the 19 Treasury?

20 A I came to know that, yes.

21 Q And did you know in February of '94 who Jean
22 Hanson was?

1 A I did in February of '94, yes.

2 Q Did you come to know -- did I just ask that you
3 knew she was general counsel to the Treasury?

4 A In February, I learned that. I learned that.

5 Q Did you know who Jack DeVore was?

6 A I knew from press accounts that he had been a
7 close aide to Senator Bentsen -- or now Secretary Bentsen.

8 Q And was working at the Treasury in the office of 9 public affairs? Did you know that?

10 A My understanding is he was Secretary Bentsen's
11 chief spokesman.

12 Q Did you understand that Mr. DeVore was in a
13 communications department of the Treasury?

14 A I didn't focus on what department he was in. I
15 didn't know what department he was in.

16 Q Did you become aware in February of 1994 that 17 Mr. Steiner had been present at the October meeting?

18 A Again, I don't recall any specific individuals.
19 As I sit here today, I don't recall his name ever being 20 raised, at least in my presence, and I had no knowledge of 21 that.

22 Q Did you become aware that Ms. Hanson had been

1 present at the meeting?

2 A Again, I don't remember specific individuals.

3 Q Do you have any notes or materials that would 4 help you remember whether this was discussed at the
5 meeting?

6 A Not that I recall. Whatever notes were included
7 in Fiske's subpoena have been turned over to my counsel.

8 Q Did you become aware sometime after 1994 when you
9 started working at the White House that a memorandum of the 10 October meeting had been prepared?

11 A I do not recall learning about that. I may well
12 have but as I sit here today, I don't recall.

13 Q Have you reviewed a copy -- strike that.

14 Have you ever seen a copy of a memorandum from 15 Bruce Lindsey to the file which related to this meeting?

16 A I may have. As I sit here today, I don't recall.

17 Q Do you recall --

18 MR. BENNETT: May I ask, is that the same memo?

19 MR. CODINHA: Is what the same memo?

20 MR. BENNETT: The October memo. You referred to 21 the October memo and you asked if he saw the Lindsey memo.
22 Is that the same memo?

1 MR. CODINHA: It's the same memo I'm referring 2 to.

3 BY MR. CODINHA:

4 Q Do you recall seeing a memo that was prepared by
5 Mr. Lindsey that concerned the Whitewater Development
6 Corporation?

7 A Any memo?

8 Q Yes.

9 A I don't recall at this point any specific memo.
10 I may have, but I don't recall any specific memo.

11 MR. BENNETT: I would ask -- excuse me. I would 12 ask if there are such memos and he can't remember, if you
13 want to refresh his recollection.

14 MR. CODINHA: First, I'd like to test his memory.

15 MR. BENNETT: Okay.

16 BY MR. CODINHA:

17 Q Do you recall there being more than one memo of 18 Mr. Lindsey's referring to the Whitewater Development
19 Corporation?

20 A I have no recollection of that.

21 Q Do you recall there being at least one memo?

22 A I don't recall that either. There may well have

1 been, but I don't recall it.

2 Q You indicated that one of your roles when you
3 came in as assistant to the president and deputy chief of 4 staff was to deal with the press on the issue of
5 Whitewater. Do you recall testifying to that earlier
6 today?

7 A Yes.

8 Q What preparation were you given when you came in 9 in January of 1994 to be able to do that?

10 A We had, during the first two or 2-1/2 weeks, I
11 ran a meeting that was held generally twice a day with a
12 group of people who were knowledgeable about Whitewater and 13 knowledgeable about -- also people who were dealing with 14 the press on it. And that's how I came to be informed
15 about Whitewater.

16 Q Did this meeting that took place two times a day,
17 when did those meetings occur, when during the day?

18 A Typically fairly early in the morning and 19 typically in the late afternoon.

20 Q How long did they last?

21 A It depended. Anywhere from half an hour to an 22 hour, maybe a little longer, depending on the kind and

1 nature and amount of press inquiry we were getting.

2 Q And these meetings, they began when you first
3 arrived and they lasted, I believe, you said for two weeks
4 or more?

5 A Two, 2-1/2 weeks with that regularity.

6 Q Following that, did the meetings continue --
7 following the 2-1/2 weeks, did the meetings continue but 8 with less regularity?

9 A With less regularity.

10 Q How often did they then occur?

11 A As I recall, two or three times a week, and even 12 tapering off to less than that.

13 Q Have they occurred through the present day?

14 MR. BENNETT: I'm going to object on scope and 15 pertinency.

16 MR. CODINHA: I'll withdraw the question.

17 BY MR. CODINHA:

18 Q Up until March 10, how often did the meetings
19 occur?

20 MR. BENNETT: We're talking about meetings, I
21 assume, given your introductory remarks, that are limited
22 to contacts with the Treasury. That's my assumption, given

48

1 your preliminary remarks. Is that correct?

2 MR. CODINHA: That is the scope and focus of this
3 investigation, Mr. Bennett.

4 (Witness conferred with counsel.)

5 THE WITNESS: The meetings that I've been talking
6 about didn't have anything to do with contacts between the 7 White House and the Treasury Department.

8 BY MR. CODINHA:

9 Q And how were you able to determine that they
10 didn't have anything to do with contacts between the White
11 House and the Treasury?

12 A As far as I knew, there were no contacts between 13 the White House and the Treasury during that period of 14 time.

15 Q Between what period of time? I'm sorry.

16 A January.

17 Q In January there were no contacts between the 18 White House and Treasury?

19 A Not that I knew of.

20 Q Why don't we talk about who was at the 21 meetings -- first, let's see if we can define the
22 meetings.

1 Did this group have a name?

2 A It had no -- no, it had no official name.

3 Q Did it have an unofficial name of the Whitewater
4 response team or Whitewater response group?

5 A I think that that would be fair that's how it was
6 referred to within the White House.

7 Q And who was in charge of that group?

8 A I was in charge.

9 Q Where did the meetings take place? I'm saying
10 where in the White House.

11 A No, I understand. During the first two, 2-1/2, 12 three weeks, they typically took place in what is known as 13 the ward room, which is the basement or the so-called 14 basement of the west wing.

15 Q Who participated in the meetings?

16 A It varied, but I guess, as I recall -- do you
17 want me to name specific names?

18 Q Please.

19 A George Stephanopoulos, Paul Begala, on occasion
20 James Carville, Michael Waldman, Bernie Nussbaum, Joel
21 Klein, Neil Eggleston, Maggie Williams, David Gergen, Mark
22 Gearan. On an irregular basis, Dee Dee Myers, myself.

50

1 That's pretty much the complement. That is the best of my
2 recollection.

3 Q Did Clifford Sloan attend those meetings?

4 A I think on occasion. I'm not sure he was a
5 regular participant but as I recall, he was at some of the
6 meetings.

7 Q Did Beth Nolan attend those meetings?

8 A Again, I think on an irregular basis.

9 Q Did Mr. Podesta attend those meetings?

10 A I don't recall him being there. He may well have 11 been, but I don't recall him and certainly not on a regular 12 basis.

13 Q Did Lisa Caputo attend those meetings?

14 A She attended some. I don't think on a regular 15 basis.

16 Q Now, Mr. Nussbaum was counsel to the president?

17 A Yes.

18 Q What was his role at the meeting?

19 A He was a participant.

20 Q And what was his -- who determined who came to 21 these meetings?

22 A I did.

1 Q Was this a by-invitation-only meeting or could
2 anyone come at any time?

3 A No. It was a by-invitation meeting.

4 Q How did you determine who should attend any given
5 meeting?

6 A It was basically the same group of people. I
7 thought consistency was useful. And as I said, the purpose
8 of these meetings was to deal with a very high number of 9 press inquiries that were coming in on a daily and weekly
10 basis about this matter, what we call, generically, inside
11 the White House, Whitewater. I'm not using that in the 12 sense you've defined it, but it's generic name inside the 13 White House and we were getting, as I say, a very large
14 number of press inquiries and the purpose of these meetings
15 was to deal with those.

16 Q With respect to Mr. Stephanopoulos, I think you
17 have said he was an advisor to the president, and I use the 18 term "senior advisor" and I think you agreed he would be 19 seen as a senior advisor?

20 A Yes. Again, that's not a specific title in the 21 White House, although I think George may carry that. But 22 as a generic term, he would certainly be considered a

1 senior advisor.

2 Q And Mr. Stephanopoulos was involved in the White
3 House communications department or I think at one point he
4 had been director of communications for the White House,
5 had he not?

6 A He had been. His job duties and title were 7 changed, but he still continues to be very involved with 8 the press.

9 Q You mentioned the name Begala?

10 A Paul Begala, who is an outside advisor, outside
11 consultant, as is James Carville.

12 Q And you mentioned, I think, a Mr. Whalen --

13 A Waldman. Michael Waldman is on the staff and in 14 the communications department at the White House.

15 Q What position does he hold?

16 A I think he is -- there's assistant, deputy
17 assistant -- I'm going down the hierarchy -- I think 18 Michael is special assistant to the president for 19 communications.

20 Q Mr. Nussbaum, we have already said, is counsel to 21 the president?

22 A Yes.

1 Q So he's the chief legal officer in the White
2 House?

3 A At that time he was.

4 Q In January or the time we're talking about?

5 A Yes.

6 Q And Joel Klein is in the counsel -- he's an 7 attorney in the counsel's office?

8 A He is.

9 Q And he is also a legal officer to the president?

10 A Well, he's in the counsel's office functioning as 11 a lawyer.

12 Q And Neil Eggleston was again, a lawyer in the 13 counsel's office?

14 A Yes.

15 Q And Maggie Williams, or Margaret Williams, was 16 chief of staff to the First Lady of the United States?

17 A Was and is.

18 Q I believe you mentioned Mr. Gergen. What role --

19 A David Gergen. David Gergen was, at that time
20 counselor to the president --

21 Q And --

22 A -- was his title.

1 Q What position did he play in the White House
2 administration?

3 A General senior advisor.

4 (Pause.)

5 Q I think when we stopped, I was asking about
6 Mr. Gergen and you had answered Mr. Gearan. Do you know
7 who Mr. Gearan?

8 A Mark Gearan is the director of communications for 9 the White House at that time and still is.

10 Q And Dee Dee Myers, did she hold a communications
11 position?

12 A She was in the communications department working
13 under Mr. Gearan and she is the press secretary, press
14 spokesman.

15 Q Cliff Sloan, he's a counsel in the White House
16 legal department?

17 A He is.

18 Q Beth Nolan is also counsel in the White House
19 legal department?

20 A Same.

21 Q And is she a specialist in ethics for the White
22 House?

1 A That's my understanding, that she is a specialist
2 in ethics.

3 Q Lisa Caputo, what role did she play?

4 A She's the press secretary for Mrs. Clinton.

5 Q And I believe you said you're not sure whether 6 Mr. Podesta attended these meetings?

7 A I don't recall his ever attending them. He may 8 well have.

9 Q Is there anyone else you can think of who 10 attended the Whitewater response team meetings?

11 A Not that I recall.

12 Q What role was Mr. Nussbaum, the chief legal 13 officer to the president, to play at these meetings?

14 A He played the same role everyone else did. He 15 was a participant in the meetings, and he had 16 information -- other people had information and as I said,
17 focus of these meetings was to deal with, as best we could,
18 voluminous press inquiries and make sure there was a
19 coordinated response, that there were not different
20 responses coming from different people based on different
21 information.

22 Q Was Mr. Lindsey a participant in those meetings?

1 A I'm sorry, you're right. He was.

2 Q Was he a regular participant in the meetings?

3 A He was.

4 Q He is also, I believe, a senior advisor to the 5 president or at least an advisor to the president who would
6 be considered a senior advisor to the president?

7 A He is.

8 Q Do you recall what is his portfolio at the White
9 House? What does he do?

10 A He basically is a senior advisor. He's somewhat
11 like Mr. Gergen. He advises the president on any number of 12 matters. He's been very close with the president over a
13 number of years and is a trusted confidant and advisor,
14 both political and otherwise.

15 Q With respect to Mr. Lindsey, did he have 16 particular knowledge with regard to Whitewater matters?

17 A In my view, he had considerable knowledge.

18 Q I'd like to go back for the moment to 19 Mr. Nussbaum. You said he had information that was --
20 strike that. You said he had some information.

21 What did Mr. Nussbaum bring to the table that you
22 needed in terms of being the head of the Whitewater

1 response team?

2 A Somebody who knew some aspects of Whitewater and
3 could give advice, especially in connection with answering
4 accurately and as quickly as possible questions of the 5 press.

6 Q Is Mr. Nussbaum's position a communications
7 position that he has to interface directly with the press?

8 A No, but we were being asked a lot of questions
9 about Whitewater and I put together a group of people who I
10 felt could contribute to responding to those questions as 11 quickly and as accurately as possible and as consistently
12 as possible.

13 Q When you arrived at the White House, did you know
14 that the issue of you dealing with the press on Whitewater
15 was going to be part of your portfolio?

16 A I did not.

17 Q When you arrived, who informed you of that
18 information?

19 A The chief of staff.

20 Q And that would have been Mack McLarty?

21 A Yes.

22 Q I'm sorry, Mr. McLarty.

1 A Mr. McLarty. It doesn't matter.

2 Q What did Mr. McLarty inform you were to be your 3 duties and responsibilities as particularized on
4 Whitewater?

5 A He said that there was a lot of -- many, many 6 questions coming in from the press that he felt that we 7 were not responding as quickly and as effectively as we
8 could and asked me to take charge of that and try to pull
9 together a system in which we could quickly and effectively
10 and accurately respond to the press.

11 Q Were you given a briefing book on Whitewater when 12 you arrived to at least let you know what this was all
13 about?

14 A No, not that I recall. I talked to a number of 15 people. I don't recall any specific people.

16 Q How did you decide who, at the White House, who 17 you should talk to about the subject of Whitewater?

18 A I basically asked several people who had been 19 involved and was knowledgeable. I knew that the counsel's
20 office had been involved. I knew Mr. Lindsey had a great 21 deal of knowledge about it. He had been reporting in the 22 press, as had Stephanopoulos, and there were a number of

1 people who were speaking to the press about it. So it was 2 my view that we should get all of those people in one room
3 on a consistent basis.

4 Q You say you "knew the counsel's office had been
5 involved." What was the source of your information that
6 the White House's counsel's office was involved?

7 MR. BENNETT: I've given you an awful lot of 8 leeway on this.

9 MR. CODINHA: We might disagree.

10 MR. BENNETT: Can't we get to the communications
11 between officials of the White House and Department of 12 Treasury? I don't think this should be a pretext of you
13 learning about all the internal processes of the White
14 House and I'd like you to limit it to the scope of what 15 your assignment is, with all due respect.

16 MR. CODINHA: Thank you.

17 BY MR. CODINHA:

18 Q With respect to your information that the 19 counsel's office at the White House had been involved, what 20 was the source of that information?

21 A Where are we?

22 MR. BENNETT: I'm going to object to that on

1 pertinency scope grounds.

2 BY MR. CODINHA:

3 Q What was the source of your information?

4 MR. BENNETT: I'm instructing him not to answer.

5 MR. CODINHA: Mr. Bennett --

6 MR. BENNETT: I'm instructing him not to answer.

7 MR. CODINHA: I heard what you said. I'm trying
8 to address your objection. I will tell you that this

9 committee has developed information at the present time
10 that there were contacts between the White House and 11 Treasury Department and RTC, and RTC, Treasury and the 12 White House which involved the counsel's office. That is 13 clearly within the scope of this. I want to know the 14 source of the -- I want to know the source of your client's
15 information that the counsel's office had been involved.

16 That's what I'm focused on. It's clearly within the scope.

17 MR. BENNETT: Are you finished?

18 MR. CODINHA: I believe I am.

19 MR. BENNETT: I have no objection to you asking
20 my client about conversations regarding contacts with the 21 Treasury, but I object generically to your using that as a
22 pretext to delve into processes of the White House which

1 have nothing to do with the scope. If you want to ask him
2 what conversations he had with the counsel's office about
3 contacts, I have no objection nor could I have an objection
4 to that.

5 MR. CODINHA: This is a preliminary question,
6 Mr. Bennett.

7 BY MR. CODINHA:

8 Q I'm asking you now, Mr. Ickes, what was the basis
9 for your information that the counsel's office had been 10 involved?

11 A In what?

12 Q We have been talking about information with 13 respect to Whitewater. Now, what's the basis of your 14 information that the counsel's office had been involved?

15 A Newspaper accounts, among other things.

16 Q In what newspapers was it reported that the 17 counsel's office had been involved with Whitewater?

18 A I don't recall.

19 Q When you heard the counsel's office had been 20 involved, you wanted to -- strike that.

21 Now, taking on your role as assistant to the 22 president and deputy chief of staff, you were interested in

1 doing a good job in that role. That would be accurate to
2 say, isn't it?

3 A Yes.

4 Q And in order to do that, you thought you had to 5 talk to some people because you didn't have a whole lot of 6 direct information about Whitewater; is that correct?

7 A Yes.

8 Q So did you go about talking to people to find out
9 what they knew?

10 A Yes.

11 Q Now I'm focusing on the counsel's office. With 12 respect to Mr. Nussbaum, did you have direct conversations
13 with Mr. Nussbaum about what he knew about Whitewater?

14 A Generally.

15 Q When did those discussions occur?

16 A Soon after I arrived at the White House.

17 Q Where did they occur?

18 A I don't recall.

19 Q Did you take notes about those discussions?

20 A I don't recall that I did. I may have. But I
21 don't recall that I did.

22 Q Did you have anyone who was assisting you in

1 coordinating the Whitewater response group?

2 A I was coordinating it.

3 Q Did you have a deputy or an assistant who was 4 helping you?

5 A No.

6 Q When you talked to Mr. Nussbaum, did he tell you
7 that he had spoken to the Treasury Department, or RTC
8 through the Treasury Department about Whitewater?

9 A During what period of time?

10 Q During the time when you first spoke to 11 Mr. Nussbaum about the information that he had about
12 Whitewater.

13 A I have no recollection of that. I don't think he 14 did.

15 Q What did he tell you about Whitewater?

16 A Just a general --

17 MR. BENNETT: About the contacts? I'm limiting 18 him to contacts with the Treasury Department under A, which 19 you very carefully described to us as being the scope in 20 the beginning. I'm not going to let him tell you what 21 anybody and everybody said about Whitewater in general.

22 MR. CODINHA: Is this on instructions from the 64

1 White House?

2 MR. BENNETT: It's on instructions from me as the
3 lawyer and it's based on the United States Senate
4 resolution. You have no authority to go beyond this
5 resolution.

6 MR. CODINHA: Is this also instructions from the
7 White House?

8 MR. BENNETT: This is not instructions from the 9 White House. This is my instructions to my client.

10 MR. CODINHA: And if I may ask, Mr. Bennett, have 11 you been asked by the White House to be cooperative in this
12 investigation?

13 MR. BENNETT: I've been asked to be cooperative
14 and we are being cooperative, but you are limited to your 15 resolution, and I'm not going to --

16 MR. CODINHA: We aren't in dispute about that.

17 MR. BENNETT: Let's get on with it and stick to 18 the resolution.

19 BY MR. CODINHA:

20 Q When Mr. Nussbaum -- Mr. Ickes, I'm sorry, I
21 don't want you to be focusing on something else. I'm 22 afraid you won't hear the question.

1 A I'm just looking around. I hear the question.

2 Q When you spoke to Mr. Nussbaum, did he give you
3 some information about the Whitewater investigation?

4 MR. BENNETT: Don't answer that unless it's
5 limited to the contacts.

6 MR. CODINHA: I think he can tell me if he gave
7 him some information because if he didn't give him --

8 MR. BENNETT: Why don't you ask if he gave him
9 any information about contacts with the Treasury or 10 anything covered by scope A.

11 MR. CODINHA: Mr. Bennett, respectfully, I have 12 great respect for your reputation which has preceded you
13 into the room, but let me also tell you that no one has a
14 conversation where they say and I learned this from this 15 person and I learned this from this person and I learned
16 this from this person. You know, you, of all people, know
17 how an investigation is conducted. We have deposed a lot 18 of people, including Mr. Nussbaum. We have determined in 19 some ways where Mr. Nussbaum got information.

20 Now, I'm asking your client about the information
21 he got from Mr. Nussbaum about particular matters which 22 relate to Whitewater. I'm not asking him about what he

1 learned from the President of the United States. I'm not
2 asking what he learned about from the first lady. I'm
3 asking him particular questions about Mr. Nussbaum who the 4 committee has developed evidence was at meetings with the 5 RTC/Treasury in September and October.

6 I think it's a legitimate area of inquiry. What
7 I don't want to happen is for us to get a scope objection
8 here where we have to delay it because you've already told 9 me that you want to complete this today, which is going to 10 cause us to delay these questions and your client is going 11 to have to be back here again. I'm telling you it's our 12 opinion -- it's certainly my opinion that this is a
13 legitimate area of inquiry.

14 Would you like to put something on the record.

15 MR. BENNETT: I appreciate your flattery and kind
16 remarks but my reputation has absolutely nothing to do with 17 this. What this has to do with is the resolution. Just so
18 the record is clear, I have absolutely no objection at all
19 for you asking my client what communications he had with 20 anybody regarding communications between officials of the 21 White House and the Department of the Treasury or the 22 Resolution Trust Corporation. And that's what I'm

1 instructing him to answer.

2 MR. CODINHA: I certainly recognize your
3 objections. It's on the record.

4 BY MR. CODINHA:

5 Q Mr. Ickes, back to my question. Did you have 6 conversations with Mr. Nussbaum in the early part of
7 January at which you discussed Whitewater with him? I
8 think you can answer that yes or no.

9 MR. BENNETT: You can answer that question. Show
10 you what a good guy I am. Go ahead.

11 THE WITNESS: Yes.

12 BY MR. CODINHA:

13 Q Now, when you had the conversations with 14 Mr. Nussbaum, was anyone else present?

15 A I don't recall. They might have been.

16 Q You were there. Mr. Nussbaum was there.

17 A And there may well have been others. I have no
18 recollection as to whether there were or were not.

19 MR. BENNETT: Keep your voice up. Amy is having 20 trouble hearing you.

21 THE WITNESS: I'm sorry.

22 BY MR. CODINHA:

1 Q Do you recall whether Mr. Nussbaum used any notes
2 to brief you?

3 A I don't recall any such notes.

4 Q Did Mr. Nussbaum give you any materials in order
5 to brief you about the subject?

6 A He may well have. I don't have any specific
7 recollection.

8 Q When you talked to Mr. Nussbaum in early January,
9 did he report to you that there had been a criminal
10 referral in 1992 relating to Madison which mentioned the 11 Clintons?

12 A He may have. I don't think he did, and I have no
13 recollection of it.

14 Q When you spoke to Mr. Nussbaum in early January
15 of 1994, did he mention to you that there were nine
16 referrals or that there were referrals from the RTC which 17 had been sent from Kansas City to Washington to Little 18 Rock?

19 A He may have. I don't think he did, but I have no
20 specific recollection of it.

21 Q Did Mr. Nussbaum mention to you, when he talked 22 to you in early January, about checks that were part of the

1 referral that had dealt with the Clinton campaign
2 committee?

3 A Would you repeat that.

4 Q When Mr. Nussbaum spoke to you in early January,
5 did he tell you about the referrals, referring to four
6 cashier's checks, two made payable to the Clinton campaign
7 committee and two made payable to Bill Clinton?

8 MR. BENNETT: Objection. What does this have to 9 do with the scope of this resolution?

10 MR. CODINHA: I would represent to you that --

11 MR. BENNETT: I'm instructing him not to answer.

12 MR. CODINHA: On what basis?

13 MR. BENNETT: Unless you can show me what the 14 scope and pertinency is.

15 MR. CODINHA: I don't know that I have to show
16 you that but I would tell you, Mr. Bennett, the committee
17 has developed evidence that that information was coming
18 from Treasury and RTC. And if that is the case and it is 19 being relayed to your client, then that is within the scope
20 of this case.

21 MR. BENNETT: I don't have any problem if you ask
22 him if he's aware of any knowledge or information that

70

1 Treasury forwarded to Mr. Ickes or anybody else. Then I
2 don't have any problem if you tie it to this, but I'm not
3 going to be letting him answering questions in a vacuum
4 when I don't know whether or not it's a communication or 5 not. If you know it's a communication, tie it to that and 6 I'm not going to object.

7 MR. CODINHA: Fine.

8 BY MR. CODINHA:

9 Q Did Mr. Nussbaum tell you about these checks?

10 A What checks?

11 Q The four checks, two made payable to the Clinton
12 for Governor campaign, two made payable to Bill Clinton, in 13 your earlier January meeting.

14 MR. BENNETT: Hold it.

15 (Witness conferred with counsel.)

16 MR. BENNETT: Go ahead and answer.

17 THE WITNESS: I don't know what checks you're
18 talking about.

19 BY MR. CODINHA:

20 Q You don't recall Mr. Nussbaum telling you about
21 that?

22 MR. BENNETT: He's answered the question.

1 MR. CODINHA: He says he doesn't recall what
2 checks I'm talking about.

3 BY MR. CODINHA:

4 Q I'm now asking you, do you recall Mr. Nussbaum
5 telling you anything that this case involved campaign
6 checks?

7 A Sir, there was a lot of discussion over a long
8 period of time about a lot of different aspects of 9 Madison/Whitewater. Some of that came from newspaper
10 accounts. Some of that came from many other people. A lot
11 of this information has merged, as I sit here today, were 12 there checks -- were there discussions about checks over 13 the two- or three- or four-month period, yes. When those 14 discussions occurred, with whom they occurred, where I
15 learned about them and what they had to do with, I couldn't
16 tell you today.

17 Q Do you recall Mr. Nussbaum telling you at the 18 early meeting, this early January meeting that he had 19 confirmed or had a confirmation from the RTC that criminal
20 referrals had been made from the RTC to the Justice
21 Department?

22 A I don't recall. He may have. I don't have any

1 specific recollection, and I don't think he did.

2 Q Do you recall Mr. Nussbaum telling you at this --

3 MR. BENNETT: Let me ask you. I'm assuming when 4 you predicate a question this way that there's a basis in 5 fact.

6 MR. CODINHA: That there's a basis, yes? Let me
7 take a step back.

8 MR. BENNETT: I'm assuming Nussbaum told you he 9 told Ickes, this because if that's not true, then I think
10 these are unfair questions.

1 MR. CODINHA: Whether they're fair or not, that's
2 exactly what -- that's exactly what I didn't want to say.
3 I will say that it is fair to assume that the underlying 4 information contained in the question about whether
5 something was contained, that there were four checks, that 6 they related to that, is correct. Don't assume that the 7 information was related to your client. It isn't
8 necessarily the case, and I want to represent that.

9 MR. BENNETT: So when you say did X tell you, did
0 Y tell you, we can't assume that that's a fact, that X told
1 him or Y told him?

2 MR. CODINHA: I don't know what X told him

1 because you won't let me ask generally what he was told.
2 If you let me ask that generally, then I could find out.
3 Now I have to ask specifically.

4 MR. BENNETT: If you say did Mr. Smith tell you
5 something, did Mr. Jones tell you something, is a lot
6 different from saying with the predicates that you're 7 putting on these questions. The assumption I've been
8 making all along is a witness has told you he told Ickes
9 something. But any way, I'm on the record on that point,
10 so ask your next question.

11 BY MR. CODINHA:

12 Q Let me ask you, was there -- strike that.

13 Do you recall having any discussion with 14 Mr. Nussbaum at this early January meeting as to the 15 status, be that subject, target or witness that the 16 Clintons held?

17 A That the Clintons held?

18 Q Yes, in respect to the referrals.

19 MR. BENNETT: What do you mean by "held"?

20 BY MR. CODINHA:

21 Q Let me take a step back for a minute. Are you
22 familiar with the terms "subject," "target" and "witness"

1 as they are used in the criminal area?

2 A I'm not a criminal lawyer.

3 Q Whether you're a criminal lawyer or not, are you
4 familiar with the terms?

5 A I've heard those terms. I couldn't define them.

6 Q Do you recall whether Mr. Nussbaum told you in 7 January what status the Clintons held in the RTC referrals
8 in which they had been allegedly named?

9 A I have no specific recollection. I don't think
10 he did, but he may have. I have no recollection, and I
11 don't think he did. As I think I've said before to you, I
12 don't think I knew about the criminal referrals or the 13 so-called criminal referrals until much later in the 14 process.

15 Q Do you recall whether Mr. Nussbaum informed you
16 that he was monitoring those criminal referrals to see
17 whether the Clintons' status changes?

18 A I have no recollection of that. We're talking
19 early January?

20 Q Early January.

21 A No recollection. I don't think it occurred, but 22 I have no recollection.

1 Q How long do you recall speaking to Mr. Nussbaum
2 about the subject of Whitewater, the length of time at this
3 early January meeting?

4 A 15 or 20 minutes.

5 Q Did he appear to be a knowledgeable person about
6 the subject to you?

7 A Compared to me, yes.

8 Q Would it be fair to say when you walked in and 9 received the information that you were going to head up the 10 Whitewater response group or team in January, you knew
11 nothing about it except what you read in the newspapers?

12 A Well, I think I've testified that Whitewater
13 generally -- I had run into Whitewater during the primary
14 or general election campaign in 1992 but only in passing.
15 I knew nothing about the details. I think all I knew was 16 it had something to do with the land transaction in 17 Arkansas. That's literally all I knew and the rest of my 18 information up until early January had come through reading
19 a couple newspaper accounts. I found it so convoluted and 20 confusing I didn't bother to read much about it.

21 Q When Mr. McLarty gave you this assignment as part
22 of your portfolio, did he -- I asked you whether he gave

1 you a briefing book. Did he give you any materials to
2 read?

3 A Not that I recall. I don't think so.

4 Q Did he instruct you as to who would be the most
5 knowledgeable people that you should talk to?

6 A Well, he suggested, as I recall, he suggested I
7 talk to Lindsey, that I talk to Nussbaum, that I talk to 8 Stephanopoulos, among others.

9 Q With respect to Mr. Klein, do you recall speaking
10 with Mr. Klein in early January?

11 A I recall speaking to him.

12 Q Again, I'm not interested -- I'm not interested
13 in whether you spoke to him about what the weather was 14 outside. I'm talking about Whitewater and the subject of 15 Senate Resolution 229.

16 A I have no specific recollection of any specific 17 conversations. I'm confident that I probably did and as 18 has been testified to earlier, he was a participant in 19 these early meetings.

20 Q What role was he to play, Mr. Klein?

21 A Again, someone who seemed to have some 22 information about Whitewater. It was my purpose to get

1 people who were knowledgeable about Whitewater in one room.

2 Q Were you able to determine what the source of 3 Mr. Klein's information about Whitewater was?

4 A The answer is it depended on the day and the 5 circumstance. I mean, it was -- each of these meetings,
6 the purpose was to develop information and coordinate
7 information to respond effectively and accurately and
8 quickly to the press. Some information came from outside
9 sources. Some came from newspaper accounts. Sometimes 10 newspaper accounts would raise questions that people would 11 then look up and find out about so we could have, in 12 effect, an accurate response to the press on the questions.

13 Q Mr. Neil Eggleston was a participant -- strike
14 that.

15 I think you listed Neil Eggleston as a
16 participant in these meetings.

17 A I did.

18 Q What role -- Mr. Eggleston was also in the 19 counsel's office. What role did he play?

20 A Same as Nussbaum and Klein.

21 Q And that was that they appeared to know something
22 about the issue and they were bringing information to the

1 table as it related to Whitewater?

2 A They were bringing in information and they also
3 helped research questions that our press people were
4 getting by way of press inquiries so we could give, again,
5 accurate, effective and quick responses.

6 Q When you say they were researching questions, did
7 you view it as part of their role, that they should reach
8 out to the agencies to get accurate information?

9 A I didn't have any specific role in mind. I just 10 asked them if people thought that they could find out
11 answers to questions and that they would bring those 12 answers back. I didn't have any particular sources that 13 they should look at or go to.

14 Q Was it your intent, if a question was raised
15 about the referrals that needed a factual answer, the 16 criminal referrals, that it would be either Mr. Nussbaum,
17 Mr. Klein, Mr. Eggleston or Mr. Sloan from the legal office
18 that would contact those agencies?

19 A As I said, I didn't instruct them to contact any 20 agencies, and I don't know if they contacted any agencies.

21 Q Did you tell them not to contact agencies?

22 A When you speak of "agencies," what agencies are

1 you referring to, the federal government?

2 Q Yes, federal government agencies.

3 A I didn't instruct them to. I didn't instruct 4 them not to, and I don't know whether they did or whether 5 they didn't.

6 Q Did they offer information at these Whitewater
7 response teams that was responsive to questions that were
8 being raised about what was happening at the Treasury
9 Department or the RTC with respect to the cases?

10 MR. BENNETT: You're not talking about legal 11 advice.

12 MR. CODINHA: Not legal advice.

13 THE WITNESS: Again, I don't recall Treasury/RTC
14 being involved in the early discussions. They may well
15 have been, but I don't recall any discussions about 16 Treasury and/or RTC.

17 BY MR. CODINHA:

18 Q Mr. Cliff Sloan, I think we've mentioned him as 19 an attendee at these meetings and he was also from the 20 counsel's office. What role was he to play at these
21 meetings?

22 A Same as Nussbaum, Klein, Eggleston.

1 Q And Ms. Beth Nolan, I think we mentioned her as
2 an attendee at these meetings?

3 A I don't think she was a regular attendee, but
4 again, same as the others.

5 Q With respect to Ms. Nolan, did you at some time
6 come to understand that she was an ethics expert in the
7 White House?

8 A I was told that.

9 Q Was that early on, or was that later in your 10 career there?

11 A I don't recall when.

12 Q Was she brought to the Whitewater response team
13 to be there in her role as an expert on ethics?

14 MR. BENNETT: I'm going to object on scope and 15 pertinency grounds.

16 BY MR. CODINHA:

17 Q What was your purpose in having her there?

18 A She was a person who, I was told, had some 19 knowledge about Whitewater.

20 Q That she had knowledge about the underlying facts
21 of Whitewater?

22 A She had knowledge about Whitewater.

1 Q Had you been told she was a person who had been
2 in contact with the Treasury Department and RTC relating to
3 Whitewater?

4 A In that early period?

5 Q Yes.

6 A I don't recall being told that.

7 Q Did you later find out she was a person who was
8 in contact with the Treasury or RTC with respect to aspects
9 of Whitewater?

10 A I think sometime later, I learned that she had 11 been in contact with Treasury.

12 Q And when was that time?

13 A To the best of my recollection, it was around, I
14 think, early February.

15 Q Are you familiar with an event that's referred to 16 as Renaissance Weekend or the Renaissance time or words to 17 that effect?

18 MR. BENNETT: Let me just ask you on some of this 19 stuff for some guidance. In preparing him for his 20 testimony, there's all sorts of things we've brought to his 21 attention, which he did not know in real terms.

22 MR. CODINHA: I'm just asking if he's familiar

1 with the term. I'm not going to spend a lot of time on it.

2 BY MR. CODINHA:

3 Q Are you familiar with Renaissance Weekend?

4 A I'm familiar with the term.

5 Q Did you know about the term before your attorney
6 prepared you for your deposition testimony?

7 A Yes.

8 Q Have you attended these Renaissance weekends?

9 A Never.

10 Q And with respect to the Renaissance Weekend that 11 occurred, the most recent one that occurred, I believe,
12 over the New Year's weekend or New Year's Eve, have you
13 become aware of the press accounts relating to a
14 conversation which occurred between the President of the 15 United States and Mr. Ludwig, the Comptroller of the 16 Currency?

17 A I've skimmed the press accounts. This has been a
18 very, very intense and busy period for me on health care,
19 so I have not focused a lot of attention but I was aware
20 there were newspaper articles or such recently, and I
21 remember skimming them quickly.

22 Q With respect to those press accounts, had you

1 been aware of that conversation before you read the press
2 accounts?

3 A Not to the best of my knowledge. I don't recall
4 ever hearing about it.

5 Q Do you recall there being any discussion of the 6 president talking with Mr. Ludwig at your Whitewater
7 response group?

8 A No. I have no recollection of that.

9 Q Do you recall whether Mr. Klein discussed that at 10 a Whitewater response group?

11 A I have absolutely no recollection of that.

12 Q Are you aware of whether Secretary Bentsen from 13 the Treasury Department was asked to attend a meeting with 14 Cabinet level officials at the Whitewater relating to 15 Whitewater in early January?

16 (Witness conferred with counsel.)

17 THE WITNESS: I had not heard it until my counsel
18 informed me of it yesterday.

19 BY MR. CODINHA:

20 Q Do you know who Christine Varney is?

21 A I do.

22 Q Is she the Cabinet secretary?

1 A She is.

2 Q And it's her job -- strike that.

3 In her role as Cabinet secretary, is it her job
4 to put together these meetings?

5 A What meetings?

6 Q Just meetings of Cabinet level officials that are 7 going to occur at the White House.

8 A Typically. There are meetings with Cabinet level
9 officials that she is not involved with. But typically,
10 she is the contact person between the White House and the 11 Cabinet as it relates to the organizational meetings.

12 Q With respect to Ms. Varney, have you had any 13 conversations with her with respect to a meeting where she 14 requested Secretary Bentsen not to appear because it was 15 going to discuss Whitewater?

16 A Is that the same meeting you referred to earlier
17 a few minutes ago?

18 Q It could be, but I'm not sure whether it's the 19 same meeting.

20 A The answer is no.

21 Q During the course of January of 1994, did you
22 become aware of a statute of limitations issue that was

1 being raised on the civil aspects of Madison?

2 A During what month?

3 Q January of 1994.

4 A Could have been. I mean, I recall definite
5 discussions about it in February, and there may well have
6 been some discussion about it in January.

7 Q Was this a subject matter that was being
8 discussed by the Whitewater response group?

9 A Not to my recollection.

10 Q Did the Whitewater response group become involved
11 in the civil aspects of Madison, or was it only dealing 12 with the criminal referral questions?

13 A No. The Whitewater response group was dealing -- 14 attempting to deal with, let me put it that way -- with any 15 and all questions that were being made or inquiries being 16 made by the press which was a very intensive period over 17 that period of time. That was its primary purpose and 18 that's what we were focused on. There was no
19 differentiation between criminal and civil. It was just 20 questions relating to what is generically known in the 21 White House, not by your definition, as Whitewater.

22 MR. BENNETT: I'm going to somewhat belatedly

86

1 object to the form of the question because it assumes that
2 the White House response group was, in fact, talking about
3 criminal referrals, and I don't think that's what his 4 testimony has been.

5 MR. CODINHA: I can put that question to the 6 witness and perhaps you can answer.

7 BY MR. CODINHA:

8 Q As I understand your answer, the Whitewater
9 response group was responding to all Whitewater inquiries,
10 whether they were civil or criminal?

11 A Yes, and to my recollection, I don't recall
12 during those early weeks in January focus on or questions
13 about the criminal referrals. There could have been, but 14 as I sit here today, I don't recall any specific questions
15 about that. I'd have to go back and look at the press
16 record basically to find out if there were.

17 Q Did anyone keep notes or records of the 18 Whitewater response group meetings -- first, let me ask,
19 were official records of the Whitewater response group
20 meetings kept?

21 A No.

22 Q Was someone required to take notes?

1 A No.

2 Q Did individuals take notes at those meetings, if
3 you noticed?

4 A Some individuals did.

5 Q Did you take notes?

6 (Witness conferred with counsel.)

7 A I kept notes.

8 Q Would it be correct to say that if they pertain
9 to the scope of Senate Resolution 229, that they have been 10 delivered to the committee?

11 A Yes.

12 Q And you have reviewed your notes yourself or 13 along with your attorney?

14 A I have.

15 MR. BENNETT: I just want you to clearly
16 understand that it was the White House counsel's office
17 that had the responsibility of making the productions to 18 Congress. I have every reason to believe that everything
19 has been turned over, but I just want you to know that they 20 took upon themselves the responsibility, and apparently 21 Congress wanted them to do it rather than counsel for the 22 individuals.

1 BY MR. CODINHA:

2 Q I can't now recall. Did you receive a direct
3 letter from Chairman Riegle and minority -- and the ranking
4 member to look through your records to determine whether
5 you had responsive items? It would have been June 2.

6 A I recall receiving -- I recall receiving a
7 photocopy, and I think the letter was addressed to me, but 8 I think it was a photocopy. I don't think it had an 9 original signature on it, and I subsequently contacted
10 Mr. Bennett and sent that photocopy over to him. I think
11 that Mr. Bennett had told me he had already received a copy
12 of it. That's my best recollection.

3 Q But you understood that you had a personal
4 responsibility to make sure we received all the
5 information?

6 A Right. I relied on my counsel.

7 MR. BENNETT: We produced documents to the White
8 House. I can't be sure, as we sit here, whether they gave 9 you all the documents that we gave them. They may very 10 well have made some redactions. For what it's worth, I am
11 not aware of any documents that you're referring to, but --
12 it's just a technical point, that the White House took upon

1 itself the responsibility of making productions.

2 We produced documents to White House counsel's
3 office, and they were going to decide what they produced to 4 you. I will tell you that I think what we gave to the
5 White House were all the documents we gave to Mr. Fiske. I
6 think it was the same universe of documents, wasn't it?
7 Yes.

8 BY MR. CODINHA:

9 Q Mr. Ickes, with respect to the matter of the 10 statute of limitations that was to apply to Madison, did
11 you become aware in January, sometime in January, perhaps
12 after the middle of January that the issue of the statute
13 of limitations application to Madison was a matter of 14 congressional interest?

15 A I don't recall specifically whether it was the 16 end of January or early February, but it was around that 17 time.

18 Q Do you recall becoming aware that sometime in 19 January Senator D'Amato had taken the floor of the Senate
20 and had a countdown calendar where he was counting down the 21 days that were left until the statute of limitations had 22 run?

90

1 A I recall that. I don't recall -- again, I don't
2 recall whether it was during late January or early
3 February, but it was around that time.

4 Q Do you recall how you became aware of this, that
5 the statute of limitations was an issue?

6 A I don't.

7 Q Do you recall receiving a copy of a letter that 8 had been sent from Senator D'Amato to Mr. Altman with 9 respect to this?

10 A I don't recall. I mean, if you show me the 11 letter, it might refresh my recollection but as I sit here
12 today, I don't recall.

13 Q I'd like to show you X1264 and 1265.

14 (Witness reviewed document.)

15 Having shown you that letter, which is -- I've 16 already given the number to the stenographer -- does that 17 help you to recall when you might have become aware of the 18 statute of limitations issue?

19 A It may well have been around this time. I don't
20 recall specifically receiving a copy of this letter. I
21 probably did, but as I said, it was probably late January
22 or early February.

1 Q And I would tell you, Mr. Altman, that this
2 letter has been supplied by the White House --

3 MR. BENNETT: This is Mr. Ickes.

4 BY MR. CODINHA:

5 Q I'm sorry, Mr. Ickes. I was reading the 6 address. I apologize.

7 Mr. Ickes, we have received this from the White
8 House and we have been informed that it came from your 9 files at the White House. Is that useful in knowing
10 whether you received a copy of the letter?

11 A It is. I don't know when I received it but it is 12 useful in knowing whether I received it.

13 Q If you received a copy of this letter, would you
14 have read it?

15 A I probably would have read it, yes.

16 Q Do you recall that the subject matter of this
17 letter became a matter that was discussed by the Whitewater
18 response group?

19 A I don't recall it specifically, no. And I point
20 out to you, as I testified earlier, that the Whitewater
21 response team on that date would have been meeting on a
22 much less frequent basis than during the first two weeks or

92

1 10 days of January.

2 Q I think by this time -- "this time" being January
3 25 or shortly thereafter -- you indicated the group was 4 being two or three times a week rather than twice a day.
5 Would that be accurate?

6 A Again, I don't want to pin it to a specific
7 number, but it was certainly no more than several times a
8 week, two or three is probably an accurate
9 characterization.

10 MR. BENNETT: Harold, you've got to keep your 11 voice up.

12 THE WITNESS: I'm sorry.

13 MR. BENNETT: This lady's got to hear it.

14 BY MR. CODINHA:

15 Q When you read this letter, did you consider the 16 information contained in it was important information for 17 you to know as you were working on your job dealing with 18 the press on Whitewater?

19 A If it was a matter of press inquiry, certainly.

20 Q But did you think that when you read this letter,
21 this was something that you cared about?

22 A I thought it was something I should know about.

1 Q How did you attempt to know something about it,
2 if you did?

3 A I probably asked others in the White House. I
4 may have asked counsel's office. I may have asked other
5 people in the White House.

6 MR. BENNETT: Just so the record is clear, you
7 said when you read it, and I don't think he testified that 8 he read it.

9 MR. CODINHA: I believe what he said -- and the 10 record will state this -- I believe he said since it was in 11 his files, he believed he had read it.

12 THE WITNESS: That's accurate but as I testified
13 before, I don't recall when I received it.

14 BY MR. CODINHA:

15 Q I understand that. Is there any reason to 16 believe that you wouldn't have received it on or about the 17 time that is recorded on the letter or on the fax times
18 that are recorded at the top of the letter?

19 A I have no belief as to when I received it.

20 Q Would there be any -- does this letter contain
21 the sort of information that it would be important for you
22 to know to be able to do your job correctly as the

1 coordinator of information dealing with the press on
2 Whitewater?

3 A Certainly if there were press inquiries about it,
4 it would be important.

5 Q Does the fact that Senator D'Amato is sending 6 this letter to Mr. Altman suggest to you that there would 7 be press inquiries about it?

8 A Probably. Not necessarily so, but probably.

9 Q What information do you recall -- strike that.
10 Do you recall whether you asked White House
11 counsel's office about information so you can respond to 12 what was contained in this matter?

13 A I don't recall specifically whether it was White
14 House.

15 Q Do you recall asking anyone for information so
16 you could respond to what was contained in that letter?

17 A As I sit here today, no.

18 Q Does it make sense to you that when you became 19 aware of that letter, you would have asked someone for 20 information?

21 A It makes sense.

22 Q Who would be the people or persons to whom you

1 would turn to get information about that?

2 A I don't have any specific recollection of who I
3 would have. There were a number of people who may have 4 known about it.

5 Q Do you believe you would have turned to
6 Mr. Nussbaum?

7 A I may have. I don't recall.

8 Q Do you believe you would have turned to 9 Mr. Eggleston?

10 A Again, I may have. I don't recall.

11 Q Do you believe you would have turned to 12 Mr. Sloan?

13 A Same answer.

14 Q Do you believe you would have turned to
15 Mr. Lindsey?

16 A Same answer.

17 Q Do you believe you would have turned to 18 Mr. Altman to find information?

19 A Possibly. I don't recall talking to him about it
20 in connection with this letter.

21 Can I just have a minute?

22 (Witness conferred with counsel.)

1 BY MR. CODINHA:

2 Q Do you recall learning -- strike that.

3 Do you recall discussing the matter of the 4 statute of limitations as it applied to Madison with
5 Ms. Williams?

6 A What time period?

7 Q In late January of 1994 -- late January or early
8 February of 1994.

9 A Yes.

10 Q When do you recall having that discussion with
11 Ms. Williams?

12 A Well, I recall Ms. Williams being in a meeting in 13 which the statute of limitations was -- in which a statute
14 of limitations that involved Resolution Trust Corporation
15 was discussed and that meeting, as I recall, occurred on 16 the 2nd of February 1994. I may have had a discussion with 17 them prior to that but I don't have a specific recollection
18 of that.

19 Q With respect to the February 2nd meeting, when 20 did you first become aware of a meeting that was to occur
21 on February 2nd?

22 A My recollection is that a day or so -- it may

1 have been the day preceding, or it may have been a day or
2 so preceding, I have no specific recollection but shortly
3 before February 2nd -- my recollection is that Mr. Altman
4 called me in my office and said that he wanted to have a
5 meeting with Mr. McLarty and with me and that he wanted to 6 bring his -- when I say "his," the Treasury's general
7 counsel to that meeting.

8 Q Prior to the telephone call that you received a
9 day or two before the February 2nd meeting, did you know
10 who Mr. Altman was?

11 A I did.

12 Q How had you known Mr. Altman?

13 A I'd known him casually over a number of years.

14 Q Did you know him in New York?

15 A I did.

16 Q When you came to Washington, did you know him in 17 your official role as he held the official role in 18 Washington?

19 A Yes.

20 Q Did you have any interaction with Mr. Altman in 21 the month of January 1994 in your professional capacity?

22 A Yes.

1 Q And did that relate to Whitewater?

2 A Not that I recall.

3 Q How many times did you interact with Mr. Altman
4 in January in your professional capacity?

5 A It was several times a week. As the coordinator
6 of the president's health care initiative, I had -- and I
7 don't recall when -- but as I recall, it was sometime early
8 on in January, I had established several meetings that
9 occurred on a regular basis and one of them was a 6:00
10 meeting that was supposed to occur every day of the week;
11 that is, Monday through Friday. Unless it was canceled by 12 me in advance, everybody had their calendars marked about 13 it so they wouldn't have to be notified. Mr. Altman was a
14 member of that very small group and he attended it on a
15 regular basis so I saw Mr. Altman in that connection as 16 well as others, but primarily that was the primary
17 connection.

18 Q Prior to a day or two before February 2nd when 19 you received this call from Mr. Altman, had you had any 20 discussions with Mr. Altman on the subject of Whitewater?

21 A I don't recall. I probably did. He was in the 22 White House a great deal, both with respect to the meetings

1 that I have discussed as well as other business that he was
2 dealing with in the White House. I probably did. I
3 couldn't place a time or date or location on any of this.

4 Q When you say you "probably" did, when do you
5 recall the first time you would have talked to Mr. Altman
6 at the White House about the subject of either Whitewater
7 or Madison in January?

8 A I have no recollection. There were a lot of 9 conversations going on about Madison/Whitewater --

10 MR. BENNETT: Keep your voice up.

11 THE WITNESS: There were a lot of conversations
12 going on in the White House during that period of time,
13 primarily because of the intense press scrutiny, so I have 14 no recollection of whether I did. As I said, I probably 15 did, but I couldn't give you a time or a date.

16 BY MR. CODINHA:

17 Q Was Mr. Altman a member of the Whitewater
18 response group in the White House?

19 A He was not.

20 Q Was he invited to participate in that group?

21 A He was not.

22 Q Did you understand him to be a knowledgeable

100

1 person about Whitewater or Madison?

2 A At that period of time, I don't think I had any
3 knowledge about what he knew or what he didn't know.

4 Q How did it come about that you had discussions in
5 January with Mr. Altman about the subject of Whitewater or 6 Madison, if you didn't know he was a knowledgeable person?

7 A Corridor discussion, what's going on, what do you
8 think, how do you think it's playing.

9 Q Do you recall those type of conversations
10 occurring when you would say to Mr. Altman what's going on,
11 what response did he make?

12 A What's going on in terms of, how do you think
13 it's playing.

14 Q And what was Mr. Altman's response?

15 A I don't recall his specific responses.

16 Q Did he indicate to you that it was playing just 17 fine?

18 A I don't recall his specific responses.

19 Q Do you recall a general response that he was 20 satisfied with the way it was playing?

21 A I don't think anybody was satisfied with the way
22 it was playing.

1 Q Did Mr. Altman indicate to you that any -- strike
2 that.

3 Did Mr. Altman follow up with you by saying well,
4 what do you mean how's it playing?

5 A As I say, first of all, I don't recall any 6 specific conversations. I probably did, and if they were 7 the casual what's going on, how is it playing type, nobody
8 was happy with how it was playing.

9 Q Do you recall ever discussing with Mr. Altman --
10 strike that.

11 During this time period, you were having daily
12 meetings on health care; is that right? When I say "this 13 time period," during the month of January 1994?

14 A During the month of January, the 6:00 Monday
15 through Friday meetings began. I informed the participants
16 that they should block their calendars for every day of the 17 week and that my office would notify them if I was not
18 going to hold such a meeting, but they occurred on a
19 regular basis, typically three to four times a week.

20 Q And do you recall discussing with Mr. Altman at 21 the White House in either corridor meetings or these 22 meetings the statute of the limitations as it applied to

1 Madison?

2 A I don't recall -- I don't think I did. I have no
3 specific recollection that I did.

4 Q Did it strike you that he would be a person who
5 would be particularly well-informed about that subject?

6 A Yes, assuming that I knew about that subject, and 7 I'm not sure when I came to know about that subject.

8 Q As soon as you came to know about the subject,
9 Mr. Altman struck you as a person who would be particularly 10 well-informed, didn't he?

11 MR. BENNETT: I don't understand the question.
12 I'm sorry.

13 BY MR. CODINHA:

14 Q Do you understand the question, Mr. Witness?

15 A Not really.

16 Q You understood Mr. Altman held a particular 17 position with the RTC, did you not?

18 A At what time period?

19 Q In January.

20 A I did not.

21 Q At some point, did you come to know Mr. Altman
22 held a particular position with the RTC?

1 A Yes.

2 Q When was that?

3 A My best recollection, it was in connection during 4 the meeting we've talked about before on the 2nd of
5 February.

6 Q Was that the first time you were aware that
7 Mr. Altman held a unique position in the RTC?

8 A To the best of my recollection it was, yes.

9 Q And what position did you come to understand, in 10 that February 2nd meeting, that Mr. Altman held?

11 A It was my understanding, based on his 12 description, that he was, for lack of a better word, the 13 temporary president of RTC and that that position had to be 14 filled but by virtue of a statute of the RTC statute, it
15 was my understanding that he was either the president or 16 the chairman -- I forget which -- and I also learned or was 17 told that there was an oversight board, an RTC oversight
18 board of which Secretary Bentsen was chairman, at least
19 that's what I was led to believe.

20 Q And you were informed of that at the February 2nd
21 meeting?

22 A To the best of my recollection, it was the first

1 time I knew about that -- his role, his specific role and
2 position with respect to RTC.

3 Q And it was at that meeting that you also learned
4 of the role Secretary Bentsen was playing on the oversight
5 board?

6 A That's the best of my recollection.

7 Q Now, turning your attention to the telephone call
8 that you received from Mr. Altman a day or two before the 9 February 2nd meeting, do you know the reason Mr. Altman
10 called you?

11 A I do not. Let me back up. His stated reason was 12 he wanted to have a meeting with me and Mr. McLarty to 13 which he was bringing the Treasury's general counsel. And 14 he told me that I should bring whoever else I thought ought 15 to come. He did not -- to the best of my recollection, he 16 did not tell me what he wanted to discuss.

17 Q My question to you earlier was if you know, how 18 did he come to call you about the subject of this meeting?

19 A You'll have to ask Mr. Altman. I don't know.

20 Q Have you ever told Mr. Altman that you were the 21 White House person who was dealing with Whitewater issues?

22 A That was a matter of general knowledge in the

1 press as well as otherwise.

2 Q And my question again to you is, had you ever
3 told Mr. Altman that you were the person that was dealing
4 for the White House, coordinating the Whitewater response
5 group?

6 A I may well have. I don't recall a specific
7 discussion with him. I may well have done so.

8 Q Was your purpose in informing Mr. Altman so he 9 would know if any matters came up relating to Whitewater,
10 they should go through you?

11 MR. BENNETT: If he did that.

12 BY MR. CODINHA:

13 Q If you did that.

14 A If I did that, I don't recall that as being a
15 purpose. It was a matter of general knowledge in the press
16 that I was doing that.

17 Q Did you routinely tell people that you were 18 talking to, that that was one of the matters that you were 19 responsible for?

20 A No. The people asked me what I was responsible
21 for and members of the press did on regular occasions. I
22 would respond in the affirmative to that. And as I say, it

106

1 was general knowledge fairly early on that that was one of
2 my responsibilities and was discussed fairly widely in the 3 press.

4 Q Now, in this call that came a day or two before
5 the February 2nd meeting, how long did that call last?

6 A I would say less than a minute.

7 Q When Mr. Altman said he wanted to have a meeting,
8 did he tell you what the subject matter of the meeting was?

9 A He did not. To the best of my recollection, he 10 did not.

11 Q When he told you to -- did he ask you if 12 Mr. McLarty could attend?

13 A He told me he wanted a meeting with me and 14 Mr. McLarty.

15 Q And he told you that the general counsel from the 16 Treasury was going to attend?

17 A That's my best recollection.

18 Q And he told you to bring over whoever else you
19 thought ought to come; is that right?

20 A That's my recollection of the conversation, yes.

21 Q Who did you tell should come to this meeting?

22 A I'm not sure about your question. Are you asking

1 me who did I ask to come to the meeting?

2 Q Yes, who did you ask to come to the meeting? If
3 I was inartful, I apologize.

4 A No, I didn't think you were being inartful. I'm 5 trying to get the question.

6 Q Who did you ask?

7 A Mr. McLarty, and when I was on the phone with 8 Mr. McLarty, I told him since Mr. Altman was bringing the 9 general counsel to the Treasury, I thought it was to have 10 the general counsel of the White House attend and 11 Mr. McLarty agreed and he asked me to call Mr. Nussbaum. I
12 don't know whether I called Mr. Nussbaum or whether my 13 assistant called Mr. Nussbaum, but as I recall, I undertook 14 to call him and notify him of the meeting and asked him to 15 be there.

16 Q And who else did you suggest attend?

17 A To the best of my recollection, those were the 18 only people -- he was the only other people I suggested
19 attend.

20 Q And at a later point, did you suggest that other
21 people attend?

22 A Not to my recollection. I'm not saying I didn't,

108

1 but as I sit here today, I don't recall that I suggested
2 others attend.

3 Q Where was the meeting to occur?

4 A I asked McLarty where he wanted it, and he
5 suggested his office.

6 Q Mr. McLarty at that point was the chief of staff
7 of the White House?

8 A He was.

9 Q And you were the deputy chief of staff?

10 A I was a deputy.

11 Q I'm sorry. You did say there was another one.
12 And the counsel to the president, Mr. Nussbaum, was being 13 asked to attend?

14 A He was.

15 Q Did Mr. McLarty ask you what this was all about?

16 A He may have. I don't recall whether he did or 17 whether he didn't. I mean, Mr. Altman is a very 18 high-ranking member of the federal administration and was 19 in fairly regular contact with the White House. Mack
20 probably did. I don't recall that he did.

21 Q When you spoke to Mr. Altman a day or two before
22 the meeting, the February 2nd meeting, did you ask him what

1 the meeting was going to be about?

2 A I don't recall that I did. He said he wanted a
3 meeting. I knew who he was. He was a person who was well
4 regarded in the White House, and it was something that I
5 would accede to. I don't think that I asked the nature of 6 what he wanted to discuss.

7 Q Would it be unusual for you to schedule such a
8 meeting without asking the subject matter of the meeting?

9 A Not necessarily unusual, but when someone like
10 Roger Altman, who is a valued advisor as well as a
11 high-ranking official in the Treasury, asks for a meeting,
12 I take it seriously. Mr. McLarty, I think, took it
13 seriously. He didn't indicate it would be a prolonged
14 meeting and we just set it up.

15 Q Did you believe you were going to have to do any 16 preparation before the meeting occurred?

17 A I didn't believe I did and I didn't.

18 Q Before you called Mr. Nussbaum to come to the 19 meeting, you or a member of your staff asked Mr. Nussbaum
20 to attend the meeting, did you try to advise Mr. Nussbaum
21 what the subject matter of the meeting was so he could 22 prepare?

110

1 A Since I didn't know, I couldn't do the latter.

2 Q Did you consider calling Mr. Altman back before
3 the meeting to determine what the subject matter was going
4 to be so that you or people you were inviting could
5 prepare?

6 A I didn't.

7 Q When did the --

8 MR. BENNETT: You say the people he was
9 inviting. He said he invited Mr. Nussbaum.

10 MR. CODINHA: And McLarty.

11 MR. BENNETT: And McLarty.

12 BY MR. CODINHA:

13 Q And when did the meeting occur?

14 A It occurred -- the date or the time?

15 Q You've already told me it took place on February 16 2nd.

17 A That's the best of my recollection. I think it 18 occurred on the 2nd. My recollection is it occurred in the 19 late afternoon.

20 Q Did you believe that the subject matter of this 21 meeting was going to be some Treasury business that was 22 going to occur?

1 A I don't recall that I had a belief.

2 Q Did you wonder about why Mr. Altman told you he
3 was going to bring the general counsel to the Treasury
4 along with him?

5 A I don't recall. There's a lot of business that 6 goes on. I am typically very pressed for time during the 7 day, and I don't recall having any questions about it. He 8 told me he wanted to bring his general counsel. That's 9 fine with me.

10 Q When he told you he was going to bring his 11 general counsel along, did that make you believe it was 12 going to be some kind of business that was being discussed?

13 A When you refer to -- when you use the term
14 "business," I'm not sure what you mean.

15 Q You said that Mr. Altman was a regular visitor at 16 the White House, that he was certainly there on health care
17 matters. I believe you said he was there on Treasury
18 business --

19 A I don't know that as a fact. I assume he was 20 there on Treasury matters.

21 Q When he came to the White House on health care
22 matters, did he bring his lawyer along?

1 A He did not.

2 Q Did he come -- on other matters when you had seen
3 him at the White House, did you see his lawyer along?

4 A I had no idea who he brought. I saw Roger in the 5 hallways on numerous occasions. I don't know who he
6 brought with him nor did I inquire.

7 Q Did it cause any curiosity in you when he said he 8 was going to bring his general counsel along?

9 A No. As I say, it's typically, mine as well as 10 others, a very busy day. He asked for a meeting. I knew
11 who he was. I knew that he had confidence in the White
12 House and it was a meeting I took to set up pro forma.

13 MR. BENNETT: Are you tired? Do you want to 14 break?

15 THE WITNESS: No, I'm fine.

16 BY MR. CODINHA:

17 Q When you said you talked to Mr. McLarty and you
18 informed him -- when you informed Mr. McLarty that 19 Mr. Altman was bringing Treasury's lawyer along, it was you
20 who suggested that you have the White House's lawyer
21 present; right?

22 MR. BENNETT: Mr. Codinha, he has testified to 1 this four times.

2 MR. CODINHA: Actually, I don't think it's four
3 times.

4 MR. BENNETT: Four or five times. Can't we move
5 that along.

6 BY MR. CODINHA:

7 Q With respect to the reason you thought that the
8 White House's lawyer should be there, what was in your mind
9 as to why the White House's lawyer should be there?

10 A Because the Treasury's lawyer was going to be
11 there.

12 Q Did you believe that business was going to be 13 discussed that would require the White House's lawyer to be 14 there?

15 A I didn't have the foggiest idea of what business
16 was going to be discussed but it struck me if he was 17 bringing his lawyer, we should have our lawyer.

18 Q Did you go to the meeting on February 2nd?

19 A I did.

20 Q And was it scheduled in your schedule that you
21 would go to the meeting?

22 A As I recall, it was.

1 Q When you arrived at the meeting, do you recall
2 where it occurred?

3 A It occurred in Mr. McLarty's office around his 4 conference table.

5 Q Do you recall who was there when you arrived?

6 A I don't recall whether I arrived before anyone
7 else. I recall that I went into Mr. McLarty's office, that
8 Mr. McLarty was there and I may well have met Mr. Altman
9 and the Treasury's counsel, who I came to learn was 10 Ms. Hanson, on the way in.

11 Typically, when people come in from the outside
12 without a permanent White House pass, which Mr. Altman does
13 not, I think, have, they are -- they wait in the reception
14 room until they are escorted in. But as I went into his 15 office, I recall, I think, going in with Mr. Altman and 16 Ms. Hanson, or who I came to learn was Ms. Hanson. I don't 17 know whether Mr. Nussbaum was in the office when I walked 18 in or not.

19 Q Do you recall that being the first time you ever
20 met Ms. Hanson?

21 A Yes, to the best of my recollection, I had never 22 met her nor did I know who she was.

1 Q Was she introduced to you at that time?

2 A She was.

3 Q Who else attended the meeting?

4 A The best of my recollection, although McLarty was
5 in the meeting, he didn't attend it. It was myself,
6 Altman, Hanson, Nussbaum; Neil Eggleston, as I recall, was 7 there. It's my recollection that Ms. Williams attended,
8 but I think she came in after the meeting was underway.
9 There may have been others. I don't recall anybody else at 10 the meeting.

11 Q You expected Mr. Altman to be there. That's 12 correct?

13 A Yes.

14 Q You expected his general counsel, who it turned 15 out was Ms. Hanson, to be there?

16 A Yes.

17 Q You expected Mr. Nussbaum to be there?

18 A I did.

19 Q Did you expect that Mr. Eggleston was going to be 20 there?

21 A I had no expectation of him.

22 Q Ms. Williams is not an attorney, is she?

1 A Not to my knowledge.

2 Q Do you have any idea, as we sit here today, why
3 Ms. Williams was at the meeting?

4 A Well, as the meeting unfolded, yes.

5 Q And what was her reason for being at the meeting?

6 A Well, you'll have to ask her.

7 Q I just asked you if you knew, and I'm now asking
8 you what is your understanding of the reason Ms. Williams
9 was at the meeting?

10 A It was a matter dealing -- as it turned out, it
11 was a matter that Mr. Altman wanted to discuss, and did
12 discuss, what I understood to be an inquiry being conducted
13 by the RTC general counsel as to whether there was a basis
14 for a civil claim against persons or parties involved in 15 Whitewater/Madison. And since that was a matter -- not 16 necessarily that civil claim but since Whitewater/Madison
17 was an issue of considerable -- still at that time a
18 considerable press inquiry, it didn't surprise me that 19 Ms. Williams was there.

20 Q Before you walked in to the meeting, you did not 21 know what the subject matter of the meeting was going to 22 be?

1 A Not to my recollection.

2 Q Did anyone else, to your knowledge, know what the
3 subject matter of the meeting was going to be before the 4 meeting began?

5 A Not that I knew of.

6 MR. BENNETT: Other than Altman.

7 MR. CODINHA: Other than Altman and perhaps
8 Hanson. And when I say "anyone," I'm talking about anyone
9 from the White House.

10 MR. BENNETT: I just want the record to be clear.

11 THE WITNESS: That's how I took your question.

12 BY MR. CODINHA:

13 Q Do you know who had alerted Ms. Williams that 14 Mr. Altman was going to be at the White House?

15 A I do not know.

16 Q Do you know how Ms. Williams came to be at the
17 meeting?

18 A I don't know.

19 Q This was a by-invitation-meeting only, wasn't it?

20 A Yes.

21 Q And do you know who invited Ms. Williams to 22 attend that meeting?

1 A I don't recall.

2 Q Was anyone assigned the task of taking notes at
3 the meeting?

4 A No.

5 Q Did anyone take notes at the meeting?

6 A As I recall, people did take notes.

7 Q Who do you recall taking notes?

8 A I did. I think Eggleston may have and I recall
9 Hanson taking notes. I don't know whether others did or 10 not.

11 Q As best you can now recall, what occurred at the 12 meeting? Who said what to whom?

13 A Well, I don't recall who said what to whom. I
14 can convey to you the gist of the meeting, and the gist of 15 the meeting, as best I can recall, was Mr. Altman discussed
16 the issue of the -- what I understood to be an inquiry
17 being conducted by the general counsel of RTC as to whether 18 or not there was the basis for a civil claim against any 19 persons or parties in connection with Madison/Whitewater.

20 And it was my understanding, based on his 21 description, that there was a statute of limitations with 22 respect to any such claims, and that that statute of

1 limitations was about to expire. And he raised that issue
2 and there were a number of questions about it.

3 I, for one, had little knowledge, if any
4 knowledge, about the situation. I, among others, asked him
5 a number of questions about the details of the statute of 6 limitations and to some extent, the progress of the inquiry
7 being conducted by the RTC. That was the bulk of the
8 meeting.

9 Towards the very latter part of the meeting, he 10 raised the issue that he said he was considering whether or 11 not to recuse himself in connection with that matter. It
12 was during that meeting that I, to the best of my 13 recollection, learned of Mr. Altman's position with respect
14 to the RTC.

15 Q Have you completed your answer?

16 A Yes.

17 MR. BENNETT: He has turned over his notes to the 18 meeting so that may help refresh his recollection if you
19 think there's anything more.

20 BY MR. CODINHA:

21 Q With respect to Mr. Altman's statement, did
22 Mr. Altman begin talking at the meeting? Was he the one

1 who began the meeting?

2 A Yes, he was the one who asked for the meeting. I
3 was in the dark as to what he wanted to discuss and he
4 basically opened up the meeting.

5 Q And did he say I want to discuss the procedures
6 that the RTC is -- words to the effect that I want to 7 discuss the procedures the RTC is going to follow as they 8 apply to the statute of limitations?

9 A I don't recall exactly what he said. He did --
10 the gist of what he said is that he wanted to discuss the 11 inquiry being conducted by the RTC's general counsel and 12 the application of the soon-to-expire statute of 13 limitations to that investigation.

14 Q If you can recall, what did he say that he wanted
15 to discuss about the inquiry that was being conducted by 16 the RTC's general counsel?

17 A Would you repeat that.

18 MR. CODINHA: Would you read it back, please.
19 (The reporter read the record as requested.)

20 THE WITNESS: He did not -- it's my recollection
21 that he did not go into the substance of the inquiry
22 itself. What he discussed was there was an inquiry

1 underway, that it was his view, based on information from
2 his sources -- I don't think he delineated them, but I
3 assumed one of them was the general counsel of the RTC --
4 that that investigation was going to take a longer period
5 of time to conclude and that it might not conclude until 6 after the expiration of the statute of limitations.

7 BY MR. CODINHA:

8 Q Did he indicate the steps that the RTC was taking 9 in their inquiry to make a determination that -- strike
10 that.

11 Did Mr. Altman discuss the steps that the RTC was 12 taking to get the information that they would need in order
13 to make a determination on the statute of limitations.

14 MR. BENNETT: I'm going to ask, in fairness to 15 the witness, if what your objective is is to find out what 16 happened, if you could show him his notes, which were taken
17 in real time. I mean, if you want an accurate -- rather 18 than him guessing years later.

19 MR. CODINHA: Years later?

20 MR. BENNETT: Not years later. Months and 21 months. The point is the most accurate record is his 22 contemporaneous notes, so we don't get into a guessing

1 game, I'd ask you to show him his notes.

2 BY MR. CODINHA:

3 Q Mr. Ickes, as best you recall, what was said
4 about that subject?

5 MR. BENNETT: Go ahead. Guess. Do your best.

6 THE WITNESS: I think I've given you the gist of 7 it. I can't recall word for word who said what to whom,
8 but the gist of it was as I just recounted it. He wanted
9 to inform us, "us" being people from the White House, as to 10 the status of that investigation from a procedural time
11 point of view. He did not go into detail -- as I recall,
12 he did not go into any detail about the substance of it.
13 It was my impression and impression only he didn't know a
14 lot about the substance of anything.

15 The purpose of this meeting and the focus of his 16 discussion was the relationship of the time that he felt 17 this investigation might be wrapped up and he said, at 18 least in so many words, that it was his understanding that 19 the investigation probably would not be concluded and that 20 a determination could not be made by the RTC's general
21 counsel as to whether there was a basis for a civil claim
22 until after the expiration of the statute of limitations

1 had applied to that particular investigation.

2 I recall that he said that the statute began
3 running from the time RTC took over Madison Guaranty.
4 Again, this is what I recall, and I recall that -- all this
5 was new to me. I recall his saying that the statute, as 6 applied to that investigation or at least to that matter,
7 bringing a civil claim, had been expired, had been renewed
8 and made retroactive for a five-year period and was about
9 to expire, I think, the end of March or somewhere along
10 that line.

11 BY MR. CODINHA:

12 Q When you heard Mr. Altman say that the 13 investigation of the RTC probably couldn't be concluded to 14 the satisfaction of the general counsel of the RTC before 15 the statute had run, had you ever heard that piece of 16 information before?

17 A I do not recall. As I said before, this was all
18 very new to me. I think it was at that meeting that I
19 first learned of Roger's relationship to RTC, of Bentsen's
20 relationship to RTC, of the RTC oversight board, and I knew
21 nothing about the structure, and to the best of my 22 recollection, I don't think that -- I do recall there being

1 a D'Amato countdown, but I certainly didn't know the
2 intricacies that he explained that day.

3 Q With respect to the information that the inquiry
4 could probably not be wrapped up to the general counsel's
5 satisfaction, the inquiry about Madison could not be 6 wrapped up to the general counsel's satisfaction before the 7 statute of limitations ran, as far as you knew, was that
8 public knowledge when he said it?

9 A I don't know whether it was public knowledge or 10 not. I assumed that it was -- when you say "public," did
11 the public in general, I didn't think it was. I didn't 12 know whether it was, but it was my assumption that this was 13 information that was not known to the public in general and 14 probably very few people inside the administration.

15 Q Did you believe that that piece of information
16 was known to the parties to the litigation, the other side
17 of the case, the people not on the government side of 18 Madison but on the other side of the Madison investigation?

19 A It wasn't my impression that there was any 20 litigation that had been instituted. It was my 21 understanding what they wanted to do was to preserve the 22 right to initiate litigation. It was not my understanding

1 that there was any litigation underway with respect to this
2 particular issue.

3 Q I'm sorry, potential litigation. Was it your 4 understanding that those people were on the other side of 5 the potential litigation?

6 MR. BENNETT: You mean without regard to what
7 would have been said on the floor of the Senate?

8 MR. CODINHA: I'm saying that the fact that
9 Mr. Altman disclosed at this meeting that the RTC general
10 counsel's office was not going to be in a position to 11 decide whether or not they had enough information until 12 after the statute of limitations had run.

13 MR. BENNETT: I see. I'm sorry.

14 BY MR. CODINHA:

15 Q And that's the focus of my question to you now.
16 As far as you know, was that information given to 17 the other side? Had that information been given to the 18 other side, the potential other side.

19 MR. BENNETT: "The other side" being --

20 MR. CODINHA: Whoever was going to be involved on 21 the opposite side of the Madison case from the RTC.

22 THE WITNESS: I had no idea who had been involved

1 on the other side. A lot of people have been involved in
2 Madison and RTC matters.

3 BY MR. CODINHA:

4 Q You are an attorney. Although I haven't seen
5 your resume, you are an attorney, are you not?

6 A I am.

7 Q Do you think the fact of knowing that one side is 8 not going to be able to have enough information to act
9 before the statute of limitation runs is an important piece
10 of information to be conveyed to the other side?

11 MR. BENNETT: I'm going to object. He's not here
12 in his capacity to give you legal opinions, so I'm going to 13 instruct him to not be opining on what is good lawyering or 14 not good lawyering.

15 MR. CODINHA: I'm not asking him to opine other
16 than what he thought at the time.

17 MR. BENNETT: I'm going to tell him not to give 18 his legal opinion or legal judgment. I think we should 19 focus on section A of the resolution.

20 BY MR. CODINHA:

21 Q Did you understand Ms. Williams was the chief of 22 staff to Hillary Clinton as she sat there in that room?

1 A Was she?

2 Q Did you understand she was?

3 A I knew she was.

4 Q Did you understand that she reported to Hillary
5 Clinton, as chief of staff that she reported directly to 6 Hillary Clinton?

7 A That's my understanding.

8 Q Was there any suggestion at that meeting that the 9 information that was being received was being received in 10 any kind of confidential fashion?

11 A I do not think Mr. Altman referred to 12 confidentiality during these discussions.

13 Q Did you understand that it was likely that 14 Ms. Williams would report the information that she had 15 determined to her superiors?

16 A I had no understanding in that regard.

17 Q Did you understand that she shouldn't report that 18 information to her superior?

19 A I had no understanding in that regard.

20 Q I think you also said that you had raised a 21 question during Mr. Altman's presentation about the 22 progress of the inquiry that was being conducted by the

128

1 RTC. What do you recall asking Mr. Altman about the
2 progress of the inquiry that was being conducted by the
3 RTC?

4 A As I recall, my questions were procedural and not
5 substantive.

6 Q What were the procedural questions you asked?

7 A I just wanted to get a sense from him as to how
8 long he thought it was going to take for the general
9 counsel to wrap up the investigation and to make a
10 determination -- or I guess it was a recommendation. I
11 think that's the phrase that Mr. Altman used, that general
12 counsel would make a recommendation as to what action, if 13 any, should be taken based on the investigation.

14 And basically, I was trying to get a sense from 15 him, because this was pretty new to me, as to his best
16 estimate of when that investigation would be concluded and 17 a recommendation could be made because as I understood it,
18 general counsel made a recommendation and that 19 recommendation was then moved up the chain in the RTC to 20 determine whether or not the recommendation would be acted 21 upon.

22 Q What did Mr. Altman respond to you about the time

1 that it would take the general counsel to make her
2 recommendation?

3 A He was imprecise. I don't think he had a
4 specific time -- the general information from Mr. Altman
5 was based on what he knew, that it was unlikely that the 6 investigation could be completed and a recommendation made
7 by the general counsel prior to the expiration of the 8 statute of limitations.

9 Q What did Mr. Altman say as to -- I believe you
10 just said that general counsel would make a recommendation
11 as to what action would be taken, and it would begin moving
12 up the line or up the chain.

13 What did Mr. Altman say was going to be the 14 movement up the chain?

15 A I don't think he went into particular detail. It
16 was my understanding that the general counsel -- again, as 17 I sit here today, I recall the general gist of Altman's
18 presentation was in response to questions, I think probably 19 more appropriately, that the general counsel did not have 20 the authority to bring or initiate a civil claim absent
21 approval by higher authority within the RTC structure.

22 Q What did Mr. Altman say about that, if you can

1 recall?

2 A I think I've given you the gist, and I can't
3 recall his exact words, but that's certainly the gist, as I
4 recall it.

5 Q And when he said that, was there inquiry about
6 who was further up the chain who would be making that
7 decision?

8 A I recall the name of a guy by the name of Jack
9 Ryan. I don't know what position or title he held. I came 10 away with the impression that he was certainly above the 11 general counsel's office, and ultimately, I think it would 12 come up to Mr. Altman who was then acting president or 13 chairman, whatever his title was, of the RTC, by virtue of 14 the RTC statute.

15 Q As you recall, is that what Mr. Altman said at
16 the meeting?

17 A That was the gist of what he said.

18 Q Do you recall Mr. Altman told you at the meeting
19 the name of the general counsel?

20 A I think it was Mr. Altman. I know her name was 21 raised by either Altman or somebody else, and my 22 recollection is it was a woman by the name of Ellen Kulka,

1 K-u-l-k-a, I think.

2 Q What, if anything, did Mr. Altman say about Ellen
3 Kulka, other than she was general counsel?

4 A Basically she was general counsel.

5 Q What was said about Jack Ryan, if anything, at 6 that meeting?

7 A I think Mr. Altman -- I'm not sure whether it was 8 Mr. Altman -- reference was made that both of them had
9 worked, I think, previously at the Office of Thrift
10 Supervision, the agency I had never heard of until that 11 meeting, that Mr. Ryan had worked at the office of OTS and 12 it was my impression that he was, from a structural and 13 authoritative point of view, above the general counsel's
14 office.

15 I couldn't tell you what position he held or what 16 the relationships were. It was my sense that he was 17 somewhere between Altman and general counsel, at least with 18 respect to this investigation and possible determination of 19 the general counsel.

20 Q After Mr. Altman talked about that, you said, I
21 believe Mr. Altman said he was considering recusal and that 22 was the first time you learned of Mr. Altman's position

1 within the RTC. What did Mr. Altman say about recusal?

2 A The gist of what he said, and this came towards
3 the very latter part of the meeting and was -- I think the 4 bulk of the meeting was taken up with his presentation and
5 our questions and his answers and discussion about the 6 investigation and its relationship to the statute of 7 limitations.

8 Towards the latter part of the meeting he brought
9 up that he was considering recusing himself in connection
10 with this matter and as I recall, it was because he, as the 11 acting chairman or the president, would ultimately have to 12 determine whether or not to implement a recommendation, if 13 any, made by the general counsel's office with respect to 14 this investigation.

15 Q Did he go on to explain at that time what he 16 thought the reasons for recusing himself were?

17 A There were questions along that line, both from 18 myself, Mr. Nussbaum and I think others to determine the 19 basis and as I recall, the gist of his basis was that he 20 was -- had a long and well-known friendship with the 21 president and that he was considering recusing himself to 22 eliminate any possible conflict or appearance of conflict.

1 Q Do you recall Mr. Altman reading his position
2 from talking points?

3 A Position with respect to what?

4 Q With respect to what he was telling you. Do you
5 recall him using talking points at that meeting?

6 A Telling us in general or telling us with respect
7 to recusal?

8 Q Either one.

9 A I recall that he had a sheet of paper in front of 10 him. He appeared from time to time to be looking at it
11 during his presentations. He sometimes referred to his 12 general counsel as well. I don't know whether anything was 13 typed or written on a piece of paper. I couldn't see it
14 from that perspective, but I assume he was because he 15 seemed to refer to it from time to time.

16 Q With respect to your questioning of Mr. Altman
17 about why he felt he should recuse himself, what did you
18 say, if you can recall?

19 A The gist of what I said was Roger, why do you
20 think you should recuse yourself, and the gist of his 21 answer is what I recall what I related to you earlier.

22 Q That he had a long and well-known friendship with

1 the president and Mrs. Clinton?

2 A And Mrs. Clinton, and he was considering recusing
3 himself in order to avoid either conflict or the appearance
4 of conflict.

5 Q Do you recall him saying that when he spoke to 6 you, not that he was considering recusing himself but that
7 he had decided to recuse himself?

8 A I do not recall him saying that.

9 Q I'd like to show you Exhibit T153, which is 10 labeled "Talking points for Roger Altman, informational 11 meeting with Mack McLarty, 2/2/94," and I'd like you to 12 read the last bullet. You can read the whole thing but I'm 13 going to ask you about the last bullet.

14 MR. BENNETT: Why don't you read the first bullet
15 and the last bullet.

16 THE WITNESS: This is the first time I've seen
17 this to the best of my recollection. The caption is as you
18 have described. The first bullet is "RTC has been 19 requested by eight Republican senators and Congressman
20 including Dole and Michel to seek tolling agreements from 21 president and Mrs. Clinton, McDougal, David Hale, Jim Guy
22 Tucker, Seth Ward related to Madison Guaranty" --

1 MR. BENNETT: Since you had asked about the other
2 side, I thought you might want that on the record.

3 THE WITNESS: The last bullet, "I have decided I
4 will recuse myself from the decisionmaking process as 5 interim CEO of the RTC because of my relationship with the 6 president and Mrs. Clinton."

7 BY MR. CODINHA:

8 Q Having read that, does that refresh your
9 recollection as to what Mr. Altman said at the meeting?

0 A It does not.

1 Q What do you recall Mr. Nussbaum saying to
2 Mr. Altman with respect to recusal, if anything?

3 A The gist was why do you think you need to recuse
4 yourself, Roger? I don't know whether I said it first or 5 he said it first. The gist of Altman's response was as 6 I've testified to and the gist of Nussbaum's response was 7 that he didn't see a need for recusal on that basis and 8 that was basically my response, but that it was up to Roger 9 to decide whether or not he was going to recuse himself.
0 That was a thumbnail -- that is the gist of what was said
1 with respect to recusal.

2 Q Did you see -- strike that.

1 What, if you can recall, did Ms. Williams say to
2 Mr. Altman with respect to recusal?

3 A I don't recall anything specifically that
4 Ms. Williams said. I think my recollection is that
5 virtually everybody around the table was involved in this
6 discussion and the gist of it was, from anyone who spoke
7 from the White House, they didn't necessarily see a basis
8 for recusing or the necessity of recusing, let's put it
9 that way. But it was at bottom, Mr. Altman's decision
0 whether or not he should recuse himself.

1 Q Do you recall Mr. Altman saying at that meeting
2 that he had been advised by Ms. Hanson who was there with
3 him, the general counsel to the Treasury, that he should
4 recuse himself?

5 A I don't recall him saying that.

6 Q Do you recall Mr. Altman saying at that meeting
7 that he had been advised by the general counsel of the RTC
8 that he should recuse himself?

9 A I don't recall him saying that.

0 Q Do you recall Mr. Altman saying at the meeting
1 that he had been advised by Secretary Bentsen of the 2 Treasury that he should recuse himself?

1 A I don't recall him saying that.

2 MR. BENNETT: May I see that exhibit?

3 THE WITNESS: I'm not saying that he didn't say
4 that. I don't recall, as I sit here today, him saying
5 that.

6 MR. BENNETT: I would note that that doesn't
7 appear to be in his talking points.

8 MR. CODINHA: No.

9 BY MR. CODINHA:

10 Q With respect to -- strike that.

11 How long did this entire meeting last?

12 A I don't recall. I think not longer than 45
13 minutes, in that neighborhood.

14 Q How did the meeting end?

15 A The meeting ended with -- on this subject that 16 we've been discussing with everybody on the White House
17 side who spoke on it, saying that it was whether Altman
18 recused himself or not was up to him and as I recall,
19 Altman saying that he had not made a decision and that he 20 would be making a decision within the next day or so and 21 would be getting back to us. I'm not even sure if the "us"
22 was designated as a particular individual as to his

1 decision.

2 Q When Mr. Nussbaum spoke to Mr. Altman about the
3 subject of recusal, how was the delivery made to
4 Mr. Altman?

5 A In --

6 Q What was the tone of the delivery?

7 A In the normal tone that Bernie uses in general
8 discussions.

9 Q Did Mr. --

10 A Nothing out of the ordinary.

11 MR. BENNETT: Describe to him what Mr. Nussbaum's
12 normal tone is.

13 THE WITNESS: Well, Mr. Nussbaum, in my
14 experience, is -- I guess I would characterize him as a
15 passionate advocate. He urges his beliefs in a fairly
16 assertive way, but that's just his general nature.

17 MR. BENNETT: I didn't want two ships passing in 18 the night.

19 THE WITNESS: There's nothing -- Bernie did
20 not -- his attitude and demeanor was no different than if 21 he were talking to me about just matters in general. There
22 was nothing out of the ordinary for him.

1 BY MR. CODINHA:

2 Q And it was Mr. Nussbaum's position, as he
3 articulated it, that he didn't hear any reason from Altman
4 why he should recuse himself?

5 A As best I can recall, as I have testified before,
6 I think both Mr. Nussbaum and I took the position that we
7 did not -- that the basis which Mr. Altman was advancing
8 for recusal, we didn't see that it necessarily required his 9 recusal, but it was his decision to make and his alone to 10 make.

11 Q Did Mr. Nussbaum raise at that meeting the fact
12 that from the White House's point o. view, recusal as a
13 policy issue would be a bad thing?

14 A I don't recall that, and I don't see how that 15 broad statement could be made since these things, it seems 16 to me -- I'm no expert in conflict of interest and recusal,
17 but it seems to me, based on my limited knowledge, they 18 have to be made on a case-by-case basis. I do think that 19 there was discussion that if everybody who had a friendship
20 with the president were to recuse themselves, there'd be a 21 lot of recusals, but again, it was emphasized clearly by 22 everybody at the table that it was up to Mr. Altman to make

140

1 that determination himself.

2 Q Do you recall, in the context of Mr. Altman
3 saying that he was considering recusing himself, who 4 Mr. Altman would say -- who Mr. Altman said would be in the 5 decisionmaking process at the RTC as it related to Madison?

6 A Again, I don't have a -- my general recollection
7 on this is I think that Jack Ryan would succeed him. I
8 don't know whether as interim CEO, but it was my 9 impression, at least that Jack Ryan, rather than Roger 10 Altman, would be making the final decision on whether or 11 not to implement any determination or recommendation by the 12 RTC's general counsel.

13 Q Do you recall Mr. Altman making a statement at 14 that meeting or making a statement, words to the effect
15 that it didn't matter whether he recused himself anyway
16 because he had already ceded the decision on Madison to 17 lower level people at the RTC?

18 A I don't recall him saying that.

19 Q Is that something you would have recalled if he 20 had said it?

21 A What I do recall Mr. Altman saying is that he 22 fully expected to follow the recommendation of the RTC's

1 general counsel.

2 Q In this case, Ms. Kulka?

3 A Yes, with respect to this matter.

4 Q Do you recall at that meeting Mr. Nussbaum
5 indicating that he knew Ms. Kulka or knew of Ms. Kulka or 6 knew Mr. Ryan or knew of Mr. Ryan?

7 A I recall that Mr. Nussbaum indicated he had known
8 of each prior to this meeting.

9 Q What do you recall Mr. Nussbaum indicating at 10 that -- strike that.

11 What do you recall Mr. Nussbaum saying at that 12 meeting about what he knew about Ms. Kulka?

13 A It was unclear to me. It was my impression,
14 based on Mr. Nussbaum's remarks, that he had dealt with 15 Ms. Kulka in connection with a prior litigation or matter
16 that I think he had held -- he had been handling in private 17 practice before joining the White House. She had been with 18 the Office of Thrift Supervision, as I recall, when he was 19 handling that matter.

20 Q And what did Mr. Nussbaum, as best you can 21 recall, say about Ms. Kulka, as she had been a lawyer for 22 the Office of Thrift Supervision in the case that he had

142

1 dealt with her before?

2 A As I recall, I think Mr. Nussbaum had some
3 question. He didn't raise this to a high level, that I
4 recall but he had some question about her judgment and 5 impartiality.

6 Q Did he say -- when you say he had some question
7 about her judgment and impartiality, what did he say about
8 Ms. Kulka's judgment and impartiality?

9 A All I can recall is that he had some question
10 about it. I don't recall anything else.

11 Q When you say question about her judgment, was it
12 a suggestion that he had a problem with Ms. Kulka's
13 judgment?

14 A I think it's fair to say, as I recall, that he
15 questioned her judgment.

16 Q And in terms of impartiality, would you
17 explain -- as you understood it, what was the question
18 about her impartiality?

19 A It was my impression that he had a question about 20 her impartiality as a result of his relationship to her in 21 the -- it was either litigation or case that I think he was 22 handling in connection with the Office of Thrift

1 Supervision when he was in private practice. I don't
2 recall the details, whether he spelled out details or if he
3 did, what they were.

4 Q Do you recall him talking about the Kaye, Scholer
5 case and how the Office of Thrift Supervision had been 6 unfair in the dealings?

7 A I remember -- yes, you now have refreshed my
8 memory. I think he did mention -- I recall Bernie did
9 represent Kaye, Scholer. I don't know in what connection
10 but as you recall, he did raise Kaye, Scholer's name, a law
11 firm in New York, in that discussion.

12 Q And did he say that the Office of Thrift
13 Supervision had treated Kaye, Scholer unfairly and had 14 brought Kay, Scholer to their knees by the methods they had 15 employed in that litigation?

16 A I don't recall the details of the discussion.
17 Again, I recall his mentioning of Kaye, Scholer and I think
18 it was in regard to his questioning Ms. Kulka's, as I
19 recall, both judgment and impartiality.

20 Q Did you see Mr. Nussbaum have a visceral
21 reaction, a reaction you could see when the name Ellen 22 Kulka was mentioned as being the person who was going to be

1 in charge of the decisionmaking process as it related to
2 Madison?

3 A Well, he certainly raised a question and if you
4 know Mr. Nussbaum, as I said, he's passionate in his
5 presentations, but I want to emphasize he was no more
6 passionate in this discussion than he is in any number of 7 other situations.

8 Q But he was as passionate in this one as he is in 9 any other number of ones?

10 A He was, but Bernie can get passionate about what 11 he chooses off the menu.

12 Q Was it your understanding that Mr. Nussbaum was 13 particularly passionate about the issue of how the Office
14 of Thrift Services had dealt with Kaye, Scholer whom he had 15 represented?

16 A I was under the distinct impression that he was 17 unhappy about it.

18 Q Did he talk about -- strike that. Let me go back
19 to the meeting.

20 When the meeting ended, what did you do after the 21 meeting as it related to Whitewater or Madison, not did you
22 go home for dinner?

1 A I got up and walked out.

2 Q Did any group of people -- strike that.

3 Did Mr. Altman and Ms. Hanson leave the meeting?

4 A Yes. The meeting was over, and as I say, there
5 is a great deal of business. When I left, they left.

6 Mr. McLarty was not around. He did not participate in the 7 meeting and we just dispersed. I don't recall any
8 postmeeting among either White House people or with Altman
9 or Ryan -- I'm sorry, or Hanson.

10 Q Did any group of people remain after the meeting
11 to discuss the events of the meeting, if you can recall?

12 A Not that I recall. I think that we all had other
13 things to go and do, probably running behind time.

14 Q Do you recall at the meeting there being a 15 question raised by Mr. Nussbaum about how Ms. Kulka had 16 gotten her position at RTC?

17 A I don't know whether Nussbaum raised it or not.
18 It's my best recollection that there was some discussion of 19 that. And my recollection is that Altman had either
20 recommended her or had approved her. It was something in 21 connection with his acting status, for lack of a better
22 word, as head of the RTC that he had been involved in her

1 selection and at the very least had approved her
2 selection. But again, it was not a focus of the meeting
3 that I recall. This is just my recollection of my 4 impression of that.

5 Q Of the people who spoke from the White House at 6 the meeting, did anyone suggest that Mr. Altman should
7 recuse himself?

8 A I don't recall anyone saying that he should. I
9 recall, as I've testified before, that at least Bernie
10 Nussbaum and I questioned whether he needed to, but all
11 concerned who spoke on the subject said -- made it very 12 clear that it was up to Roger Altman to make that 13 decision.

14 (Pause.)

15 Q Mr. Ickes, it's my practice, after there's been 16 some form of break, to ask you whether there's anything
17 you'd like to add to the record, expand on the record or 18 make any correction to the record as you sit here now.

19 A No.

20 Q I'd like to now turn your attention to --
21 following the meeting of February 2nd, did you inform your 22 chief of staff, Mr. McLarty, of what had occurred at the

1 meeting?

2 A I don't recall any specific conversation with
3 him, as I sit here today, but I'm confident that I did.

4 Q Do you recall whether you reported what you had
5 learned of the meeting to the President of the United 6 States?

7 MR. BENNETT: I think that's a fair question.

8 THE WITNESS: I wouldn't use the word
9 "reported." I recall having a discussion with him, or 10 during a discussion with him on other matters, informing 11 him about the substance of the conversation. I don't
12 recall when that occurred, whether it occurred shortly
13 after or a number of days or even weeks after, but I recall
14 informing him of the gist of what had occurred.

15 BY MR. CODINHA:

16 Q Do you recall -- did you have occasion to brief
17 the First Lady of the United States about the subject
18 matter of the meeting?

19 A Again, I wouldn't use the word "brief." I recall
20 informing her of the gist of the meeting. Again, I don't 21 know of when or where.

22 Q Following the February 2nd meeting, did you come

148

1 to have another meeting with Mr. Altman shortly thereafter?

2 A On this matter?

3 Q On this matter.

4 A The answer is yes.

5 Q And when did that meeting occur?

6 A It occurred, as I recall, within a day or so
7 following the meeting that we've discussed.

8 Q What were the circumstances under which you met
9 with Mr. Altman?

10 A My best recollection is that it was in the west
11 wing, and I recall it being on the second floor, which is 12 the top floor of the west wing, and my best recollection is 13 it took place in the late afternoon, I think, in connection
14 with one of the 6:00 health care meetings.

15 Q Was this a meeting in which anything related to 16 Whitewater was discussed, Whitewater, Madison or 17 Mr. Altman's recusal issue?

18 A Not that I recall. I think it was as we were 19 about to go in -- my best recollection is it was as we were 20 about to begin or to go into one of the regular 6:00 health
21 care meetings.

22 Q And what was discussed at that time -- strike

1 that.

2 Who was present?

3 A I think that myself, Maggie Williams and Roger
4 Altman were present, and I think the discussion occurred
5 either in the hallway outside of Maggie's west wing office
6 or inside her west wing office. I don't recall where.

7 Q And what do you recall the discussion being? Who 8 said what to whom?

9 A I don't recall the exact words of who said what 10 to whom. The gist of it was -- and it was a very short, in 11 my recollection, less than a minute conversation in which 12 Mr. Altman informed me and if Ms. Williams was there,
13 informed her that he had decided not to recuse himself.

14 Q What response did you make to that, if any?

15 A Other than I've heard you, I don't think any.

16 Q And what response did Ms. Williams make to that, 17 if any?

18 A I don't recall her making any response, but I
19 don't recall what response, if any, she made.

20 Q What do you recall happening next after that
21 meeting?

22 A My recollection is that we proceeded with a

150

1 meeting on health care in Maggie's office.

2 Q Do you recall Ms. Hanson coming to that second
3 meeting? When I say the "second meeting," I mean the 4 meeting on February 3rd.

5 A It was either February 3rd or in that time
6 period. I recall seeing Ms. Hanson either in the hallway
7 outside of Ms. Williams's second floor or west wing office
8 or in her office, and I recall that being on the same day
9 that Altman told me and Maggie that he had decided not to 10 recuse himself. I recall seeing Ms. Hanson in the office, 11 however, earlier than when Mr. Altman told us about his 12 nonrecusal.

13 Q So you saw Ms. Hanson first and it was after that 14 you saw Mr. Altman?

15 A I'm giving you my best recollection. My 16 recollection is I saw Ms. Hanson in there around noon or 17 shortly afternoon, and I recall Roger informing us of his 18 decision not to recuse himself late in the afternoon.

19 Q Do you recall having a conversation with 20 Ms. Hanson when you saw her in the west wing?

21 A I do.

22 Q And what do you recall saying to Ms. Hanson and

1 what do you recall she said to you?

2 A Hello. Nice to see you. Good-bye.

3 Q Let me just ask you now, do you recall whether
4 this meeting between you, Ms. Williams and Mr. Altman may 5 have occurred around lunchtime?

6 A It could have. I'm just giving you my best
7 recollection, but I'm not saying it didn't.

8 Q Do you recall that Mr. Altman -- that it wasn't a 9 sit-down meeting, it was a meeting where people were 10 conversing standing up?

11 A I recall that the three of us were conversing
12 standing up.

13 Q That everybody was standing up and conversing?

14 A Yes.

15 Q Do you recall being notified by Ms. Williams in 16 advance of that meeting that Mr. Altman wanted to come over
17 and tell you something?

18 A She may well have. I don't recall.

19 Q Do you recall whether Ms. Williams asked you to 20 come up to her second floor west wing office to be there
21 for this Altman meeting?

22 A She could have. I don't recall it.

1 Q Do you recall that when you saw Ms. Hanson,
2 Ms. Williams was still present?

3 A Yes, she was.

4 Q Do you recall when you talked to Ms. Hanson, you
5 had some discussion about Mr. Altman's recusal decision?

6 A I don't recall it. You know, we could have. My
7 recollection is as I've testified before. I didn't know
8 Ms. Hanson other than meeting her at the February 2nd
9 meeting, and my recollection is that I literally said
10 hello, nice to see you, good-bye. It was a 30-second
11 meeting, if you can characterize that as a meeting.

12 Q Do you recall that when Ms. Hanson came,
13 Mr. Altman had already left?

14 A As I said, it is my best recollection -- I'm not 15 saying that it could not have occurred otherwise -- it's my 16 best recollection that I saw and said hello, nice to see 17 you, good-bye, to Ms. Hanson sometime noon or shortly after 18 noon that day and that the meeting that I described to you
19 with Mr. Altman and Maggie Williams occurred late
20 afternoon. I'm not saying it could not have occurred
21 otherwise, but that's my best recollection.

22 Q Do you recall asking Ms. Hanson when you saw her

1 who else knew about Mr. Altman's consideration that he
2 might or might not recuse himself?

3 A I don't recall discussing with Ms. Hanson at all
4 the recusal situation.

5 Q Do you recall saying to Ms. Hanson it will look
6 bad if people know that Altman was considering recusing
7 himself?

8 A Same answer as before. The answer is I have no
9 recollection of that.

10 Q Do you recall telling Ms. Hanson it would be 11 better if no one knew that Altman was considering recusing
12 himself?

13 A Same answer as before.

14 Q Do you recall Ms. Hanson saying words to the 15 effect that if anybody asked her, she was just going to say
16 that he had decided to recuse himself?

17 A Same answer as before. I have no recollection
18 whatsoever of that.

19 Q Following your discussion with Mr. Altman, do you
20 recall discussing his decision not to recuse himself with 21 anyone else in the White House?

22 A I don't recall any specific discussions. I

1 undoubtedly did.

2 Q Do you recall the discussion of Mr. Altman's
3 decision -- strike that.

4 Do you recall the matters that Mr. Altman had 5 discussed at the February 2nd meeting coming up at the 6 Whitewater response group meetings?

7 A I don't recall any specific discussion. There
8 probably was, but I couldn't pin the time or date or a
9 specific meeting.

10 Q Do you recall whether at some point in February, 11 Mr. Eggleston was asked to prepare a chronology relating to 12 Whitewater and Madison?

13 A Whether he was asked by me?

14 Q Whether he was asked to in general. Did you ever
15 become aware of that?

16 A There were discussions about the need to prepare 17 a chronology, and that was a discussion that was --
18 discussion that was an issue that was referred to from time
19 to time. It was my view that it would be useful to have 20 such a chronology because it was an ever-expanding group of 21 dates, people and circumstances.

22 Q Did you ask Mr. Eggleston to create such a

1 chronology?

2 A I may have. I don't recall specifically, but I
3 may have. I recall at the time that -- or during that
4 whole period, that it would be a useful document to have so
5 everybody could have reference to it.

6 Q Was such a chronology ever prepared, if you know?

7 A I don't think that such a chronology was ever
8 prepared.

9 Q Do you know a reason why, if you believed one was 10 necessary, one wasn't prepared?

11 A I think it was the press of time and the press of 12 inquiries from the press in trying to deal with responses,
13 and the fact that all of us involved in this were 14 responsible for other areas. I myself was working 15 basically from 6:30 in the morning until 8:00 or 10:00 at 16 night, involved in health care and the '94 elections, and 17 while I understand this is the focus of your inquiry, and 18 it was important to the White House, it was not the single 19 factor that any of us were dealing with.

20 So I treated it, I think to the press of time
21 that it was never put together. I'm not sure that one was 22 never put together ultimately but during the time period

156

1 we're discussing now, I do not think one was put together.

2 Q Did you become aware sometime in early to
3 mid-February that the issue of Mr. Altman's recusal or 4 nonrecusal had become moot?

5 A During what time period?

6 Q Early to mid-February from, say, the 8th to the 7 15th time period that the issue of whether he recused
8 himself or not had become moot?

9 A I don't.

10 Q Do you recall hearing that on or about February 11 11th that the statute of limitations had been extended for 12 another few years?

13 A I recall that, and I don't recall either the 14 details or when I learned of it.

15 Q Was that a subject matter that was discussed by 16 the Whitewater response team at one of its meetings?

17 A I'm sure it was. I can't recall when or where.
18 And again, I just want to point out by this time, by the 19 time we're moving into February, the Whitewater response
20 team was meeting on an very irregular basis and there was 21 discussions going on in the White House about whether to 22 have somebody else basically be responsible for managing

1 the press response to Whitewater other than myself.

2 Q Do you recall Roger Altman testifying before the
3 Senate Banking Committee on oversight hearings on February
4 24th? Do you recall learning of that?

5 A Yes.

6 Q Prior to that, did you have any conversations
7 just prior to that -- when I say "just prior," within a few
8 days within the February 24th hearings with Mr. Altman?

9 A I did.

10 Q When do you recall those conversations occurring?

11 A I had one conversation.

12 Q When do you recall that conversation occurring?

13 A It was early evening of the day immediately
14 preceding his testimony before Senate Banking.

15 Q What was the occasion that you had contact with 16 Mr. Altman?

17 A He had called me on the telephone.

18 Q Were you responding to his call or you just 19 answered the phone?

20 A Well, my assistant, Janice Enright, forwarded the 21 call. I was in Stephanopoulos's office -- George and I are 22 in each other's offices several times a day -- and I was in

1 his office and I got a call and his secretary told my
2 assistant, Janice Enright, that I had a call and she said
3 Roger Altman was on the phone and I said put him through.

4 Q When you spoke to Mr. Altman, what did you say to 5 him and what did he say to you?

6 A The gist of what he said was that he informed me
7 that he was going to testify before Senate Banking the next
8 day. I knew that already. He said he was considering
9 recusing himself. During that -- immediately preceding or 10 during that appearance before Senate Banking, he wondered 11 if I had any thoughts on the subject, said that he was 12 going out to a meeting, that he was on his way out to a
13 meeting or dinner -- I forget which -- he expected to be 14 back between 8:30, 9:00, I forget the precise time, and he 15 asked me if I would call him with any thoughts I had on the 16 subject.

17 I asked him -- it was a very short telephone
18 conversation. I asked him whether there had been any 19 change of circumstances following our meeting on 20 February 2nd and his subsequent decision not to recuse
21 himself. He said that there had been no change of 22 circumstances, and I said, offhand, I didn't see a need for

1 him to recuse himself, but I'd think about it and get back
2 to him. It was a very short phone conversation.

3 Q Was there any discussion at that meeting --

4 MR. BENNETT: You mean in that call.

5 BY MR. CODINHA:

6 Q I'm sorry, in that call that the statute of 7 limitations had already been extended on Madison so the 8 issue of recusal might have been moot?

9 A There may well have been. It's unclear to me
10 when you say the issue would have been "moot." If it had 11 been extended, why would it have been moot?

12 Q I'm just asking you whether that conversation
13 took place on the telephone call.

14 A I don't think so. I don't think so but I don't
15 recall it.

16 Q Did you take this call on a speakerphone in 17 Mr. Stephanopoulos's office or was it a direct line --

18 A Direct line. George has two phones in his office
19 and with several lines on it and as I recall, I was seated
20 in a chair by his second phone and I took the phone call
21 there. It was not on a speakerphone.

22 Q Was Mr. Stephanopoulos in his office?

1 A George was there. I was in there talking to him.

2 Q When you finished the phone call with Mr. Altman,
3 did you talk to Mr. Stephanopoulos about the telephone call
4 you just received from Altman?

5 A I did.

6 Q What did you tell Mr. Stephanopoulos about the 7 telephone call?

8 A I relayed the gist of it, as I've stated here.

9 Q Did Mr. Stephanopoulos have a position about what
10 you had discussed with Mr. Altman?

11 A I think his position -- as I recall, his position
12 was the same as mine. If there had been no change of 13 circumstances and neither of us were aware of any change
14 and Mr. Altman had indicated there had not been any change
15 in circumstances, he didn't see the necessity of 16 Mr. Altman's recusal, nor did I, but he said look, it's up
17 to Roger. It's his decision to make.

18 Q Was it your understanding by the time of this 19 telephone call, which you've described as occurring on 20 February 23rd, that there was increasing press clamor from 21 Mr. Altman to recuse himself?

22 A I don't recall. Again, there's so much press and

1 so much discussion that a lot of this has really merged. I
2 don't recall the intensity of the press discussion about
3 that issue at that time.

4 Q Did you watch Mr. Altman testify before the 5 Senate Banking Committee by any chance?

6 A I did not. It was a typically very busy, long
7 day for me and there were a press of other things and I did
8 not watch him.

9 Q Do you recall a telephone call on or about 10 February 25th that was made to Mr. Altman?

11 A I do.

12 Q In which you participated?

13 A In which I participated, yes.

14 Q Who made the phone call?

15 A It was in George's office. He placed the call,
16 George Stephanopoulos, that is.

17 Q Had you planned to make a phone call with 18 Mr. Stephanopoulos?

19 A No.

20 Q What were the circumstances that led up to the 21 phone call?

22 A I had gone up to see George, as I periodically

1 do, or he's down in my office --

2 MR. BENNETT: Keep your voice up.

3 THE WITNESS: I'm sorry. He informed me that he
4 understood that Altman had had a conversation earlier that
5 afternoon with an employee of The New York Times and during 6 the course of that conversation, Mr. Altman had told the 7 employee of the Times that he was either recusing himself
8 or stepping down from the RTC. I forget what technical 9 phrase was used.

10 And I don't recall George telling me the basis or 11 the source of his information, and I suggested that why
12 don't we call Roger to see what, in fact, he had done
13 because there had been some -- as I recall, he had not --
14 he had not recused himself during the Senate Banking
15 hearings and therefore, that information came as a total
16 and complete surprise to me and to George.

17 BY MR. CODINHA:

18 Q When Mr. Stephanopoulos called Mr. Altman, were 19 you on a speakerphone?

20 A We were.

21 Q And what was said -- who said what to whom during 22 this telephone conversation?

1 A Again, I don't recall the exact conversations,
2 but the gist of the conversation was, from my end and
3 George's end, we've heard this, is it true? Altman said
4 that he had had a conversation earlier that afternoon. I
5 think our call was late-ish afternoon to Altman. Our call
6 to Altman was late-ish afternoon, that he had earlier that 7 afternoon had a telephone call with Howell Rains, who is an 8 employee of The New York Times.

9 MR. BENNETT: I'm not sure he would like you to 10 describe it that way.

11 THE WITNESS: That's what I understand.

12 MR. BENNETT: I'm being silly. Sorry.

13 THE WITNESS: During the course of the 14 conversation with Mr. Rains, he, Roger, I think, had been 15 told by Mr. Rains that Mr. Rains was going to write a very 16 stiff editorial criticizing Mr. Altman and Mr. Altman -- I
17 don't know if in response to Mr. Rains's information, but 18 during the course of that conversation with Mr. Rains, told
19 Mr. Rains he was either going to recuse himself or step
20 down as acting CEO of the RTC.

21 George and I expressed great surprise and the 22 great surprise was not that he had recused himself, but the

1 manner in which he had recused himself, that he had not
2 notified anybody in the White House that he was going to do
3 so, that we thought it would have been useful for us to
4 know since we were obviously going to be asked questions
5 about it by the press, and that was basically the gist of
6 it.

7 During the course of that conversation, Roger 8 Altman asked if he should say anything to the president and 9 I think it was George who suggested you might consider
10 writing a letter to the president which he subsequently
11 did, but that was the gist of the conversation as best I
12 recall. It was a fairly short conversation.

13 BY MR. CODINHA:

14 Q Were you able to determine from talking to Altman
15 what new fact he had divined that changed his opinion on 16 recusal?

17 A I think it was his discussion with the employee
18 of The New York Times.

19 Q The fact that an editorial was going to be 20 written in The New York Times was the thing that leaned the 21 balance to recusal?

22 A I don't recall the specific discussion. It was

1 my impression that Altman felt that this would be a way to
2 blunt criticism, at least from The New York Times.

3 Q It would be a way to blunt criticism of Roger 4 Altman from The New York Times?

5 A He didn't indicate that. I think he was 6 concerned about the administration, criticism of the 7 administration.

8 Q Did he indicate by saying that he had gotten --
9 by saying he would recuse himself or step down as CEO, that 10 he had gotten The New York Times to agree they wouldn't 11 write an editorial piece on this issue?

12 A No, he did not.

13 MR. BENNETT: Excuse me. Let him finish his 14 questions before you answer because she has to get them
15 down.

16 THE WITNESS: I'm sorry.

17 BY MR. CODINHA:

18 Q Were you aware before --

19 A Am I answering that question?

20 MR. BENNETT: You just both can't talk at once.

21 THE WITNESS: I agree with you. I don't think I
22 gave a full answer to the question. Would you mind reading

1 it back to me.

2 (The reporter read the record as requested.)

3 THE WITNESS: Let me just fill that answer out.

4 No, he did not, and in fact, it was my impression
5 that the Times was going to write an editorial which they,
6 in fact, did.

7 BY MR. CODINHA:

8 Q Was there any discussion with Mr. Altman or 9 criticism of Mr. Altman for recusing himself to The New 10 York Times because they were going to write an article?

11 A I'm sorry? Say that again.

12 Q Was there any discussion with Mr. Altman or 13 criticism of Mr. Altman that the reason why apparently he 14 was recusing himself was because there was going to be an 15 adverse or stiff editorial by The New York Times?

16 A Not that I recall. The gist and the thrust of 17 the conversation from George Stephanopoulos's and my end
18 was surprise, great surprise at the way he had decided to 19 recuse himself, not the fact he had recused himself. I
20 don't think we -- I don't recall any specific discussion
21 about The New York Times, per se.

22 Q Was anything said in the conversation with

1 Altman, that you were a part of, about the fact that Bill
2 Clinton, the President of the United States, was furious
3 about Altman's recusal?

4 A I don't recall that. I myself had not talked to 5 the president since between when I first learned of it and 6 the phone conversation, which was no more than five
7 minutes. I don't know where the president was that day. I
8 did not know whether George had talked to the president
9 about it or not, so to the best of my recollection, there
10 was no discussion about the president's state of mind, if 11 any, on this subject.

12 MR. BENNETT: May I ask, were you limiting the 13 question to the president being furious about recusal or 14 about the way in which he recused himself?

15 MR. CODINHA: Recusal.

16 BY MR. CODINHA:

17 Q Let me ask the question. Were you aware whether 18 the president was furious -- strike that.

19 Was anything said to Mr. Altman on the phone that 20 the president was furious about the way in which Mr. Altman
21 had recused himself?

22 A No. As I recall, the most that was said -- first

1 of all, I hadn't talked to the president so I had no reason
2 to know what his state of mind would have been or his
3 attitude. I don't recall George telling me anything about
4 the president's attitude, and at most, what I recall him
5 saying was we thought the president would be as surprised
6 as we were in the way it was done, not the fact that he had
7 recused himself.

8 And I think it was in response to that that 9 Altman said what should I do to discuss this with the 10 president, which in my recollection, George suggested he 11 might think about writing him a letter.

12 Q Do you know who Jay Stephens is?

13 A I do now.

14 Q Did you know who Jay Stephens was on or about
15 February 25, 1994?

16 A I don't recall when I first learned about his 17 name and who he was. It was around that time, and it could 18 have been shortly before. It could have been on or about 19 the 25th. It could have been shortly after. I do not 20 recall when I first learned about it. I had never learned
21 of him, however, before that time period.

22 Q Did you understand at or around this time Jay

1 Stephens had been the former United States attorney for the 2 District of Columbia?

3 A I learned that.

4 Q Did you learn at or about this time that he was 5 one of the U.S. attorneys who had been asked to resign when
6 President Clinton came in to office?

7 A It was my understanding that the president had 8 asked all United States attorneys for their resignation and 9 he was one of them and he had been bitterly vocal about it
10 and was considered by many to be a very highly partisan
11 Republican.

12 Q And an outspoken critic of the administration?

13 A That's what I was told.

14 Q Did you become aware at or about the time of 15 February 25th that Mr. Stephens had been hired by the 16 Resolution Trust Corporation to handle the Madison case for 17 the Resolution Trust Corporation?

18 A I did come to learn that. I don't recall when.
19 It was in this time period. Whether before, on or before
20 the 25th or after, I don't recall. But I recall learning
21 that and I recall learning I think it was his firm --
22 Madison, Pillsbury --

1 Q Pillsbury, Madison?

2 A Which I gather is headquartered in San Francisco
3 had been retained through some modified RFP process to 4 assist the general counsel of RTC in conducting its
5 investigation that we've talked about earlier.

6 Q What was your source of information on how that
7 retention had been made?

8 A I don't know. It could have been from Altman.
9 It could have been from people in the White House. It
10 could have been from the general counsel's office. I
11 recall getting that information.

12 Q Did you get it as a request from someone to find
13 out how that had happened?

14 A I don't recall being specifically requested to 15 find out about it. I think I was curious about it and 16 wanted to find out about it, how it had happened.

17 Q Do you recall, in this telephone conversation
18 that you and Mr. Stephanopoulos had with Mr. Altman, a
19 discussion about Jay Stephens occurring?

20 A We could have. As I sit here today, I don't 21 remember a specific discussion, but we may well have,
22 assuming that I knew about it at that time and as I say, I

1 can't place the exact time I learned about Stephens.

2 Q Do you recall there being a discussion with
3 Mr. Altman at that time about whether Mr. Stephens could be 4 gotten rid of as the lawyer that the RTC had hired to 5 handle the case?

6 A At that time meaning on the 25th?

7 Q In this telephone call. I'm asking specifically
8 about the telephone call.

9 A I don't recall that, but as I say, we could have 10 discussed Stephens. I don't recall any discussion about 11 getting rid of him. It was my understanding that his firm
12 had been retained. But again, I want to make clear to you
13 I don't recall when I learned that information.

14 Q Do you remember whether there was any discussion
15 with Mr. Altman on the telephone call with you and 16 Mr. Stephanopoulos about whether Mr. Stephens or his firm
17 could be fired from representing the RTC in representing
18 Madison in this case?

19 A I do not. I do not recall any discussion about 20 that. Again, it was my understanding from the beginning
21 that his firm had been retained and it was nailed down.

22 Q When you say it was your understanding from the

1 beginning, that his firm had been retained from the 2 beginning and it was nailed down, what do you mean by the
3 phrase "it was nailed down"?

4 A Whatever arrangements had been made, whatever
5 factual arrangements had been made between his firm and the 6 RTC were in place.

7 Q Who told you that?

8 A I can't recall. I really don't know.

9 Q Did you understand there were contractual
10 arrangements, there was some kind of written agreement?

11 A No, I didn't understand there was a written
12 agreement per se but -- that the situation was no longer
13 whether RTC was considering retaining him, that the 14 retention had been consummated.

15 Q Do you recall discussing that subject with 16 Mr. Stephanopoulos?

17 A I'm sure I did. I don't recall when, but I'm
18 sure did I.

19 Q Do you recall Mr. Stephanopoulos being angry
20 about the subject that the RTC had retained Jay Stephens,
21 an outspoken critic of Mr. Clinton and the White House, to 22 investigate the Madison case?

1 A I wouldn't use the word "angry." I think that
2 those of us who were focusing on this, including myself,
3 were very concerned because of his highly partisan and
4 outspoken and critical attitude towards the administration.

5 Q How did you show your concern?

6 A I expressed it to George and to others in the 7 administration. It was my understanding that there was 8 nothing that could be done about it. The firm had been 9 retained, and that was it.

10 MR. BENNETT: To put that in context, now that 11 he's absolutely furious, he has to spend Sunday here and 12 right now he's absolutely furious.

13 BY MR. CODINHA:

14 Q What was Mr. Stephanopoulos's response to the 15 fact that Mr. Stephens had been hired?

16 A As I've testified before, very concerned, as was 17 I, very concerned.

18 Q How did he manifest his concern?

19 A He said he was concerned.

20 Q Did he yell?

21 A George does not yell. He's the opposite of 22 Bernie.

1 Q Did he throw anything around the room?

2 A George Stephanopoulos, that is not his demeanor.
3 That is not how he acts. He's a very low-key,
4 even-tempered, calm, cool and collected individual. He
5 doesn't yell and scream and throw things around the room.

6 Q Have you seen Mr. Stephanopoulos blow off steam?

7 A Yes. I remember he and I walking down
8 Independence Avenue in a snowstorm once and we couldn't get 9 a cab, and he was angry we couldn't get a cab. The fact is 10 George was concerned. I was concerned and others were 11 concerned, as I said, because of the highly partisan nature
12 of Mr. Stephens, at least that's been described to me and I
13 gather was the general understanding among people who knew
14 of him or about him.

15 Q Did Mr. Stephanopoulos indicate to you that he 16 had called, prior to this telephone call or after this 17 telephone call, that he had called Josh Steiner at the 18 Treasury Department?

19 A He did not. I don't recall him talking to me
20 about -- let's back up. Call Josh Steiner about what?

21 Q About the subject of both Mr. Altman's recusal
22 and Mr. Stephens's hiring.

1 A I don't recall George telling me about any
2 conversation he had had with Steiner on that subject. I
3 mean, he may well have, but as I sit here today, I don't
4 recall.

5 Q Let me ask you about either one of them. Do you
6 recall Mr. Stephanopoulos telling you he had called
7 Mr. Steiner either before or after this Altman telephone
8 call about the subject of recusal?

9 A As I've testified before, I don't recall his 10 telling me the basis of his knowledge about the recusal and 11 therefore, I don't have a recollection of his telling me
12 that he had talked to Steiner before he, George and I
13 called Altman. I'm not saying he didn't do that. I don't 14 have a recollection of it.

15 Q Did Mr. Stephanopoulos tell you he had, either
16 before or after the telephone call in which he 17 participated, say that he had called Mr. Steiner about the 18 subject of Mr. Stephens's hiring by the RTC?

19 A I don't recall his telling me about any
20 conversation he had with Steiner about Stephens.

21 Q It has been widely reported in the media that 22 Mr. Stephanopoulos did have a conversation with Mr. Steiner

1 about these subjects and that Mr. Stephanopoulos has said
2 that he blew off steam or words to that effect in the 3 media.

4 Have you had any conversations with
5 Mr. Stephanopoulos since that time about any conversation
6 he might have had with Mr. Steiner on these subjects?

7 A Well, as I recall, it was the subject of a Time
8 magazine front page, front cover article I think several 9 weeks -- two weeks, three weeks, I don't recall the exact
10 date of that, in which the photographs and pictures of the 11 president and Stephanopoulos were on there. George and I
12 were the subject of or part of the subjects of the articles
13 about this whole thing. So the answer is yes, I was aware
14 of that.

15 Q Did you have conversations with 16 Mr. Stephanopoulos about that subject?

17 A I think I recall talking to him, having several 18 conversations with him about the pending Time magazine
19 article.

20 Q And what did Mr. Stephanopoulos tell you about 21 the conversation?

22 A I don't think -- I didn't go into much detail

1 about it. I think as I recall, he may have told me that he
 2 talked to Josh Steiner. I didn't know who Josh -- I knew
 3 who he was, but I don't think I ever met him, and I don't
 4 think he -- I don't recall him characterizing his
 5 discussions with Steiner. I think he did tell me he had 6 raised a concern about Jay Stephens, which was in the 7 ordinary course as far as we were concerned. We were all
 8 concerned about Stephens.

9 Q At or around the time of these telephone calls of 10 February 25th, do you recall there being discussions in the 11 White House about having Jay Stephens or Jay Stephens's
 12 firm fired?

13 A Discussions that I was party to?

14 Q Yes.

15 A No.

16 Q Were you present when such discussions were had?

17 A Not that I recall. My very distinct impression
 18 was that his firm had been hired and that they were going
 19 forward. I don't even know when the firm had been hired.
 20 It was my understanding they had been hired or retained
 21 sometime in the past. There were certainly great
 22 expressions of concern around the White House by a number

1 of different people. I don't recall any specific
 2 discussions about trying to get the firm unretained.

3 Q Do you recall there being discussions that 4 someone ought to find out whether it was a done deal in 5 terms of them being retained or whether it was still in 6 play and something could be done?

7 A It was my impression that nothing could be done,
 8 that it was not in play. As I testified before, I'm sure
 9 there were people who raised that as a question. I don't 10 remember any specific conversations about it or any 11 details. I would be surprised if there weren't such 12 discussions or at least questions.

13 Q When you wanted to determine what the process was 14 for the hiring of Jay Stephens or Jay Stephens's firm, how 15 did you attempt to find that information out?

16 A As I said, I've testified to that before.

17 Q Do you remember what steps you took?

18 A I think I've testified before, I talked to -- I
 19 probably talked to -- I may have talked to Altman although 20 I don't recall a specific discussion with Altman. And I
 21 probably talked to either Bernie Nussbaum or other people
 22 in the counsel's office who may have had more information

1 on that than I, but it was my very distinct impression from
2 my inquiries that it was no longer in play, to use your
3 phrase, and that his retention or his firm's retention had
4 been consummated and they were going forward with them.

5 Q After Mr. Altman testified on February 24th, do
6 you recall any occasion on which you reviewed his
7 testimony?

8 A I think that I was sent a transcript of his
9 testimony, and I do not think I read the whole thing.

10 Q Do you recall who sent you a transcript of his
11 testimony?

12 A I don't. As I recall, I think Neil Eggleston
13 from the counsel's office had been monitoring the hearing.
14 He may have sent it to me. It may have been the 15 legislative office -- our legislative office, which is 16 headed by Pat Griffin, who also monitors congressional 17 matters that pertain -- if the White House has interest in 18 and they often get transcripts. It may have been sent down
19 as a matter of routine which stuff like that was sent to my 20 office.

21 Q For what purpose was it sent to your office, if 22 you know?

1 A Basically a matter of routine. Griffin knew
2 that -- and people in his office, the legislative office
3 knew that I was particularly involved with 4 Madison/Whitewater matters and as a matter of routine they
5 would send it down to me. I was also deputy chief of 6 staff. They would send a lot of stuff to me.

7 Q When you reviewed the testimony -- did you review
8 any part of the testimony?

9 A I think I reviewed a very small part of it. It's 10 my recollection I had already read press accounts of the 11 pertinent parts of the testimony and it was a fairly
12 lengthy document and given the press of time, I don't think 13 I reviewed it other than maybe looked at the cover page and 14 the first few pages.

15 Q Did you become aware of meetings at the White
16 House that were taking place which related to the accuracy
17 of Mr. Altman's testimony?

18 A I have subsequently become aware of those. At 19 the time -- the answer is I was not aware at the time any 20 such meetings, in fact, occurred, assuming that they did
21 occur, I was not aware of them. I did become aware that 22 Mr. Altman sent two or three or four letters to Senate

1 Banking clarifying certain aspects of his testimony. I
2 received copies of those letters. I was not involved in
3 the drafting of those letters and I don't know who was
4 involved. I assume Treasury people and Altman, but I don't
5 know who beyond that was involved.

6 Q What was the purpose of you receiving copies of 7 those letters, if you know?

8 A Again, I was very involved in Whitewater,
9 although to a much lesser extent during this time period
10 and those things routinely came to my office.

11 Q Did you read them when they came in?

12 A I did.

13 Q Did you discuss them with anyone else as to their 14 accuracy?

15 A I don't think I did. I assumed that they had 16 originated with Altman and Treasury people.

17 Q And these letters were on March 2nd, March 3rd,
18 March 11th, and March 21st or approximately those dates?

19 A Those are your dates.

20 Q Did it surprise you when you received these 21 letters that this expansion of testimony was requiring a
22 letter writing campaign by Mr. Altman?

1 A I wasn't surprised or unsurprised. It's not
2 unusual sometimes for people to review their testimony and
3 make certain clarifications.

4 Q When you read the letters -- when you read the
5 letter of March 2nd, did you read it at or about the time
6 it was sent, if you can recall?

7 A Probably.

8 MR. BENNETT: Don't guess. Don't guess.

9 THE WITNESS: There's always some delay when
10 stuff circulates through the White House system. I don't 11 know when I received that letter. I recall receiving three 12 or four letters. It was my understanding that I received
13 all of the letters that was sent out. They were also 14 fairly widely reported in the news media, as I recall.

15 BY MR. CODINHA:

16 Q Do you recall, when you read the letter of March
17 2nd of 1994, whether you believed it was accurate when you
18 read it?

19 A You'd have to let me look at the letter.

20 Q I didn't mean to hold it from you. I'm looking 21 at page 336 of the hearing before the Committee on Banking,
22 Housing and Urban Affairs, United States Senate, which was

1 held on February 24, 1994 and page 336.

2 (Witness conferred with counsel.)

3 A What's your question?

4 Q My question is when you read that letter which
5 appears on page 336 at or about the time it was sent, did
6 you believe it was accurate?

7 A Well, I don't know what was in his knowledge or 8 not in his knowledge. I had no reason to believe it was 9 not -- as I recall, I had no reason to believe it was not
10 accurate.

11 Q I'd like to turn your attention to page 337, the 12 letter of March 3rd, 1994. I'd like you to read that.

13 A I had no reason to believe that it was incorrect.

14 Q My term actually was whether it was accurate or 15 inaccurate. Did you believe it was accurate?

16 (Witness conferred with counsel.)

17 A I think I've testified before that there was no
18 discussion, as I recall, no discussion of the substance of 19 the civil investigation, and I had no reason to believe
20 that that letter was inaccurate.

21 Q I'd like to show you the letter on page 338 of 22 March 11, 1994. Would you read that.

1 A The March 11th letter?

2 Q The March 11th letter, yes.

3 A I think I've testified -- my testimony is 4 consistent with that letter. I had no reason to believe --
5 I think that letter is accurate.

6 MR. BENNETT: Harold, keep up your voice, please.

7 THE WITNESS: My prior testimony, I think, is 8 consistent with that letter. When we discussed the 9 meeting -- the short meeting that I had, and maybe Maggie
10 Williams, with Altman and I had no reason to believe -- I
11 think that letter is accurate.

12 BY MR. CODINHA:

13 Q And I'd like to ask you about the letter which 14 appears on page 339, the letter of March 21, 1994 and I'd 15 ask you the same question. Do you believe that letter is 16 accurate?

17 MR. BENNETT: When you say "accurate," the 18 essence of the letter?

19 MR. CODINHA: No, the information contained in 20 the letter, is it accurate?

21 MR. BENNETT: Do you want us to go line by line,
22 because there are things which he could not possibly know

1 about.

2 MR. CODINHA: The things that he knows about.

3 MR. BENNETT: Things that he knows about, all

4 right.

5 THE WITNESS: But that doesn't answer the
6 question because my answer would imply that I know about
7 everything in this letter, so if you want a line by line,
8 I'll do a line by line.

9 MR. BENNETT: No, please don't do that. Which 10 letter are we talking about?

11 THE WITNESS: It says here in the March 11, 1994
12 for obvious reasons, I've been reviewing all of my files
13 and other information which possibly could refer to this 14 matter. I have no idea whether he was accurate. I have no
15 idea whether that's accurate or not.

16 BY MR. CODINHA:

17 Q In that same letter, the March 11 letter, he says
18 at neither meeting, which he's referring to the meetings
19 above, did he seek advice nor was it given.

20 Did you think that was accurate, that Mr. Altman
21 neither sought advice nor was given advice?

22 A You're looking at the March 11th letter?

1 Q I just picked March 11th at random, yes.

2 A Which meetings -- let me see what meetings he's
3 referring to. In my view, that was accurate. He didn't
4 seek advice. He informed us. We informed him.

5 Q Did you think he was given advice?

6 A No.

7 Q You don't believe that the White House opining
8 that they didn't believe he needed to recuse himself was 9 giving him advice?

10 A It wasn't giving him advice. It was a matter of 11 opinion, but the critical aspect of that meeting in my view
12 was that it was entirely up to him as to whether or not he 13 was going to recuse himself.

14 Q And in the two previous letters, the letter of 15 March 2nd and the letter of March 3rd, where he says in the 16 letter of March 2 "as I indicated, no nonpublic information
17 was provided at that meeting on any aspect of the Madison
18 Guaranty matter."

19 Did you believe that was accurate?

20 A I had no reason to believe it was not accurate.

21 Q Did you believe that the information that the RTC
22 would not be able to prepare the case to the satisfaction

1 of the general counsel at the RTC before the statute of
2 limitations would run on the Madison case was a matter of
3 public record?

4 A I had no reason to believe that it wasn't. I
5 don't think -- I don't think it was the subject of press
6 accounts, but I had no reason to believe it was a
7 confidential, nonpublic matter.

8 Q Was there any reason you believed that it was 9 public?

10 A No, but that doesn't answer the whole question.

11 MR. BENNETT: When you say "public," do you mean
12 outside of the RTC, if Senator D'Amato had the
13 information?

14 BY MR. CODINHA:

15 Q Mr. Altman is saying in his letter "as I
16 indicated, no nonpublic information was provided at that 17 meeting on any aspect of the Madison Guaranty matter."

18 Now that's what Mr. Altman is saying, it's not 19 what I'm saying.

20 MR. BENNETT: But isn't Mr. Altman in the best
21 position to make that statement. You're sort of asking my 22 client -- go ahead.

1 BY MR. CODINHA:

2 Q I want to know whether you believed that that
3 piece of information, that the RTC's general counsel would
4 not be able to prepare their case, according to Mr. Altman
5 before the statute of limitations had run, was a matter of
6 public record?

7 A Well, I don't know what you mean by "public
8 record." I was not on the impression that this was a
9 confidential, secret piece of information. He had already 10 shared it with us.

11 Q As far as you knew, was that the -- as far as you
12 knew who knew about that, the people at the White House
13 meeting?

14 A I didn't know who knew.

15 MR. BENNETT: I don't think that's fair because 16 it's in the record that point one of the talking points was 17 eight Republican senators wanted a tolling agreement. Why
18 would you want a tolling agreement unless there was some 19 knowledge outside of RTC on these matters?

20 MR. CHERTOFF: Let's not have the argument
21 between counsel. The hour is late.

22 BY MR. CODINHA:

1 Q Let me ask the questions. As far as you knew at 2 the time that the March 2, 1994 letter was written and you
3 reviewed it, and this reflected back on the February 2nd
4 meeting, had Mr. Altman announced publicly that he was not
5 going to be the one who made the decision as to the Madison
6 case?

7 A Could you repeat the question.

8 MR. CODINHA: Would you read the question back.
9 (The reporter read the record as requested.)

10 THE WITNESS: I don't think Mr. Altman -- I don't 11 recall Mr. Altman, until February 25th, I don't recall any 12 statement by Mr. Altman that I knew of that he wasn't going
13 to make a decision in the Madison case. What Mr. Altman
14 said, as I recall, in the February 2nd meeting was that he
15 was going to follow the normal course and that he intended
16 to follow the recommendation of the general counsel with 17 respect to that investigation and any recommendation
18 general counsel might make.

19 I didn't press him on it. I assumed if he 20 thought it was a totally unreasonable recommendation, he 21 might take a look at it but if it was in the normal course,
22 that he intended to follow that recommendation, point one.

190

1 Point two is -- can I see the letter again?

2 BY MR. CODINHA:

3 Q I think it's on page 336, 337 or 338.

4 A Bear with me a minute.

5 Q And this refers to the March 2nd letter.

6 A The March 2nd letter?

7 Q The March 2nd letter.

8 A As I recall, you specifically asked me whether 9 the information --

10 MR. BENNETT: I don't think we were talking about 11 the March 2nd letter.

12 MR. CHERTOFF: I believe it was March 11th.

13 BY MR. CODINHA:

14 Q No, actually I was asking about March 2nd because 15 the phrase I read was "as I indicated, no nonpublic
16 information was provided at that meeting on any aspect of 17 Madison Guaranty."

18 A Mr. Altman did not say, to the best of my 19 recollection, he never -- he did not say during the course
20 of that meeting, or afterwards, to me certainly and not to 21 anybody in that meeting, that the information that he was 22 providing was confidential or not public or that we could

1 not discuss it with anyone else, so I had no reason to
2 believe that it was not -- I'm trying not to use too many
3 double negatives -- I had no reason to believe that it was 4 not for public consumption.

5 Does that mean we were going to hand it to the 6 public? No, but he did not indicate to me or anyone else
7 in the meeting or me after that meeting that it was a of 8 confidential, nonpublic nature so therefore, I had no
9 reason to believe that this letter was other than accurate.

0 Q I'd like to turn your attention to Exhibit X --

1 MR. BENNETT: Excuse me.

2 (Witness conferred with counsel.)

3 BY MR. CODINHA:

4 Q I'd like to show you exhibit X197 and 198. It's 5 a fax sheet from the Secretary of the Treasury to
6 distribution dated 3/4/94, and it contains Mr. Altman's
7 letter of March 3, 1994. I'd like you to focus on the 8 cover page, the distribution list, and you are listed as 9 one of the people who are on the distribution list.

0 Have you had a chance to review it?

1 A This is the same letter we've been talking about.

2 Q But I want to ask you a question about -- I'm

1 just directing your attention to the front fax cover page.

2 Do you know how the -- strike that.

3 The people who are listed on that page are
4 Dee Dee Myers, Mark Gearan, David Gergen, George
5 Stephanopoulos, Harold Ickes and Mack McLarty?

6 A Yes.

7 Q And do you know how that particular distribution
8 list was developed?

9 A I don't.

0 Q Did you instruct Mr. Altman those are the people
1 who should be contacted?

2 A I don't recall that I did. I'm confident that I
3 did not. I have no recollection of talking to him about
4 that distribution list. In fact, I don't recall ever
5 seeing it until you've shown it to me today.

6 Q Do you recall creating a memo on or around March
7 1st, which was a confidential memo for the First Lady of 8 the United States that dealt with the Resolution Trust
9 Corporation?

0 A I may have. I don't recall the specifics.

1 Q Do you recall -- let me show you X1202. Does
2 that refresh your memory as to whether you created such a

1 memorandum?

2 A It looks as if I may have. I would point out --
3 it looks like a draft to me for the following reasons.
4 Typically, memorandum -- the final memorandum in the White
5 House to members of the White House staff and certainly to 6 the president and first lady typically -- not invariably --
7 but typically they are printed on White House stationery
8 that has "the White House" at the top. And typically, when 9 I send memos, I put my initials, HI, with a circle around
10 it after my last name and this does not have it which leads 11 me to believe that may be a draft. I'm not saying this 12 wasn't sent. It leads me to believe that this was a draft,
13 not a final.

14 Q Does that refresh your memory as to whether at 15 least a draft of such a document was created?

16 A As I sit here today, I don't recall specifically
17 creating a draft, but this certainly appears to be a draft.

18 Q Do you know the purpose, why such a memorandum
19 would be created?

20 A Assuming it was created and assuming it was, in 21 fact, sent to the first lady, I think the purpose was to 22 inform her about what was stated in the body of the memo.

194

1 Q This memo, as it has been supplied to us, and
2 you're looking at 1202 and 1203, indicates that there have
3 been heavy redactions on this memo, does it not, even on 4 the first page, it appears that there are redacted items?

5 A I don't know how you -- I'll take your word for 6 it. I don't know how you tell that.

7 Q There's a paragraph that appears in the middle of 8 the page and it looks like there's room above it and it
9 looks like there's room below it.

10 A Could be, but it could be a draft that was 11 mistyped.

12 Q And the top of the page has stamped on it -- I'm
13 sorry, not on your copy -- I'll show you X1200 and 1201 --

14 MR. BENNETT: I think in fairness to the witness,
15 though, even though you sort of had a look of disbelief,
16 the one you showed him doesn't have the reference redacted
17 on it whereas the one you've just showed him now does.

18 MR. CODINHA: I agree and that's why I supplied
19 another one to him.

20 BY MR. CODINHA:

21 Q I'd like to show you X1200 and 1201. And at the 22 top of X1200, does that appear to be a redacted version?

1 A It says so at the top.

2 MR. BENNETT: Let me, in fairness to you, though,
3 point out that page 2, which you hadn't looked at, of the 4 one you gave him does say "redacted" on the top.

5 MR. CODINHA: I'm now going to go to page 2 --

6 MR. BENNETT: I know, but I didn't --

7 BY MR. CODINHA:

8 Q I want you to look now at page 2 --

9 A Which exhibit?

0 Q You can look at any of them?

1 MR. BENNETT: Can we work with the one that says
2 redacted on both pages.

3 BY MR. CODINHA:

4 Q That's X1201 and does that indicate it says
5 "redacted (25 pages)"?

6 A It does.

7 Q Does that indicate to you this is a heavily
8 redacted document?

9 MR. BENNETT: It speaks for itself.

0 BY MR. CODINHA:

1 Q Do you recall writing 25 pages on the subject of
2 the Resolution Trust Corporation to the first lady?

1 A I do not and I doubt that I did.

2 Q When you say you doubt that you did, do you
3 believe that someone else acting on your instructions wrote
4 a 25-page memo?

5 A It's hard for me to tell since you say it's 6 heavily redacted. There's a blank page, other than the 7 word "redacted" and the handwritten page, "(25 pages)."

8 MR. BENNETT: Just so it will avoid confusion,
9 there could have been attachments or things of that kind.
10 I think to imply that he wrote a 25-page memo is not
11 accurate.

12 THE WITNESS: To further point out, I don't think
13 there's anything in here in the documents you've shown me
14 that indicates in one way or the other that I wrote a memo.

15 BY MR. CODINHA:

16 Q The only thing I would say -- does it say on 17 X1200 it is a "memorandum, confidential, to the First Lady
18 from Harold Ickes dated March 1, 1994 re: the Resolution
19 Trust Corporation." Have I read that correctly?

20 MR. BENNETT: His only point --

21 MR. CODINHA: No.

22 BY MR. CODINHA:

1 Q Have I read that correctly?

2 A Yes, you've read that, but your reading it
3 doesn't mean anything in the context of which we're
4 discussing it. This memorandum is a transmittal
5 memorandum. X001200 is a transmittal memorandum.

6 Q How can you tell that?

7 A It may not even be a transmittal memorandum.

8 Q First of all, how can you determine from looking 9 at the page that it's a transmittal memorandum?

10 A You're exactly right. I can't. And the only
11 reason I said that is because this was attached to it --

12 Q This being X1201 which is redacted 25 pages?

13 A Yes. And I assume, and probably incorrectly,
14 that this 1201 was attached to 1200. Therefore, I
15 concluded it was a transmittal memorandum and I'm in 16 error. I don't know whether it was or wasn't.

17 Q Thank you, sir.

18 MR. CODINHA: I think at this time I've concluded
19 my inquiry. You may inquire, sir. Let's go off the record
20 for a moment. Do we want to take five minutes because we 21 have to just shift.

22 (Discussion off the record.)

1 (Recess.)

2 EXAMINATION

3 BY MR. CHERTOFF:

4 Q We're going to proceed. Just to remind you, I'm
5 Michael Chertoff. I'm special counsel on the Republican
6 side of this inquiry. Sitting next to me is Joe
7 Braunreuther, who's my deputy special counsel.

8 Mr. Ickes, have you talked to anybody about the 9 contacts with the Treasury issue after March 4th other than 10 your attorney?

11 A I'm sure I have. I couldn't tell you who.

12 MR. BENNETT: Keep your voice up, Harold.

13 BY MR. CHERTOFF:

14 Q Other than with members of the press?

15 A Primarily with members of the press, but I'm sure
16 I've talked to others as well.

17 Q Have you talked to Ms. Williams about it?

18 A I don't recall talking to her at all about the 19 context.

20 Q Have you talked to Mr. Stephanopoulos?

21 A Probably.

22 Q What did you talk to him about?

1 A Just about the process that was actually going
2 forward, how the hearings were going to go forward, if 3 there were going to be hearings, if so, when.

4 Q Did you talk about your recollection of the 5 events that had occurred on February 2nd?

6 A You're talking about conversations with him after 7 March 4th?

8 Q Correct.

9 A I don't recall talking to him after March 4th
0 about that. I think I talked to him after the February 2nd
1 meeting.

2 Q When did you speak to him, after the February 2nd
3 meeting, about the February 2nd meeting?

4 A I don't recall.

5 Q What did you say to him?

6 A I don't recall what I said to him. I probably 7 related to him what had happened.

8 Q Was this before Mr. Altman had testified on 9 February 24th?

10 A I think it was. As I say, I don't recall a
11 specific time or date, but I'm fairly confident it occurred
12 prior to that testimony.

1 Q And what was the context in which you related
2 this thing?

3 A When you say "context," I'm not sure what you
4 mean.

5 Q Was it at a Whitewater response group meeting?

6 A I don't recall. As I said before, I don't recall
7 when or where the conversation took place.

8 Q Do you recall anything that he said to you?

9 A I don't.

10 Q Did you talk to Mr. Nussbaum about the February
11 2nd meeting after March 4th?

12 A After March 4th?

13 Q Correct.

14 MR. BENNETT: What's March 4th?

15 MR. CHERTOFF: March 4th was the day that 16 subpoenas were served or announced by Mr. Fiske.

17 THE WITNESS: I don't recall if I did or not. I
18 don't recall that I did. I may have, but I don't recall
19 that I did. I think any conversation I had with Nussbaum
20 probably occurred prior to the testimony of Mr. Altman
21 before Senate Banking. There wasn't a lot to discuss about
22 it.

1 BY MR. CHERTOFF:

2 Q What about Mr. Eggleston, did you talk a lot
3 about it with Mr. Eggleston about the February 2nd meeting
4 after March 4th?

5 MR. BENNETT: These are -- Counsel, isn't there a
6 privilege on some of this stuff?

7 BY MR. CHERTOFF:

8 Q Was Mr. Eggleston acting as your personal counsel
9 in respect to this inquiry?

10 A As my personal counsel?

11 Q Correct.

12 A He's White House counsel.

13 MR. CHERTOFF: I don't see the privilege. Are 14 you asserting the privilege?

15 MR. BENNETT: We understand the advice of White
16 House counsel or discussions of White House counsel with 17 any of the individuals you're not permitted to go into.
18 You can take that up with White House counsel. I'm not 19 going to debate what is or is not privileged but as a
20 practical matter, I'm going to let him answer at least that 21 last question. I don't want to make more of this than it
22 is.

1 BY MR. CHERTOFF:

2 Q Did you have conversations with Mr. Eggleston
3 after March 4th concerning the February 2nd meeting?

4 A I don't recall that I did. He had participated
5 in the February 2nd meeting. There wasn't a lot to discuss
6 about it.

7 Q Did you receive any requests from Mr. Fiske not
8 to discuss the subject matter of your testimony with other
9 people?

10 A Whatever he sent me, he sent me. I don't recall
11 the specifics of it.

12 Q Do you recall feeling under any obligation or 13 under any injunction -- I don't mean legally -- but under 14 any instruction not to talk about the subject matter of 15 your grand jury testimony with anybody else?

16 A Instruction from whom?

17 Q Mr. Fiske.

18 A Whatever he sent me, he sent me. I don't recall
19 the specifics of what he sent me. If you have a specific 20 document, I'll be glad to look at it.

21 Q Putting aside what he sent you, did you feel
22 yourself restricted in your conversations about the subject

1 matter of your grand jury testimony with anybody else other
2 than your counsel?

3 A If Mr. Fiske instructed me to that effect, then I
4 think I followed those instructions. I don't recall
5 specifically what he instructed. If you have a document,
6 I'll be glad to look at it.

7 Q As you sit here, you don't recall any restriction
8 on your ability to discuss the subject matter of your 9 testimony with anybody else other than your attorneys?

10 A It was my general practice not to discuss --

11 MR. BENNETT: I instructed him not to discuss his 12 grand jury testimony with anybody.

13 BY MR. CHERTOFF:

14 Q Other than your counsel's instruction, you're not 15 aware of any instruction or request from Mr. Fiske on that 16 as you sit here today?

17 A As I sit here today, but it was my general
18 practice not to have discussions about it.

19 (Witness conferred with counsel.)

20 Q Your testimony is in 1993, other than for a very 21 short period of time at the end of January or beginning of 22 February, you were not actually working at the White House;

1 correct?

2 A That's correct.

3 Q Were you in touch with White House personnel
4 advising then informally about matters?

5 A On occasion.

6 Q During the year 1993, did you have any 7 discussions with anybody at the White House concerning the 8 subject of Madison or Whitewater?

9 A Not that I recall. In my view, it was a very
10 complex matter that was very hard to understand and I
11 didn't have time to follow it closely and I don't recall
12 any specific discussions during 1993 about 13 Madison/Whitewater.

14 Q You testified on direct examination regarding
15 when you first learned or heard of the September 29th, 1993
16 meeting between the White House and Treasury.

17 Let me ask you, did you learn about that before
18 Mr. Altman testified on February 24th.

19 MR. BENNETT: I'm sorry, could you go a little 20 slower? You speak very fast, Michael.

21 MR. CHERTOFF: Not compared to Mr. Nussbaum, but 22 let me go slower.

1 MR. BENNETT: I know.

2 BY MR. CHERTOFF:

3 Q Let me direct your attention to when you first
4 learned about the September 29th, 1993 meeting. Did you
5 learn about that meeting first in 1994?

6 A Yes. I've testified when I learned about it and 7 I stand by that testimony.

8 Q Let me ask you because you were a little
9 ambiguous. Did you learn about it before Mr. Altman
10 testified on February 24th?

11 A About the September '93 meeting?

12 Q Yes.

13 A I think there was confusion as to whether it was 14 '92 or '93. It was my recollection it was the '93
15 meeting.

16 Q I'm talking about the September '93 meeting. Did
17 you learn about that meeting having occurred before
18 Mr. Altman testified on February 24th?

19 A I don't specifically recall. I think I learned
20 about it before the late February testimony by Altman, but 21 I don't have a specific recollection.

22 Q Did you learn about the October 14th, 1993

206

1 meeting before Mr. Altman testified on February 24th?

2 A Same answer. I recall learning about both of 3 those meetings, if not exactly the same time, approximately 4 the same time.

5 Q Were you surprised when you first learned from 6 someone in the White House that there might have been some 7 meetings between Treasury and White House personnel which
8 Mr. Altman had not reported in his February 24th testimony?

9 A I don't know if I was surprised or not. I don't
10 recall being necessarily surprised. I didn't watch -- as I
11 testified, I did not watch those hearings.

12 Q Does that help you to recall that you had heard
13 of the September and October meetings before someone in the 14 White House raised the question of whether it had been 15 accurately reported by Mr. Altman in his testimony?

16 A There was some question about that.

17 MR. BENNETT: In fairness to him, if someone has 18 told you that, I'd like you to refresh his recollection. I
19 mean, you don't have to --

20 MR. CHERTOFF: I'm just trying to ascertain 21 because Mr. Ickes was a little uncertain about when he 22 learned it.

1 BY MR. CHERTOFF:

2 Q You recall there were questions raised at the
3 White House very early March regarding whether Mr. Altman
4 had fully disclosed the number of meetings?

5 A Yes.

6 Q You recall hearing about that?

7 A I recall hearing about it and I recall it being
8 discussed. I couldn't give you time, place or date.

9 Q At the time you heard about it, were you -- were 10 you surprised to hear there had been other meetings, or 11 were you already aware there had been other meetings?

12 A I don't recall.

13 Q Did Beth Nolan participate in the Whitewater
14 response group before the February 2nd, 1994 meeting?

15 A It's my recollection that she did. As I've 16 testified earlier, I don't think that she was a regular 17 participant, but I recall her in some of those earlier
18 meetings.

19 Q In your capacity, after January 1, 1994, as the 20 person who was coordinating this Whitewater response
21 effort, did you have occasion to have conversations with 22 Mr. David Kendall?

1 A During what period of time?

2 Q After January 1, 1994.

3 A I had a number of conversations with Mr. Kendall.

4 Q And you understood Mr. Kendall to be representing
5 the president in his personal capacity; correct?

6 A That was my understanding.

7 Q And did you communicate to Mr. Kendall
8 information that you had learned in the course of meetings
9 with the Whitewater response group?

10 A Yes.

11 Q Did he make requests of you?

12 A Not that I recall, but there was an exchange of
13 information.

14 Q Did he ever attend a meeting of the response
15 group?

16 A No, I don't think that Mr. Kendall did. I don't 17 recall his ever attending it.

18 Q Did you ever attend a meeting with Mr. Kendall at 19 which anybody else -- did you ever have a face-to-face
20 meeting with Mr. Kendall?

21 A Did I?

22 Q Yes.

1 MR. BENNETT: Does this have to do with
2 contacts?

3 MR. CHERTOFF: Yes, after January 1, 1994.

4 MR. BENNETT: About contacts?

5 BY MR. CHERTOFF:

6 Q Let me ask you first, did you ever have a
7 face-to-face meeting? I'm not asking what the subject
8 matter was. I'm asking if you had a meeting face to face.

9 A Did I have a meeting with Mr. Kendall, yes.

10 Q Face to face after January 1?

11 A The answer is yes.

12 Q Was Mr. Nussbaum ever present during a meeting
13 you had with Mr. Kendall after January 1, 1994?

14 A Yes.

15 Q Was Mr. Lindsey ever present at a meeting you had 16 with Mr. Kendall after January 1, 1994?

17 A I don't recall specifically, but I'm pretty sure
18 probably, yes.

19 Q Was Ms. Williams ever present at a meeting that 20 you had with Mr. Kendall after January 1, 1994?

21 A Yes.

22 Q Did the --

1 A But I want to make clear for the record we're not
2 talking about the same meeting. You're using the phrase "a
3 meeting."

4 Q At any meeting.

5 A Okay. Fine.

6 Q Can you estimate during the month of January how 7 many times you would have met with Mr. Kendall in that 8 month?

9 A In the month of January?

10 Q Yes.

11 A I can't give you an accurate estimate. It was a
12 number of times.

13 Q Did you meet with Mr. Kendall in February of 14 1994?

15 A Yes.

16 Q Now, let me direct your attention to your
17 testimony concerning discussions on the issue of Whitewater
18 that you had with Mr. Altman. Did all these discussions
19 occur on the occasions of having meetings with respect to 20 the health care initiative?

21 A Let's go down -- the phrase all of these 22 discussions, I can't deal with that. You'll have to do it

1 discussion by discussion.

2 Q Let me begin with January 1, 1994. During the
3 month of January, do you recall having had a discussion
4 with Mr. Altman concerning the subject of Whitewater?

5 A Not other than what I've testified to before.

6 Q How many times do you recall having discussed the 7 subject of Whitewater with Mr. Altman in January 1994?

8 A I don't have anything to add to my prior
9 testimony.

10 Q Were these discussions that you had in the 11 context of health care meetings, either before meetings or 12 during breaks in the meetings?

13 A When you talk about -- I'm not sure I testified
14 that I had any discussions but to the extent I had
15 discussions, I think they were basically, I think I
16 testified they were hallway discussions.

17 Q Can you recall any opinion or view Mr. Altman
18 expressed to you in January 1994 regarding Whitewater?

19 A Any opinion?

20 Q Yes.

21 A I think that I've testified -- as I've testified
22 before, the meetings I had with him during that period of

212

1 time, to the best of my recollection, were very short and
2 basically hallway meetings and how do you think things are
3 going-type meetings.

4 Q How did he think things were going?

5 A As I've testified before, no one thought it was 6 going well.

7 Q I'm not asking you what everyone thought. I'm
8 asking you specifically what opinions did Mr. Altman
9 express regarding how things were going?

10 A To the extent he expressed an opinion --

11 MR. BENNETT: Are we talking about the press
12 reaction?

13 MR. CHERTOFF: I'm talking about conversations in 14 January in the hallway with Mr. Altman concerning his view
15 of how things were going, whatever that view may be.

16 BY MR. CHERTOFF:

17 Q What did he say to you?

18 MR. BENNETT: How things were going from what 19 perspective?

20 MR. CHERTOFF: Mr. Bennett, I'm only asking what 21 Mr. Altman said, whatever he said about Whitewater in any 22 way, shape or form.

1 (Witness conferred with counsel.)

2 MR. BENNETT: Just limit your remarks to contacts
3 and go ahead.

4 MR. CHERTOFF: When you're giving the witness
5 that instruction, you're suggesting to the witness that 6 some comments by Mr. Altman concerning Whitewater should 7 not be reported by the witness in January 1994.

8 MR. BENNETT: I'm not saying that at all. What
9 I'm saying is I think you should limit it to communications
10 between officials of the White House and the Department of 11 the Treasury relating to the Whitewater Development
12 Corporation, the Madison Guaranty Savings & Loan.

13 MR. CHERTOFF: Let me be clear for the record,
14 Mr. Bennett. The subject matter is the propriety of those 15 contacts. The critical issue is the state of mind of 16 Mr. Altman and the state of mind of Mr. Ickes, particularly 17 as it bears upon the discussion of February 2.

18 In order to plumb that state of mind, it's 19 important to know what Mr. Altman's state of opinion was 20 concerning the Whitewater matter because that might bear on 21 the issue of recusal, which is, as your client has 22 testified, he discussed in the contact with a Treasury

1 official. I do not believe, therefore, that it is possible
2 to respond to the question that I've posed other than that
3 to convey anything that Mr. Altman said in January of 1994
4 about Whitewater.

5 MR. BENNETT: Can you be specific with your
6 questions, then? Maybe my problem is the form of your
7 questions, because what I don't want is for you to have one
8 thing in mind and for my client to have another thing in 9 mind how things are going.

10 MR. CHERTOFF: I'll rephrase the question.

11 MR. BENNETT: And nobody has asked Mr. Ickes what 12 he thought of the propriety of this anyway, so if that's 13 what we're getting at, why in eight hours don't we ask the 14 question?

15 MR. CHERTOFF: I can only ask the questions that 16 come to mind.

17 MR. BENNETT: You ask the questions that come to 18 mind.

19 BY MR. CHERTOFF:

20 Q I'm directing your attention to January 1994, and 21 I'm directing your attention to hallway discussions you
22 have testified that you had with Mr. Altman. In those

1 discussions, tell us, what did Mr. Altman say concerning
2 the subject of Whitewater or Madison.

3 A To the extent that he said anything, it is my
4 recollection that my discussions with him were how do you
5 think things are going from public/press point of view and 6 to the extent that he responded to those questions, it's my 7 recollection he did not think things were going
8 particularly well.

9 Q Did he express a concern that the degree of 10 attention the White House had to pay to Whitewater was 11 distracting from the need to focus on other types of 12 issues?

13 A I don't recall him saying that specifically, but 14 obviously those of us who are involved in this were 15 concerned about the intensity and the amount of press
16 inquiries, the intensity of press inquiries and we were 17 concerned that this would have an effect on the White House
18 itself and on the president's agenda.

19 Q Did you express that view to Mr. Altman?

20 A Yes, I did.

21 Q Did you have any conversations with Maggie
22 Williams in January 1994 in which she expressed a concern

1 that the amount of attention being paid to Whitewater at 2 the White House was distracting from things the president
3 wanted to do in other areas?

4 MR. BENNETT: I'm going to object to that because 5 that has nothing to do with context and I'm going to 6 instruct him not to answer.

7 BY MR. CHERTOFF:

8 Q Did you express to Ms. Williams the view that the 9 degree of attention being paid to Whitewater and the White
10 House was distracting from other issues that should be 11 pursued by the White House?

12 MR. BENNETT: Same objection.

13 MR. CHERTOFF: Just for the record, again, we're 14 discussing conversations between people who are 15 participating in a contact within a period of less than or 16 approximately a month or less, which goes to the state of 17 mind of the participants.

18 MR. BENNETT: I have no objection to you asking
19 him if he had conversations with Ms. Williams about 20 contacts with the -- if the resolution had been drafted
21 broader, then I think -- but you can't broaden the
22 resolution.

1 MR. CHERTOFF: I'm not broadening the
2 resolution. I want to make clear the theory under which
3 I'm asking the question so if it's necessary to do this
4 again, you've had a fair understanding of what my position
5 is.

6 I'm asking the witness to testify about
7 conversations which directly reflect the state of mind of 8 participants who within a period of one month or less are 9 going to have a discussion with a Treasury official
10 concerning the matter of Whitewater. Since the issue is 11 not merely whether the contacts occurred but the intent of 12 the participants, whether the intent was improper or not,
13 knowing what was in their state of mind within the month
14 preceding the contact is directly relevant and pertinent to 15 the subject matter of the inquiry.

16 Now I'm going to ask --

17 MR. BENNETT: If I understand, and I'm not sure I
18 do, your predicate is you might as well rip up this 19 resolution because there is no question that you can't ask
20 him about any conversation he had with anybody at the White
21 House, but let me ask him.

22 (Witness conferred with counsel.)

1 MR. BENNETT: Go ahead.

2 MR. CHERTOFF: Do you need the question reread?

3 MR. BENNETT: On the state of mind, you thought
4 those people didn't even know what the subject matter was
5 so I don't understand your predicate. Never mind. Go
6 ahead. Just answer the question.

7 MR. CHERTOFF: Read the question.

8 THE WITNESS: She's going to read it back. He 9 talks fast and asks convoluted questions.

10 MR. BENNETT: No comments.

11 (The reporter read the record as requested.)

12 THE WITNESS: Did I express that?

13 BY MR. CHERTOFF:

14 Q Yes.

15 A I expressed -- I recall talking to Ms. Williams
16 on several occasions and expressing the view that the 17 number of press inquiries and the intensity of the press
18 scrutiny of Madison/Whitewater, one, diverted some 19 attention, but more importantly, I was concerned with, as 20 were others, that they would divert attention from the 21 president's basic agenda.

22 Q What was her response?

1 A I don't recall her specific response. In
2 general, I think that she was in agreement with that view.

3 Q Did you ever become aware of any conversation
4 Ms. Williams had with Mr. Altman concerning the subject of
5 Whitewater?

6 A What period of time?

7 Q In December of 1993 or January of 1994, meaning
8 that's when the discussion took place.

9 A Did I learn about a discussion that she had with 10 Altman?

11 Q Concerning --

12 MR. BENNETT: Other than our preparation of him?

13 BY MR. CHERTOFF:

14 Q Other than from counsel concerning the subject of 15 Whitewater or Madison.

16 A Not that I recall.

17 Q In January 1994, did you learn of a meeting
18 between Secretary Bentsen and George Stephanopoulos
19 regarding the subject of Whitewater?

20 A Did I learn of it in January or did I learn that 21 the meeting occurred in January?

22 Q Did you learn of a January meeting during the 220

1 month of January?

2 A Let me make sure I understand. During the month
3 of January, did I learn of a meeting during January?

4 Q Between Mr. Bentsen and Mr. Stephanopoulos.

5 A The answer is no, and I don't recall knowing
6 about such a meeting until you just described it today.

7 Q Since January 1, 1994, other than conversations
8 with counsel, until today, you've been unaware of any 9 meeting between Secretary Bentsen and Mr. Stephanopoulos
10 concerning the subject of Whitewater?

11 A I've been unaware.

12 Q During your hallway encounters with Mr. Altman in 13 January of 1994, did you ever ask him a question concerning
14 the statute of limitations as it applied to the RTC/Madison
15 investigation?

16 A The one that I've testified about that was the 17 subject of discussion on February 2nd?

18 Q Correct.

19 A I don't recall having any conversations with him
20 about it. Not to say that I didn't, but I don't recall any 21 conversations.

22 Q Prior to the time you became involved as deputy

1 chief of staff at the White House, how long had you known
2 Mr. Altman?

3 A I had known him casually going back to at least
4 the Mondale campaign which was 1984.

5 Q Was your acquaintanceship with him working
6 together on political campaigns?

7 A Yes, and it was very casual.

8 Q After you joined the administration in January,
9 did you form any social relationship or personal
10 relationship with Mr. Altman, apart from your professional
11 work with him as a member of the White House staff?

12 A It was primarily in connection with work. We got 13 to know each other better because we saw each other more in 14 various meetings I've described. I think I've only been to 15 his house once on a social occasion.

16 Q Still directing your attention to January of 17 1994, was one of the duties of the White House Whitewater
18 response group to deal with congressional inquiries that 19 were beginning concerning the subject of Whitewater?

20 A Its primary purpose, as I said before, was to 21 deal with the numerous and intense press inquiries but 22 congressional inquiries as well. I don't recall whether a

1 member of our congressional staff was in those early
2 meetings. I tend to think not, but certainly they had been
3 involved as Whitewater/Madison has developed over the 4 course of months.

5 Q And was there a focus on congressional activity
6 after the middle of January when Senator D'Amato began to 7 appear on the floor and do a countdown regarding the
8 statute of limitations?

9 A There was.

10 Q Did that spur you to have somebody do some 11 research on the issue of statute of limitations?

12 A I recall asking Neil Eggleston to do some 13 research, and I don't recall exactly when I asked him to do
14 it.

15 Q Was that before February 2nd?

16 A Don't remember.

17 Q Was it before you had heard of the statute of 18 limitations presentation by Mr. Altman?

19 A I tend to think not, but I don't recall
20 specifically. I think it was after that.

21 Q But you're not sure one way or the other?

22 A I'm not positive.

1 Q Did you ask him to look at anything in
2 particular?

3 A No. I think I asked him to look at the whole
4 issue of the statute of limitations. It was fairly
5 complex, as far as I was concerned, and I wanted him to 6 take a look at it to give me a briefing on it. I tended to
7 think it happened after the February meeting, but again, I
8 can't be positive about that.

9 Q Did he give you a briefing?

10 MR. BENNETT: I'm going to object. This is 11 beyond. I'm going to instruct him not to answer that. It
12 has nothing to do with contacts between the White House and 13 Treasury, what the White House legal counsel prepares.

14 BY MR. CHERTOFF:

15 Q Now, let me direct your attention to the day or 16 two before February 2nd. Did Mr. Altman call you directly
17 to set up the appointment for the meeting on February 2nd,
18 or was the call transferred from someplace else?

19 A It is my recollection that he called directly.
20 Again, there are two levels that my phone call goes
21 through. It's answered by a secretary in the outer office
22 and if somebody like Roger Altman calls it's transferred to

224

1 Janice Enright, who makes a decision whether to give it to
2 me. She and I work physically in the office together so
3 she can just ask me do I want to speak to Roger.

4 Q Who is Patricia McHugh?

5 A Patty McHugh is the secretary and still is, but
6 during this time period during February and January of '94,
7 she was the secretary to the chief of staff, McLarty.

8 Q Did you ever have occasion to give her
9 instructions or asked her to carry out assignments for you?

10 A The answer is -- I don't want to be totally 11 qualified about that. The answer is no. I might have 12 asked her to give a message to Mack or something like 13 that. She worked for Mack McLarty. She didn't work for 14 me. Except in an extreme emergency, I wouldn't ask her to 15 do things for me. I had a staff of my own who could do
16 those things.

17 Q Did you ask her to type up appointments for a
18 meeting in which Mr. McLarty would be included?

19 A It's possible, but again, Janice Enright does 20 virtually all of that stuff for me. She knows everybody in 21 the White House. Everybody knows who she is and she is on 22 a first-name basis with everybody and sets up meetings of

1 that kind.

2 Q Before the February 2, the only people you had
3 invited to the meeting were Mr. McLarty and Mr. Nussbaum?

4 MR. BENNETT: He said to the best of his
5 recollection.

6 THE WITNESS: To the best of my recollection.

7 BY MR. CHERTOFF:

8 Q Do you have a recollection that you invited
9 Ms. Williams?

10 A I stand on my prior testimony. I don't recall
11 inviting Ms. Williams. That's not to say that I didn't,
12 but I don't recall that I did.

13 Q Can you think of any reason that you would have 14 invited her?

15 A Not necessarily. I didn't know the subject of 16 the meeting but again, I may have. I may not have. She 17 may have been invited late to the meeting. My recollection
18 is she came late to the meeting.

19 Q Did Mr. Altman suggest that she be invited?

20 A Not to my knowledge -- or not to my recollection.

21 Q After the meeting concluded on February 2nd,
22 until the time that Mr. Altman called you or rather spoke

226

1 to you and told you he had decided not to recuse himself,
2 did you have any telephone calls with Mr. Altman?

3 A Not that I recall. I mean, I think that meeting
4 occurred --

5 MR. BENNETT: You say "after." You mean on that 6 day?

7 BY MR. CHERTOFF:

8 Q From the time the meeting concluded on February 2
9 up until the time that Mr. Altman appeared before you in 10 person to tell you he was not going to recuse himself, in 11 that intervening period, did you have any telephone contact
12 with Mr. Altman?

13 A About this subject?

14 Q First of all, about any subject.

15 A I don't recall. I mean, I talked to Roger fairly 16 frequently. A lot of it, he's very interested in the 17 health care matter. There's some other matters he talks to 18 me about. I don't recall a specific conversation. I could 19 have.

20 Q Again, focusing you on this intervening period,
21 did you have any conversation with him over the telephone
22 on the subject of Whitewater?

1 A I don't recall it. I recall the next time I
2 talked to Roger Altman about Whitewater was that meeting
3 that I think occurred within a day or so following a
4 meeting on the 2nd. Could I have? It's possible. As I
5 sit here today, I don't recall.

6 Q Are you aware of anybody who had such a
7 conversation, anybody in the White House who had such a
8 conversation with Mr. Altman from the time of the February
9 2nd meeting until the time that Mr. Altman told you of his 10 decision not to recuse himself?

11 A As I sit here today, I'm not aware of any.

12 MR. BENNETT: If you have anything to refresh his 13 recollection, in fairness, we would ask you to show him.

14 MR. CHERTOFF: I'm just asking him what he 15 recalls.

16 THE WITNESS: I don't recall.
17 (Witness conferred with counsel.)

18 BY MR. CHERTOFF:

19 Q What did you do with your notes after the meeting
20 on February 2?

21 A What did I do with them?

22 Q Yes.

1 A I put them in the file.

2 Q Did you have a file designated for Whitewater
3 matters?

4 A I did.

5 Q How was the file titled?

6 A I have various different files.

7 Q Can you describe what the setup was of the file,
8 what the different categories were?

9 A There were a number. They kept growing. This 10 matter kept growing, so it would depend. I have a file on 11 Resolution Trust Corporation. I have a file on different 12 aspects or different subject matters as it relates to --
13 one on D'Amato, for instance. I have different categories,
14 I think, that I'll either want to keep something on. I
15 will just develop a file and I'll keep them alphabetically.

16 Q I'm sorry. Why would you have a file on D'Amato
17 relating to Whitewater?

18 A Because he was talking a lot about it.

19 Q And what would you keep in that file?

20 A I'd have to look.

21 Q You have no recollection?

22 A Press clips and statements that he was making.

1 Q Did you have a file marked "RTC Clinton
2 personal"?

3 A I don't know if that's the exact marking. I do
4 have a file marked RTC.

5 Q Let me show you X91 and ask you if that's a Xerox
6 copy of your file on that.

7 A It's indistinct. I can't tell.

8 Q I'm sorry, you can't -- is it your testimony that
9 you can't read the words "RTC Clinton personal" or that you
10 can read them but you can't tell whether this is a copy of 11 your manila folder?

12 A It looks like "RTC Clinton personal." I recall
13 that my file said "Resolution Trust Corporation," but this 14 may be it.

15 Q What particular things did you put in that file?

16 A I would put things in that pertained to ongoing
17 things about Resolution Trust Corporation. I think my 18 notes of the meeting on February 2 went there. Press clips
19 went in there. There was a lot of news clips in these 20 files, predominantly news clips.

21 Q Did you just have one manila folder for "RTC
22 Clinton personal" or did you have a lot of files regarding

230

1 press clips on the Whitewater matter?

2 MR. BENNETT: At what point in time are you
3 talking about?

4 BY MR. CHERTOFF:

5 Q We're talking about in the first three months of 6 1994. Did you have more than one folder for your
7 Whitewater material?

8 A Yes.

9 Q And one of those was marked either "Resolution
10 Trust Corporation Clinton personal" or "RTC Clinton
11 personal"?

12 A Yes.

13 Q And how did you distinguish what went into that 14 file from what went into other files?

15 A I just made a judgment.

16 Q What was the basis of your judgment?

17 A I'd have to look at each individual item.

18 Q Did you put other notes in your RTC Clinton
19 personal file?

20 A I did.

21 Q And were they notes that related in particular to 22 the RTC?

1 A Presumably.

2 Q And what was the content of those notes?

3 A I have no idea. I'd have to look that up.

4 Q Did you review those notes before you made a
5 production to Mr. Fiske?

6 A I did.

7 Q Did you review those notes before production was 8 made here?

9 A Yes.

10 Q Was there any mention in any of those notes of 11 the words "statute of limitations"?

12 MR. BENNETT: Well, the documents speak for 13 themselves. Just so you clearly understand, Mr. Ickes did
14 not take responsibility for the production. We gathered 15 all of the materials. The materials were turned over to 16 Mr. Fiske and when the congressional subpoenas came, the 17 White House decided what would be turned over. To our 18 knowledge, you've gotten everything there is to get.

19 MR. CHERTOFF: I'm not asking how the decisions
20 were made to turn the documents over. I'm simply asking
21 whether Mr. Ickes remembers materials in the file.

22 BY MR. CHERTOFF:

1 Q Were there notes in the file in which the words
2 "statute of limitations" appeared?

3 MR. BENNETT: If he remembers.

4 THE WITNESS: The words "statute of
5 limitations"?

6 BY MR. CHERTOFF:

7 Q Right.

8 A I don't recall the words "statute of 9 limitations," other than press clips.

10 MR. BENNETT: Now you've got -- the February 2
11 note does not refer to statute of limitations. It refers
12 to SL.

13 THE WITNESS: It does not refer to statute of 14 limitations.

15 BY MR. CHERTOFF:

16 Q Excluding TS1192 which is your February 2nd
17 notes, excluding that, were there references to the statute
18 of limitations in any of your other notes?

19 A Not that I recall.

20 Q Were there references to recusal in any of your 21 notes?

22 A I don't recall. I'd have to look at the notes.

1 Q Were there references to Mr. Altman in any of 2 your other notes?

3 A I suspect there were. Again, I'd have to look at 4 them.

5 Q And where are all those notes now?

6 A Those notes, to the extent they exist, they are 7 in that file.

8 Q Are they in your custody or in the custody of 9 White House counsel?

10 A They're in my custody.

11 Q Were they returned to you by White House counsel
12 after White House made a review of the notes?

13 A I turned over to White House counsel what they 14 asked for and they were returned to me.

15 Q Let me make sure I understand. Did you turn over 16 to White House counsel all your notes on Whitewater when 17 they requested you to turn over material?

18 A I turned over the notes and information and 19 documents that White House counsel asked for.

20 Q What did they ask for?

21 A I don't recall at this time.

22 May I take a break?

1 MR. CHERTOFF: Sure.

2 (Recess.)

3 MR. BENNETT: I'm a little confused as to what
4 you're asking him. It is my understanding that the White
5 House did not ask him to turn over all of his notes or 6 papers or documents on Whitewater. I think in connection
7 with the inquiries he was asked to turn over anything and 8 everything pertaining to context. I'm not trying --

9 MR. CHERTOFF: What I'm trying to find out is who 10 made the decision? Who made the cut on the scope of the 11 resolution? Was it White House counsel or was it
12 Mr. Ickes? That's what I'm trying to find out.

13 MR. BENNETT: I'll tell you it was White House
14 counsel.

15 MR. CHERTOFF: I don't want to argue with you
16 about it. I want to get the facts out.

17 BY MR. CHERTOFF:

18 Q Did White House counsel request from you all of 19 the notes in your possession that mentioned Whitewater?

20 A I don't know -- I don't recall the scope of what 21 they asked me for.

22 Q Did they ask you to make a selection or to go

1 through your notes and select the documents that you
2 believed were responsive to their request?

3 MR. BENNETT: Wait, wait. What's not fair here
4 is you are asking if Mr. Ickes got requests for inquiries
5 and turned them basically over to counsel and these matters
6 were worked out through counsel. Mr. Ickes didn't go and 7 make the decisions as to what --

8 MR. CHERTOFF: That's what I'm asking.

9 BY MR. CHERTOFF:

10 Q Mr. Ickes, did you turn all your files over to 11 your private counsel and have counsel make a decision about 12 what was responsive?

13 MR. BENNETT: For which requests?

14 MR. CHERTOFF: Let me go back to the beginning.

15 BY MR. CHERTOFF:

16 Q Did you get a subpoena from Mr. Fiske or a
17 request from Fiske?

18 A I got either a subpoena or a request. I don't 19 recall which.

20 Q Did you turn all of your files relating to 21 Whitewater over to your counsel in order to respond to
22 that?

1 MR. BENNETT: He did not do that. We did that.
2 The lawyers did that.

3 BY MR. CHERTOFF:

4 Q Did your counsel -- did you give counsel access
5 to your office so they could come in and go through all of 6 your files in order to make a determination about what was 7 responsive --

8 MR. BENNETT: I'm going to instruct you not to 9 answer that. This is getting --

10 MR. CHERTOFF: Mr. Bennett, is there some reason
11 you can't explain the process as to who made the decision
12 about what was responsive?

13 MR. BENNETT: First of all, I am not a witness
14 here. My client is a witness here, and I've stated to you
15 for the record that my client, Mr. Ickes, did not make the 16 decision or handle the production of documents from either
17 Mr. Fiske or from Congress. Now, that's our position, and 18 you can ask 5000 questions. My client is not in a position
19 to respond to that.

20 BY MR. CHERTOFF:

21 Q Mr. Ickes, do you know who reviewed all of your 22 materials to determine what was responsive to the request

1 from --

2 MR. BENNETT: Don't answer the question. I
3 object to it. It's outside the issue of contacts.

4 MR. CHERTOFF: Is it your position, Mr. Bennett,
5 that we're not free to ask the witness concerning his 6 responsiveness to this committee's own request for 7 documents?

8 MR. BENNETT: I have explained and put on the 9 record exactly how this was handled, and I think you are 10 harassing the witness now because we've made it very clear
11 that Mr. Ickes did not handle the production and all you're 12 doing is harassing him, Michael.

13 BY MR. CHERTOFF:

14 Q Before Mr. Altman's testimony on February 24th,
15 did you instruct or ask Mr. Eggleston to find out what 16 Mr. Altman was going to be testifying to concerning the 17 February 2nd meeting?

18 A Will you repeat the question.

19 Q Directing your attention to the days before
20 February 24th, did you direct or ask Mr. Eggleston to find 21 out what Mr. Altman intended or expected to say at the 22 hearing about the February 2nd meeting?

1 A I don't recall instructing him or asking him
2 anything.

3 MR. BENNETT: Keep your voice up.

4 THE WITNESS: I don't recall instructing him or 5 asking him anything along that line.

6 BY MR. CHERTOFF:

7 Q Were you aware that Mr. Eggleston contacted the
8 Treasury Department concerning the content of Mr. Altman's
9 anticipated answer on the February 2nd meeting for the 10 February 24th testimony?

11 A Anticipate an answer on what issue?

12 Q On the issue of the February 2nd meeting.

13 A What issue relating to the February 2nd meeting?

14 Q Let me rephrase the question. Were you aware 15 that Mr. Altman contacted the Treasury Department to find
16 out what Mr. Altman was expected to say at the hearing
17 concerning the February 2nd meeting?

18 MR. BENNETT: You don't mean Mr. Altman.

19 MR. CHERTOFF: Yes, I do mean Mr. Altman.

20 MR. BENNETT: You said Mr. Altman contacted
21 you -- start over.

22 BY MR. CHERTOFF:

1 Q Were you aware that Mr. Eggleston attempted to
2 find out what Mr. Altman was going to say or expected to
3 say about the February 2nd meeting at the upcoming hearing?

4 A About the February 2nd meeting in general?

5 Q Anything about it. Were you aware Mr. Eggleston
6 made an inquiry?

7 A No.

8 Q Now, when you spoke to Mr. Altman the day before
9 the testimony, and he asked you to consider -- let me
10 withdraw the question.

11 You testified earlier you had a conversation with 12 Mr. Altman the evening before his testimony regarding his 13 position at that point in time on recusal. You testified
14 also that you indicated that you had an initial reaction
15 but you would think about it.

16 Did you get back to Mr. Altman and have a second 17 conversation with him that evening on the subject of 18 recusal?

19 A No.

20 Q Was there a point in time during the afternoon or 21 evening of February 24th -- 23rd, that you were making an 22 effort to get in touch with Mr. Altman?

1 A No.

2 Q Did you have a conversation with Mr. Steiner on 3 February 23rd concerning Mr. Altman?

4 A I did.

5 Q How did that conversation come about?

6 A I called Mr. Steiner.

7 Q Why did you call Mr. Steiner?

8 A Because I didn't want to wait around until 9 Mr. Altman told me he was getting back which I think was an 10 hour, hour and a half, two hours after my initial 11 conversation with him, so within five to 10 minutes after 12 talking with Mr. Altman, I called Mr. Steiner.

13 Q What did you tell Mr. Steiner?

14 A The gist of what I told him was that I related to 15 him, Mr. Altman's and my prior conversation, and I told him
16 that Altman had asked me to get back to him. I told him I
17 did not want to wait that long. I had other things to do.
18 I understood that he was in touch with Altman. He 19 confirmed that he was, and I told him that I had no further
20 thoughts on whether or not Mr. Altman should recuse
21 himself, other than what I talked to Altman about and it
22 was entirely up to him, Altman, whether to recuse himself

1 or not.

2 Q Did you have any further contact with Mr. Altman
3 before he testified on February 24th?

4 A I'm confident I did not.

5 Q As of February 24th, did you know what Mr. Altman
6 was going to say at the hearing concerning the issue of 7 recusal?

8 A I did not. I'm sorry. Say that again.

9 Q As of February 24th, did you know what Mr. Altman
10 was intending to say on February 24th concerning recusal?

11 A No, I did not.

12 Q Would it have surprised you if he had announced
13 his recusal at the hearing?

14 A It wouldn't have surprised me. He obviously was 15 thinking about it, based on my conversation with him of the 16 preceding evening. It was obvious to me he was giving that 17 consideration, so it would not have surprised me.

18 Q Did you tell anybody else, either on the 23rd or 19 the 24th, that it was possible Mr. Altman would make an 20 announcement to recuse himself at the hearing?

21 A I may have. I don't recall any specific 22 discussion.

1 Q In your conversation with Mr. Stephanopoulos and
2 Mr. Altman on the 25th -- let me withdraw the question.

3 Was it Mr. Stephanopoulos who first told you
4 Mr. Altman had recused himself or had announced his recusal
5 to The New York Times?

6 A Yes, I'm pretty sure I heard that from George.

7 Q At the time you had that conversation, did you
8 tell Mr. Stephanopoulos that a couple days earlier, he had 9 raised the possibility he might recuse himself?

10 A I had already told -- it's my best recollection
11 that right after I had my phone conversation with Altman
12 and I think a phone call from Steiner, all of which had 13 occurred in George's office, that I had related my 14 conversation with Altman.

15 Q Do you know whether Mr. Stephanopoulos told the 16 president that Mr. Altman was considering recusing himself?

17 A I don't know whether he did or he did not.

18 Q Is it fair to say, therefore, on the 25th you nor 19 Mr. Stephanopoulos expressed surprise about the fact that 20 Mr. Altman had, in fact, recused himself?

21 A I think quite to the contrary. We had expressed
22 surprise that he had recused himself.

1 Q I'm sorry. Maybe I was unclear in my question.
2 Your testimony is that on the 25th you and
3 Mr. Stephanopoulos expressed surprised that Mr. Altman had
4 recused himself?

5 A Yes, I've testified to that before.

6 Q And that's notwithstanding your conversation with
7 Mr. Stephanopoulos on the 23rd where Mr. Altman indicated
8 he was reconsidering the matter?

9 A Yes, because he had not -- it was my information
10 that he had not recused himself before the Senate Banking
11 Committee and therefore, it came as a complete surprise to 12 both Mr. Stephanopoulos and me that he had decided to 13 recuse himself in his conversation with an employee of The 14 New York Times.

15 Q Before February 25th, had you heard of anybody at 16 the White House making inquiries about how Mr. Stephens
17 came to be hired by the RTC to work on the Madison matter?

18 A Before --

19 Q The 25th?

20 A As I've testified before, I do not recall exactly
21 when I learned that his firm had been retained by the RTC.
22 I tend to think it was after the 25th, but as I sit here

1 today, I don't recall. It could have been shortly before
2 the 25th.

3 Q Did you ever learn that someone in the White
4 House made inquiries to find out how Jay Stephens came to 5 be hired by the RTC to work on Madison?

6 A I don't know if I learned that specifically.
7 Somebody told me -- I think it was somebody in the 8 counsel's office, whether it was Nussbaum or whether it was 9 one of the associate counsels, I can't be sure, and I'm not 10 even sure it was them but I think it was -- told me I was 11 interested in finding out how his firm came to be hired and 12 told me they had been retained under some sort of a
13 modified RFP process. That's what I understood. I didn't 14 follow it or pursue it any further than that.

15 Q Are you aware of whether the president expressed 16 a view concerning Mr. Stephens being hired by the RTC to 17 work on this matter?

18 A He did express a view.

19 Q When did that happen?

20 A Again, it was in that time period. I can't pin
21 it down any more closely than that. As I testified a
22 moment ago, I tend to think it was after the 25th, but I

1 can't guarantee that.

2 Q Was it in your presence he expressed the view?

3 A It was.

4 Q Who else was there?

5 A I don't think anybody else was there. I think he 6 and I were alone. I meet with him during the course of the 7 week on a number of occasions discussing different matters
8 and as I recall, this came up in the midst of a
9 conversation about something else.

10 Q What did you say to him and what did he say to 11 you?

12 A I don't recall the exact words. The gist of it
13 was he expressed grave concern about the fact that 14 Mr. Stephens's firm and we understood they had been 15 retained and we understood Mr. Stephens in particular was 16 going to be working with the RTC on that and I've expressed
17 and I've testified earlier today as to the basis for that 18 concern.

19 Q Now, recognizing you don't recall when the 20 conversation with the president occurred, did you ever
21 mention this conversation with the president to
22 Mr. Stephanopoulos?

1 A I probably did. George and I talk a lot during
2 the course of the day.

3 Q Was it your regular practice to fill each other
4 in on things that had arisen in discussions either of you
5 had with the president?

6 A No. I mean, George meets with the president on 7 many times during the day, many more times than I do. He 8 does not fill me in on everything that he discusses with
9 the president.

10 Q You testified earlier that you had informed the 11 president, and you also testified that you had informed the 12 first lady, concerning the substance of your February 2nd
13 meeting with Mr. Altman and the others.

14 MR. BENNETT: I think he said the gist.

15 THE WITNESS: I testified it was my best
16 recollection that I had.

17 BY MR. CHERTOFF:

18 Q Was that on a single occasion or were they two 19 separate occasions?

20 A I think I testified earlier they were on two 21 separate occasions, that is the conversation with the 22 president and a separate conversation with the first lady.

1 Q Was it your practice to brief the first lady on a
2 regular basis concerning matters that arose regarding
3 Whitewater and the Resolution Trust Corporation?

4 MR. BENNETT: I'm going to object to that and
5 instruct him not to answer that unless you limit it to 6 contacts. I don't think it's any business of this 7 committee what his regular practice is or is not with the 8 president or the first lady.

9 BY MR. CHERTOFF:

10 Q Did you tell Mr. Nussbaum you were going to 11 inform the president and the first lady about the gist of 12 what had occurred at the February 2nd meeting?

13 A I don't recall. I doubt it.

14 Q Do you know whether he was aware of it?

15 A He may have been. I may have told him
16 afterwards. Again, I doubt it.

17 Q Was anybody else present when you informed the 18 president about this?

19 A I don't recall that anybody else was present.

20 Q Was anybody else present when you informed the 21 first lady about this?

22 A I don't recall. As I sit here, I don't recall if

1 anybody else was present. I tend to think not but I don't
2 recall as a fact.

3 Q You understood as of February 25th that
4 Mr. Altman had recused himself --

5 A Had?

6 Q You understood on February 25th that Mr. Altman
7 had recused himself from sitting on the Madison matter at 8 the RTC; correct?

9 A That was -- yes, that was confirmed by 10 Mr. Altman, to both George Stephanopoulos and to me in a
11 telephone conversation.

12 Q Did you have any conversation with the first lady
13 concerning that decision after February 25th?

14 A I probably did. I don't recall either when or 15 where, but I probably did.

16 Q What was the reason you transmitted or you sought
17 to confirm an opinion from an ethics officer of the 18 Treasury Department that Mr. Altman did not have to recuse
19 himself from matters involving Madison Guaranty as of 20 March 1, 1994?

21 MR. BENNETT: I'm not sure that's what it said,
22 is it? I think you're mischaracterizing.

1 BY MR. CHERTOFF:

2 Q Let me read to you the following paragraph -- let
3 me ask you this first. X1200, which you've testified about 4 earlier, is it your testimony that you do not know whether
5 you sent this document?

6 A That's my testimony.

7 Q Do you deny that you prepared this document,
8 meaning just 1200, not what was attached?

9 A Based on what I see there, I think that I did
10 prepare it, but my answer in my prior testimony today is it
11 appears, based on my general practice, that is a draft for 12 the reasons I've already stated, and it's not clear to me
13 that was reduced to final form and actually sent. It may 14 well have been. It may well have been sent in that form.

15 Q In any event, you did prepare the draft?

16 A The answer is yes. It certainly looks as if I
17 did.

18 Q Do you recall seeking -- let me withdraw the
19 question.

20 As of March 1, 1994, you knew that Mr. Altman had 21 already made a decision to recuse himself; correct?

22 A As of when?

1 Q March 1, 1994.

2 A As of March 1, that followed February 25th.

3 Q So you knew he had recused himself; correct?

4 A Yes.

5 Q What was the reason you continued to try to find
6 out whether there was an ethics opinion that had been 7 issued that did not require him to recuse himself?

8 A Well, I'm not sure that's what that document
9 says.

10 Q How did you come to write that paragraph?

11 A Let me try to deal with the first question. Are 12 you withdrawing your first question?

13 Q Answer the first question and then we'll get to 14 the second one.

15 A I'm sorry, would you ask your first question.

16 MR. CHERTOFF: Can I have the first question read
17 back.

18 (The reporter read the record as requested.)

19 THE WITNESS: I had heard that there was such an 20 ethics opinion and I was interested as to whether there was 21 and what it said.

22 BY MR. CHERTOFF:

1 Q After your conversation with the first lady in
2 which you disclosed the gist of your February 2nd meeting,
3 did she direct you to ascertain whether there was any legal
4 opinion regarding the issue of Mr. Altman's need to recuse
5 himself?

6 MR. BENNETT: I'm not going to have him answer
7 those kinds of questions.

8 MR. CHERTOFF: Can I ask the basis for that?

9 MR. BENNETT: What does that have to do with
10 contacts?

11 MR. CHERTOFF: I think it tends to bear on the 12 flow of information that was transmitted from Treasury to 13 the White House.

14 (Witness conferred with counsel.)

15 MR. BENNETT: Go ahead and answer.

16 THE WITNESS: Would you repeat it, please.

17 (The reporter read the record as requested.)

18 THE WITNESS: I don't think so. I don't recall 19 any.

20 BY MR. CHERTOFF:

21 Q After that conversation, did she ask you if you'd 22 do anything with respect to Mr. Altman's decision whether

1 or not to recuse himself?

2 A You're talking about following February 2nd --
3 bear with me -- and before February 25th?

4 Q I'm asking you whether following February 2nd,
5 after you had informed the first lady of the gist of what
6 occurred on February 2nd, whether at that time or any time
7 thereafter, the first lady asked you to do anything with 8 respect to the matter of Mr. Altman's deciding about
9 recusing himself?

10 A Well, following the 25th -- following the meeting
11 on the 2nd, he decided not to recuse himself. I don't 12 recall her giving me any instructions on that, about 13 finding out further information on his decision to recuse
14 or not to recuse.

15 Q Did she comment on it?

16 A I don't recall that she made any comment one way
17 or the other.

18 Q Did she comment at all on the portion of your 19 description concerning the progress of the investigation or 20 when the investigation might be completed?

21 A I don't recall. She may well have. I don't 22 recall anything specific. As I sit here today, I don't

1 recall any specific discussion she had or comments she had
2 on that.

3 Q When you informed the president about the gist of 4 the February 2nd meeting, did he comment on either the 5 question of recusal or the issue of when the investigation
6 would be completed?

7 A My recollection is I informed him of what
8 happened, the gist of what happened during the February 2nd
9 meeting and to follow up a very brief meeting I had with 10 Roger Altman. There was no reason to comment. I don't 11 recall any specific comment by him.

12 Q I'm sorry, did I understand you to say you also 13 informed the president about the follow-up meeting you had 14 with Roger Altman on February 3rd or February 4th?

15 A Yes. I don't recall a specific conversation but 16 undoubtedly, I'm confident that I described or informed him
17 of the fact that Mr. Altman had decided not to recuse
18 himself.

19 Q Did you inform the first lady of that fact?

20 A I don't recall specifically. I'm confident I
21 probably did.

22 MR. BENNETT: I think in fairness, you're

1 implying there was more than one meeting, and he had
2 earlier testified he wasn't sure when he told the president
3 about the second meeting so if it was after the 3rd, he may
4 have referred to both of them.

5 Isn't that what you've testified?

6 THE WITNESS: Yes.

7 MR. CHERTOFF: Thank you for clarifying that,
8 Mr. Bennett.

9 MR. BENNETT: You implied there were two
10 meetings.

11 MR. CHERTOFF: Mr. Bennett, I've implied nothing.

12 MR. BENNETT: I apologize.

13 MR. CHERTOFF: I'm simply asking questions, and 14 I've concluded my questions. Do you have something?

15 MR. CODINHA: I have no further questions, but we 16 would tell you, Mr. Ickes, as we tell all witnesses who 17 testify before this committee, that we suggest that you do
18 not discuss your testimony with anyone else, except your 19 counsel. We are not instructing you not to, but we are 20 suggesting it strongly. The reason for that is every 21 witness will come and testify before us will be asked the 22 question who they've spoken to and it may prove to be

1 embarrassing to you or to other people who have such
2 conversations.

3 I would also suggest that questions may very well
4 be asked to you or to other witnesses at the hearings so we
5 offer that you should, of course, follow your attorney's
6 advice, and he will tell you what you should or shouldn't 7 do.

8 Other than that, thank you very much. Thank you
9 for coming today.

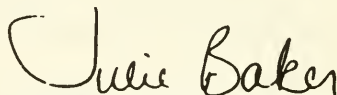

10 (Whereupon, at 7:17 p.m., the deposition was 11 concluded.)

CHICAGO

Documents that are relevant to an investigation are found in an unexpected place six months after they were first sought. A shocking development?

Absolutely not. In most major pieces of litigation, files turn up late. One side or the other always thinks of making something of the late appearance, but these lawyers know the truth: It could just as easily happen to them.

Despite diligent searches, important papers in large organizations are always turning up after the initial and follow-up searches. How many times have you looked for something on your desk and couldn't find it, only to have it appear right under your nose later? Happens all the time.

Indeed, as every litigator knows, there is nothing worse than having an important document show up late. You've only highlighted its absence for your opponent. If you know where it is, it is far better to include it in the initial delivery of relevant papers, where it gets mixed in with the rest of the morass. Why red-flag it by holding it back?

My former partner, Kenneth Starr, knows all this. As independent counsel in the Whitewater investigation, he will take it into account.

But the American people have no reason to know that this is a normal

Please. Every lawyer loses files.

occurrence; it is not part of their everyday experience. Reporters really don't have any reason to know this either. Or they may know, and simply choose to ignore it.

Last summer, notes that were critical to the celebrated libel suit brought by Jeffrey Masson against the writer Janet Malcolm appeared in her private study, years after they were first sought. I recall that discovery being treated as an interesting happenstance, nothing more.

When documents show up belatedly, even in private quarters, there is simply nothing unusual about it. □

THE WHITE HOUSE
WASHINGTON

WH

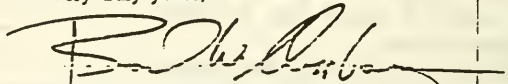

January 12, 1994

Dear Madam Attorney General:

The President has directed me to request you to appoint as special counsel a respected, impartial, and qualified attorney, who is not a member of the Department of Justice or an employee of the federal government, to conduct an appropriate independent investigation of the Whitewater matter and report to the American people.

In view of the gravity of the President's responsibilities and the need for a prompt resolution, I respectfully request that this investigation be conducted as expeditiously as possible.

Very truly yours,

Bernard W. Nussbaum
Counsel to the President

The Honorable Janet Reno
Attorney General
United States Department of Justice
Washington, D.C. 20530

The President today has directed White House Counsel Bernard Nussbaum to request the Attorney General to appoint as special counsel a respected, impartial and qualified attorney, who is not a member of the Department of Justice or an employee of the federal government, to conduct an appropriate independent investigation of the Whitewater matter and report to the American people. In view of the gravity of the President's responsibilities and the need for a speedy and credible resolution here, the President requests that this investigation be conducted as expeditiously as possible.

There have been no credible allegations of wrongdoing by the Clintons in this matter, and the President has full confidence in the ability of the Justice Department to independently and properly investigate this matter. Nevertheless, the President has decided to ask the Attorney General to resolve the issues surrounding the controversy through a special counsel, in order to ensure the public a full and fair accounting of this matter. This controversy is becoming too much of a distraction. The President wants to get on with the vital issues facing the American people.

These facts bear repeating: The Clintons made a losing investment in a real estate venture managed by the McDougals, Whitewater Development Corporation, one for which they received no dividends and no income. All the bank loans taken by the Clintons were repaid in full (none were from any S&L). While the Clintons earned nothing from their investment, were not involved in the company's operations, did not keep its records; and did not have access to its records until the later stages of the company's existence, at which point they expended considerable effort assuring that Whitewater's tax returns were filed, that its franchise and real estate taxes were paid, and that its few assets were sold off in a responsible manner. The great bulk of the documents the Clintons have voluntarily turned over to the Justice Department were only compiled after a painstaking effort to gather Whitewater's records.

Several years after the Whitewater investment, the principal and managing partner, James McDougal, purchased a savings and loan. The state supervision of Madison Guaranty was rigorous and proper. There is not a single factual allegation that then-Governor Clinton took any steps whatever to ease regulatory pressure on Madison. As the Wall Street Journal concluded editorially, "there is no evidence that Governor Clinton urged [regulators] to go easy." Indeed, it was Governor Clinton's Securities Commissioner who, along with federal regulators, forced James McDougal to resign as head of the thrift. And it was Governor Clinton's Securities Commissioner who asked the federal government to put Madison Guaranty into receivership.

A federal grand jury is currently investigating matters relating to Madison that may touch upon Whitewater. The President and Mrs. Clinton have cooperated fully with the investigation, and they have directed their attorney to continue to do so.

This investigation has been conducted appropriately and independently investigated by the Justice Department. Indeed, the Attorney General has taken all proper steps to assure the independence of this probe. Since the recusal of United States Attorney for the Eastern District of Arkansas, the investigation has been headed by a career prosecutor, who served as a United States Attorney under two Republican Presidents. There is no reason to doubt that the capable and experienced staff of the Department of Justice has been anything other than thorough, energetic, professional and even-handed.

Despite their total and voluntary cooperation with the current investigation, the Clintons have been subjected to a barrage of innuendo, political posturing and irresponsible accusations. The President is determined that this controversy must not distract him, his staff or his Administration from the important business of renewing America.

It is remarkable that those who call for an independent counsel state that there is no evidence of wrongdoing by the Clintons in this matter. Senator Dole has said, "My view is that the President probably will be cleared and this will not be an issue, but let's go ahead and get it done." And the Washington Post has editorialized, "there has been no credible charge in this case that either the President or Mrs. Clinton did anything wrong." It would be troubling to require the appointment of a special counsel every time there is an unsubstantiated allegation or an unfavorable headline.

Nevertheless, the President believes that it is important to take whatever steps he can to assure complete confidence in the federal law enforcement system, when that system scrutinizes a company in which he once owned an interest, even if the factual justification for special measures is entirely lacking. He believes the integrity of high officials must be without question. Above all, he believes it is critical that his Administration's attention should not be distracted in any way from the vital issues facing the American people.

Open Up on Madison Guaranty

Much as President Clinton might wish, the curious saga of his and his wife's dealings with the owner of a failed Arkansas savings and loan association just won't go away. It keeps popping up in Congressional inquiries and newspaper accounts, each time with a new and unsavory detail added to an already unflattering portrait of the cozy relationship between money and politics in Arkansas.

An important detail, disclosed by The Times's Jeff Gerth and Stephen Engelberg, is that the owner of Madison Guaranty Savings and Loan, James McDougal, helped Mr. and Mrs. Clinton repay a $50,000 personal debt just when Mr. McDougal needed favorable treatment from state banking officials to stay in business. Mr. McDougal did stay in business, his problems got worse, and in 1989 the bank was taken over by the Federal Government, at a cost to taxpayers of $60 million.

There is no irrefutable evidence of a quid pro quo. But the Arkansas savings and loan mess, and the Clintons' relationship to it, is not, as the White House keeps saying, an "old" story that has no relevance to Mr. Clinton or his present job. This is a man who rode into Washington on a pledge to end politics as usual, and every time the White House dodges inquiries about the old days in Arkansas, reasonable people begin to wonder about a cover-up and Mr. Clinton's sincerity.

The matter clearly needs ventilating, and if the White House won't do it, two other institutions can. One is the Justice Department, which is already looking into transactions at Madison. The Clintons are not targets of the probe.

The other is the House Banking Committee, whose ranking minority member, Jim Leach, believes that a full investigation of Madison could help the committee frame new rules to prevent future banking disasters. His request has been rebuffed by the committee chairman, Henry Gonzalez, a Democrat who until now has been a tiger on the savings and loan issue. Mr. Gonzalez accuses Mr. Leach of a Republican "fishing expedition."

Mr. Leach has also called Madison a "private piggy bank" for its owners and their influential Arkansas friends, and on this he is surely right. In addition to a string of dubious real estate investments, Madison made large unsecured loans to executives and other insiders.

Madison's practices attracted the attention of Federal auditors, whose 1984 review found "unsafe

and unsound lending practices" that could threaten to drive the bank under. Shortly thereafter, Governor Clinton named Beverly Bassett Schaffer as head of the Arkansas agency charged with overseeing state-chartered savings and loans. Ms. Schaffer had once done legal work for Madison. For the next 18 months, up to the point where Federal regulators moved in, she took no significant regulatory action.

Three months after her appointment, Mr. Clinton came to Mr. McDougal with a request to "knock out the deficit" — Mr. McDougal's words — left over from the Governor's 1984 campaign. It turns out that the deficit wasn't just an ordinary campaign debt, but $50,000 Mr. and Mrs. Clinton had borrowed from another bank to finance the campaign. Mr. McDougal organized a fund-raiser and the debt was repaid. Federal auditors suspect that some of the donations assembled by Mr. McDougal may have been improperly diverted from the savings and loan.

Bruce Lindsey, the official wheeled out by the White House to answer questions, says the Clinton-McDougal relationship was entirely above board. Others, however, are more than mildly troubled by the fact that Mr. Clinton did not order his regulators to crack down on Mr. McDougal even after he was advised by his own banking commissioner in 1983 that the savings and loan operator was engaged in imprudent banking practices.

Suspicious that Mr. Clinton was excessively kind to his friend — at great cost, eventually, to the taxpayers — are further reinforced by the fact that Mr. McDougal had done other favors for the Clintons, including making them 50-50 partners in Whitewater Development, a real estate company for which Mr. McDougal put up most of the money. The venture ultimately failed, and the Clintons lost money. But that doesn't make their financial ties to Mr. McDougal seem any more savory.

Based on what's publicly known, there's probably not a crippling scandal here. But the White House is behaving as if there were. For example, Federal investigators say they have received little cooperation in a search for files they suspect were taken from the office of Vincent J. Foster, a White House aide who killed himself. Investigators want to know if one of those files dealt with Mr. McDougal and Whitewater.

This defensiveness isn't helping anyone. Mr. Clinton — and Mr. Gonzalez — owe it to the public to clear the air about Madison and its influential Arkansas friends.

This is important to be on top of. Bassett did a good job in camp. on this — can she now?

Dear General Reno:

Under the independent counsel provisions of the Ethics in Government Act of 1978, the Attorney General was required to conduct a "preliminary investigation", as defined in the Act, to determine whether further investigation was warranted of possible federal law violations by persons subject to the Act. This investigation was to be completed within 90 days, with a 60 day extension possible. If the Attorney General determined that there were no reasonable grounds to believe that further investigation was warranted, the Attorney General notified the Special Division (a court created by the Act to appoint special counsel), and that ended the matter. If, however, the Attorney General determined that there were reasonable grounds to believe that further investigation was warranted, the Attorney General so notified the Special Division, which then appointed an independent counsel to conduct such an investigation. The Act expired on December 19, 1992.

The President has fully cooperated with a federal grand jury in Little Rock which he understands to be investigating matters that may be potentially connected to Whitewater Development Company, an entity in which he and the First Lady once had an ownership interest. There have been no credible or even specific allegations of wrongdoing by the Clintons in connection with Whitewater. It was a losing investment, from which they received nothing of value, and all loans which they signed for were repaid (none of these were S&L loans). The investigation is being conducted by career Department of Justice prosecutors, after the United States Attorney for the Eastern District of Arkansas recused herself. There is no reason to believe that this investigation is not thorough, energetic, professional, and even-handed.

However, there has been some publicity in recent days suggesting, incorrectly, that there are grounds to replace the current investigation with some kind of independent counsel. While the President does not believe there is any reason to impugn the integrity and aggressiveness of the current investigation or that there are any reasonable grounds to a justify sweeping investigation by an independent counsel, he believes it is desirable to take whatever steps he can to assure complete confidence in the federal law enforcement system, when that system scrutinizes a company in which he once owned an interest. While there is presently no legislation in effect, it seems appropriate to attempt, insofar as possible, to follow the provisions of the Ethics in Government Act of 1978.

Accordingly, the President has directed me to request you to appoint a respected and qualified attorney, who is not a member of the Department of Justice or an employee of the federal government, to conduct a "preliminary investigation," as defined under the Act, of the Whitewater Development Company and possible federal law violations arising out of its affairs which, under the Act, might justify appointment of an independent counsel.

The President's request differs, of course, in a significant way from the procedures of the Act: under the old law, you yourself would be mandated to conduct the "preliminary investigation". Given the President's desire to do all he can to assure public confidence in the federal law enforcement process, he believes it appropriate here to request that you appoint a respected private attorney to conduct this "preliminary investigation" and report to you, so that you and that attorney may take such action as you deem appropriate.

In view of the gravity of the many matters faced by the President and the need for a speedy resolution here, I respectfully request that the preliminary investigation be conducted within 90 days by the person you appoint.

Sincerely,

HEADLINE: Arkansas Regulator Says She Was Approached About Backing Clintons

BYLINE: By LARRY MARGASAK, Associated Press Writer

DATELINE: WASHINGTON

BODY: A former Arkansas securities commissioner says she resisted efforts by a White House aide and two men with Clinton administration connections to get her to make public statements supporting the president and first lady on Whitewater.

Beverly Bassett Schaffer said in an interview Thursday that her response was "No way. I don't want to be drawn into the political response." She added, "I was sick" of talking about Whitewater.

The contacts with Schaffer were made around the time a Whitewater prosecutor was appointed and they tracked a strategy laid out at a Jan. 7, 1994, White House meeting. According to notes of that meeting, Clinton aides were greatly concerned about what Schaffer would say regarding her discussions with first lady Hillary Rodham Clinton on whether the savings and loan at the center of Whitewater could issue stock.

As the state securities commissioner, Schaffer concluded that the S&L - represented by Mrs. Clinton's law firm - could issue stock. Schaffer had said during the 1992 presidential campaign she wasn't pressured by Mrs. Clinton and had only one conversation with her.

The handwritten notes of the Jan. 7 meeting were taken by Mark Gearan, who was President Clinton's communications director at the time. The White House this week turned over the notes, months after they were requested, to the Senate Whitewater committee. The panel released them Thursday.

White House lawyer Jane Sherburne told the committee Thursday that the notes had been difficult to locate, because Gearan inadvertently took them with him when he became Peace Corps director in September.

Gearan quoted White House aide Harold Ickes as saying, "Bev. Bassett is so (expletive) important. If we (expletive) this up, we're done."

Ickes is quoted as saying no emissaries from Washington should be sent to Arkansas to contact Schaffer because "it will come out." PAGE 3 The Associated Press, February 9, 1996

"Let's not talk it to death - let's just get it done," Gearan quotes Ickes as saying. Another time, Ickes is quoted as saying, "item by item - make sure her story is OK."

Asked about her interpretation of the meeting, Schaffer said, "It looks to me like they were trying to figure out, 'Who can talk to her? Who is her friend? They were desperate to try to find a way, getting questions about all this, to deal with it.'"

Describing the contacts, Schaffer said:

-In December 1993, at a University of Arkansas basketball game, White House aide Bruce Lindsey talked to her husband, Archie, about whether she was willing to speak out publicly.

-Some time later her husband was called by Skip Rutherford, an Arkansas public relations executive and friend of the Clintons. Rutherford asked Archie Schaffer what he thought of his wife having a news conference on Whitewater.

-She was approached by a lawyer at her firm, John Tisdale, who suggested that he put together a factual list of documents on Whitewater. Tisdale did so, and "I imagine he gave them to Bruce" (Lindsey), who worked at the firm before going to the White House.

The Gearan memo mentions Tisdale and Rutherford as people who might talk to Schaffer to make sure her story "is OK."

Gearan's notes prompted Sen. Orrin Hatch, R-Utah, to question whether the Clinton White House had been trying to influence the statements of a Whitewater witness.

But White House spokesman Mark Fabiani said presidential aides were simply seeking to have Schaffer repeat comments she made that were supportive of Mrs. Clinton's Whitewater role.

The January meeting apparently stemmed from Clinton's request to aides 2 weeks earlier asking whether Schaffer would reiterate her comments.

Separately, the Clintons' private Whitewater lawyer, David Kendall, and Sherburne testified Thursday about the mysterious appearance in the White House residence of the billing records outlining Mrs. Clinton's work for Madison Savings and Loan. Madison was owned by the partner of the Clintons in the Whitewater land venture, and failed at a huge cost to taxpayers.

Sherburne said that when the records surfaced, she raised the possibility of having them checked for fingerprints before they were copied. She said the idea was rejected because the Clintons, the Senate committee and others needed the material immediately.

A Clinton aide, Carolyn Huber, has said she discovered the records during the first two weeks in August, laying on a table in plain view. Not knowing what they were, she packed them away and rediscovered them Jan. 4.

White House logs show Mrs. Clinton was visited Aug. 10 by an attorney whose clients include Seth Ward, an Arkansas businessman whom bank regulators say was a "straw" purchaser in a "sham" real estate deal that cost Madison millions of dollars, The Washington Post reported in today's editions.

The attorney, Alston Jennings, told the Post he was asked to meet with Mrs. Clinton by Kendall, but that the two didn't discuss Ward or the real estate deal. Kendall refused to comment.

C O N F I D E N T I A LSECOND DRAFTSummary of arguments re WhitewaterNo special counsel:1. For this position:

- a) The Clintons have done nothing wrong. There is no allegation that would permit the Attorney General ("AG") to propose appointment of independent counsel ("IC"). Appointment of Special Counsel ("SC") implies possible wrongdoing by The President and The First Lady, and tarnishes the Presidency.
- b) Until last week, the White House ("WH") was not getting The President's side of the story out. The more aggressive effort by the WH and others in this regard will begin to shift the tide of press and other opinion.
- c) To agree to a SC will hand a victory to our opponents.
- d) Although, in theory, a SC operates under the jurisdiction of and reports to the AG, in fact, a SC will operate virtually independent of the AG. By contrast the career prosecutors in the Department of Justice ("DOJ") who are handling the matter must report to higher authority in DOJ.
- e) A SC will have considerable resources at his/her disposal. The scope of the SC's investigation may be substantially broader than that of the current DOJ investigation. And there is no limit on how long he/she can investigate.
- f) A SC investigation may result in focus on friends and associates of The President, begin to "squeeze" them, and may subject some to indictment.
- g) Although we suspect a great deal of leakage by DOJ under the current process, the SC is also subject to leaks.
- h) Appointment of a SC will not necessarily preclude Congressional hearings on the matter.

S 020884

- 1) Even if an independent counsel statute is enacted, there is not sufficient evidence to warrant the AG recommending appointment of an IC. Therefore, the AG will not recommend appointment of an IC under the new statute if the facts do not warrant it.

2. Against this position:

- a) The critical issue is the implication of cover up. If, as the WH says, neither The President nor The First Lady have done anything wrong, why the continued resistance to appointment of a SC? Putting Madison/Whitewater before a SC will substantially end the public controversy and permit The President, the WH, the Congress and the public to refocus on health care and the rest of the substantive agenda.

- No matter how aggressively the WH presents The President's position, questions will continue to be raised by the opposition and the press, which will continue to call for a SC.

- Even if the WH is entirely consistent with the information it provides to the public, since we have only partial information about Madison/Whitewater, there will be continued inconsistent information from other parties involved in Madison/Whitewater which will provide the basis for continuing press stories and calls from Congress for a SC.

- b) If the AG does not appoint a SC (at The President's request), it may well be inevitable that she will recommend appointment of an IC (assuming enactment of an independent counsel statute), who, under the prior statute, was appointed by a 3 judge panel, who, in turn, are appointed by the Chief Justice of the Supreme Court.

- Congress will probably enact a new independent counsel statute. If after the statute is enacted, the AG refuses to recommend an independent counsel ("IC"), she will be accused of buckling to WH pressure.

- Assuming the foregoing, it is probably preferable to have an investigation conducted by a SC, appointed by the AG, rather than by an IC appointed by the 3 judge panel.

If the AG recommends appointment of an IC, the appointment (if the new law is the same as the expired law) will be made by a 3 judge court appointed by the Chief Justice of the Supreme Court. The current panel under the expired independent counsel statute is: Judge David Sentelle (DC Circuit, appointed by President Johnson); Sr. Judge John Butzner (4th Circuit, appointed by President Reagan); and Sr. Judge Joseph Sneed (9th Circuit, appointed by President Nixon).

An IC operates completely independent of the jurisdiction of the AG. (As with a SC or the current senior DOJ prosecutor, leaks by the IC are certainly possible. Not only is there little, if any, control as to the scope of an IC conducted investigation (as with a SC), there is no specific limit on the length of time the IC can take to conduct the investigation and issue his/her report.)

c) Congressional action:

d) The President's political capital will continue to erode. The Madison/Whitewater matter is open ended -- the Clintons do not (and will never) possess all of the information. Thus the WH will continually be on the defensive responding to continuing new "revelations" and questions.

thereby seeming to be out of control and attempting to cover up.

- e) The Presidential agenda. The continuing public controversy about Madison/Whitewater diverts attention (both that of the WH and that of the Congress and the public) from The President's agenda.

- Our polling shows that adoption of the proposed Health Security Act will greatly depend on public confidence in The President and The First Lady. This controversy undoubtedly adversely affects the public's confidence, thereby jeopardizing the substantive agenda.

Public release of all Clinton documents re Whitewater

- a) Partial release of documents, will merely increase press speculation and the demand for a SC.
- b) While public release of all documents may reduce the immediate pressure for a SC, it may result in many additional questions which, ultimately, will probably give rise to a call for either a SC or an IC.
- Since the Clinton documents don't encompass all of the Whitewater/Madison activities, release of those documents can't answer all questions, but will undoubtedly provide the basis for continual questions and speculation.

THE WHITE HOUSE
WASHINGTON

January 17, 1994

MEMORANDUM FOR HAROLD ICKES
DEPUTY CHIEF OF STAFFFROM: W. NEIL EGGLESTON
ASSOCIATE COUNSEL TO THE PRESIDENTRE: STATUTE OF LIMITATIONS IN ACTIONS BROUGHT BY THE CONSERVATOR OF A FINANCIAL INSTITUTION

There has been substantial discussion by Republican Members of Congress about the statute of limitations to recover against those who may have committed a tort or breach of contract involving a financial institution that has since been taken over by the Resolution Trust Corporation ("RTC").

Title 12, United States Code, Section 1441a, was amended by the Resolution Trust Corporation Completion Act, signed by the President on December 17, 1993. (A copy of the pertinent section of the amendment is attached.)

That Act extended the statute of limitations from three to five years for torts committed against financial institutions that have been taken over by the RTC. Thus, the RTC must bring a tort claim within five years after it was appointed a conservator or receiver.

For the purpose of the extension of the statute of limitations, the Act defines a tort claim as "a claim arising from fraud, intentional misconduct resulting in unjust enrichment, ~~or intentional misconduct resulting in substantial loss to the institution.~~" (This definition is narrower than the traditional definition of a tort.)

~~The statute of limitations for breach of contract claims is six years after the institution was taken over by the RTC.~~ 12 U.S.C. Sec. 1821(d)(14)(A)(i)(I).

Madison Guaranty was taken over by the federal government on or about March 2, 1989. As a result of the new Act, if the RTC sues on a covered tort claim, the action must be brought by March 2, 1994. Without the new Act, the statute of limitations for all tort claims would have expired on March 2, 1992. If the RTC sues on a contract claim, the action must be brought by March 2, 1995.

The type of action brought against outsiders in financial institution cases is usually a tort claim.

The statute of limitations for criminal violations involving a financial institution is ten years from the date the crime occurred. 18 U.S.C. Sec. 3293. The date that the institution was taken over by the government is not relevant to the computation of the criminal statute of limitations.

P R O C E E D I N G S

[6:40 p.m.]

MR. COCO: Mr. Ickes, I am Special Agent Fred-Coco with the Treasury Office of Inspector General.

MS. HERLIHY: And I'm Sara Herlihy, the RTC Inspector General's Office.

MR. COCO: Here's my credentials. This administrative investigation is at the request of Secretary Bentsen in the Office of Government Ethics and has to do with White House contacts from Treasury or RTC officials on the Madison Savings & Loan/Whitewater matter.

And, basically, before we begin, I'd like to place you under oath.

Whereupon,

HAROLD ICKES,

a witness, was called for examination, and, having been first duly sworn, was examined and testified as follows:

EXAMINATION

BY MR. COCO:

Q Basically, what is your current position and the dates of those positions?

A I'm an assistant to the President of the United States and Deputy Chief of Staff at the White House.

Q How long have you held that position?

A Since approximately January 3rd, 1994.

CONFIDENTIAL

1 Q Thank you. Can you please detail any contacts
2 between yourself and any Treasury or RTC officials
3 concerning the Madison Savings & Loan and/or Whitewater?.

4 A Well, when you say detail, what do you mean?

5 Q Contacts, meetings, conversations.

6 A Yes, but when you say detail, what do you mean?

7 MS. HERLIHY: Describe. If you could describe and 8 probably what would be most helpful is starting with the 9 first contact or communication you can remember having on 10 the matter, who you talked to, what was the substance.

11 MS. SABRIN: Maybe we could do it by timeframe.
12 Can you -- he just told he started at the White House
13 January 3rd. So maybe we could --

14 MS. HERLIHY: Right. So starting with the first 15 one he can remember. And when we set that timeframes, then
16 we can go from there.

17 THE WITNESS: Well, first, why don't you repeat
18 the question?

19 BY MR. COCO:

20 Q Okay. Can you detail your contacts in this matter
21 from the first conversation, meeting, starting out with your 22 time and your position, January 4th, 1994.

23 A With whom?

24 Q With Treasury or RTC officials.

25 A In connection with what?

CONFIDENTIAL

1 Q The Madison Savings & Loan and Whitewater matter.

2 A I remember a contact -- several contacts with
3 Roger Altman, a contact -- several contacts with Jean
4 Hanson, and one contact with Josh Steiner.

5 Q Can you tell us which one occurred first and when?

6 A The first contact occurred with -- to the best of 7 my recollection, I think occurred with Roger Altman.

8 Q When was that?

9 A It was shortly before -- either in late January or 10 early February of 1994.

11 Q Can you remember the date?

12 A I don't recall the exact date.

13 Q Okay. What was the contact? Was it a meeting,
14 phone conversation?

15 A As I recall, it was a phone conversation.

16 Q And what was the content of that phone
17 conversation?

18 A What was the context?

19 Q Content.

20 A Content. As I recall, Mr. Altman called me, 21 telephoned me to ask to arrange a meeting with him and the 22 General Counsel from the Treasury Department, as I recall,
23 with Mr. McClarty.

24 Q And what was the stated purpose?

25 A I don't recall that he stated a purpose. He may

CONFIDENTIAL

1 have, but as I sit here today, I don't recall whether he did
2 or not.

3 Q Okay. And when was that meeting for?

4 A He asked me to set it up as soon as I could
5 arrange it with Mr. McClarty.

6 BY MS. HERLIHY:

7 Q Did he indicate other people that he wanted to be
8 in attendance at the meeting?

9 A He indicated that he was going to bring his 10 General Counsel with him. When I say his General Counsel,
11 the General Counsel of the Treasury at least then, is what I
12 recall him saying and he specifically said he wanted a
13 meeting with Mr. McClarty and me.

14 BY MR. COCO:

15 Q Did that meeting take place?

16 A The meeting took place.

17 Q When was it?

18 A I recall it was early in February, the first,
19 second or third, sometime around there.

20 Q And who else was at this meeting?

21 A Well, to the best of my recollection, Mr. McClarty
22 did not attend the meeting, although it was held in his 23 office, and I recall his being there in his office early in 24 the meeting, but not participating in the meeting. Mr.
25 Altman, myself, Ms. Hanson, Mr. Nussbaum. I think Ms.

1 Williams was there and I think Neil Eggelston was there. I
2 don't recall anybody else.

3 Q Would this be February 2nd, 1994, this meeting?

4 A It would have been around that time.

5 Q You said Mr. McClarty was there?

6 A It was in his office. He was there in his office.
7 It's a fairly large office by White House standards and I
8 recall his being near his desk at the other end of the room.
9 I don't recall his participating in the meeting and my best
10 recollection is that he left his office soon after the 11 meeting started.

12 Q So did he participate at all in the meeting?

13 A Not to my -- not to my recollection.

14 Q What was discussed at this meeting?

15 A Mr. Altman, as I recall, raised the issue of the 16 upcoming -- the possible -- well, not the possible, but the 17 fact that the statute of limitations, which I knew nothing
18 about at the time, of the RTC in connection with an 19 investigation that was apparently being conducted by the RTC
20 on Madison Whitewater was about to expire.

21 Q And what else? Was it just the statute of 22 limitation being discussed?

23 A That was -- as I recall, that was almost the 24 entirety of the meeting. There was some discussion at the 25 end of the meeting, very short discussion, about Mr. Altman

1 indicated that he was thinking about recusing himself.

2 Q And what was stated on that portion of the 3 conversation, his recusal?

4 A Stated by whom?

5 Q By anyone at the meeting.

6 A To the best of my recollection, it was a general
7 conversation. He raised it that he was considering recusing
8 himself. There were some questions and he said that he 9 would be making a decision in the next several days whether
10 or not to recuse himself.

11 BY MS. HERLIHY:

12 Q What were the questions, if you can recall?

13 A There were questions about the statute of 14 limitations, when it expired, under what conditions it
15 expired. I don't think anybody in the room other than Mr.
16 Altman and Ms. Hanson had a clear picture of what the 17 statute of limitations situation was. And I think there
18 were some questions about why Mr. Altman was considering
19 recusing himself.

20 BY MR. COCO:

21 Q Was any information shared by Mr. Altman? Was any 22 documentation provided?

23 A No, not that I recall.

24 Q Was he --

25 A When you say provided, provided to any of the

INVESTIGATION OF WHITEWATER DEVELOPMENT CORPORATION AND RELATED MATTERS

WEDNESDAY, APRIL 24, 1996

U.S. SENATE,
COMMITTEE ON BANKING, HOUSING, AND URBAN AFFAIRS,
SPECIAL COMMITTEE TO INVESTIGATE WHITEWATER
DEVELOPMENT CORPORATION AND RELATED MATTERS,
*Washington, DC.

The Committee met at 10:00 a.m., in room 216 of the Hart Senate Office Building, Senator Alfonse M. D'Amato (Chairman of the Committee) presiding.

OPENING STATEMENT OF CHAIRMAN ALFONSE M. D'AMATO

The CHAIRMAN. Good morning. The Committee has essentially completed the first two phases of our investigation—the Vince Foster Phase and the Washington Phase.

During the Foster Phase, we found that immediately after Mr. Foster's death, three White House officials, Bernard Nussbaum, Margaret Williams, and Patsy Thomasson, conducted a late night search of his office. The Committee found that Mr. Nussbaum told one of his assistants, Steven Neuwirth, that the First Lady and Susan Thomases did not want law enforcement officers to have unfettered access to Mr. Foster's office. Now this occurred right after Ms. Williams called Hillary Clinton and Mrs. Clinton calls Ms. Thomases in the early morning hours.

During the Washington Phase, the Committee discovered that high-level officials at the Resolution Trust Corporation attempted to steer the criminal investigations of Madison Guaranty. April Breslaw told an RTC investigator that there are some RTC people in management positions who would take "a dim view" of investigating Madison Guaranty. Ms. Breslaw told RTC investigator Jean Lewis in a taped conversation that head people at the RTC would, "Like to be able to say Whitewater did not cause a loss to Madison."

The Special Committee learned that the White House contacted the Small Business Administration about Judge David Hale and his SBA-funded investment company, Capital Management. We further discovered that at the request of the White House, the SBA sent confidential files relating to Hale to White House Associate Counsel Neil Eggleston. The Department of Justice had to step in and demand the return of those files.

The Committee discovered that the White House even tried to hinder the Senate's own inquiry in the summer of 1994 as to improper contacts between the Treasury Department and the White House.

Now in the coming weeks we will focus upon the Arkansas Phase of our investigation. This phase concerns the activities of then-Governor Clinton, his business partners and associates during the 1980's. We will investigate whether Governor Clinton improperly used the power of his office to reward his friends, partners, and associates. I will briefly lay out the matters that we will examine.

First, the funding of Whitewater; second, the handling of Whitewater after 1986; third, the tax treatment of Whitewater; fourth, David Hale and Capital Management Services; fifth, Dan Lasater; sixth, the Perry County Bank in the 1990 Arkansas Gubernatorial Campaign; and finally, the Rose Law Firm billing records, the records that mysteriously appeared in the personal residence of the White House this past January. How did these important records get from Little Rock to Washington, who left these records in the White House Book Room and why were the subpoenaed records not turned over to investigators for 2 years?

As you can see, these areas that I have just briefly touched on will take a substantial amount of work and time and effort to complete in the next few weeks, but we will fulfill our obligation to the American people to get the full facts and to answer these questions.

Today, we will hear from several witnesses about two matters, the fundraiser held at Madison Guaranty for Bill Clinton and the lucrative contracts that Madison was awarded to lease office space to an Arkansas State agency.

On April 4, 1985, McDougal hosted a fundraiser at the offices of Madison Guaranty. The purpose of the fundraiser was to pay off the remaining campaign debt from the 1984 Gubernatorial Campaign. In the closing days of that race, Bill Clinton took out a loan for $50,000 from the Bank of Cherry Valley. The Clintons were personally obligated to pay off that loan. We also know that both before and after the fundraiser, Madison received valuable contracts to lease space to the Arkansas Development Finance Authority; and that these contracts helped prop up McDougal's financial house of cards.

Our witnesses today will testify about whether there was a connection between the award of the lease to Governor Clinton and the McDougal fundraiser. We will proceed as we have in the past in a bipartisan manner. We will work hard to get out all the facts as thoroughly, and as completely, and as expeditiously as we can. It is the intent of the Chairman to wrap this up before June 14th, if at all possible, and certainly to complete the report by June 17th.

I want to thank the Ranking Member, Senator Sarbanes, all our Members, and the staff that has worked in a collegial way in very difficult circumstances and in a bipartisan effort to successfully complete this inquiry.

Senator Sarbanes.

OPENING COMMENTS OF SENATOR PAUL S. SARBANES

Senator SARBANES. Well, thank you very much, Mr. Chairman. Since I share your expressed intention to move through the agenda expeditiously, I'm going to forgo, as it were, responding chapter and verse to some of the supposed findings you set out in your opening statement with respect to the work we've more or less completed thus far. Suffice it to say in my view, no illegality or impropriety was demonstrated, and that is very important. Obviously, that will be set forth in the final report which is due on June 17th, and I expect it is quite apparent there will be differing interpretations at that time. I will forego undertaking that project right now since I think we ought to move ahead with the people that are before us.

I am hopeful we will be able to conduct these hearings over the next 2 months in a fair, thorough, and comprehensive way. That we will be able to address the items that are on the agenda in a responsible manner, and then we will draw our conclusions at the end after we have heard all the testimony.

Thank you.

The CHAIRMAN. Could I ask the panel, please, to stand for the purposes of taking the oath?

[Witnesses sworn.]

The CHAIRMAN. I want to thank the panel for their cooperation.

Let me ask if any of my colleagues have any statements that they would like to make before we start with the panel?

Senator Faircloth.

OPENING COMMENT OF SENATOR LAUCH FAIRCLOTH

Senator FAIRCLOTH. I do not.

The CHAIRMAN. Do any of the witnesses have any statements that they would like to make?

Mr. MALLARD. I do not.

The CHAIRMAN. Mr. Chertoff.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

Good morning.

Ms. Herr, actually all the witnesses, let me focus your attention to the subject matter I am going to be asking you questions about today. This has to do with a number of leases that were entered into between State agencies in Arkansas and properties owned by James McDougal and his real estate company, which was part of his savings and loan, Madison Guaranty, back in the mid-1980's. In particular, we are examining the relationship, if any, between those State agency leases and Mr. McDougal's property, how those leases came to be, and the effect that those leases had on Mr. McDougal's financial well-being, because obviously, from the standpoint of his savings and loan and his financial business, the real estate holdings of Madison Financial were an important part of the total financial picture keeping him afloat. So we want to examine the way in which that asset, his real estate company, was assisted through the obtaining of these leases.

I would like to start with Ms. Herr. Where do you now work?

SWORN TESTIMONY OF HELEN HERR FORMER LEASING ADMINISTRATOR ARKANSAS STATE BUILDING SERVICES

Ms. HERR. I'm employed with the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Back in the mid-1980's you worked for the State of Arkansas?

Ms. HERR. That's right.

Mr. CHERTOFF. What was your job?

Ms. HERR. I was the Leasing Administrator at State Building Services.

Mr. CHERTOFF. I'm going to ask you to move the mike a little closer. You can move it to you rather than move yourself to it.

I would like to focus your attention on the period starting in 1983 and ask whether, at the time you were in charge of State leases, you got involved in helping what was then known as the Arkansas Housing Agency look for new office space in Little Rock.

Ms. HERR. That's right.

Mr. CHERTOFF. And how did you go about doing that in the fall of 1983?

Ms. HERR. Many of the details are left—I don't remember the details because at that time, Senator, we had many State agencies that moved around in the city. I can tell you that the people in my office had solicited the market, as we typically did. Whether or not this particular case we did it through a newspaper advertisement, I don't remember, but we had solicited the market looking for space to house Mr. Epes' agency because the space that they were in presently occupying they had outgrown.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Mr. Epes is the gentleman sitting to your right?

Ms. HERR. Yes, sir.

Mr. CHERTOFF. He was then the head of the Arkansas Housing Agency?

Ms. HERR. He was the Director.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Am I right that at this particular time in the mid-1980's, the real estate market in Little Rock was kind of soft?

Ms. HERR. It was.

Mr. CHERTOFF. And what that means for people who are not involved in real estate is that there were some empty space, there were vacancies and landlords were pretty eager to get tenants to fill those spaces; right?

Ms. HERR. That's right.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Just so we can understand a little bit about the economics of the way it works with real estate, if you are a commercial landlord like Jim McDougal was or like this bank subsidiary was, am I right that the real value of your commercial building lies in the rent you can obtain by leasing it out?

Ms. HERR. Sure.

Mr. CHERTOFF. And if you can find a long-term tenant who is going to take a long-term lease, pay market rates or above market rates, is financially responsible like a government agency, that is a prime tenant for a landlord?

Ms. HERR. Yes, it is.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Would you agree with me, therefore, that in 1983 and 1984 in Little Rock, given the soft market in real estate, it was very desirable for someone who was renovating an office building and had a lot of vacancies to get a State agency to come on in and take a long-term lease?

Ms. HERR. Yes, it was.

Mr. CHERTOFF. I take it you would also agree with me that from the standpoint of the financial picture of Mr. McDougal's real estate business, if you have a leased out or an occupied commercial building, that increases the value of the asset because you have tenants who are actually paying rent and that's generating income; is that right?

Ms. HERR. Yes, sir.

Mr. CHERTOFF. I guess it was no surprise, then, that in the fall of 1983, there were a number of landlords who were soliciting the possibility of having the housing agency move into their buildings; is that right?

Ms. HERR. That's right.

Mr. CHERTOFF. In fact, am I right that in the fall of 1983, Mr. Epes actually had tentatively suggested a couple of buildings to you as the leasing person that he might be interested in having his agency occupy?

Ms. HERR. As I recall, he had, yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. And did he, in fact, ask you to start negotiating with a couple of those premises?

Ms. HERR. I remember that because you have put a memo in front of me that says that. I did not remember that until I saw that memo.

Mr. CHERTOFF. But with your memory refreshed, can you tell us a little bit about what he had asked you to do in late 1983?

Ms. HERR. There was a location that he liked on Brookwood Drive, and I don't recall a lot about it, that particular location.

Mr. CHERTOFF. But are you at least clear that as of late 1983, you had already gone through a fair amount of processing of proposals, there were a couple of places that Mr. Epes was interested in that you were beginning to pursue?

Ms. HERR. Yes, yes, sir.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Now did there come a time after you were pretty well along in this process that you learned that Susan McDougal and Jim McDougal were interested in being considered for having this agency lease space in their building, in Madison?

Ms. HERR. Yes, yes, sir.

Mr. CHERTOFF. How did you learn about that?

Ms. HERR. As I recall, Ms. McDougal came to our office and met with Mr. Mallard, and Mr. Mallard asked me to come into his office and I met with him there.

Mr. CHERTOFF. What did Mr. Mallard tell you?

Ms. HERR. That the McDougals were developing a building that he would like for us to look at.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Mr. Mallard was who at that time?

Ms. HERR. Mr. Mallard was the Director of the agency.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Your agency?

Ms. HERR. Yes, sir, my boss.

Mr. CHERTOFF. He was your boss?

Ms. HERR. Yes, sir.

Mr. CHERTOFF. So you were in charge of leasing, and he was your boss in your agency?

Ms. HERR. That's right.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Mr. Mallard called you in to meet with Susan McDougal?

Ms. HERR. Yes, sir.

Mr. CHERTOFF. And told you that the McDougals were interested in being considered to have the lease in their building?

Ms. HERR. Yes, sir.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Now did Mr. Mallard tell you to do anything?

Ms. HERR. He asked that I get the gentleman that worked in our architectural division to go with me to look at the space.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Did you do that?

Ms. HERR. Yes, sir.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Did you go with Mr. Epes?

Ms. HERR. I don't recall who from Mr. Epes' agency went at that particular time. Mr. Brooks in my office and Mr. Anderson in his office were handling a lot of the details at that time.

Mr. CHERTOFF. All right. So Mr. Epes had someone in his office, in the housing agency's office, named Mr. Anderson and you had someone in your office named Mr. Brooks?

Ms. HERR. Yes, sir.

Mr. CHERTOFF. And your understanding is that someone from your agency and someone from the housing agency actually went to look at the premises in Mr. McDougal's building?

Ms. HERR. Yes, sir. And I went also.

Mr. CHERTOFF. After this inspection, what was Mr. Epes'—what was his reaction? Did he want to go ahead and lease space in the building, Mr. McDougal's building, or not?

Ms. HERR. No, he did not.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Did he explain why not?

Ms. HERR. As I recall, the objections were the location of the facility and the fact that they did not believe that there was enough space to efficiently design their offices.

Mr. CHERTOFF. When you say "location," what was there in particular about the location that was a problem for Mr. Epes' agency?

Ms. HERR. The location was in an area of Little Rock on South Main Street that had gone through a number of years of having many vacant buildings and they did not feel that it was a desirable location.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Did they feel it was unsafe?

Ms. HERR. Yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You said there were also concerns about space that there was not enough space for the agency or there wouldn't be enough if the agency expanded?

Ms. HERR. Yes, sir.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Now did Mr. Epes actually have a letter sent under his signature rejecting Mr. McDougal's building as a place for his agency to occupy space in?

Ms. HERR. Yes, he did.

Mr. CHERTOFF. I'm going to show you a copy of that letter which we will put up on the screen here. You should have a copy in front of you, dated March 5, 1984. It's addressed to a Ms. Helen Vowell. I take it that's you?

Ms. HERR. Yes, sir.

Mr. CHERTOFF. In a prior name?

Ms. HERR. In another life.

Mr. CHERTOFF. This is Mr. Epes' letter officially on behalf of the housing agency rejecting the space at the Madison building; right?

Ms. HERR. Yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Did you go tell your boss, Mr. Mallard, that Mr. Epes did not want to go lease space in Mr. McDougal's building?

Ms. HERR. Yes, as I recall I did.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Did you have a face-to-face conversation with Mr. Mallard about that?

Ms. HERR. Yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. What did Mr. Mallard tell you?

Ms. HERR. As I recall, we talked a lot about it and Mr. Mallard thought that the location—that Mr. Epes' objections were not valid, that it was a good location and that our architect could design the space to fit them. And he told me that the Governor's office was interested in helping develop that portion of Little Rock. The Governor's Mansion was located near there. It's an area—it's a historical area of Little Rock called the Quapaw Quarter, and he said that they were very interested in leasing the space to help in the revitalization of that portion of Little Rock.

Mr. CHERTOFF. When you say, "they were interested in leasing the space," you mean the Governor's office was interested in having the agency lease the space?

Ms. HERR. Yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Other than saying that the Governor's office was interested because it would help the development of that area, did he say anything else in that conversation about why there might be an interest in having that space in Mr. McDougal's building rented?

Ms. HERR. He said that the Clintons and the McDougals were friends and that they were interested in developing that part of Little Rock.

Mr. CHERTOFF. So Mr. Mallard really gave you two reasons. He said to you that there was interest in developing that quarter of Little Rock and that the McDougals were friends of the Clintons?

Ms. HERR. Well, yes, sir.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Did Mr. Mallard tell you that he didn't want to consider any other proposals for Mr. Epes' agency, that in fact he wanted to have this be the proposal that was accepted?

Ms. HERR. I don't recall if he said it exactly like that to me. I just know that he said that he was interested in us pursuing working out an agreeable solution.

Mr. CHERTOFF. By the way, did Mr. Mallard indicate to you or were you aware that Mr. Mallard himself was a friend of the McDougals?

Ms. HERR. Yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. How were you aware of that?

Ms. HERR. Mr. Mallard told me.

Mr. CHERTOFF. This is obviously an important conversation. I want to see if we can kind of sharpen it a little bit by going back to a question and answer you testified about when you gave a deposition a short while back, I think it was on February 13th, before we broke. It's at page 145 of your deposition, if you can find it.

Ms. HERR. I have it.

Mr. CHERTOFF. There's a question at line 3 from Mr. Fromewick, Counsel on the Democratic side:

Question: So back up if we can to that period of time, yes, you knew that the McDougals and Clintons were friends, and you said you knew that Mallard was friends of the McDougals?

Answer: He was friends and he would talk about seeing them in a social setting. And I don't recall exactly what he said to me when he told me that we were not going to consider other proposals, only the Madison proposals. But as I recall, he said the Governor's office wants us to lease this space, and that's the way it is going to be.

Question: And you are quite clear about that?

Answer: That's the way I recall it.

That's your testimony; right?

Ms. HERR. Yes, sir.

Mr. CHERTOFF. And that's the way it happened?

Ms. HERR. Yes, sir. I thought—you were questioning me a few minutes ago about early negotiations on the Madison space.

Mr. CHERTOFF. This relates to another conversation you had?

Ms. HERR. As I recall it, this would have been a little bit later on when it became even more apparent that Mr. Epes and his employees did not want to move there.

Mr. CHERTOFF. OK. So then there came a point after this initial objection by Mr. Epes that Mr. Epes continued to resist moving to this Madison building?

Ms. HERR. Yes, he did.

Mr. CHERTOFF. I gather that a lot of the problem was the employees in Mr. Epes' agency didn't want to work in that building?

Ms. HERR. That's right.

Mr. CHERTOFF. I gather some of that was due to safety concerns?

Ms. HERR. Yes, sir.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You went back and had an additional conversation with Mr. Mallard about this?

Ms. HERR. Well, we had many conversations. We saw each other daily and worked with each other very closely.

Mr. CHERTOFF. And this excerpt from your earlier testimony in the deposition where you said that he wasn't going to consider other proposals, "The Governor's office wants us to lease this space and that's the way it's going to be." This comment by Mr. Mallard came as you continued to relay Mr. Epes' objections?

Ms. HERR. Yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Mr. Epes, did you ever wind up actually meeting with the Governor about this?

SWORN TESTIMONY OF S. WOOTEN EPES
FORMER EXECUTIVE DIRECTOR
ARKANSAS HOUSING DEVELOPMENT AGENCY

Mr. EPES. Yes, sir, I did.

Mr. CHERTOFF. I take it that was after you had sent your letter of March 5, 1984; right?

Mr. EPES. Yes, sir.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Now is that your signature on the letter?

Mr. EPES. No, sir.

Mr. CHERTOFF. It's the signature of your deputy?

Mr. EPES. I am not certain, but I do recall that a letter was authorized to be sent and I believe that Mr. Anderson probably signed my name to it, and I was somewhat familiar with the contents of it. I knew that it went out.

Mr. CHERTOFF. So you authorized the letter to be sent with your signature?

Mr. EPES. Yes, yes, sir.

Mr. CHERTOFF. So it's clear that as of March 5th, the date of this letter, as Ms. Herr testified, you on behalf of your agency did not want to accept the proposal at Madison?

Mr. EPES. Yes, sir.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Did you go to Mr. Mallard to speak to him and renew your objection?

Mr. EPES. I don't believe I did.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You conveyed it through Ms. Herr?

Mr. EPES. It's been many years, so I'm not certain, but probably Mr. Anderson did. He handled many of the day-to-day activities regarding the lease arrangement.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Just for the record, I believe Mr. Anderson has passed away, so that's why we don't have him here.

Mr. EPES. Yes, sir.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Now there comes a point where you, Mr. Epes, Mr. Anderson, or your agency are resisting taking this lease and Mr. Mallard is insisting that you take it and you finally have a meeting with the Governor, Governor Clinton. How did that come about, Mr. Epes?

Mr. EPES. The Chairman of the Board of Directors of the Arkansas Housing Development Agency discussed the matter with me and was very aware that the employees of the agency did not want to be located in that building. And I'm not certain whose suggestion it was, but during the conversation I had with him regarding that, it became clear to us that the only recourse was to go to both of our boss, who was the Governor.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You actually had a meeting with the Governor?

Mr. EPES. Yes, sir.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Who else was at the meeting?

Mr. EPES. The Chairman, Mr. Hardwicke, was there, and the Governor and I believe someone else was in the room, but I do not recall who.

Mr. CHERTOFF. In that meeting did you explain to Governor Clinton that your employees did not want to occupy space in or work in the Madison building?

Mr. EPES. Yes, sir, I did.

Mr. CHERTOFF. And you indicated that Mr. Mallard was insisting you take the lease?

Mr. EPES. I believe that I did that, yes, sir.

Mr. CHERTOFF. At the time you had this conversation with the Governor, was it common to take disputes about leases to the Governor's office?

Mr. EPES. I do not know. I had only been in that job several months.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Other than this occasion you met with the Governor on this lease, do you remember any other instances that a dispute like this was taken up to the Governor, in your experience?

Mr. EPES. My experience was in my job, we moved twice, and the second time, it did not occasion a meeting with the Governor.

Mr. CHERTOFF. On this occasion, did the Governor evidence familiarity with the issue about this lease or did you have to explain it to him?

Mr. EPES. I don't recall.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Did he indicate that he knew Mr. McDougal?

Mr. EPES. I am not certain that Mr. McDougal's name was discussed during the meeting.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Well, was the name of the building discussed in the meeting?

Mr. EPES. Yes, sir.

Mr. CHERTOFF. It's the Madison building?

Mr. EPES. Yes, sir.

Mr. CHERTOFF. I take it that the Quapaw Quarter is near the Governor's Mansion so you would expect that the Governor would be familiar with the building?

Mr. EPES. Yes, sir. The Quapaw Quarter includes the Governor's Mansion and the area where this building is located.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Now after you had told Governor Clinton about the objections your employees had to working in this building, what was his decision about whether your agency would take this lease in the Madison building or not?

Mr. EPES. I am not sure that he actually made a decision. His statement was that he did not see the necessity to overrule the decision of Mr. Mallard and that he felt that that part of downtown Little Rock needed redevelopment and that it would be a good thing for the State to be located in that part of town to assist in that redevelopment. It was about four blocks from the Governor's Mansion.

Mr. CHERTOFF. So Mr. Clinton essentially sided with Mr. Mallard's decision or he accepted Mr. Mallard's decision that you should go ahead and take the lease; right?

Mr. EPES. Yes, sir.

Mr. CHERTOFF. And you signed the lease on about April 1, 1984; is that fair to say?

Mr. EPES. Yes, sir. That's what the lease shows here.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Would it surprise you to learn that it was a 5-year lease and that the total amount of payments over the 5 years was a little bit under $300,000? You can take a look at the document if you want to.

Mr. EPES. Well, it was $4,800 a month, whatever that is times 60, yes, sir.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Now, Ms. Herr, it's interesting, we heard the rationale for this lease was—at least part of the rationale was to revitalize this Quapaw Quarter of Little Rock. Other than this lease, in the Madison building which I gather was a year later in April 1985, was expanded, is that correct, Mr. Epes, that your agency took additional space in the Madison building in 1985?

Mr. EPES. We did.

Mr. CHERTOFF. I believe the lease was signed in August.

Mr. EPES. I was going to say, my recollection was it was later because the Arkansas Housing Development Agency was abolished in 1985 and the new agency, the Arkansas Development Finance Authority, was the successor agency and it was an expanded authority which required additional staff, and therefore, when we began staffing up for the new agency, we needed more space.

Mr. CHERTOFF. So you leased additional space in Mr. McDougal's building?

Mr. EPES. Right.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Ms. Herr, other than that lease and then the expanded lease, were there any other leases that you were aware of during this period from 1983 to 1985 down in this Quapaw Quarter which was, we've been told, the point of redevelopment?

Ms. HERR. At some point, and I see here it was November, the State Revenue Department leased a facility across the street from the bank.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Who owned that facility?

Ms. HERR. Mr. McDougal.

Mr. CHERTOFF. So that was another State lease that went into a property owned by Mr. McDougal?

Ms. HERR. Yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Other than the leases that were obtained in Mr. McDougal's properties during your period of tenure between 1983 and let's say 1985 or 1986, were any other State agencies located in any non-McDougal buildings in that area already?

Ms. HERR. Not that I recall.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Ms. Hays, I would like to turn to you for a minute in the last few minutes we have. You actually went to work at Madison Guaranty Savings & Loan in June 1985?

SWORN TESTIMONY OF PATRICIA J. HAYS
FORMER ADMINISTRATIVE ASSISTANT & COLLECTIONS
OFFICER, MADISON GUARANTY SAVINGS & LOAN

Ms. HAYS. That's right.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You were not involved in negotiating any of these leases, were you?

Ms. HAYS. No.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Were you aware in 1985 that there was discussion about expanding the Arkansas Housing Agency's lease in the Madison building?

Ms. HAYS. I was aware of it. But I don't remember exactly when that was.

Mr. CHERTOFF. In fact, you were taken through some of the additional space?

Ms. HAYS. Right.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Other than the bank offices and the State agency, were there any other tenants in Mr. McDougal's building on Main Street?

Ms. HAYS. Yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Which were the other tenants?

Ms. HAYS. Quapaw Title Company.

Mr. CHERTOFF. What was that? What kind of business was that?

Ms. HAYS. A title company.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Who owned that, do you know?

Ms. HAYS. Andy Clark.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Other than that, any other tenants?

Ms. HAYS. Not that I remember.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Now, you were not involved in 1985 in the leasing decision; right?

Ms. HAYS. That's right.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Were you aware in 1985 in April that there had been a fundraiser that Mr. McDougal held for Governor Clinton to retire a campaign debt from the previous year's election?

Ms. HAYS. No.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Did there come a time in 1987 that you did become aware that there had been a fundraiser to retire a campaign debt that was held by Mr. McDougal?

Ms. HAYS. No, sir. I think the first time I learned about that was when I read it in the paper recently.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Did there come a time in 1987 that you became aware that there was an issue concerning leases, State leases on Mr. McDougal's property?

Ms. HAYS. I don't believe so.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Well, let me ask you this. Do you remember an individual by the name of Charles Peacock?

Ms. HAYS. Yes, sir.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Who was Charles Peacock?

Ms. HAYS. He was a Madison borrower and he may have been a shareholder as well. I'm not certain.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Was there a timeframe that he was actually a Director of Madison Guaranty Savings & Loan?

Ms. HAYS. Possibly. But I don't remember exactly what his position was.

Mr. CHERTOFF. And you also knew him to be a borrower, a substantial borrower?

Ms. HAYS. Yes, sir.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Was he borrowed money for a business called Dixie Continental Leasing?

Ms. HAYS. That's right.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Am I right that there came a point in 1987 that there was a legal dispute about Mr. Peacock's failure to repay his loan to Madison Guaranty?

Ms. HAYS. The loan was sent for foreclosure.

Mr. CHERTOFF. And you were involved in handling the matter for the bank; right?

Ms. HAYS. Right.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Mr. Peacock was represented by a lawyer named Mr. Hopkins?

Ms. HAYS. Right.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You had a lawyer also who you were working with on your side; right?

Ms. HAYS. That's right. Lance Miller.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Did there come a time that you had a conversation in 1987 with Mr. Peacock's lawyer about a fundraiser and about State leases?

Ms. HAYS. Yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Would you tell us how you came to have that conversation?

Ms. HAYS. Sure. Let me back up because I said Lance Miller was our lawyer. Actually I think it was Marcella Taylor, that was our lawyer, but Lance worked at the same firm with her.

I remember one afternoon that Greg Hopkins came into my office, he was very angry, and this was after the Dixie Continental loan had been referred for foreclosure, and he made several statements to me that day.

Mr. CHERTOFF. What did he say to you concerning the loan and its relationship to campaign contributions and that relationship to leases, State leases of Mr. McDougal's properties?

Ms. HAYS. The best I can recall is he said that proceeds from the Dixie Continental Leasing loan had gone to Governor Clinton's campaign, that Mr. McDougal had arranged through Governor Clinton for various State agencies to lease space from Madison, and I think that's about it.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Did you actually report this conversation to the lawyer that you were working with, Mr. Miller?

Ms. HAYS. Yes, I did.

Mr. CHERTOFF. And you reported it the same day?

Ms. HAYS. Yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Because you were pretty upset about this conversation?

Ms. HAYS. I don't know that I was upset. I found it interesting.

Mr. CHERTOFF. We have a memo that Mr. Miller wrote about this conversation that you had reported to him which I would like to direct your attention to. It's to JSS from LM, dated April 23, 1987. I would like you to find that because I'm going to—

Ms. HAYS. Yes, I have it.

Mr. CHERTOFF. It's a fairly long memo. I would like, though, to direct your attention to the, I guess what's page 3 of that memo. There's a paragraph that begins "in addition."

Ms. HAYS. Yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. I will read it to you, and then I want to ask you whether this is a correct rendition of what you told Mr. Miller and what you had been told by Mr. Hopkins. "In addition, Mr. Hopkins informed Ms. Heritage"—and I take it at that time you went by the name of Ms. Heritage.

Ms. HAYS. Right.

Mr. CHERTOFF. —"that one of the loans made by Madison to Dixie Continental Leasing, upon which Marcy Taylor has undertaken foreclosure proceedings, also involves fraudulent transactions. Mr. Hopkins stated that a portion of the loan proceeds made to Dixie Continental Leasing went to Bill Clinton's campaign and that in return for the substantial campaign contribution, Bill Clinton assured Jim McDougal that a State agency would lease space from Madison at its headquarters on Main Street in Little Rock." Now is that, in fact, what you told Mr. Miller?

Ms. HAYS. To the best of my memory, it is. I do not have any reason to doubt that Mr. Miller accurately wrote down what I told him.

Mr. CHERTOFF. What you told Mr. Miller was what you had been told by Mr. Hopkins?

Ms. HAYS. Yes, sir.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Now the fundraiser occurred on April 4, 1985. And I would like to direct your attention, Mr. Epes, to a letter which we have in the file on your letterhead dated April 9, 1985, to Paul Mallard signed with your name. I would like you to find that if you can.

Mr. EPES. I don't believe I can. I have two letters here, but neither of them are that letter.

Mr. CHERTOFF. We'll see if we can get you a copy real quick. The yellow light is on. We're just getting you the letter and my time is going to be up in a minute. Just a couple of questions.

Take a look at this letter, Mr. Epes. Am I correct that you signed this letter on April 9, 1985, which is 5 days after this fundraiser, indicating that because of the change in your agency, there was going to be a need to have expanded space?

Mr. EPES. I signed this letter on April 9th. I had no knowledge that it was—how many days it might have been after whatever fundraiser.

Mr. CHERTOFF. That's fair, but you did sign this letter and ultimately this led to your getting expanded space in Mr. McDougal's building?

Mr. EPES. Yes, sir.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Now in fairness to you, Mr. Epes, that's a good point. You did not know about any fundraiser; is that right?

Mr. EPES. That's correct.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Did you know at any time in 1984 or 1985 that Mr. Clinton and Mr. McDougal were business partners in an operation known as Whitewater Development Corporation?

Mr. EPES. I don't recall when I learned of that relationship. I knew that they were friends. That's about all I knew.

Mr. CHERTOFF. And you did not know there was a business relationship?

Mr. EPES. I don't believe that I did. I cannot tell you when I learned that.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Did you know that James McDougal had put a substantial amount of money into that joint venture during 1984 and 1985?

Mr. EPES. No, sir, I knew nothing of that.

Mr. CHERTOFF. I think this is a good time to stop.

The CHAIRMAN. Senator Sarbanes.

Senator SARBANES. I yield to Mr. Ben-Veniste.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Thank you, Senator.

Good morning, panel.

Let me start with this historical information about the early 1980's and the real estate market in Little Rock. We have gone through this exercise with the sewer and water authority, so now we're going to deal with this history in terms of real estate. The market, you say, was soft in that time, and we'll accept that. We were talking about lower priced commercial real estate; is that correct, Mr. Mallard, in this case?

SWORN TESTIMONY OF PAUL MALLARD FORMER DIRECTOR ARKANSAS STATE BUILDING SERVICES

Mr. MALLARD. Yes.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. And is it not the case that there was no issue about whether the housing authority needed to move? We're not dealing with a situation where there's any suggestion that for political reasons, an agency was moved out of its headquarters into another headquarters, are we?

Mr. MALLARD. I think they were being forced to move for lack of space. They needed more space.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. There is no question about that in your mind, is there, Ms. Herr?

Ms. HERR. No, there isn't.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Mr. Epes, you would agree that your agency really was required to move by the circumstances it found itself in at that point?

Mr. EPES. Yes, sir. We needed relocation.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. It is also the case, is it not, that there were some dozen or 18 different proposals that came across your desk, Ms. Herr, about the opportunity to provide space for this agency; is that correct?

Ms. HERR. There were several.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. And we've been all through that in deposition practice here and we could go through the various competing bids that came in and the spaces that were looked at from I guess some point in mid-1983 to early 1984; is that right?

Ms. HERR. Yes.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. None of those spaces with one exception was even potentially interesting to the housing authority; correct?

Ms. HERR. As I recall, yes, that's correct.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Mr. Mallard, did you find it unusual that a determination was being made that the State use its licensing authority and its ability to move State agencies into real estate to promote a policy that revitalize a historic area of Little Rock?

Mr. MALLARD. That was State Building Services' policy and had been for a number of years.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. This was an area, as we've heard, the Madison Bank building, which was in close proximity to the Governor's Mansion, in the same quarter of town; is that correct?

Mr. MALLARD. That's correct.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. That area, like many urban areas in America, had suffered during the 1970's and early 1980's in terms of a downturn in commercial real estate; is that correct?

Mr. MALLARD. That's correct.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. It was the policy of the State, as you articulated it, to try to improve that area which was populated, I trust, by lower-income residents of Little Rock, to try to bring that up in character and in safety and in commercial desirability; correct?

Mr. MALLARD. That's correct.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Now, you say that that had long been the policy of the State of Arkansas; is that correct?

Mr. MALLARD. That was the policy when I arrived at State Building Services.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. What year was that, sir?

Mr. MALLARD. 1983.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Ms. Herr, you would not take issue with the notion that from time to time when State agencies are asked to move their headquarters, that there are individuals in those agencies who would prefer not to go to the place they are told to go to?

Ms. HERR. That's very true.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. That happens or happened historically, because we're dealing with a decade or more ago, I guess, 13 years ago, that happened even prior to 1983; is that not so?

Ms. HERR. Yes, it did.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. I take it it's happened since, that agencies of the State who are relocated have employees who would prefer not to go to the place that the State tells them to go?

Ms. HERR. That's right.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Surprisingly, that even happens in Washington. We have those examples on a fairly frequent basis. People just find it traumatic to move and then if they move to a place that is unknown to them or they are uncertain about, they get even more nervous about that.

Ms. HERR. That's correct.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. And you would not take issue with the notion that that's precisely what happened back in 1983 in Little Rock, Arkansas in this situation?

Ms. HERR. That's right.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Now the principal concern, it would seem, as I hear your testimony was one about safety. Somehow it was considered that the Main Street location of the Madison Bank, although it was in close proximity to the Governor's Mansion, was not in the safest part of town; correct?

Ms. HERR. That's right.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Mr. Mallard, you understood that that was an expressed concern?

Mr. MALLARD. Right.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. As part of a revitalization of any rundown area, it would not be unusual that that would be a concern; is that correct?

Mr. MALLARD. That's correct.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Let's go back in time, if you can recall, back after the agency moved to the Madison location, whether there in fact were any incidents of assault on any of the employees of that agency, of the housing agency. Do you recall any being reported?

Mr. MALLARD. I don't recall any assaults on any individuals. I think that there was a car broken into one time on the parking lot, but that's—

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. A car broken into in a parking lot?

Mr. MALLARD. I think so.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. I am shocked. That's pretty much like saying hello to somebody in some of our areas here in Washington or in New York or other places I am familiar with. Let's talk about serious crime. Were there any robberies or assaults or rapes or other kinds of violent offenses during the entire period of time that the agency was located in the Madison headquarters?

Mr. MALLARD. Not that I was aware of.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Ms. Herr?

Ms. HERR. Not that I was aware of.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. So this concern about safety as it turned out was not well-founded, thankfully, in terms of the actual experience of the agency in that quarter; is that correct, Mr. Epes?

Mr. EPES. Yes, sir, that is correct.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Does anyone on the panel disagree with that characterization?

Mr. Epes, you were encouraged by your deputy to send a letter saying, "hell no, we won't go," in effect, a meeting was had at the Governor's office which you attended, and the notion of revitalization and I take it overreaction to the concerns about the neighborhood were put on the table and a determination was made that the Governor's office would not overrule Mr. Mallard's decision to relocate the offices to the Madison headquarters; is that correct?

Mr. EPES. Yes, sir.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. And from the standpoint of space availability, contiguousness of space and price, Mr. Mallard, was it your view that the Madison building provided competitive or better proposal to the State?

Mr. MALLARD. Yes, yes.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. In terms of the policy that you have expressed, in terms of attempting to revitalize the area, that policy trumped the other concerns, did it not?

Mr. MALLARD. I think so, yes.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Was there any pressure put on you, Mr. Mallard—and this is an important question from a historical perspective—in terms of the decision to select the Madison location?

Mr. MALLARD. No, not particular pressure from any individual, other than the individual wanted the lease.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. That would be true of any individual, and I'm sure that in Little Rock, the process was then and probably is now a little more informal than that which we would be familiar with in Washington in dealing with the State leasing, where you would meet with the individuals, they would make a pitch and a proposal, you would go out and visit, have a cup of coffee, talk about what they had to offer and then come back and make up your mind. Is that a fair way of describing it?

Mr. MALLARD. Basically, yes.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Ms. Herr?

Ms. HERR. We had that leeway, yes, sir.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. There wasn't anything improper about that, about meeting with the individuals?

Ms. HERR. No, sir, no.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. So the concerns that were raised about the location turned out to be, fortunately for all, involved an exaggeration? Mr. Epes, you would agree with that?

Mr. EPES. Yes, sir.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Then there came a time later when you required more space and you requested the authority to negotiate for additional space, did you?

Mr. EPES. Yes, sir, sure did.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. And were you able to find contiguous space in Madison?

Mr. EPES. Yes, sir, there was adjoining space, we just had to knock out a portion of a wall and make a doorway to accommodate the additional new employees, yes, sir.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Mr. Mallard, did you find that that was a reasonable and acceptable way to address the additional space requirements of the agency?

Mr. MALLARD. Yes.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. To lease additional space from Madison?

Mr. MALLARD. Yes. We always tried to keep them in the same location if we could.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Did you feel that in some way, you were being held up or extorted by Madison in terms of the lease terms that were proposed or were they in line with the economics of your prior experience?

Mr. MALLARD. I think so.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. There was a renovation made to suit the quarters, wasn't there?

Mr. MALLARD. Yes.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. And that was folded into the lease price?

Mr. MALLARD. I think it was, yes.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Ms. Herr, do you recall?

Ms. HERR. Yes, it was. Yes.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. That was acceptable?

Ms. HERR. Yes, it was.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Mr. Epes, you were satisfied?

Mr. EPES. Yes, sir, definitely.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Then there came a time when you expanded beyond the limitations of the Madison building and you were able to negotiate new space, I take it?

Mr. EPES. Yes, sir, we moved.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. What year was that?

Mr. EPES. I'm not certain. I believe it was in 1987, perhaps early 1987, that the new authority had continued to grow and we needed more room for personnel and storage and meeting rooms and so we moved to 100 Main Street.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. OK. And you were obliged, then, to break your lease, because you had a 5-year lease with Madison; correct?

Mr. EPES. Yes, sir.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Under the circumstances, the new landlord negotiated with Madison and negotiated a settlement of the additional time left on the lease?

Mr. EPES. That's my recollection. I was not involved in those negotiations, but I seem to recall something of that nature.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Ms. Herr, were you involved in those?

Ms. HERR. No, sir.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Mr. Mallard?

Mr. MALLARD. I don't think I was, no.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Our understanding is that such negotiations took place, this was after Mr. McDougal had left the savings and loan. It was after the savings and loan had been taken over, is that right, Ms. Hays, in 1987?

Ms. HAYS. I'm sorry, could you repeat the question?

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. 1987 was after the savings and loan had been taken over?

Ms. HAYS. It was after the McDougals were ousted. I do not think it was technically taken over by the RTC until 1989.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. So in any event, the McDougals had nothing to profit from or were not involved in the negotiations in 1987; is that your recollection, Mr. Epes?

Mr. EPES. I'm sorry, I can't recall at what stage that took place.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Ms. Herr, you indicated there was another property that was leased by the State, that was the Revenue Department which opened an office across the street from Madison in a building that had been renovated also by Mr. McDougal and Madison; correct?

Ms. HERR. That's right.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. And you were asked whether there were other State agencies that were moved to the Quapaw Quarter, and you indicated the revenue building was the only additional one. However, let me ask you this. When there is a revitalization, the idea is to bring a new and stable enterprise, to wit, like a government facility, into the area which becomes a magnet for supporting infrastructure around the area. Did you say whether as a result of Madison—of the agency moving to Madison, that the resulting area began to improve?

Ms. HERR. Yes, it did.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Mr. Mallard, would that be your view as well?

Mr. MALLARD. Very much so.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. So that in that sense, although no other State agencies moved into that area, the desirability of locating a State agency there for the purpose of revitalizing that part of historic Little Rock, was in fact a successful theory that was proved correct in the practical application?

Mr. MALLARD. I would say so.

Ms. HERR. Yes.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. I think it is important, Mr. Chairman, that we supplement Mr. Mallard's testimony here. Obviously, we can't have all of the witnesses who would provide testimony on each issue on every panel. In this regard, Mr. Nash has given prior testimony regarding the subject matter of whether there was any influence exerted in connection with the selection of the Madison property. And we will hear from Mr. Nash, as I understand it, at some later time in these new hearings.

The CHAIRMAN. I believe next week.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. But I would like to read at this point to put into context Mr. Nash's testimony from February 21, 1996, page 39:

Question: Mr. Nash, did you exert any influence whatsoever on the SBS—

That would be your agency, Mr. Mallard and Ms. Herr.

—to induce them to select the Madison building for the ADFA offices?

Answer: No. I don't recall exerting any influence or pressure. Did you say "pressure"?

Question: "Influence" is the word I used.

Answer: Influence, no. I may have communicated at that time my interest, but I don't remember that specifically.

Question: You didn't suggest the Madison Guaranty building to SBS, did you?

Answer: No, I did not suggest the Madison Guaranty building to State Building Services.

Now to go beyond that, in the conversation that you were referring to in your testimony in deposition that Mr. Chertoff reminded you about, that was brought out by Mr. Fromewick on the Minority staff, what you were talking about there was the situation after the selection process had identified the Madison Bank, there had been the letter drafted by Mr. Anderson and authorized by Mr. Epes to discuss the selection of the Madison property, and then the Governor decided not to intervene in favor of overruling the decision that Mr. Mallard had made, is that correct, in terms of the timing of the quotation that was read to you? Is that right, Ms. Herr?

Ms. HERR. As I recall it, yes.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. At that point, the decision was, and as it was communicated back to you, that the Governor was not going to interfere with the decision that was made and was going to let it stand, or the Governor's office?

Ms. HERR. I don't know that that was communicated—that specifically was communicated back to me.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. OK. But in fact, that's indeed what happened; is that correct, Mr. Epes?

Mr. EPES. I believe so, yes, sir.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Now let me go to you, Ms. Hays. It's not your fault but I have a question as to why you were on this panel rather than the panel that we are going to see a little bit later, because all of your testimony has to do with the same subject matter that Mr. Peacock and the other members of that panel will provide to us. That would be Mr. Hopkins and Mr. Miller, about whose conversations you have been asked; is that correct?

Ms. HAYS. That's right.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. The Majority makes these determinations, and you are in no way responsible for what panel you come onto, so let me ask you a few questions because we're jumping around a little bit in time. Everything that you have testified about occurred in 1987?

Ms. HAYS. That's correct.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Everything that the other members of this panel have testified about occurred in 1983 or 1984?

Ms. HERR. Right.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. This memo that you have been asked about, this memo was leaked or provided otherwise to the press at least in July 1995. Do you recall receiving any questions from the press about it at that time?

Ms. HAYS. Yes.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. I have an article, and maybe we could make this a part of the record at some point, Mr. Chairman, that is dated July 31, 1995, and I'm going to refer to it if I might.

The CHAIRMAN. Go ahead. It will be ordered in the record.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Thank you.

We also have a photograph of someone from the House Banking Committee carrying a stack of documents which was released to the press. Whether this was released at that moment or earlier, I couldn't say, but in any event, you recall being asked about this as early as 9 months ago?

Ms. HAYS. Yes, sir.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Mr. Mallard, you were also questioned by the press about these memos that Mr. Chertoff brought up with Ms. Hays 9 months ago; is that correct? I see you were quoted in this article and stated consistently with what you have testified here. It says, "Paul Mallard, who ran the building services office, said 'Clinton never tried to influence me.'" And Mr. Epes, you were also quoted in this article, so I take it when these memos were leaked to the press, you also got a call about it?

Mr. EPES. That's correct.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. So these memos are at least familiar to the press, if they are not to other people or people who have read those articles back 9 months ago. With respect to everything that you have testified about here today, Ms. Hays, you had no direct knowledge of it?

Ms. HAYS. Of what's in the memo?

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. The content of the memos.

Ms. HAYS. No, I didn't even know there was a memo until July of 1995.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. At that time you learned about it because people started calling you on the telephone from the press, I take it?

Ms. HAYS. I think that I actually learned about it from Kenneth Starr's office a few weeks before the press called me. They asked me some questions about it and that was the first time I knew of its existence.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Mr. Starr's office questioned you about it and then within a couple of weeks, you received some press inquiries?

Ms. HAYS. Right, I didn't ever see the memo until the reporter showed it to me.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. I see.

Senator SARBANES. A reporter showed you the memo?

Ms. HAYS. Yes, sir, he brought it to my house.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. In Little Rock?

Ms. HAYS. Yes, sir.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Was it a local reporter for the Little Rock—

Ms. HAYS. I'm sorry, from the Associated Press.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Associated Press?

Ms. HAYS. Yes, Bill Simmons.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. In the memo itself, there are statements attributed to Mr. Hopkins—and we'll hear from Mr. Hopkins, I presume, shortly—but you have no way of knowing whether Mr. Hopkins was exaggerating or telling the truth?

Ms. HAYS. No.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. He wasn't under oath.

Ms. HAYS. No.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. He was reportedly quite upset at the time?

Ms. HAYS. That's as I remember it, yes.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Please pull your mike a little bit closer. Thank you. So when this happened, it was on the heels, as I understand it, of Mr. Hopkins' suit being thrown out. It was a Chapter 11 proceeding on behalf of his client, Mr. Peacock; is that correct?

Ms. HAYS. That's right.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. And that had been thrown out of court?

Ms. HAYS. Right.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. With prejudice, meaning it couldn't be refiled as a Chapter 11?

Ms. HAYS. Right.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. That has some serious consequences for one who is seeking the protection of bankruptcy court; correct?

Ms. HAYS. Sure.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. He was upset and he made some statements. Who did you hear those statements from?

Ms. HAYS. What statements are those?

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Attributed to Mr. Hopkins.

Ms. HAYS. The statements that are in the memo are what Mr. Hopkins told me, and then I told Lance Miller.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Then Mr. Miller wrote the memo?

Ms. HAYS. Right.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. So this conversation that you had with Mr. Hopkins occurred about how long after Mr. Peacock's claim was dismissed with prejudice?

Ms. HAYS. I don't know an exact date, but I think within a week or two.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. To what did you attribute Mr. Hopkins making this statement to you?

Ms. HAYS. Some legal posturing, as a lawyer, that he was a little bit angry about how things had worked out and he was maybe trying to intimidate me a little bit.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. And from your perspective in—

Senator SARBANES. I'm sorry, I missed that. Did you say that you thought he was trying to intimidate you a little bit?

Ms. HAYS. Yes, sir.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. At that point, what was your function vis-à-vis Mr. Hopkins and his client?

Ms. HAYS. I was the collection officer for Madison. I had referred the loan for foreclosure and I worked with the attorneys that were foreclosing the loan, the Dixie Continental Leasing loan.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. When you say that from your perspective—and we'll hear from Mr. Hopkins so that he can set forth what his position was at the time—but the result of the bankruptcy, Chapter 11 bankruptcy petition being dismissed with prejudice meant that you were back in business as a collections person?

Ms. HAYS. Right.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Trying to collect without Mr. Peacock now being able to utilize the protection of the bankruptcy court?

Ms. HAYS. Right.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. So as you perceived it, Mr. Hopkins was posturing in trying to intimidate you in some respect, that was in connection with your collection function; correct?

Ms. HAYS. Right, right. And at the time I was not a lawyer, but I am now, and so I sort of recognize probably better now what he was doing than I did at the time.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. What is your perception of what that was?

Ms. HAYS. Just bluffing, I call it, go in and try to make some statements and get the other side a little unsure of what their position is.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. To get you to cut him a little slack?

Ms. HAYS. Right.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Mr. Chairman, I have nothing further at this point.

The CHAIRMAN. Before I turn to other Members, I think it is important to note that the memo in question, which I have just seen for the first time dated April 23, 1987 re: Madison v. Peacock, I have been informed was released publicly by the House Banking Committee in July 1995, so I don't think we want to create an inference that somehow some surreptitious leaking of this information took place. But that's what I have been informed, that it was the House Banking Committee and they released a number of documents and that this was one of the documents.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. My understanding, Mr. Chairman, from Ms. Hays' testimony was that she was questioned about it by a reporter prior to the time of this release.

Ms. HAYS. He said he got it from the House Banking Committee. He had some other documents too.

The CHAIRMAN. That would comport with what we have been told, which was that the House Banking Committee released these documents.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Whether this was the official release or this was a leak is another question, Mr. Chairman.

The CHAIRMAN. But again, I think it's important that we note that the documents, whether they were released publicly the day that the reporter came or before or not, came from the House Banking Committee and it was not this Committee.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. It was not from us.

The CHAIRMAN. Yes, was not this Committee. I think that's fair.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. I think we're willing to concede that.

Senator SARBANES. I think for the fullness of the record, the House hearing in which they made an official public release, the first hearing was on August 7th, but this document was out there in July. Now, the Chairman is correct to point out that this Committee had nothing to do with this, but it does lay out some of the pattern of activity of the House Committee. As I understand it, the public release of this document which put it out in the public domain took place on August 7th; in fact, it was reported in The Washington Post on August 8th, including a picture showing, "a staff member carries documents that were distributed to members of the media," the caption says, but this document was out there in July, and that's when Ms. Hays, I gather, was approached—the story was in July, I take it?

Ms. HAYS. Yes, I think it was maybe a week or so before the story came out.

Senator SARBANES. Thank you.

The CHAIRMAN. Senator Mack.

OPENING COMMENTS OF SENATOR CONNIE MACK

Senator MACK. I have just a couple of thoughts to pursue, and then I will turn it back over to Mr. Chertoff.

The CHAIRMAN. Certainly.

Senator MACK. I want to engage in a discussion with Ms. Hays on the issue about what Mr. Hopkins said. I think the important thing here, frankly, is not whether some documents were released before someone else may have known about it or frankly what you think his motivations to be. My concern is what he said, because I think it's pretty central, at least this discussion I think is pretty central to the issues we are pursuing. So again, if you would tell me what Greg Hopkins said to you, I believe he was the attorney for Mr. Peacock?

Ms. HAYS. That's right.

Senator MACK. Mr. Peacock was the head of and had a fairly substantial interest in Madison Financial? He was a borrower of $50,000 from Madison, and I guess you were engaged in some activities to foreclose on that property?

Ms. HAYS. On the Dixie Continental Leasing loan.

Senator MACK. Right. So Mr. Hopkins comes in and says what to you?

Ms. HAYS. I don't know if I can remember everything, but basically—and I'll have to refer to the memo probably to refresh my memory.

Senator MACK. Sure, that's fine.

Ms. HAYS. That Mr. McDougal had promised to take care of Mr. Peacock and that obviously wasn't going to happen because Mr. McDougal was gone. And since we were foreclosing the loan, he didn't feel like he was being taken care of, that things had happened with the past administration of Madison, that people were going to end up going to prison someday over it, that money from the Dixie Continental Leasing loan had gone to Governor Clinton's Gubernatorial Campaign, and that the Governor had been instrumental in getting the State to lease office space from Madison. And then he made some comments about the Mitchell firm representing Madison, the conflict that he felt that presented.

Senator MACK. So in essence, he was saying that since Mr. Peacock had borrowed this money, a part of which went to the Clinton's Gubernatorial Campaign, that the Governor would make arrangements to see that McDougal's property was leased by a State agency, and don't you understand that this is what we were up to and you can't come back and foreclose? I mean, everybody knew that, certainly you didn't know it but the principals that were involved did. But again I really shouldn't put words into your mouth. I want to make sure I understand what this attorney for Mr. Peacock was trying to tell you.

Ms. HAYS. That seems to be what he was saying, but I don't have any way to know whether any of that was true, what the proceeds of the loan were used for and whether Governor Clinton had any knowledge about anything, if it did in fact happen.

Senator MACK. You made the comment a minute ago when Mr. Chertoff said something like "and you were angry about it," and you said "well, I wasn't angry, it was an interesting comment." Could you tell me, why do you find it interesting and not angering?

Ms. HAYS. I am not exactly sure what it was he asked me about. Greg was very angry when he came in my office. There were a lot of—

Senator MACK. I think he was implying that you were upset about what you heard.

Ms. HAYS. I wasn't really upset about it. A lot of interesting things went on at Madison, and to me this was just another, you know, drop in the bucket. There were all kinds of things going on there, and so I don't know whether any of what Greg told me was true or not, but I felt like there was a possibility that some of it could be true.

Senator MACK. OK.

Mr. Chertoff.

The CHAIRMAN. Let me first go to Senator Murkowski.

OPENING COMMENTS OF SENATOR FRANK H. MURKOWSKI

Senator MURKOWSKI. Thank you very much, Mr. Chairman. I appreciate your recognizing me and I will be very brief because I know that Counsel wants to proceed.

This will be for Mr. Epes. Before you leased the Madison building, there has been a reference to a letter—and I apologize for coming in late, but I had an energy hearing that I had to conduct—that letter was dated October 11, 1983, and indicated an interest to rent the building at Brookwood Street in Little Rock.

Mr. EPES. Yes, sir.

Senator MURKOWSKI. Did you feel, as I am told by staff, that the building did or did not meet the needs of your agency, the Alaska—the Arkansas Housing Development?

Mr. EPES. Occasionally we get my old address, AK, Alaska and AR, Arkansas mixed up.

Senator MURKOWSKI. Yes. Go ahead.

Mr. EPES. As I recall, the reason—by the way, the Brookwood site was raw land at that point. The letter references, "We want to see about placement of walls and windows and doors." And our desire was to have a space where we could design the layout and select where our various personnel would be without having doors and walls in the way when we moved in there.

To that date, we had not seen such a space. At that point, our feeling was that was the only way we could get such a space. As it turns out, the Madison building was in fact an old warehouse. It had no walls or doors and we ended up being able to get that type of space anyway.

Senator MURKOWSKI. But the building I am referring to would meet the needs with the renovation, is that what you are saying, or would not?

Mr. EPES. The Brookwood location?

Senator MURKOWSKI. That's correct. I want to ask——

Mr. EPES. The building wasn't built. We thought we could build a building that would meet our specifications, yes, sir.

Senator MURKOWSKI. Your concern with the Madison building was that it was too small, it was an unsafe neighborhood?

Mr. EPES. I was not worried about it being too small. It was a security problem at this point.

Senator MURKOWSKI. So you didn't favor the Madison building, that is clear. The record will reflect that.

Mr. EPES. That's right.

Senator MURKOWSKI. Let's talk about your meeting with Governor Clinton that occurred sometime in March 1984. You told the Governor that your staff didn't want to work in the Madison building because the area was unsafe; is that correct?

Mr. EPES. Yes, sir. Many.

Senator MURKOWSKI. What did the Governor say?

Mr. EPES. He said that area was being redeveloped, that that situation would change, and that in fact, he lived in that neighborhood and he felt like it was good State policy to locate offices in that part of town, which is being redeveloped.

Senator MURKOWSKI. Did you know of any connection the Governor had with Madison or McDougal at that time? Did you have any reason to believe there was a connection or involvement?

Mr. EPES. I knew they were friends.

Senator MURKOWSKI. Were you sensitive to that in the discussion that you were having with the Governor? Did you have that feeling that, well, clearly the Governor has an interest here because he is friends with McDougal?

Mr. EPES. No, sir, I didn't.

Senator MURKOWSKI. You didn't have that background?

Mr. EPES. I knew the background, but I was not sensitive to it because probably wherever we would go, the Governor would have known whoever the landlord was.

Senator MURKOWSKI. Is it unusual for the Governor to be involved in selection of a building?

Mr. EPES. No, sir, in fact he chose not to get involved.

Senator MURKOWSKI. Well, he was at the meeting?

Mr. EPES. I called the meeting, yes, sir.

Senator MURKOWSKI. You called it, but the Governor came?

Mr. EPES. I went to his office. I asked him to overrule one of my coequals, you might say, another department head, and the only way to get that department head's decision changed, I felt, was to go to our superior.

Senator MURKOWSKI. That issue was the selection—the pressures on you for the selection of the Madison building; is that correct?

Mr. EPES. I would say—

Senator MURKOWSKI. You wanted to be relieved of that pressure?

Mr. EPES. It wasn't pressure. The building services job is to locate offices for agencies, and they generally direct those agencies where to go.

Senator MURKOWSKI. They directed your agency to go to the Madison building, and you appealed to the Governor not to go to the Madison building because of concerns over safety?

Mr. EPES. Yes, sir.

Senator MURKOWSKI. That was the purpose of your meeting with the Governor?

Mr. EPES. Right, yes, sir.

Senator MURKOWSKI. Mr. Mallard stated during the meeting that he thought you should rent the building; is that correct?

Mr. EPES. Excuse me? Rent the space that we occupied, yes, sir.

Senator MURKOWSKI. Yes.

Mr. EPES. Yes, sir, right.

Senator MURKOWSKI. What was your attitude toward that statement? Were you adamant that the building was not appropriate during your meeting with the Governor?

Mr. EPES. As I recall the meeting, I stated the concern that my staff had about being located in that location. As a director of that agency, I wanted to have a staff that felt good about coming to work in the morning.

As a matter of fact, I lived eight blocks from there and I was not terribly concerned about it myself.

Senator MURKOWSKI. Did the Governor imply that he still wanted you to rent the building, that he would take care of the security, or he would ensure that the area of concern relative to safety was taken care of?

Mr. EPES. I don't recall what he said about our concern. He—I don't remember. I think possibly he said he would look into that. But I do recall that at some point after the meeting, and soon after we moved into the building, there was a security guard secured on duty during the day while we were there in the building.

Senator MURKOWSKI. What occurred during the meeting with the Governor that caused you to go ahead and rent the building?

Mr. EPES. He said he was not going to overrule the decision of Mr. Mallard.

Senator MURKOWSKI. So he basically told you then that your appeal for the safety of your workers was going to be overruled relative to your request, and that indeed the State of Arkansas was going to proceed with the Madison building, and that was the end of it?

Mr. EPES. He didn't put it in those words. I knew enough about procedure to know that that was the case, yes.

Senator MURKOWSKI. Clearly the Governor made the decision?

Mr. EPES. Well, Mr. Mallard made the decision, yes, sir.

Senator MURKOWSKI. He was at the meeting with the Governor?

Mr. EPES. No, sir.

Senator MURKOWSKI. He wasn't at the meeting with the Governor. Did the Governor say he wanted you to rent the building?

Mr. EPES. The Governor said he was not going to overrule Mr. Mallard's decision, that he felt it was good policy.

Senator MURKOWSKI. The Governor said that he wanted the part of the town where the Madison building was located to be renovated, but isn't it true that all government leases in that area went to buildings owned by Madison and Jim McDougal? Isn't that a little bit strange, in your opinion? You know the area. You know the real estate.

Mr. EPES. Well, I am not an expert in that field.

Senator MURKOWSKI. You don't have to be, and I am not asking you that.

Mr. EPES. There weren't many pieces of real estate down in that part of town that would have been suitable for an agency. Most of them were storefronts. This was an old warehouse.

Senator MURKOWSKI. Is it true that for the most part, the government leases in that area went to buildings owned by Madison and Jim McDougal?

Mr. EPES. It is true that there were two leases that went to them, yes, sir.

Senator MURKOWSKI. Who scheduled the meeting with the Governor?

Mr. EPES. I believe I did. It has been too long, I can't recall.

Senator MURKOWSKI. The bottom line is after the meeting you basically rented a building owned by Jim McDougal?

Mr. EPES. I am not sure if he owned it individually. Some entity that he had an interest in owned the building, yes, sir.

Senator MURKOWSKI. Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

The CHAIRMAN. Senator Sarbanes.

Senator SARBANES. I yield to Mr. Ben-Veniste. But before I do that, I understand that this area of Little Rock has improved over the years, actually since you went in there on this lease; correct?

Mr. MALLARD. That's correct, very much so.

Senator SARBANES. Would it be accurate to say that the presence of the State agency helped to contribute to that taking place, the upgrading of the neighborhood?

Mr. MALLARD. I would say totally.

Senator SARBANES. This was an old section of town; right.

Mr. MALLARD. Right, South Main was an old section.

Senator SARBANES. It was a section of town in which the Governor's Mansion was located?

Mr. MALLARD. Right.

Senator SARBANES. Somebody told me it was separated from the other side of town by a major expressway; is that correct?

Mr. MALLARD. Interstate 630.

Senator SARBANES. It is regarded in a sense as sort of the other side of the tracks; is that correct?

Mr. MALLARD. Probably so.

Senator SARBANES. You were dealing with a lower social and economic population in this neighborhood; is that right?

Mr. MALLARD. Yes.

Senator SARBANES. Was that the source of your concern about security, Mr. EPES?

Mr. EPES. I want to make it clear it was not my concern. It was my staff's concern. I lived eight blocks from there myself.

Senator SARBANES. So you are in that neighborhood yourself?

Mr. EPES. Yes, sir.

Senator SARBANES. Has the neighborhood improved over the years?

Mr. EPES. Yes, sir. I don't live there any longer. The property I own there is rental property and the rent has gone up.

Senator SARBANES. Thank you.

Senator MURKOWSKI. Mr. Chairman, isn't the point here simply to draw a conclusion that the Governor played a major role in the selection of this building?

The CHAIRMAN. Well, I think we have to look at the facts as we hear them and as we can establish, I think we can go to conclusions and reasonable people can draw conclusions from the facts as established. I don't believe, at this point in time, we can say that the Governor initiated this, but certainly—and stop the green light, please, because I don't want to impede on the time that should be yielded.

But I am going to make an observation. I think some of the testimony, as it comes in—and I will ask a couple of questions—is almost disingenuous at this point in time and we will get to it.

Obviously, someone brought this to the Governor's attention, and he made a decision, and that decision supported the conclusion by Mr. Mallard. Now how Mr. Mallard got to that, why they got to it, whether or not it was as a result of the relationship that existed between the Clintons and the McDougals, reasonable people may make their differences on that.

The value that one places in the recollection of Ms. Hays and the memo which outlined the conversation which the attorney for Peacock in which he came in and made these statements, all of those things have to be weighed.

Then people have to come to a conclusion based upon the rules of reason and logic. So, I think that people, some may come to one conclusion, some may come to another.

By the way, it is not difficult to support undertaking a project in an area. Governments oftentimes do, to help rehabilitate. I have seen that in Long Island and the town of Hempstead where we made many efforts in terms of attempting to take space, et cetera, move a court. I know that the county went out of their way to put a court facility in the middle of a village that had seen a decline, to attempt to bring about revitalization.

Again, that is one aspect, that is one claim. But you have to weigh it all, and that is what we are going to attempt to do. So I will ask that the green light go on and yield to Senator Sarbanes.

Senator SARBANES. I think we have been sort of circling around the bush. This was a black neighborhood, wasn't it?

Mr. MALLARD. Yes, predominantly, yes.

Senator SARBANES. There was an effort to try to revitalize the black neighborhood, wasn't there, by the location of this—

Mr. MALLARD. It was an effort to revitalize the Quapaw Quarters which incorporated all races.

Senator SARBANES. That's right. And as it turned out, it in fact worked, as you say, you think a lot of it because of this; correct?

Mr. MALLARD. That's correct. All of downtown, not just this area. I think we helped all of downtown Little Rock.

Senator SARBANES. Thank you.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. If I may, the testimony doesn't exactly fit with the gloss that some people would like to put on it. Some people would like to say that the Governor directed you, Mr. Mallard, to make a decision to select this property. Did that happen?

Mr. MALLARD. I never discussed it with the Governor. The Governor never discussed any leases with me in 4½ years.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. So unpleasantly for some people who would like to interpret this as being a directive coming from Governor Clinton, that is not what happened, was it, Mr. Mallard?

Mr. MALLARD. No, it did not happen.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Now with respect to your decision, your decision was based on the criteria that you have testified to here today; is that correct?

Mr. MALLARD. Correct.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. It is your testimony, if I understand it, that nobody raised with you or pressured you to select the Madison property; correct?

Mr. MALLARD. That's correct.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. That was your decision to make; is that so?

Mr. MALLARD. That was my decision.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Let me go to the second part of that suggestion, if I may, that the Governor somehow inserted himself in the process and directed that this property be the one selected. That is not what happened in the appellate process, is it Mr. Epes?

Mr. EPES. No, sir.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Your testimony, if I understand you correctly, sir, was that while you conveyed to the Governor's office the concern expressed by certain employees in your agency but not held by you personally, that you nevertheless felt it appropriate to express the concern of certain employees about safety issues. You did so, and the Governor, as I understand your testimony, said that, on the basis of all the facts involved, he would not overturn Mr. Mallard's decision.

Mr. EPES. That's exactly what happened.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. OK. Now, you have been asked, Ms. Hays, to give testimony about certain things that are coincident in time to events that are mentioned on the chart which has been displayed here, and before we get too far into that, because there is a notation on a chart that I see for the first time here, contributions to Whitewater by the McDougals and Clintons, that there is to be some discussion of that.

What I would call to the attention of the Chairman, if I may from page 77 of the Pillsbury Madison & Sutro Report adopted by the Resolution Trust Corporation dated December 13, 1995, the following, "Therefore, on this record there is no basis to assert that the Clintons knew anything of substance about the McDougals' advances to Whitewater, the source of the funds used to make those advances, or the source of the funds used to make payments or bank debt."

I would like to cede my time at this point to Mr. Kravitz.

Mr. KRAVITZ. Thank you, Mr. Ben-Veniste.

Mr. Epes, as you may know, next week the Committee is scheduled to hold a hearing on some questions relating to bond underwriting contracts that were awarded by the AHDA, the Arkansas Housing Development Authority, and the ADFA, the Arkansas Development Finance Authority. You are not scheduled to appear at next week's hearing, so I thought we might take advantage of your presence here today to ask you a few questions.

Just as an introduction, can you tell us, what was the purpose or what were the purposes of those two agencies in raising money through the sale of municipal bonds?

Mr. EPES. The Arkansas Housing Development Agency was established in 1977 for the purpose of issuing mortgage revenue bonds, tax-exempt mortgage revenue bonds for single-family housing for low- to moderate-income individuals, and also multifamily housing revenue bonds for multifamily housing development; which set aside certain units in those developments for low- to moderate-income tenants.

Mr. KRAVITZ. And what about the ADFA, when it succeeded the AHDA?

Mr. EPES. The ADFA succeeded the AHDA and took over the housing authority powers to issue bonds for those authorities; as well, it was expanded for the purpose of issuing tax-exempt revenue bonds for agricultural business development, first-time farmer program, public facilities for the State of Arkansas. We financed prisons and some other things like that, and other public facilities to be the centralized revenue bond issuer for the State of Arkansas.

Mr. KRAVITZ. Mr. Chairman, I see that the yellow light is on. Perhaps we can come back to that?

The CHAIRMAN. Mr. Chertoff.

Mr. CHERTOFF. I want to go back to the fundamentals of this Ms. Herr, as I understand it, when you began this process in 1988 of helping Mr. Epes' agency find space, Mr. Mallard didn't say to you I want you to confine your looking to this downtown area because we want to redevelop it?

Ms. HERR. No, he did not.

Mr. CHERTOFF. So there was no mention when you started out on this project that there was some plan to revitalize downtown Little Rock and you should focus your attention on it; right?

Ms. HERR. Yes, you are right. But there was an unwritten policy at that time that when we could, when possible, and when the rental rate was satisfactory, we would try to locate agencies in the downtown area which did encompass this area.

Mr. CHERTOFF. So you solicited from some of the landlords downtown to see if they had space; right?

Ms. HERR. Oh, yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. But Mr. Mallard got involved in this particular project when Ms. McDougal came to him and you had a meeting with Mr. Mallard and Susan McDougal; right?

Ms. HERR. That's when I first knew about it, yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. After you had come back to Mr. Mallard with Mr. Epes' agency's decision not to take the space in McDougal's building, Mr. Mallard told you—and this is your own language—that the Governor's office wanted to have Mr. Epes lease the Madison space because of the development of the Quarter area and because the McDougals were friends of the Clintons; right?

Ms. HERR. That's the way I recall it.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Mr. Mallard brought up the friendship between the McDougals and the Clintons; right?

Ms. HERR. Yes, he did.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Then you indicated earlier in your testimony that there was a second occasion, somewhat later, where Mr. Mallard repeated to you the fact that he wasn't going to consider other proposals, that the Governor's office wants us to lease the space and that's the way it's going to be. You got that from Mr. Mallard; is that right?

Ms. HERR. Yes, I did.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Mr. Mallard, do you deny saying that to Ms. Herr?

Mr. MALLARD. I cannot remember saying anything like that.

Mr. CHERTOFF. It could have happened, you don't remember, or it didn't happen?

Mr. MALLARD. In my mind it did not happen, no.

Mr. CHERTOFF. So you dispute Ms. Herr's recollection of this?

Mr. MALLARD. I do.

The CHAIRMAN. You say it didn't happen?

Mr. MALLARD. I said it didn't happen.

The CHAIRMAN. Did Susan McDougal come to you?

Mr. MALLARD. Yes, I'm sure she did.

The CHAIRMAN. Did you tell Ms. Herr, Mr. Mallard, that Susan McDougal came to see you?

Mr. MALLARD. I'm sure I did, yes.

The CHAIRMAN. Did she make this up about the fact of the Governor, et cetera, and you weren't going to change your mind and that they were friends, and therefore this is where you were going to go, that the Governor wanted this? She just dreamed this up?

Mr. MALLARD. I do not remember saying that at all.

The CHAIRMAN. You have worked with her for a long time, haven't you?

Mr. MALLARD. A long time.

The CHAIRMAN. You don't think she made this up?

Mr. MALLARD. I'm not sure.

The CHAIRMAN. You think maybe she made it up? Isn't it more likely you are feigning this memory, recollection? You don't remember this situation whether or not you told her? You think she just dreamed up that the Governor—we are talking about facts and reasonableness. Now, you really think that she just made this up?

Mr. MALLARD. Senator, people assume things.

The CHAIRMAN. Oh, assume?

Mr. MALLARD. Assume things, correct.

The CHAIRMAN. She may have assumed it on the basis of what you told her?

Mr. MALLARD. Maybe on the basis of what someone else told her.

The CHAIRMAN. She says you told her.

Mr. MALLARD. I dispute that, yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. When you were asked about this in your deposition, at page 44, Mr. Mallard, you were asked this:

Question: Do you remember any meetings you had with Ms. Vowell or Ms. Herr with regard to the lease, the AHDA lease? Did you ever say to her that one of the reasons why you were going forward with the lease was because the McDougals were friends of the Clintons and there was a desire to help out the McDougals?

Answer: No, I don't specifically remember any conversation like that. You know, I am sure it was assumed. You know, everybody assumed that everybody was friends with the Governor.

Are you telling us now you actually are positively disputing Ms. Herr's account, under oath, in deposition and here, that you said to her that the reason that you wanted to go forward with this lease of the McDougals' building is because, in part, the McDougals were friends of the Clintons? You dispute that?

Mr. MALLARD. Yes, I dispute that, yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Is it a fact, Ms. Herr, that Mr. Epes continued to complain to you about that building even after the lease was signed?

Ms. HERR. Yes, he did.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Would you agree with me that during the year after that lease in Mr. McDougal's building was signed on April 1, 1984, during that next year, probably every time you talked to Mr. Epes he said to you he wanted out of that building?

Ms. HERR. There were several times that they voiced their complaints about the building, yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. But then a year later they took more space in the building; that's also true?

Ms. HERR. That's true.

Mr. CHERTOFF. As far as you are concerned, Ms. Hays, you don't know anything about leases except what you heard from Mr. Hopkins; right?

Ms. HAYS. Right.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You do not have any connection with any of the other people on the panel in terms of their work on the leases; is that right?

Ms. HAYS. That's right.

Mr. CHERTOFF. But you do know that Mr. Hopkins came in and he was angry and he told you some things?

Ms. HAYS. Right.

Mr. CHERTOFF. He told you about people maybe going to prison?

Ms. HAYS. Right.

Mr. CHERTOFF. What was your reaction to that?

Ms. HAYS. I wasn't surprised.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You were not surprised based on what you had seen and heard at Madison?

Ms. HAYS. Right.

Mr. CHERTOFF. What did he tell you about the campaign contributions, the campaign fundraiser, and the connection with the leases?

Ms. HAYS. I believe he said that proceeds from the Dixie Continental loan had gone to the Clinton's Gubernatorial Campaign and that Governor Clinton had arranged for the State to lease office space from Madison or McDougal.

Mr. CHERTOFF. In fact, what you told Mr. Miller was an accurate statement of what Mr. Hopkins told you; right?

Ms. HAYS. Yes, sir.

Mr. CHERTOFF. What you told Mr. Miller was that in return for the substantial campaign contribution, Bill Clinton assured Jim McDougal that a State agency would lease space from Madison at its headquarters on Main Street in Little Rock; right?

Ms. HAYS. I know that is in the memo. I don't have any reason to believe it is inaccurate, but I don't remember those exact words.

Mr. CHERTOFF. I understand that, but you do remember telling Mr. Miller at the time when it was fresh in your mind, as best as you can recall what happened?

Ms. HAYS. Yes, sir.

Mr. CHERTOFF. He was your lawyer, so you had no reason not to be completely forthright with him?

Ms. HAYS. Right.

Mr. CHERTOFF. In fact, it is true that unbeknownst to perhaps Mr. Hopkins that in fact this space was on Main Street; right, this space we are talking about?

Ms. HAYS. Right.

Mr. CHERTOFF. And in 1985, there was not only an expansion of the rental of the State agency in the main building, but there was an additional new lease at the building across the street; right?

Ms. HAYS. Right.

Mr. CHERTOFF. That new lease, Ms. Herr, that was what had been a gas station?

Ms. HERR. Yes, sir, it had.

Mr. CHERTOFF. During your tenure in this period, the only buildings in this area that the Governor wanted to revitalize that wound up getting State leases were Mr. McDougal's bank building and the gas station across the street that Mr. McDougal owned; right?

Ms. HERR. In that immediate vicinity, but only six blocks down the street was the Dongy Foundation that Mr. Epes had occupied space in before, and there was a large presence of the State in that facility.

Mr. CHERTOFF. That was longstanding?

Ms. HAYS. Yes, sir.

Mr. CHERTOFF. But in terms of getting new leases, in terms of his notion we are going to try to revitalize and move some of the State offices into this particular area, the Quapaw Quarter, the only buildings in that area that wound up getting State leases were McDougal buildings?

Ms. HERR. That's true. They were the only ones that came to us to develop property.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Do you know why the gas station across the street was considered a suitable property for the State agency?

Ms. HERR. No, sir, I don't.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You were not involved in that one?

Ms. HAYS. No, I wasn't.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Mr. Mallard, do you remember why the gas station was——

Mr. MALLARD. I was not involved in that lease.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Who did that one for your agency?

Mr. MALLARD. I think that—I believe it was Marsh Patterson. He was an agent in the leasing department.

Mr. CHERTOFF. In your office?

Mr. MALLARD. In my office.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Under your supervision?

Mr. MALLARD. Under my supervision.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You don't know about this one?

Mr. MALLARD. Well, of course I signed the lease at the end of it, but I think he and the leasing agent for the Revenue Department is the one that worked this lease out.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Did you know it was a gas station?

Mr. MALLARD. I can't recall any specifics about it at all——

Mr. CHERTOFF. Now——

Mr. MALLARD. —but you can make a gas station into a castle if you want to.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You can make a silk purse out of a sow's ear.

Mr. MALLARD. If one has enough money, you can do that, that is right.

Mr. CHERTOFF. The question is why you would choose to do it. You don't deny that you knew the McDougals; right?

Mr. MALLARD. Yes, I knew Jim McDougal for many years.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Jim McDougal never said to you he had a friendship with the Clintons?

Mr. MALLARD. You know, I can't recall whether he did or not, but I knew he had a friendship with the Clintons.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You knew he had a business relationship?

Mr. MALLARD. I didn't at the time. If I did, you know——

Mr. CHERTOFF. Did you know that $300,000 worth of lease payments over 5 years would go a long way toward improving the balance sheet on Mr. McDougal's real estate company there, Madison Financial?

Mr. MALLARD. We did not delve into people's balance sheets or what it would do for their——

Mr. CHERTOFF. But you knew, as matter of common sense, that when you have a landlord of a commercial building and he is giving a guaranteed 5-year lease that is going to total $300,000 that will occupy some of his vacant space in an area of the city that people don't want to occupy, that will be a dramatic improvement in his balance sheet, because that asset, that building will be worth more because all of a sudden it is getting rent coming in; right? That is just common sense; right?

Mr. MALLARD. I would suppose so, yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Did you know Mr. McDougal had a business venture with the Clintons and that some of what McDougal was doing with his money was putting money into that business venture?

Mr. MALLARD. At the time I don't think I did.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Looking with hindsight, do you see a financial relationship or financial benefit here that if Mr. McDougal improves his balance sheet, if he has rent income coming in from the State, if the examiners see that his real estate operation now has a building which has occupancy from a good tenant, you understand how that might improve Mr. McDougal's financial picture and might help him continue with his financial operations? Make sense?

Mr. MALLARD. With anybody we lease with, that was something that was sought after, was a State lease.

Mr. CHERTOFF. It was sought after?

Mr. MALLARD. With everybody, every tenant.

Mr. CHERTOFF. I bet a lot of landlords in what Ms. Herr has described as a soft market wanted to get some of those leases?

Mr. MALLARD. It is still that way today, I'm sure.

The CHAIRMAN. Senator Sarbanes.

Senator SARBANES. I yield to Mr. Ben-Veniste.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. The issue of Governor Clinton having a social relationship with the McDougals, did that surprise you, Mr. Mallard?

Mr. MALLARD. Not particularly. He had a social relationship with everybody in the State of Arkansas.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Ms. Herr, did anybody try to hide the fact that the McDougals had a social relationship with the Clintons back in 1983?

Ms. HERR. No.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. When Mrs. McDougal visited your agency, did you not meet with her?

Ms. HERR. Yes, I did.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. I'm not trying to suggest to you that you may have been inaccurate in your recollection, but do you recall whether Mrs. McDougal may have mentioned that she and Mr. McDougal had a relationship of a social nature with the Governor?

Ms. HERR. I don't think that she ever specifically said that to me, but Arkansas is a very small State, and it was common knowledge that the McDougals were friends with the Clintons.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Indeed, if now you are sitting here 13 or 14 years after the event and someone has said to you oh, the Clintons were friends with the McDougals but no one disclosed that to you at the time, then you would have been taken advantage of because this thing was happening behind the scenes. You see how that could go just the other way?

Ms. HERR. Yes, sir.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. So, in fact, you knew that the Clintons had a relationship, you looked at the economics of the deal, the economics of the deal made sense, the location of the deal was consistent with a longstanding policy, if I understand you correctly?

Ms. HERR. That's correct.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. About trying to locate in the downtown areas where it was feasible. This was a situation where it was feasible, was it not, Mr. Epes?

Mr. EPES. Yes, sir.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. On the basis of all of that, the decision was made and it was not overturned.

Now with respect to the gas station, when it was converted to the revenue office, as we have heard, it was not a gas station at the time it was operating as a revenue office for the State; correct?

Ms. HERR. That's correct.

Mr. MALLARD. That's correct.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. It was, the piece of property had been a gas station and there was a structure, I trust, built on it. If we could go back in time and someone had some yellowed newspaper clipping of the opening of the revenue office in that area, we could see what it looked like, I take it?

Ms. HERR. That's correct.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. But, indeed, the revenue office, as we have developed in our testimony, wished to move from the location it was in, which was not far away from where it relocated to, the renovations were acceptable and desirable, and they were happy with the location; is that correct as far as you know?

Ms. HERR. Yes, sir. In fact, the other day, just to refresh my memory on what that part of the city looked like, I drove by there, since I knew I was coming up here, and the revenue office is still in that same location.

Senator SARBANES. What kind of revenue office was this? What do they do in this revenue office?

Ms. HERR. License plates and driver's licenses. It is their office that deals with the public.

Senator SARBANES. It is where the public comes in to be served?

Ms. HERR. Yes.

Senator SARBANES. Are there a lot of such revenue offices across the State of Arkansas?

Ms. HERR. Yes, there are.

Senator SARBANES. They are located in order to serve the constituency?

Ms. HERR. That's correct.

Senator SARBANES. In fact, if the neighborhood didn't have one, depending on the size of the neighborhood, but they could complain that they were not being properly serviced by the State?

Ms. HERR. They are located in populated areas around the State.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. So in addition to it moving into a more desirable location than where it existed before, from the standpoint of the officers and employees of the revenue office, it was desirable to service the residents in that part of town with a revenue office?

Ms. HERR. Yes.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Let me turn, Ms. Hays, to Mr. Chertoff's last line of questions, because I think it is pretty important to look at Mr. Hopkins' statements to you in 1987 about events which he claimed to have taken place in 1985, although he wasn't presumably a part of those arrangements, but we will question him about that. Would you just look at the chart, it shows the Madison fundraiser at the very bottom of that first chart. You see that is April 1985; right?

Ms. HAYS. I see that, yes.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Everybody knew that the State agency had moved into the headquarters on Main Street.

Ms. HAYS. I did not work at Madison until June 1985, so I don't know——

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Presumably people in town knew that the housing authority had moved into those quarters.

Ms. HAYS. I assume so.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. By 1987, memories may have dimmed about when exactly they moved in.

Ms. HAYS. True.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. If there was going to be a quid pro quo, as is suggested on page 3 of the memorandum prepared reflecting your conversation with Mr. Hopkins, then the contribution, as Mr. Hopkins says, that a State agency would lease space from Madison at its headquarters on Main Street in Little Rock in return for the substantial contribution made by Mr. Peacock. That's the import of what was said to you; right?

Ms. HAYS. Right.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. However, the fallacy in such a notion is that, while the fundraiser occurred in April 1985, the lease arrangements that we have been discussing here all morning occurred in early 1984; is that correct, Mr. Mallard?

Mr. MALLARD. I would have to refer back to the lease, but I think you are right.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Am I correct, Ms. Herr, in my recollection that the lease was negotiated in late 1983 and signed up in April 1984?

Ms. HERR. That's correct.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. A full year before the contributions that Mr. Hopkins is telling you were a quid pro quo; is that right, Ms. Hays, if you accept those dates?

Ms. HAYS. I don't know that that is exactly right. I think Mr. Hopkins was saying that the proceeds from the Dixie Continental Leasing loan were what he considered to be the campaign contributions by Mr. Peacock, and I don't know the date that that loan was made.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. If you accept that the contribution was made in April 1985, as reflected on the chart that the Majority has prepared here, you know now, from listening to the testimony, just as we know, that the decision to relocate and lease space from Madison at its headquarters on Main Street in Little Rock occurred a full year before. So instead of a quid pro quo, we are talking about a quo pro quid.

Ms. HAYS. I don't know. I don't know that this April 1985 fundraiser is the only contribution that Mr. Hopkins was talking about. But I can't disagree with what you are saying.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. If in fact it is, and we will hear from Mr. Hopkins, but since the matter has been raised and pressed again with you in the absence of Mr. Hopkins to be examined on it, I thought it important to set out the chronology just so you were advised and while we have our panel here to talk about the chronology of events, what Mr. Hopkins said. And I will read that again, "Mr. Hopkins stated that a portion of the loan proceeds made to Dixie Continental Leasing went to Bill Clinton's campaign and that in return for the substantial campaign contributions, Bill Clinton assured Jim McDougal that a State agency would lease space from Madison at its headquarters on Main Street in Little Rock." That was in 1984; the fundraiser occurred a year later in April 1985.

Ms. HAYS. Right.

Senator SARBANES. Ms. Hays, at the time that Hopkins called you, that was right in the aftermath of having the bankruptcy court dismiss the claim with prejudice; is that correct?

Ms. HAYS. That's right.

Senator SARBANES. Of course, that then puts you back in the position of being able to go after Peacock on this loan; is that correct?

Ms. HAYS. Yes, sir.

Senator SARBANES. Now, Mr. Miller says in this memo, which he wrote, I take it, to a partner in his firm, on the basis of a conversation with you—

Ms. HAYS. Yes.

Senator SARBANES. He says that he thought that Hopkins was severely embarrassed as a result of having the Chapter 11 dismissed with prejudice after he had made representations to his client that everything would be taken care of. Is that the impression you had, too, about Hopkins?

Ms. HAYS. Yes, sir, yes.

Senator SARBANES. Thank you.

The CHAIRMAN. Mr. Chertoff.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

Ms. Hays, again, to go back to this chronology which of course we started out with, and I understand again, to be clear, you are testifying to what Hopkins told you. You repeated it to Miller, Miller made a memo of it. Obviously, you are not in Hopkins' mind, but you gave your lawyer as accurate a rendition of what Hopkins told you as you could at the time.

Let's go back to the chronology. The original discussion about the first lease in the main Madison building occurs in April 1984, and we now have some evidence—I guess there is a dispute in the evidence, but at least we have the testimony of Ms. Herr that she was told by Mr. Mallard that the Governor's office wanted this done in 1984. And we know from Mr. Epes that there was a meeting with the Governor on that.

Now, we come to 1985, and the dates here get very interesting. We have the Dixie Continental lease loan, and then we have the April 4, 1985 fundraiser. We know from Ms. Herr during that intervening year that Mr. Epes keeps saying we want to get out of the building, we want to get out of the building. And it doesn't take a great leap of common sense to realize that a landlord who has a tenant who is complaining is going to want to take steps to make sure that that tenant stays in the building.

So you have an April 4th fundraiser. On April 9th, 5 days later, Mr. Epes' agency indicates they now want to look for additional space. They contact the leasing office and yet, what do you know, at the end of the day, they wind up taking that additional space, I think it is at a lease rate of about $13,000 additional per year in the very same building. So that's the chronology if we match it up against the set of events here.

Now let me turn to a different subject for a moment. While you were working at Madison, you had some responsibility for supervising or managing the legal work?

Ms. HAYS. That's right.

Mr. CHERTOFF. That involved dealing with outside counsel and retaining them and generally supervising them?

Ms. HAYS. Right.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Did there come a time that you learned that the Rose Law Firm was receiving a regular $2,000 a month retainer or advance on fees from Madison Guaranty Savings & Loan?

Ms. HAYS. Yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. How did you learn about that?

Ms. HAYS. I think that Greg Young who was the CFO might have told me about it. I'm not really certain.

Mr. CHERTOFF. The CFO meaning the Chief Financial Officer?

Ms. HAYS. Yes, sir.

Mr. CHERTOFF. What was your response?

Ms. HAYS. I can't remember exactly when I first learned about it. I know that, for a time, the Rose Firm did work for Madison, so I didn't think there was anything unusual about that. Later, since I was the one sending out the legal work and I knew I wasn't sending it to the Rose Firm, I questioned why we continued to pay the retainer.

Mr. CHERTOFF. When you say "retainer," you mean the advance fees, the regular $2,000 a month fees?

Ms. HAYS. Yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Who did you raise that question about the payment to the Rose Law Firm with?

Ms. HAYS. John Latham.

Mr. CHERTOFF. And he was, at that time, what was his position with the bank?

Ms. HAYS. He was CEO and Chairman of the Board.

Mr. CHERTOFF. That's Chief Executive Officer?

Ms. HAYS. Yes, sir.

Mr. CHERTOFF. What did Mr. Latham tell you about why this money was being paid to the Rose Law Firm?

Ms. HAYS. He said it was Jim's—meaning Jim McDougal's—deal, and not to question it.

Mr. CHERTOFF. And after that you just didn't question it?

Ms. HAYS. Not until after Mr. McDougal left.

Mr. CHERTOFF. What happened after Mr. McDougal left? Did you question it then?

Ms. HAYS. I think it was discontinued.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Did you also have occasion from time to time when Mr. McDougal's regular assistant or secretary was absent to occasionally handle Mr. McDougal's phones?

Ms. HAYS. I did at one time, yes, for a week.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Do you remember, did he have any particular arrangement about certain people being rung through to him directly and certain people going through the receptionist?

Ms. HAYS. I don't really remember. All of his calls I think came through the secretary and then went to him, I think.

Mr. CHERTOFF. How long did you deal with his telephone? For what period of time?

Ms. HAYS. One week.

Mr. CHERTOFF. During that week, did he have any contact with Governor Clinton?

Ms. HAYS. I took one or two messages from the Governor's office.

Mr. CHERTOFF. And do you remember what the messages were about?

Ms. HAYS. No, sir. I just took name and phone number.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Finally, let me ask you about that gas station across the street which became the revenue office; do you know whether an individual named Davis Fitzhugh had a connection with that?

Ms. HAYS. I thought he owned it.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Mr. Fitzhugh also worked at Madison Guaranty Savings & Loan; right?

Ms. HAYS. Yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Was there a point that Mr. Fitzhugh bought the building at the request of Mr. McDougal?

Ms. HAYS. I believe that's correct.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Do you know why that was?

Ms. HAYS. No.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Now let me show you a memo dated December 17, 1985, to Davis Fitzhugh from Sue Strayhorn. It makes reference again to someone who is looking for space at 1300 Main. Is 1300 Main where Madison had its headquarters?

Ms. HAYS. No, sir.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Was it another Madison building?

Ms. HAYS. Yes, it was a building owned by Madison, a few blocks away from the bank headquarters.

Mr. CHERTOFF. So that was another McDougal building; right?

Ms. HAYS. I'm not sure it was McDougal, but it was some affiliated party.

Mr. CHERTOFF. It says here, "Ms. Margaret Carter came by this morning to see Jim McDougal, and was referred to him by Bill Clinton and Guy Barry. She is interested in leasing space for an art studio, possibly upstairs at 1300 Main. She can afford approximately $500 per month, plus utilities, for comparable floor space. If not at 1300 Main, then something similar." Do you remember people coming by on referrals from the Governor about possibly finding space in Madison building buildings?

Ms. HAYS. No, sir.

Mr. CHERTOFF. So you don't know about this particular incident?

Ms. HAYS. I have never seen this before.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Obviously, we are going to be hearing from Mr. Hopkins in a very short while. This memo, which was prepared based upon what you told Mr. Miller in 1987, when it was fresh in your mind—indeed, it has been several years since then—have you had occasion in the last year to talk to Mr. Hopkins about this particular conversation you had that was later written down in this memo?

Ms. HAYS. Yes, I have.

Mr. CHERTOFF. When did you talk to him about it?

Ms. HAYS. I can't remember exactly. It was after the reporter came to my home with the memo and I was interviewed for the newspaper article, sometime thereafter, and I can't say whether it was within a few weeks or a few months, I ran into Mr. Hopkins at lunch one day and we discussed it.

Mr. CHERTOFF. What did he say to you?

Ms. HAYS. Well, first, we were kind of talking to each other about how we were getting tired of reporters and people bugging us about things that happened 10 years ago. I said I couldn't remember a lot about it. All I told him was that it was probably a lot of posturing on your part, and he said yes, that's right, that's all it was.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Did he indicate that he remembered having had the conversation with you?

Ms. HAYS. Sure.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Did he indicate he had seen this memo that Mr. Miller made of the conversation?

Ms. HAYS. He said that the reporter had brought it to his office and tried to make him read it. I'm not certain that he actually complied with the request.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Did he deny having had the conversation with you about this matter?

Ms. HAYS. No, sir. We talked about it.

Mr. CHERTOFF. So he clearly indicated at least as of last summer that he had a recollection of this conversation?

Ms. HAYS. Yes.

The CHAIRMAN. Let me, if I might, just touch on one thing. There comes a point in time when you say to Mr. Latham why are we still sending $2,000 a month to the Rose Law Firm; is that right?

Ms. HAYS. That's right.

The CHAIRMAN. The reason was because you knew that the legal work was being done, was being farmed out to others; right?

Ms. HAYS. That is correct, at least what I was doing. Someone else could have been sending something else.

The CHAIRMAN. Mr. Latham said to you what, as best as you can recall?

Ms. HAYS. It's Jim's deal, don't question it.

The CHAIRMAN. It's Jim's deal, don't question it. All right.

I want to thank you. But I will note, Mr. Latham and others notwithstanding, that we have at least public statements at one point in time from Mr. McDougal how this came about, how the retainer of the Rose Law Firm, and then somewhat ambiguous testimony in depositions taken from one of the former Rose Law Firm partners that the work came via another direction.

Here we have Mr. Latham indicating to you when he would have no reason to be other than truthful to you at the time, that this was Mr. McDougal's deal and don't worry about it. I note that is very compelling, very compelling.

Senator Sarbanes.

Senator SARBANES. I'm just curious, Ms. Hays. Did this reporter just appear at your door with this memo?

Ms. HAYS. He called me first. He is someone I know personally. He was my Sunday school teacher.

Senator SARBANES. He is your Sunday school teacher?

Ms. HAYS. He was at the time, yes.

Senator SARBANES. He called you and said he had this memo and wanted to come talk to you about it?

Ms. HAYS. Yes, sir.

Senator SARBANES. This was in July?

Ms. HAYS. It was June or July of 1995.

Senator SARBANES. This memo was publicly released by the House Committee on August 7th and provided then in a public way to the media, and this was well ahead of that date; is that correct?

Ms. HAYS. As I remember, I think he said the date of the newspaper article was the end of July.

Senator SARBANES. Right.

Ms. HAYS. I was interviewed prior to that, and he brought this memorandum with him.

Senator SARBANES. Thank you very much.

Mr. Ben-Veniste.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Let me go to this matter, Ms. Hays, that Mr. Chertoff brought up about your more recent conversation with Mr. Hopkins. The conversation was spurred by the fact that people were now questioning you from the media about these events, as you say, 10 or more years ago.

Ms. HAYS. Not just now, but had been going on for a couple of years.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Right. And with respect to the substance of what he was reporting to you, he said to you that, in essence, that he was trying to get some advantage and he had embellished or exaggerated or fabricated some information to try to get some advantage at the time?

Ms. HAYS. I think I sort of said that and he agreed, yes, that's what I was doing. I related to him that's what I told the reporter, and as I told you earlier, now that I'm a lawyer, it seems kind of more apparent to me what he might have been doing at the time. I told Mr. Hopkins that, and he agreed.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. And that, coupled with the impossibility of the events having occurred in the way that he had described them to you back in 1987, leads you to conclude, as you have testified today, that indeed he was using some trick or artifice to try to get some advantage in his negotiations on behalf of his client.

Ms. HAYS. That's right. I think there could have been a little bit of truth in some of the things he said. Basically I think what you just said is what he was trying to do.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. OK. Let me see if I can clarify the question of the termination of the Rose retainer. Now testimony received before this Committee from Ron Clark of the Rose Law Firm was that the Rose retainer and the Rose representation was terminated because the Rose Firm wanted to be able to bid on FSLIC work, and in order to do that, the FSLIC had some guidelines which precluded their attorneys from simultaneously representing savings and loans.

So the testimony was that the law firm terminated the relationship with Madison Guaranty Savings & Loan and indeed refunded the balance of the retainers that it had received. I think it had received $24,000 and had billed out something like $21,000 up to that point.

It is also my recollection, from the testimony we have received here before, that the determination by the Rose Law Firm to end the relationship was made prior to the time Mr. McDougal left the savings and loan. Further, we have the benefit of the Pillsbury Madison & Sutro Report, adopted by the FDIC dated February 25, 1996, at page 137 which says, "In any event, apparently the return of the retainer had nothing to do with the removal of Messrs. McDougal and Latham by the FHLBB."

Now does that combination of events refresh your recollection in any way in terms just of the chronology of what occurred?

Ms. HAYS. I have heard all that you have said before, and I don't agree with it. My recollection of it is that Madison asked to have the retainer funds that were at the Rose Firm returned to Madison. I worked at the Rose Firm following Madison, so I have had a checkered and notorious past, but at any rate, I know my recollection differs from theirs. I have talked with Ron Clark about it and others at the firm. My recollection is that Madison asked to have the funds returned.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. You think that that occurred after McDougal had left?

Ms. HAYS. Yes, sir, after Mr. McDougal left. I had been told prior to that that it was his deal. After he left, I think I took steps to make sure his deal was no longer going to take place.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. I don't think there is any question in terms of who made the decision to hire the firm. Mr. Latham, and everybody else that I know of who has testified about this, indicated that the ultimate decision about which lawyers to hire was McDougal's and that Mr. McDougal, in fact, made that decision. So, I don't think there is anything in dispute about that. Do you want to bring up the issue of Mr. Epes?

Senator SARBANES. Mr. Chairman, Mr. Epes is here today and he headed ADFA for a considerable period of time; that's correct, isn't it, Mr. Epes?

Mr. EPES. Yes, sir.

Senator SARBANES. Now some of the inquiry next week is going to get into ADFA's bond underwriting, which Mr. Epes, I take it, was involved with as the head of ADFA. Well, he is here, we could go ahead and ask him about it now, or if the Chairman chooses not to, then I certainly think he ought to come back and be with us when we explore that question.

The CHAIRMAN. I don't know if he has been asked to come back, but certainly I think that it would be reasonable to have him when we are undertaking a review of that aspect. I have no problem, no difficulty, and I would hope that, Mr. Epes, you would be available for us if the Minority makes that requests.

Senator SARBANES. Are you available next week?

Mr. EPES. I'm available after—I'm only available for a portion. I have a bond closing on the 30th. I leave town on the 2nd. I would be available on the 1st.

The CHAIRMAN. Why don't we attempt to work that out.

Senator FAIRCLOTH. Mr. Chairman, I had questions on that now.

The CHAIRMAN. I am not going to preclude the Senator from raising a question on that. But before you do I want the record to be clear on something, because I think it is important. I have heard more excuses for the manner in which the Rose Law Firm was retained, and we went through this whole thing very carefully, painstakingly, and it just seems to me that people went out of their way to almost recreate the manner in which the business went to the Rose Law Firm.

The fact of the matter is that Jim McDougal in his public statements—they have been published many times—indicates quite clearly that the then-Governor asked him to send some business to the Rose Law Firm. I don't see anything wrong in that.

But all of a sudden for people to make this incredible thing where they dig out this short-term partner, Massey. Massey first doesn't believe he brings it in, then he begins to try to say, yes, I did it with Latham. And then we hear the testimony from this witness today, Ms. Hays, who says when she brought up the question of the retainer, Latham said listen, this is McDougal's deal.

I think it is important, very important. I think for whatever reason the people went into this huge subterfuge, for the life of me, I don't understand what would be so terrible if the then-Governor did go and say to his friend, by the way, my wife is working at this law firm, she could use some business.

But what I do find a very troubling aspect is why not tell the truth about it? Why? That's what creates problems. I have to tell you in my judgment, after having heard the witnesses before and then hearing this witness who has no reason other than to say this is what happened, this is what the man said. She didn't make that up. I think a lot of other people stretched. They went to great lengths to stretch to find out ways in which the business came. This fellow, he used to take an accounting course and he went and said to them and that's how the business came. That is total nonsense. I mean, that's just total nonsense. I make that observation. Why deny something that is no big deal? I have seen this repeatedly and that's my observation.

Senator Faircloth.

Senator GRAMS. Mr. Chairman, can I make a comment, quickly?

The CHAIRMAN. Certainly, Senator Grams.

OPENING COMMENTS OF SENATOR ROD GRAMS

Senator GRAMS. I just wanted to follow up on that, because listening to the testimony, you know, there's a lot of troubling aspects about it. I just wanted to summarize some of the issues I'm thinking of.

On the issue of the leases, we know the following from the testimony that Mr. Epes did not want the leases in the Madison building. Ms. Herr testifies under oath that, despite Mr. Epes' objections, she was told by Mr. Mallard that the Madison lease would go through because of Governor Clinton's friendship with Jim McDougal.

Mr. Mallard, a friend of Mr. McDougal, however disputes Ms. Herr's testimony. And despite Mr. Epes' appeal to Governor Clinton and his continued complaints about the adequacy of the space, Madison landed, not just one lease agreement but three.

Ms. Hays testifies that Mr. Hopkins told her that money from Madison went to the Governor's campaign in exchange for assurances from the Governor to McDougal that a State agency would lease space from Madison, and again we look back, not only one, but three.

What troubles me is the recurring pattern that we are seeing of favors being exchanged between then-Governor Clinton and Jim McDougal, Bill Clinton holding the key of influence with State agencies and tax dollars, Jim McDougal holding the other keys of campaign contributions and appointments and opportunities for person financial gain.

So today's testimony, Mr. Chairman, is only one more example of this influence pedaling that occurred between the McDougals and then-Governor Clinton. So I just wanted to make those comments and to go along with what you had said about some of the concerns that we have.

The CHAIRMAN. Thank you, Senator.

Senator Faircloth.

Senator FAIRCLOTH. Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

Mr. Epes, there's been a lot written about ADFA. The Rose Law Firm did work for ADFA?

Mr. EPES. Yes, sir.

Senator FAIRCLOTH. Who decided to hire the Rose Law Firm?

Mr. EPES. The Rose Law Firm was hired as bond counsel for the Multifamily Housing Bond Program in April 1983 by the Board of Directors at that time. At that point it was the Arkansas Housing Development Agency.

Senator FAIRCLOTH. The Board of Directors decided?

Mr. EPES. Yes, sir. I was employed later that year, so at that point they were already employed.

Senator FAIRCLOTH. Rose was there when you got there?

Mr. EPES. For that one bond program, yes, sir.

Senator FAIRCLOTH. But they continued to do work?

Mr. EPES. They were continuing on that program. I don't recall what other bond issues they served as bond counsel for.

Senator FAIRCLOTH. But they continued to be the attorney for ADFA?

Mr. EPES. Clearly, no, sir, we didn't have a general counsel, first of all. Whenever we did a bond issue we would have a bond counsel. Most of our bond business was done in the single-family housing bond area, and there was another firm that was bond counsel for that program.

Senator FAIRCLOTH. Did you have a deal with the First Lady, Hillary Clinton, or Webb Hubbell when you were at ADFA?

Mr. EPES. No, sir.

Senator FAIRCLOTH. Did not. No one from the Governor's office ever suggested that the Rose Law Firm would be the firm of choice for ADFA?

Mr. EPES. No, sir.

Senator FAIRCLOTH. Not to you?

Mr. EPES. No, sir. In fact, they had done extensive business for the agency from 1978 forward when it was first created.

Senator FAIRCLOTH. Was it any of the board members from ADFA that suggested the hiring of the Rose Law Firm? Do you know whether they ever raised any money for Clinton's campaign or not?

Mr. EPES. I don't know—

Senator FAIRCLOTH. Do you know or have you ever heard that they did?

Mr. EPES. It wouldn't surprise me if they did.

Senator FAIRCLOTH. But——

Mr. EPES. I don't know specifically, I can't tell you.

Senator FAIRCLOTH. Mr. Epes, Dan Lasater's company received 13 bond underwriting contracts from ADFA which netted his company something like $1,600,000 in fees. It's a pretty small operation. Would you say that that amount of work was very high in comparison to the size of his company?

Mr. EPES. No, sir.

Senator FAIRCLOTH. You would not?

Mr. EPES. In fact, the 13 bond issues you are referring to, Dan Lasater's company was merely a co-manager of those financings. In each of them, there were somewhere in the range of four to six, maybe as many as seven different investment banking firms involved in those transactions. They were not the firm that put the bond deals together. They were not the ones that did the structuring of the bond issues. They were allowed to sell some of the bonds that were involved in those bond issues.

Senator FAIRCLOTH. Who decided whether Lasater's firm should be chosen or not?

Mr. EPES. They were selected in the spring of 1983 for co-manager status.

Senator FAIRCLOTH. By whom?

Mr. EPES. By the Board of Directors of the Arkansas Housing Development Agency.

Senator FAIRCLOTH. Did anybody from the Governor's office ever talk to you about Lasater or Lasater getting work from ADFA?

Mr. EPES. No, sir. When I started there in September 1983——

Senator FAIRCLOTH. He was already on?

Mr. EPES. He was already on, yes, sir.

Senator FAIRCLOTH. We've heard a lot about a man named Larry Nickels. He worked with your firm, with ADFA?

Mr. EPES. I hired him in May 1988 and I fired him in September 1988.

Senator FAIRCLOTH. Would you tell me why?

Mr. EPES. He's a pathological liar.

Senator FAIRCLOTH. That's adequate reason.

[Laughter.]

Do you have any knowledge that any of the profits from ADFA ever came under control of the Governor or the Governor's office?

Mr. EPES. No, sir, they never did. Our funds were held almost——almost all of the funds were held by trustees, each bond issue had a separate trustee that held those funds. We had general funds of the agency that probably represented a very small percentage of all of the funds controlled by the agency.

On an annual basis, we had an audit——our financial statements were audited by nationally recognized auditing firms, and those audits were published. They had to ascertain that these funds were handled according to the way that the bond issues were structured that set that out, and that the funds that we had in our general fund were to have been administered according to State law.

Senator FAIRCLOTH. Mr. Chairman, I have no further questions.

The CHAIRMAN. Senator Sarbanes, if you have——

Senator SARBANES. I just have two observations, Mr. Chairman.

The CHAIRMAN. Sure.

Senator SARBANES. First, I gather from our previous discussion that Mr. Epes will return on the 1st and participate in that panel.

The CHAIRMAN. Yes, we will have that arranged so that we will attempt to make it a relevant day for Mr. Epes to appear, and if that works with his schedule.

Mr. EPES. Yes, I appreciate you accommodating that day for me.

The CHAIRMAN. Sure, absolutely.

Senator, do you have another observation?

Senator SARBANES. I listened to Senator Grams with great care, as I always do, and I simply want to say for the record that I don't think many of the assertions he made in his statement were really supported by the testimony of the witnesses here today. In fact, Ms. Hays, just to be very specific, all that material in the memo, you don't know any of that firsthand. It is based on a report from you of a conversation that you had with Hopkins?

Ms. HAYS. That's correct.

Senator SARBANES. You don't know the truth or falsity of any of that, you just relayed what Hopkins said?

Ms. HAYS. That's correct.

Senator SARBANES. But in the statement that I heard, it was really attributed to you and I don't think that's—

Ms. HAYS. That's not true. This is just a memo that recollects what Greg Hopkins told me.

Senator SARBANES. That's not fair to you.

Senator GRAMS. Mr. Sarbanes—

Senator SARBANES. Also on the award of the contract, Mr. Mallard, I take it certainly a reason you gave was this policy of trying to help upgrade a neighborhood, what Ms. Herr referred to as an unwritten policy of the agency; is that correct?

Mr. MALLARD. Right. It was a policy of the State Building Services to go downtown any time that we could with a lease.

Senator SARBANES. Thank you.

Senator GRAMS. Mr. Chairman, I just wanted to clarify, I did see in my notes here that Ms. Hays testified that Mr. Hopkins told her that the money from Madison went to the Governor's campaign. I didn't say that she had said it.

Senator SARBANES. Then I stand corrected. I listened at the time and I didn't catch the reference to Mr. Hopkins, so if that's the case, I apologize to my colleague. I thought it was being put as her statement and I want to be very clear, it was not her statement.

The CHAIRMAN. Let me—

Senator SARBANES. Of course, we do have the fact that the chronology again a point, and I'm not sure if the Senator was here at the time, that the lease was a year before the fundraiser. The fundraiser was not before the lease, but we'll develop that point in our interpretation.

The CHAIRMAN. We are now doing our summations.

Senator SARBANES. That's right, I agree.

The CHAIRMAN. Which will all appear on June 17th in our report, but I have to make an observation with respect to the witnesses and their testimony. We are deeply appreciative of your appearance and the cooperation you have given.

Mr. Mallard, when you say that you don't remember and then you go even further—and I'll paraphrase your testimony—that it didn't take place, I just have to tell you something. What you have done, I think, in terms of that testimony, is just not acceptable. I mean, it's wrong. It's not right. It's not the right thing.

You put Ms. Herr in a position where you would actually say that she has for some reason created this. I think she's testified to the best of her ability. She has given some testimony that was totally supportive, for example, of the gas station that is still there and is used as a revenue thing. I mean, she's told it the way it is and the way it happened. This is very troubling. For the life of me, I don't understand why. It's not credible, at least to this Senator.

Now somebody else may choose to interpret it in a different way, but I want to tell you something. You ask most reasonable people and you're going to find, I believe, that your testimony as it relates to the fact that you did indicate that, you know, the Governor wanted this in sum and substance to Ms. Herr, she wouldn't try to make that up. She just wouldn't do that. She's testified truthfully, and I want to commend her. It's not easy. All we are trying to do is get the facts here.

Ms. Hays, I want to commend you. I think that you testified in a straightforward way and the best you could. And we appreciate it when people are candid with us. But I just want you to know, Mr. Mallard, that's my observation.

Senator SARBANES. Mr. Chairman, I would like to be heard on that.

The CHAIRMAN. Again, Ms. Herr has no reason to make this up. I'm sure she didn't find it pleasant and I'm sure she didn't relish coming here and putting this out as she had. So I just think that it's a very troubling thing to this Senator to find that first you would say you have no recollection and then you went even one step further and say it didn't happen. That's a terrible thing. It's not right. I just share that.

Go ahead, Senator.

Senator SARBANES. Mr. Chairman, I think the fact that two witnesses have differing recollections ought not then to be escalated into an assertion that one is accusing the other of lying. In fact, Mr. Mallard was pressed very hard by the questioning that came from that side on this issue, and he tried, I thought, to respond as best he could under the circumstances, but I don't think that the fact that he recalls it differently from Ms. Herr represents that he was asserting that she was lying or vice versa, for that matter, and I just think the record ought to show that.

The CHAIRMAN. I just say if one looks at the deposition here, Mike O'Callaghan, he spoke to Ms. Herr, pages 141 to 146, he says:

Question: When you brought the objections from Mr. Epes to Mr. Mallard's attention, you mentioned earlier that again, the sentiment was expressed that the Governor's office wanted to lease that space; is that right?

Answer: Yes.

Question: And there was mention that the McDougals and Clintons were friends; is that right?

Answer: Yes.

Question: And that Mr. Mallard was friends with the McDougals?

Answer: Yes.

Question: OK. And with regard to Mr. Mallard and yours and Mrs. McDougal's meeting, was that a first attempt by Madison to make a bid on getting the leasing contract? Would you say that was the first attempt?

Answer: Yes.

Mr. Mallard, you knew Mrs. McDougal, didn't you?

Mr. MALLARD. I knew Mr. McDougal very well, yes.

The CHAIRMAN. What about Mrs. McDougal?

Mr. MALLARD. I got acquainted with her sometime in 1983.

The CHAIRMAN. She came to see you on this?

Mr. MALLARD. Sure she did, yes.

The CHAIRMAN. I have no further questions. I want to thank the witnesses. We stand in recess until 2:00 p.m. Thanks particularly to Ms. Hays and Ms. Herr. We thank you all.

[Whereupon, at 12:41 p.m., the hearing was recessed, to be reconvened at 2:00 p.m. this same day.]

AFTERNOON SESSION

The CHAIRMAN. Could I ask you all to stand for the purposes of taking the oath.

[Witnesses sworn.]

The CHAIRMAN. I'll ask all of the witnesses, we'll start with Mr. Peacock and then work on over.

Mr. Peacock, do you have a statement that you would like to give to the Committee before we start? Anything you would like to say?

SWORN TESTIMONY OF CHARLES J. PEACOCK FORMER MEMBER, BOARD OF DIRECTORS MADISON GUARANTY SAVINGS & LOAN

Mr. PEACOCK. Yes, sir. This Committee has messed me up for about 2 months' working. I work as a consultant, and I am a contractor. You folks would call me and say we want you Monday or we want you Tuesday and then Tuesday call up and say we want you Wednesday, and then you call up, no, we're going to put it off until next week. And I really personally think Bill Clinton ought to give you a big hug because you sure helped him out in our country and the country where I travel at, as a working man.

The CHAIRMAN. Thank you very much, Mr. Peacock, for your observation.

Mr. Hopkins.

SWORN TESTIMONY OF GREGORY M. HOPKINS THE HOPKINS LAW FIRM

Mr. HOPKINS. I am here to take the Committee's questions, your Honor.

The CHAIRMAN. Mr. Miller.

SWORN TESTIMONY OF LANCE RANDELL MILLER, PARTNER MITCHELL, WILLIAMS, SELIG, GATES & WOODYARD

Mr. MILLER. No comment.

The CHAIRMAN. Would you like to move over there?

Mr. MILLER. Are you having trouble hearing me?

The CHAIRMAN. Why don't you move your chair over a little more. That's it. So you can—and pull that up in front of you.

Mr. MILLER. What are we trying to accomplish here?

The CHAIRMAN. Mr. Miller, I would like you to just pull the microphone up in front of you so that we can—that's what we are trying to accomplish, that's all.

Mr. MILLER. OK. I was not understanding what you wanted me to do.

The CHAIRMAN. Mr. Giuffra.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

Good afternoon, panel.

Mr. Miller, I would like to begin with you, sir, if I might. Now, you're a member of the Mitchell, Williams' law firm in Little Rock; correct?

Mr. MILLER. That's correct, Mitchell, Williams, Selig, Gates & Woodyard.

Mr. GIUFFRA. And you began representing Madison Guaranty in the late 1980's; is that correct?

Mr. MILLER. The firm——

Mr. GIUFFRA. You personally.

Mr. MILLER. I was a member of the firm, so the representation would be the firm's representation, and I would be doing the work. Best I can recall, my involvement started in late 1986.

Mr. GIUFFRA. You were a collection lawyer for Madison Guaranty?

Mr. MILLER. That's correct.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Meaning that you were foreclosing on bad debts and unpaid loans for Madison?

Mr. MILLER. That's correct, foreclosing and repossessing; foreclosing would apply to real estate, repossession of personal property.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Now in late 1986, your primary contact at Madison was someone by the name of Patricia Heritage and now Hays?

Mr. MILLER. That's correct, Pat Hays.

Mr. GIUFFRA. She was a workout officer at Madison Guaranty?

Mr. MILLER. That's correct.

Mr. GIUFFRA. You would agree Ms. Hays has a good reputation for honesty? She's been honest with you in her dealings?

Mr. MILLER. As far as I know, in all my dealings, yes, sir.

Mr. GIUFFRA. She's not someone who would ordinarily make up false allegations?

Mr. MILLER. No, sir, I wouldn't say that.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Do you recall working on a matter for Madison involving the Peacock brothers?

Mr. MILLER. Yes, sir.

Mr. GIUFFRA. If we could put up on the Elmo the document that I have marked as No. 1, which is the April 21, 1987, handwritten conference memo that you prepared. Do you recall preparing this document?

Mr. MILLER. This is my document, yes.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Do you recall preparing it on April 21, 1987?

Mr. MILLER. Yes, I prepared this document on April 21, 1987.

Mr. GIUFFRA. And this is notes of a telephone conference you had with Ms. Heritage; right?

Mr. MILLER. That's correct.

Mr. GIUFFRA. And the time is 2:05 p.m.; correct?

Mr. MILLER. Correct.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Your best recollection is that Ms. Heritage Hays called you; correct?

Mr. MILLER. Yes, to my best recollection, she called me.

Mr. GIUFFRA. She was reporting on a conversation that she had with Mr. Hopkins, who is sitting to your right?

Mr. MILLER. That's what she told me, yes.

Mr. GIUFFRA. He was a lawyer for the Peacock brothers?

Mr. MILLER. I think the official corporate entity was something—was something like I don't remember, Peacock Brothers, Inc. doing business as something. There was an official corporate entity that had filed Chapter 11, yes.

Mr. GIUFFRA. You knew Mr. Hopkins; correct?

Mr. MILLER. That's correct.

Mr. GIUFFRA. You had been litigating with Mr. Hopkins on the bankruptcy court?

Mr. MILLER. On other cases as well as this case, yes.

Mr. GIUFFRA. On April 8th, which would be about 2 weeks before the conversation that Ms. Hays was reporting on, you had obtained the dismissal of Peacock's Chapter 11 proceeding with prejudice?

Mr. MILLER. We had filed—on behalf of Madison, we had filed a motion to dismiss or to convert. My recollection is that the judge gave the debtor the opportunity to either convert to a Chapter 7 or dismiss with prejudice. The debtor as I recall chose to have their Chapter 11 dismissed with prejudice, but yes, it was ultimately dismissed.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Your recollection would be Mr. Hopkins was not happy about the result of what the judge's order had done?

Mr. MILLER. My recollection is he was not happy.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Why would he not have been happy?

Mr. MILLER. He felt like he needed to stay in Chapter 11 for an opportunity to reorganize the debtor and that opportunity had been taken away from him.

Mr. GIUFFRA. You could now go after the debtor's assets; correct?

Mr. MILLER. In State court, correct. There was no automatic stay in place.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Ms. Heritage called you right after she got off the phone with Mr. Hopkins; is that right?

Mr. MILLER. To the best of my recollection, yes, sir.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Did she indicate any state of surprise or shock that Hopkins had called her?

Mr. MILLER. My impression was yeah, she was kind of shocked that he had called her directly.

Mr. GIUFFRA. That was because she was a represented party?

Mr. MILLER. That's correct. She was the client.

Mr. GIUFFRA. And you should typically contact lawyer to lawyer?

Mr. MILLER. That's correct.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Now if we could just turn to your notes which we have up on the screen, I just want to direct your attention to what is in yellow. Let me just read the first thing I have marked in. "Dixie loan went to Clinton campaign, signed lease to State." Do you recall writing that down?

Mr. MILLER. Yes, sir, I did write this down.

Mr. GIUFFRA. What was Ms. Heritage relating to you when she said, "Dixie loan went to Clinton campaign, signed lease to State"?

Mr. MILLER. As reflected in the next document, No. 2, that goes into a little more detail, adds to my recollection of it, but it was an allegation that there was a loan made from Madison to Dixie Continental Leasing and that part of those loan proceeds went to the Clinton campaign and as a result of that campaign contribution, the State had signed a lease from a McDougal or a Madison-related entity.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Mr. Peacock, if I could ask you a quick question, you were the President of Dixie Continental back at that time?

Mr. PEACOCK. Right.

Mr. GIUFFRA. That was your company?

Mr. PEACOCK. That's right.

Mr. GIUFFRA. The next line in the memo, Mr. Miller is, "Alot of people going to prison!!" What was Ms. Hays trying to indicate to you by that statement?

Mr. MILLER. That was a statement Mr. Hopkins allegedly made to Ms. Hays that as a result of the Dixie Continental Leasing transaction and the State corresponding lease, was such a transaction that it would ultimately result in people going to prison.

Mr. GIUFFRA. So it would be this transaction whereby a Dixie loan went to the Clinton campaign in exchange for State leases?

Mr. MILLER. That was the allegation as reported to me, and I wrote it down.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Now below that there's a reference, "Greg going to get out!! Too dirty." What was the reference meaning there?

Mr. MILLER. Again, with the transaction noted above and all of these things, my recollection is the allegations were going to be so outstanding that Greg was stating to Ms. Heritage allegedly that he was not sure if he even wanted to stay in as counsel for the Peacocks, that it may get too dirty and he was considering resigning as the attorney of record.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Now down at the bottom of your notes it says, "McDougal told Peacock that JGT and McDougal would take care of Peacock." What was Ms. Heritage Hays relating by that statement to you?

Mr. MILLER. That was about the fifth or sixth excuse or reason why that maybe Madison should back off in this foreclosure proceeding, is my perception of the allegations being made, but that was simply a statement Mr. Hopkins allegedly made to Ms. Hays, was that Peacock was saying that JGT stands for Jim Guy Tucker.

Mr. GIUFFRA. And he was your partner at the law firm; correct?

Mr. MILLER. He was a partner and I was an associate; but yes, we were members of the same firm, that there somewhere was alleged to be a promise that Jim Guy and McDougal would take care of Peacock. That was simply the statement made and I wrote it down.

Mr. GIUFFRA. After this conversation with Ms. Hays, you went and spoke to Jim Guy Tucker at the firm?

Mr. MILLER. There was an intervening discussion with another member of my firm by the name of Tim Grooms, then Mr. Grooms and I went and discussed these allegations with Mr. Tucker, is that correct.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Now in April 1987, were you aware that Jim Guy Tucker was a friend of Mr. McDougal?

Mr. MILLER. I was not then and am not today.

Mr. GIUFFRA. At the suggestion of Mr. Tucker, did you draft a memo to John Selig?

Mr. MILLER. John Selig, yes, sir.

Mr. GIUFFRA. He was another senior partner at your firm?

Mr. MILLER. That's correct.

Mr. GIUFFRA. And that memo, which we will turn to, document No. 2 in your packet, that's dated April 23, 1987. Do you recall when you dictated this memo or prepared the memo?

Mr. MILLER. It's my recollection that I would have dictated this memo on the 21st contemporaneous with the phone call, immediately following the phone call and my meeting with Jim Guy. It would have taken my secretary some time to type it, get it back to me in draft form. I would have made any revisions and then it would have been finalized on April 23rd, so it all occurred the 21st, 22nd and 23rd.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Why did Mr. Tucker want you to write this memo to Mr. Selig?

Mr. MILLER. As stated in the memo, he said if there's any doubt, if somebody is making allegations, put it down in writing and pass it on to John Selig.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Now this memo is an accurate transcription of what Ms. Hays told you on the 21st; correct?

Mr. MILLER. To the best of my knowledge and recollection, yes, the actual phone minutes are my abbreviated version of what was said. The memo puts a little more meat on that skeleton and fleshes out what we talked about, yes, sir.

Mr. GIUFFRA. And you viewed yourself in preparing this memo as acting as sort of a stenographer?

Mr. MILLER. That's correct.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Let's turn to what is actually listed as page 3 of the memo but is in actuality page 2 of the memo, the next page. If I could direct your attention to the second full paragraph, and I'll just read it into the record and then we'll discuss it.

Mr. Hopkins stated that a portion of the loan proceeds made to Dixie Continental Leasing went to Bill Clinton's campaign and that in return for the substantial campaign contribution, Bill Clinton assured Jim McDougal that a State agency would lease space from Madison at its headquarters on Main Street in Little Rock.

Did you consider this to be a serious allegation?

Mr. MILLER. I don't know how you would define "serious," but yes, it was serious enough that I felt it needed to be addressed.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Did Mr. Tucker ask you to tell anyone outside of the law firm of Hopkins' allegations via Ms. Heritage Hays?

Mr. MILLER. No, as stated in the memo, he asked me to prepare this to John Selig.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Do you know whether Mr. Tucker took any steps to investigate Mr. Hopkins' allegations?

Mr. MILLER. No, sir.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Do you know whether anyone else at your firm took any steps to investigate Mr. Hopkins' allegations?

Mr. MILLER. No, sir.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Did you contact Mr. Hopkins and ask him about the allegations?

Mr. MILLER. No, sir.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Mr. Hopkins, if I could put some questions to you, sir, you're a specialist in bankruptcy law?

Mr. HOPKINS. Among other things, yes, sir.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Bankruptcy litigation.

Mr. HOPKINS. Yes, sir.

Mr. GIUFFRA. During the 1980's, you represented Mr. Peacock on a number of matters?

Mr. HOPKINS. Yes, along with certain of his related entities.

Mr. GIUFFRA. And back in—

The CHAIRMAN. That moves. You can actually pull it right up.

Mr. HOPKINS. Is that better?

The CHAIRMAN. Yes.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Back in 1987, Madison Guaranty sued Mr. Peacock and various entities that he owned or controlled with regard to the nonpayment of certain loans that those entities and Mr. Peacock had taken out?

Mr. HOPKINS. That's my recollection.

Mr. GIUFFRA. You know Ms. Pat Heritage Hays; right?

Mr. HOPKINS. Yes.

Mr. GIUFFRA. You consider her to be a truthful person?

Mr. HOPKINS. Yes.

Mr. GIUFFRA. No reason that she would make up a conversation that she would have with you?

Mr. HOPKINS. No.

Mr. GIUFFRA. You know Mr. Miller; correct?

Mr. HOPKINS. Yes.

Mr. GIUFFRA. You believe him to be a truthful person as well?

Mr. HOPKINS. Oh, sure.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Now let's put up, which is on the screen actually, look at the memo that Mr. Miller prepared. Now, you've reviewed this memo before?

Mr. HOPKINS. The first time I saw this memo——

Mr. GIUFFRA. The April 23 memo.

Mr. HOPKINS. Document 2 in the packet, Counsel?

Mr. GIUFFRA. Correct.

Mr. HOPKINS. The first time I saw the memo was when my deposition was taken by the Counsel for this Committee, oh, a month or two ago.

Mr. GIUFFRA. In your deposition you testified that you had, "No specific recollection of a conversation with Ms. Heritage Hays"?

Mr. HOPKINS. That's correct.

Mr. GIUFFRA. And as you sit here today, do you have any sort of recollection of the conversation, general, specific?

Mr. HOPKINS. No. And after being here this morning, I must say that my recollection of that is even fuzzier because I heard—I did happen to hear part of Ms. Hays' testimony this morning. She testified there was a face-to-face meeting. This afternoon I hear that there was—my conversation with her was by telephone. I don't know whether there was a meeting, a telephone call, a conversation or not. I have no specific recollection and nothing has helped clear that up since my deposition.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Do you have a general recollection, a vague recollection?

Mr. HOPKINS. No.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Would you be surprised if you had this conversation with Ms. Heritage Hays?

Mr. HOPKINS. This conversation, I probably would. Would I be surprised that I had a conversation about this subject matter, probably not.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Do you recall testifying at your deposition at page 113 that you wouldn't—about 51 percent probability that you had the conversation?

Mr. HOPKINS. I have not seen my deposition, but that's probably a fair statement.

Mr. GIUFFRA. So more likely than not, you had the conversation?

Mr. HOPKINS. I had a conversation. Whether it was this specific conversation with these statements, I couldn't tell you. I would say probably not. Whether I had a conversation, I would say probably.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Let me direct your attention to July and August of 1995, so that's less than a year ago. Did you ever speak with someone by the name of Bill Simmons of Associated Press?

Mr. HOPKINS. Other than to tell him to remove himself from my premises and to quit calling my office, no.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Now at about the same time period, did you ever speak with Ms. Heritage Hays?

Mr. HOPKINS. About anything or——

Mr. GIUFFRA. About anything. Do you recall running into Ms. Heritage Hays at a restaurant where you both were having lunch?

Mr. HOPKINS. Sometime within the last year I do.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Did you ever discuss anything having to do with the subject matters that you are here today about with Ms. Heritage Hays during that lunch meeting? It wasn't a meeting, but you both were having lunch in the same establishment.

Mr. HOPKINS. As I recall, the only time I have seen Pat in the last year was in one of the restaurants near the downtown area, a fairly popular lunch place.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Do you recall the name of it?

Mr. HOPKINS. If my memory is correct I think it was the Dixie Cafe. I am not positive, but it was one of the ones on the restaurant row area.

Mr. GIUFFRA. What happened when you met with Ms. Hays?

Mr. HOPKINS. It was maybe one of these 15-second conversations you have where you run into someone you know that shares a common burden. This was sometime after the article came out. I remember perhaps——

Mr. GIUFFRA. This would be the AP article?

Mr. HOPKINS. Yes. "Jeez, the reporters are at it again. I wish they would leave us alone. I don't talk to them." That was about it. Maybe some vague recollection that she says, "Jeez, I hope I didn't say anything to cause you any problems." I remember saying to her, much as we conversed after the break this morning, that don't worry about this. It's no big deal. It's no big deal. And that was about the whole substance of the conversation.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Did you read the AP article?

Mr. HOPKINS. Yes.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Do you recall in the AP article the fact that it said that you had a conversation with Ms. Hays?

Mr. HOPKINS. Yes.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Did you discuss with Ms. Hays in any way the fact that the AP article said that you and Ms. Hays had had a conversation?

Mr. HOPKINS. Not that I recall. I mean, like I say, it was one of these passing-in-the-day conversations occurring while one of us was waiting to pay, the other one was in line.

Mr. GIUFFRA. That's a pretty critical fact, whether you had a conversation with Ms. Hays or you didn't. I mean, that was what the article was about, this particular conversation. Did you and Ms. Hays, when you met with her within the last year, discuss whether or not the conversation did or didn't occur?

Mr. HOPKINS. No, not that I recall.

Mr. GIUFFRA. So your testimony is that during the conversation with Ms. Hays while you were having lunch, there was no conversation about the fact that you had had this conversation back in 1987? Is that your testimony?

Mr. HOPKINS. That's my recollection, yes, sir.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Now this morning, Ms. Hays said that she had this conversation with you at the Dixie Cafe and that during this conversation at the Dixie Cafe, you indicated to her that yes, the conversation had occurred back in 1987, so you still believe that you didn't have this conversation back in 1995?

Mr. HOPKINS. I stand by what I said. It was too short a conversation. Maybe she assumed from my statements to her that it was no big deal, don't worry about it, that I meant more by that than what I meant by it, but it was a very short conversation. I mean, Mr. Fox, my counsel here, was along with me for lunch. It was the kind of thing you would have when you run into someone in the hall, run into someone out like that. I don't recall it being an extended discussion, oh jeez, I said so-and-so, and now I remember it and—no.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Was there any discussion of the fact that according to the AP story, you had had a conversation back in 1987 with Ms. Heritage Hays?

Mr. HOPKINS. No, sir, not that I recall.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Let me direct your attention to page 2 of the April 23, 1987 memo.

Mr. HOPKINS. Is this the page that's numbered 3 but actually—

Mr. GIUFFRA. Yes, but it's actually page 2. You've read the whole memo; correct?

Mr. HOPKINS. Yes.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Let me just direct your attention to the sentence:

Mr. Hopkins stated that a portion of the loan proceeds made to Dixie Continental Leasing went to Bill Clinton's campaign and that in return for the substantial campaign contribution, Bill Clinton assured Jim McDougal that a State agency would lease space from Madison at its headquarters on Main Street in Little Rock.

Now, you would agree that that would be a serious allegation, correct, the allegation that's attributed to you in this memo prepared by Mr. Miller? It would be a serious allegation to assert that the Governor agreed to lease office space to a particular individual in exchange for a campaign contribution?

Mr. HOPKINS. I guess I would have a problem with the term "serious." Yes, it is a substantial allegation if you will permit—

Mr. GIUFFRA. It's not the kind of statement that someone would make up; correct?

Mr. HOPKINS. I'm sorry?

Mr. GIUFFRA. It's not the kind of statement that someone would make up, that Ms. Hays would make up?

Mr. HOPKINS. I can't answer that for her. It would be speculation on my part.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Based on your experience with Ms. Hays, it's not the kind of statement that Ms. Hays would make up?

Mr. HOPKINS. Once again, that would be speculation on my part. It is the kind of thing that I would expect someone to treat with the proper amount of deference.

The CHAIRMAN. Mr. Hopkins, Ms. Hays says that you made this statement to her. Did you make the statement to her?

Mr. HOPKINS. Mr. Chairman, I have no specific recollection on that issue. That does not sound like the way I would phrase my words.

The CHAIRMAN. Were you aware of the loan?

Mr. HOPKINS. I'm sorry, the Dixie Continental loan?

The CHAIRMAN. Yes.

Mr. HOPKINS. Probably through conversations with my client at that point in time.

The CHAIRMAN. Were you aware of the contributions that your client had made?

Mr. HOPKINS. Could I have just one moment here?

The CHAIRMAN. Certainly.

Mr. HOPKINS. My problem here is this—anything I know about any of these allegations for the most part would have come and probably exclusively at this point in time would have come from Mr. Peacock. There is a question as to attorney-client privilege and without—

The CHAIRMAN. Mr. Hopkins, I'm not asking you to reveal attorney-client privilege. You have here Ms. Hays who says that you called her. You waived any privilege as it relates to a conversation that you have with another party who is not a lawyer when you say look, there was this loan made, there were leases that were made as a result of this, there were campaign contributions, and this is going to be big trouble.

You have read this memo. This memo you heard about the first time last year, you run into this woman and you say don't worry about it, et cetera. How was it that you were in the position to tell her about this, about the contributions? Did you learn that the contribution back in the 1980's was made? This conversation with her took place sometime in 1987? This memo was in 1987. So were you aware that a contribution by Mr. Peacock had been made?

Mr. HOPKINS. Senator, if I was aware of that fact, it was because Mr. Peacock told me.

The CHAIRMAN. OK.

Mr. HOPKINS. It's not the kind of thing I would have made up out of thin air.

The CHAIRMAN. Let me say this to you. You did have a conversation basically as it related to this entire situation that you were annoyed about and that your client was angered about; is that true?

Mr. HOPKINS. I cannot say that is true. I cannot say that it is not true. I have no specific recollection that we had a conversation where we discussed these issues or that I said this. It could have happened a different way.

The CHAIRMAN. Well, I am not going to follow that premise in terms of a different way. "Dixie loan went to Clinton campaign, signed lease to State, alot of people going to prison!! Whole deal was just to get billing out!!" Did you talk about this? I mean, did she just make this up?

Mr. HOPKINS. Senator, I cannot tell you for sure. All I can tell you is that—

The CHAIRMAN. When you say you can't tell me for sure, do you mean that you have a general recollection of a conversation about this with—what's that young lady's name?

Mr. HOPKINS. Ms. Heritage Hays.

The CHAIRMAN. At the time, did you have a general conversation with Ms. Heritage Hays about this?

Mr. HOPKINS. I guess what gives me the problem, is that I do not recall a conversation that occurred as I have answered to Counsel. You know, there is a possibility, maybe even a probability that there was a conversation, whether it was telephonic or in person, and how things were talked about, I don't know. I don't know whether these were things that we were going to investigate in the litigation or not.

The CHAIRMAN. It says, "Mr. Hopkins informed Ms. Heritage that one of the loans made by Madison to Dixie Continental Leasing," and you were representing them now in this litigation; right? Dixie?

Mr. HOPKINS. That's my recollection, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. "Upon which Marcy Taylor had undertaken foreclosure proceedings, also involved fraudulent transactions. Mr. Hopkins stated that a portion of the loan proceeds made to Dixie Continental Leasing went to Bill Clinton's campaign." Now if you made that statement, that is not a statement that you would forget very easily, is it? That's a rather serious statement, isn't it?

Mr. HOPKINS. In the type of practice—well, yes, sir, it is. I don't mean to avoid your questions. It is a serious allegation.

The CHAIRMAN. So isn't it the kind of thing you would recall?

Mr. HOPKINS. In the type of practice I deal with, these type allegations and actually these type situations appear more often than you might presume. There are many types of fraud or many types of wrongdoing that can—

The CHAIRMAN. Did you hear when Ms. Heritage testified today?

Mr. HOPKINS. I heard portions of it.

The CHAIRMAN. Have you ever gone over any of her testimony, any of her depositions, have you been shown any?

Mr. HOPKINS. No, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. Have you been told about what she's said?

Mr. HOPKINS. No, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. Would you get out those depositions so that you could share with Mr. Hopkins, please, what she has said as it relates to this conversation. I have to tell you, you see, here you have someone who eventually becomes a lawyer, Ms. Heritage, and was somewhat taken aback by the manner in which—because you were obviously disturbed on behalf of your client, make these statements to the effect that people are going to go to jail. She relates this to Mr. Miller and Mr. Miller relates this to his senior partner. They think it is sufficiently important that he then transcribes his notes in which he has related this from Ms. Heritage to a fuller memorandum. I have to tell you, this is not the everyday kind of situation. You're talking about an allegation as it relates to the then-Governor of the State which you made—I have no doubt that you made it—to this young woman who is representing Madison Bank.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Mr. Hopkins, in representing clients, you obviously try to stay within the bounds of the Canon of Ethics; right?

Mr. HOPKINS. Yes, sir.

Mr. GIUFFRA. You are aware of the Canon of Ethics which says that you can't make a knowingly false statement to advance your client's interest; right?

Mr. HOPKINS. Yes, sir.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Mr. Peacock, let me ask you several questions, specifically about this particular incident. Have you ever said anything to anyone about a portion of loan proceeds that you received or Dixie Continental received going to a Clinton campaign?

Mr. PEACOCK. No, sir.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Are you certain that you have never said that to anyone?

Mr. PEACOCK. No, sir.

Mr. GIUFFRA. So you don't know one way or the other; right?

Mr. PEACOCK. I said I have not said that to anyone right there.

Mr. GIUFFRA. You're 100 percent sure that you've never said it?

Mr. PEACOCK. I'm 100 percent sure.

Mr. GIUFFRA. You're certain you never said anything to Mr. Hopkins about loan proceeds going to the Clinton campaign?

Mr. PEACOCK. No, sir.

Mr. GIUFFRA. You mean you did or you didn't?

Mr. PEACOCK. I didn't say anything to him.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Now do you have any knowledge about Mr. Clinton assuring Mr. McDougal that a State agency would lease Madison space from him?

Mr. PEACOCK. No, sir, I wasn't privy to that kind of information. I worked on the job out there, clearing up Maple Creek and the other jobs, running dozers and doing that type of work.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Did you do any renovation work on the Madison building?

Mr. PEACOCK. I did.

Mr. GIUFFRA. That's the main office that Madison Guaranty had.

Mr. PEACOCK. No, I did not work on that one.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Which building did you work on?

Mr. PEACOCK. I worked on one down at the corner of the street there that they call the old whorehouse. It was a Senate residential area back in the 1940's or something like that, and they had made it into an apartment complex.

Mr. GIUFFRA. You have known Mr. McDougal for about 15 to 20 years?

Mr. PEACOCK. Yes, sir.

Mr. GIUFFRA. You were a Director of Madison?

Mr. PEACOCK. Yes, sir.

Mr. GIUFFRA. And you were involved in land development with Mr. McDougal; correct?

Mr. PEACOCK. Right.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Did you ever work on the Castle Grande project?

Mr. PEACOCK. Sir?

Mr. GIUFFRA. The Castle Grande project, did you ever do any work on that project?

Mr. PEACOCK. Yes, sir.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Did you know that project as Castle Grande?

Mr. PEACOCK. Did I know it as Castle Grande? Yes, sir.

Mr. GIUFFRA. That was the name of the project?

Mr. PEACOCK. Right.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Was it called IDC as far as you knew?

Mr. PEACOCK. No.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Do you recall the dismissal of your Chapter 11 bankruptcy proceeding in April 1987?

Mr. PEACOCK. Do I recall what?

Mr. GIUFFRA. Do you recall the dismissal of that proceeding?

Mr. PEACOCK. No, sir. This bankruptcy you are referring to was my son's business, not mine.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Do you recall that happening?

Mr. PEACOCK. Do I recall what?

Mr. GIUFFRA. The dismissal of the proceeding.

Mr. PEACOCK. I don't remember.

Mr. GIUFFRA. This is a good place to stop.

The CHAIRMAN. Senator Sarbanes.

Senator SARBANES. I yield to Mr. Ben-Veniste.

The CHAIRMAN. Mr. Ben-Veniste.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

Let's start, if we would, with the central issue here, which is Mr. Hopkins, do you have any knowledge from any source that there was an understanding with respect to a campaign contribution made by Mr. Peacock in 1985, and that as a result of that, there would be deference paid or leases entered into between the State of Arkansas and Madison Savings & Loan or any entity associated with it?

Mr. HOPKINS. Counsel, as we sit here today, I recall nothing, no evidence or anything that I have had access to on that.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. All right.

Mr. HOPKINS. At this point.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. I do not know that anybody has asked this question, but it would seem to be the relevant question, and that is whether there's any basis behind what has appeared here or been leaked previously as a memo reflecting a conversation between you and the representative of the Madison Bank in 1987. OK? So the question is, in 1987 or up until this moment, do you have any evidence to suggest that there was a deal entered into between a fundraiser held in 1985 and the awarding of any lease contract to Madison Guaranty Savings & Loan?

Mr. HOPKINS. Counsel, at this point based on what I have seen, the general memory I do have, I would have to say that at the time this litigation was ongoing, and based on what Ms. Heritage said, I probably had suspicions, and my statements to her which she may have heard as assertions of fact were probably made that this litigation is newly filed, we will be investigating all of these things and if we can prove these things, they are very serious allegations. At that point, that may give Mr. Peacock a defense.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Well, now I think we are getting somewhere, Mr. Hopkins. In fact, it was your intention not to let things rest where they rested after your Chapter 11 proceeding was dismissed with prejudice; is that correct?

Mr. HOPKINS. Basically, but could I correct one thing? The Chapter 11 really was a very small part of this. It involved a corporate party, and that bankruptcy had no effect on the other litigation that was ongoing. Its stay action didn't stay.

The thing that as I recall had gurgled this thing to the top was the other litigation that had been recently filed, but your statement is correct. We were in the initial discussion stages, and my assumption is these statements were made more in you may want to be prepared to answer these questions in discovery because we have some reason for these suspicions. I can assume that's the way it happened because that would be more consistent with the way I handle cases than just making these serious statements.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Mr. Hopkins, you did not view the dismissal of your Chapter 11 proceeding as a positive development in your representation of the Peacock interests; correct?

Mr. HOPKINS. That's correct.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. And you were upset because there were statements or allegations made in the course of the bankruptcy proceeding that were personal to you and you didn't like them; correct?

Mr. HOPKINS. I don't remember specifically what the friction was there but—

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Wasn't there some friction over your legal fees as to whether they had been paid shortly before the filing of the Chapter 11?

Mr. HOPKINS. I don't remember one way or another. All I do remember is that there was friction ongoing at that point.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. There was a lot of friction, and you regarded the proceeding as getting very dirty, didn't you?

Mr. HOPKINS. Yes, sir.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. And you were thinking about withdrawing from it because of the friction involved in the proceeding; correct?

Mr. HOPKINS. I don't specifically remember that. That would be consistent with what was ongoing at the time, my general memory of what was ongoing.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. So it is consistent with your general memory that you had suffered a reversal in the sense of the bankruptcy being dismissed, that allegations had been made of a personal nature, that you took issue and umbrage with those allegations, that you thought the proceeding was getting very dirty.

And now what you're telling us is you approached the opposing party and you said look, things are getting very dirty, I may get out of this myself, but you ought to back up, take a deep breath because we're not finished yet, there's some things you ought to know about, and you began to weave out this possible scenario that may have had some basis in truth but certainly did not support an allegation of a quid pro quo. Isn't that so?

Mr. HOPKINS. My specific recollection of what happened at that time is not clear. It has been 9 years, but that is generally consistent with my recollection of what was ongoing at the time.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. You knew that there had been a fundraiser in the bank at some point?

Mr. HOPKINS. I had heard that from someone.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. You knew that Madison was now the headquarters of the housing authority, as of 1987?

Mr. HOPKINS. I don't know whether I knew that or not.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Well, did you not know that Madison space had been leased out to a State agency, whether you knew which agency it was?

Mr. HOPKINS. That is probably a more correct statement. The specific agency I may or may not have known.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Now the statement that is reflected in the memo prepared by Mr. Miller following his conversation with Ms. Heritage was that you stated that a portion of the loan proceeds made to Dixie Continental Leasing went to Bill Clinton's campaign and that in return for the substantial contribution, Bill Clinton assured Jim McDougal that a State agency would lease space from Madison at its headquarters on Main Street in Little Rock. That's the statement that has been recorded.

You knew there had been a fundraiser, you knew that a State agency was in the headquarters on Main Street, and in making an allegation where you wanted to put the other side on the defensive, you put those two facts together and made an allegation, according to what Ms. Heritage told Mr. Miller, that there was some kind of a quid pro quo, but the fact is you had no such evidence of any quid pro quo, isn't that so?

Mr. HOPKINS. As we sit here today, I think that's a fair statement of the situation.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. There could not have been any quid pro quo because we know as we sit here now, having investigated this matter, that the fundraiser in question happened a year after Madison Guaranty Savings & Loan was leased out to the housing authority.

Now when you say, Mr. Hopkins, that in this type of litigation there are these type of allegations made on a more frequent basis than we would expect, are you suggesting that each side exaggerates their position in order to try to get some tactical advantage?

Mr. HOPKINS. I guess I take issue with the term "exaggerate." I think a more appropriate term would be that each side rattles their saber and says we will investigate all of these allegations, and in the course of preparation for trial, many allegations and many theories turn out to be dead ends, to do your job properly as a commercial trial lawyer, you have to run down 10 ends, all of which may be dead, and this is—

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. But before you run down those dead ends, what you do is rattle your saber or posture or take a position where you claim to know information that in fact you may hope to develop but certainly have no basis for swearing to. Is that fair to say?

Mr. HOPKINS. I don't even think you have to get to the point that you claim to know information, but rather you are going to be seeking information on a topic. And a lot of times when you say that, the other side, for whatever reason, may assume that that evidence will come to light.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Let me ask, Mr. Peacock, whether you have testified prior to today consistently with the position you have taken before this Committee in depositions that you had no knowledge of any quid pro quo between the fundraiser of 1985 and any lease commitments made by the State?

Mr. PEACOCK. I made no case of that. That fundraiser, my contribution was for a selfish reason right there.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. What was your selfish reason?

Mr. PEACOCK. All right. My manager, Dene Landrum, was interested in helping a lady that he knew who had some children that wanted to get in line for some scholarships, and I believe our Governor in Arkansas, regardless of who he is, has about 16 or 18 that he can give away, if the people have the right scholastics.

The other position I take is I made a $3,000 contribution in my son's name, he was in law school. And I felt that, after I talked to Maurice Smith, that there would be no one in the State of Arkansas that could help a young man out of law school any better than a Governor could.

Usually when I make a contribution to a Governor or Senator or anyone else right there, and I have done it all my life to a point, or helped fry fish or whatever, you expect a little something back somewhere.

I talked to the State Highway Commissioner—and incidentally right now, I'm not going to say that this is the reason, but we do have a four-lane highway running right by the farm, right there, that probably very likely may have not been for another 10 years; it was in the program, but I felt like it may have possibly got stepped up a little bit. But it certainly wasn't a deal to get anything out of Clinton personally.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Have you testified to this before the Independent Counsel?

Mr. PEACOCK. Yes, I have.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Did you testify under a grant of immunity?

Mr. PEACOCK. The question, sir?

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Did you testify under a grant of immunity or did you testify without immunity? Mr. Peacock, do you know what immunity is?

Mr. PEACOCK. Well, sir, I am not an attorney. I am just a dumb farmer. But—

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Immunity might be a very good thing to have under circumstances like this, but you have no recollection of testifying under immunity?

Mr. PEACOCK. I do not.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Well, you have not been prosecuted, as I understand it?

Mr. PEACOCK. I have not.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Either for any violation of the laws concerning bribery or of perjury as I understand it; is that correct?

Mr. PEACOCK. I have not.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Have you been advised that you are to be prosecuted?

Mr. PEACOCK. I have not.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Now with respect to the allegations or the statements that are made in your memo, Mr. Miller, I would like to clarify one thing which went by pretty fast when Mr. Giuffra was questioning you. And that is with respect to the statement on the first page of the memorandum that said, "Mr. Hopkins went on to explain that there was substantial wrongdoing regarding the prior administration of Madison, that several people were 'going to go to prison.'" Do you see where I am there?

Mr. MILLER. Yes, sir.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. And with respect to Ms. Heritage Hays' interpretation of that part of the conversation that she had with Mr. Hopkins, she said that the reference to people going to jail had to do—and I quote from page 109 of her deposition testimony of February 23rd of this year, in response to the question of:

Question: Could you be precise as to which people you thought Mr. Hopkins was referring to?

Answer: Jim McDougal, Susan McDougal, one or more of the Henley brothers, John Latham. That's essentially it.

Question: Those people were Madison insiders?

Answer: Yes.

Question: You didn't believe that she was referring to Mr.—to Governor Clinton, did you?

Answer: No, not at all.

Now did you have any reason to believe that in transmitting this information to you, that Ms. Heritage was suggesting at this part of the conversation that anyone other than the Madison insiders were, according to Mr. Hopkins, going to get into serious difficulty and go to prison?

Mr. MILLER. That's correct. The only understanding I had would have been the Madison administration. No reference to Mr. Clinton whatsoever.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. And indeed, subsequent to this memorandum of April 23, 1987, Mr. McDougal, Mrs. McDougal, and one of the Henleys—do you recall who? One of the Henleys was prosecuted; that is Mr. McDougal's brother-in-law, I believe. Or both of them were? Both of them were. So was that essentially the group that was being discussed for mismanaging and worse in connection with Madison?

Mr. MILLER. My recollection, and it is based upon my phone records and this memo, was that all Pat said to me was a lot of people are going to go to prison. She did not identify any individuals that may have been referred to.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Would you accept her interpretation of that as I have read it to you from her deposition?

Mr. MILLER. Yes, sir. I would have no reason to disagree with her interpretation.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Let me ask you a question, Mr. Peacock. You were asked about whether you did some work for Castle Grande. Castle Grande that you did work for was a trailer park, was it not?

Mr. PEACOCK. This was where we were putting in double-wides, and my job there was to clear the property to put the double-wides in and build the roads into them from the highway.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. So the double-wide you're referring to is some sort of a dwelling?

Mr. PEACOCK. These were manufactured homes that come in and they're usually in two pieces.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. And that was the portion of this property that you knew as Castle Grande, this development of the double-wide trailer homes?

Mr. PEACOCK. That's correct.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Thank you.

We'll cede back the time remaining.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Mr. Hopkins, you were asked a series of questions which I didn't quite understand the answer to, to be perfectly frank with you, having to do with your conversation with Ms. Heritage, as she was then known, or with Ms. Hays.

Now there is unmistakable recorded evidence, recorded by Mr. Miller, testified to by Ms. Hays, that you said to her in 1987 that a portion of the loan proceeds made to Dixie Continental Leasing went to Bill Clinton's campaign. It does not say in the notes and she does not say that you speculated about wanting to investigate whether it did or that you raised a question about it. She testified right here today that your conversation with her was that a portion of the loan proceeds made to Dixie Continental Leasing went to Bill Clinton's campaign. Did you say it?

Mr. HOPKINS. I—once again, I don't recall the conversation.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Are you prepared to deny her version of the conversation?

Mr. HOPKINS. No, I cannot deny it since I do not remember it. I'm sorry.

Mr. CHERTOFF. So on the state of the evidence that we have here, you have no memory, you're not prepared to dispute her version, and her version isn't about "I want to investigate claims or I have questions I might want to do discovery about." Her version, which is unrefuted at this point, uncontradicted, her version is that you made a specific allegation about a diversion of a portion of that loan to a campaign. Now was it your habit to lie to people when you had business dealings with them?

Mr. HOPKINS. No, sir.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Was it your habit to make up stories or fabricate allegations when you were dealing with people?

Mr. HOPKINS. No, sir.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Now, you understand that the allegation about diverting a portion of the loan proceeds was an allegation about a potential crime; right?

Mr. HOPKINS. Probably so. My area is not criminal law, so if—

Mr. CHERTOFF. You're a lawyer; right?

Mr. HOPKINS. Yes, sir, I am.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You understand it's a crime to take loan proceeds you're given for one purpose and secretly use it for something else; right? That's very easy, isn't it?

Mr. HOPKINS. In most cases, yes, sir.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Is it your habit to make up allegations about people, particularly when your own client was the subject of the allegation?

Mr. HOPKINS. No, sir.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Then it goes on to say, and again it's not something that you want to investigate or you want to raise questions about, but her testimony, corroborated by the memo that was written within a week of this conversation, is that, "In return for the substantial campaign contribution, Bill Clinton assured Jim McDougal that a State agency would lease space from Madison at its headquarters on Main Street in Little Rock." Did you say that?

Mr. HOPKINS. I cannot say that I said that.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Are you in a position to deny her sworn testimony?

Mr. HOPKINS. No, no, sir. Once again, Counsel, I have no specific recollection. I've given you my idea of how the conversation went.

Mr. CHERTOFF. So her version, her testimony of this conversation you had with her is uncontradicted because you're not willing to go on record now and contradict it.

And by the way, since we got on the issue of chronology, you understand from sitting here today that there was a second lease that was entered into within a matter of days after that April 1985 fundraiser?

Mr. HOPKINS. Is that the additional space, Counsel?

Mr. CHERTOFF. That's right. That is a separate second lease. You heard about it?

Mr. HOPKINS. Today, I heard about it.

Mr. CHERTOFF. And that's totally consistent with this version of events.

Now let me ask you, you understand, by the way, that an allegation that the Governor promised McDougal something in return for a contribution is a very serious allegation?

Mr. HOPKINS. Yes, sir, I do.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You understand that for a public official to take money in return for a promise to award a contract or a lease would be a criminal act; right?

Mr. HOPKINS. Yes, sir.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Is that an allegation you would make lightly in a conversation with an outsider?

Mr. HOPKINS. No. I wouldn't, no.

Mr. CHERTOFF. In the context of what you have described as exaggerating and posturing in litigation, is it your custom to make allegations about public officials doing acts that would be illegal?

Mr. HOPKINS. I'm sorry, would you repeat the question? I think I lost you somewhere.

Mr. CHERTOFF. In what you have described as kind of the ordinary routine business of a lawyer puffing and exaggerating in litigation, is it your practice in the course of conducting litigation to make unfounded allegations about public officials doing illegal things?

Mr. HOPKINS. No, sir.

Mr. CHERTOFF. I mean, what conceivable reason would you have to make up an allegation about the Governor and Jim McDougal exchanging money for favors? What would be the conceivable motive you would have to make that up?

Mr. HOPKINS. I cannot think of one.

Mr. CHERTOFF. What was in your mind? What did you know in 1987 that caused you to say to Ms. Heritage that there was this diversion of loan proceeds? Where did you get that from?

Mr. HOPKINS. First of all, we made the leap that I did say that. Since I don't know that I said that—I don't think that would have been the way I said it—I can't really answer that. I don't have any specific recollection at this point in time. I'm sorry, Counsel. I wish I did, but it's been 9 years.

Mr. CHERTOFF. So you don't remember what your basis was on which to make this allegation?

Mr. HOPKINS. Even if I made it, I do not recall what the basis would be today.

Mr. CHERTOFF. But you have told us previously that it is not in your habit to lie or make up baseless allegations; right?

Mr. HOPKINS. That's correct.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Because you understand that, in fact, that would be something you could be sanctioned for?

Mr. HOPKINS. Absolutely.

The CHAIRMAN. Now, Mr. Hopkins, you have no reason to doubt the veracity of Ms. Heritage—and now it's Ms. Heritage what?

Mr. HOPKINS. Hays.

The CHAIRMAN. Of her recollection, do you?

Mr. HOPKINS. No, Mr. Chairman. I have known—

The CHAIRMAN. Particularly since you can't recall, and she says that not only did she record this but at the time she called Mr. Miller. In fact, she found it somewhat shocking, and that's why she called him.

And obviously, Mr. Miller, you found this disconcerting to say the least; right?

Mr. MILLER. Yes, sir. The allegations were pretty outstanding.

The CHAIRMAN. Sure. And you remember them even at this time because it was—without benefit of this, you would have remembered the general allegations; right?

Mr. MILLER. No, sir, I couldn't say that without looking back at this information. I'd remember that I represented the Peacocks—I mean, litigation against the Peacocks, and that there were some allegations going on, but as far as telling you the specifics of them, I don't think I would have recalled it without this information.

The CHAIRMAN. But you were shocked at the time?

Mr. MILLER. It indicates that I was, yes, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. And you had no reason to disbelieve. As a matter of fact, you believed Ms. Heritage because otherwise, you would not have—you had no reason to disbelieve her and at this time you have no reason to disbelieve her, do you?

Mr. MILLER. I believe her that the conversation had occurred. That's not to give any merit to the allegations that were asserted.

The CHAIRMAN. Exactly, yes. In other words, you believe this is a conversation that she did have and that she relayed to you?

Mr. MILLER. That's correct.

The CHAIRMAN. And truthfully?

Mr. MILLER. Yes. Again, about the conversation, not about the allegations.

The CHAIRMAN. Yes, I understand that distinction.

Do you have any further questions?

Mr. GIUFFRA. Let's put up document No. 3 on the Elmo. This is a chart that Committee staff has prepared based on deposit slips that we obtained from information received from Betsey Wright, who will be testifying tomorrow. She was the Campaign Manager for the 1984 Governor's Campaign.

Mr. Peacock, you attended the fundraiser; correct?

Mr. PEACOCK. I did.

Mr. GIUFFRA. About how many people were at the fundraiser?

Mr. PEACOCK. I don't recall. About 50, 60 or so.

Mr. GIUFFRA. According to this document we have prepared, we have a Madison Guaranty cashier's check number 2496 from J.W. Fulbright in the amount of $3,000 on 4/4/85. Then we have cashier's checks from Dene Landrum, $3,000, 4/4/85, check number 2498; and Ken Peacock, $3,000, 4/4/85, check number 2497. Did you know Senator Fulbright?

Mr. PEACOCK. No, sir. I had met him when I was in—

Mr. GIUFFRA. You knew who he was?

Mr. PEACOCK. I did.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Was he at the fundraiser?

Mr. PEACOCK. I don't recall him being there, but that's been 10 years ago.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Now according to the numbers on these cashier's checks, Senator Fulbright's check was 496, the check you bought for your son was 497, and Landrum's check was 498. Do you know anything about Mr. Fulbright's check?

Mr. PEACOCK. No, sir, I don't.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Let's put up document No. 4. This is the cashier's check you bought for your son. Now, you bought this cashier's check; right?

Mr. PEACOCK. That's correct.

Mr. GIUFFRA. He didn't use his money?

Mr. PEACOCK. Do what, sir?

Mr. GIUFFRA. It was all your money, not any of his money; right?

Mr. PEACOCK. It is a possibility it may have been some of his retirement, you can't tell, but I can't remember at that time, sir.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Then the next check, which is No. 5, that's from your partner for $3,000, and you bought that check as well; correct?

Mr. PEACOCK. I bought it but he reimbursed me for it later on, if I remember correctly.

Mr. GIUFFRA. But you bought the check at the time; correct?

Mr. PEACOCK. I did buy it.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Let's put up document No. 7. This is a check you wrote for $6,000. Do you recall writing this check?

Mr. PEACOCK. I really don't, but I am not arguing the point that it was written.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Now did you use any Madison funds to buy either of those cashier's checks?

Mr. PEACOCK. Did I do what, sir?

Mr. GIUFFRA. Use any Madison funds to buy the cashier's checks, loan proceeds?

Mr. PEACOCK. I had two or three bank accounts at Madison, and I don't know whether I wrote this check on a farm account or I wrote the check on a construction account. I don't remember.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Did you use any loan proceeds to buy the check?

Mr. PEACOCK. No, sir, I did not.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Are you absolutely certain of that?

Mr. PEACOCK. I'm certain of that.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Let's put up document No. 8. Now, you wrote the two cashier's checks on April 4, 1985; correct?

Mr. PEACOCK. I don't remember. The document says that.

Mr. GIUFFRA. That was the date of the fundraiser, wasn't it?

Mr. PEACOCK. Here again, I have to assume what you fellas say because I don't remember that far back.

Mr. GIUFFRA. On April 4th, the same day as the fundraiser, same day that you wrote the two cashier's checks, the one for your son and the one for Mr. Landrum, you received another cashier's check for $50,000 from Madison. Do you recall receiving that check?

Mr. PEACOCK. I see a copy of it right here, but I don't necessarily recall it or I don't deny it, because they paid me several thousand dollars for clearing and development work out there.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Do you know what it had to do with? Was this a loan check? Was this loan proceeds?

Mr. PEACOCK. Sir, I don't remember 10 years ago. I don't remember last week a lot of things I did.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Let's put up document No. 9. Now this is a loan application, it has your signature on the bottom; is that right, sir?

Mr. PEACOCK. It looks like my signature.

Mr. GIUFFRA. It's dated April 5th, in the top right-hand corner is that correct?

Mr. PEACOCK. Yes, sir.

Mr. GIUFFRA. And that's the same amount as this cashier's check for $50,000 that you received on April 4th, the same day as the fundraiser?

Mr. PEACOCK. That's what the document says. I don't recall it.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Now is there a connection between this loan and the cashier's check as far as you know?

Mr. PEACOCK. No, sir.

Mr. GIUFFRA. You're positive about that?

Mr. PEACOCK. I'm positive of that.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Do you recall taking out this loan for $50,000?

Mr. PEACOCK. I'm sure I did.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Do you know what the purpose of the loan was?

Mr. PEACOCK. I think I was buying some property that we put a trailer park development on, shopping center.

Mr. GIUFFRA. The purpose of the loan on the application is listed as business. It just says business.

Mr. PEACOCK. For me that's big business.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Do you recall what the collateral was on this loan, the collateral that you put up on this loan?

Mr. PEACOCK. Yes, sir. On that loan I put up several brand-new commercial air conditioners probably worth $200,000 or $300,000.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Did you pay back this loan, sir?

Mr. PEACOCK. Did I pay back that loan?

Mr. GIUFFRA. Yes, did you default on the loan?

Mr. PEACOCK. I gave the air conditioners to them and RTC gave them away for $1,500.

Mr. GIUFFRA. So $1,500 is what the taxpayers got back on this $50,000 loan; is that right?

Mr. PEACOCK. Sounds right to me.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Let's put up document No. 10. Now on April 5th, the same day you filed this application for the loan, the day after the fundraiser, the day after you received the check for $50,000 from Madison, you wrote a check to the Quapaw Title Company for about $39,000. Do you recall writing that check?

Mr. PEACOCK. I don't recall writing it but it's right here in black and white and I won't deny it.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Did you have a property called the Woodson Property that you were involved in at that point that you had purchased? The Woodson Property?

Mr. PEACOCK. That was Woodson Property, yes, sir.

Mr. GIUFFRA. You were involved in purchasing that for Dixie Continental; right?

Mr. PEACOCK. Right.

Mr. GIUFFRA. You were the President of Dixie Continental?

Mr. PEACOCK. I was.

Mr. GIUFFRA. How much did you pay for that property?

Mr. PEACOCK. We paid around 300 something thousand dollars.

Mr. GIUFFRA. About $330, does that sound right?

Mr. PEACOCK. Sounds about right.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Did you also get a second loan from Madison Guaranty for I believe $297,000 to pay for that property?

Mr. PEACOCK. I don't remember, sir.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Do you recall using this check to Quapaw Title for $38,900, was this the downpayment for that property?

Mr. PEACOCK. Here again, I don't remember.

Mr. GIUFFRA. This check for $38,900 and the check for $50,000, you don't know what happened to the extra $11,000, do you?

Mr. PEACOCK. No, I don't.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Is it possible that money might have been used to help fund the fundraiser?

Mr. PEACOCK. No, sir.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Your contributions to the fundraiser?

Mr. PEACOCK. No, sir.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Where did you get the money for the fundraiser?

Mr. PEACOCK. At the time I was farming several thousand acres, and as I mentioned in my deposition, my fuel bill a week was $10,000. That could have come out of any account that I had.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Now at the time you purchased the two cashier's checks were you aware that it was illegal in Arkansas for one person to contribute more than $1,500 per candidate per election?

Mr. PEACOCK. No, I was not aware of that.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Did anyone from the Clinton campaign advise you as to what the contribution limits were?

Mr. PEACOCK. No, sir.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Were you aware at this time that it was illegal to make a contribution in the name of another person?

Mr. PEACOCK. I was not.

Mr. GIUFFRA. No one from the campaign advised you of that fact?

Mr. PEACOCK. No, sir.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Let's put up document No. 11. This is a document we received from Mr. Kendall and it is a memo to Governor Clinton from Nancy Hernreich.

One of the attendees at this fundraiser was a man named R.D. Randolph. Do you know R.D. Randolph?

Mr. PEACOCK. Yes, sir, I do.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Do you recall seeing him at the fundraiser?

Mr. PEACOCK. No, I don't, but he was very likely there.

Mr. GIUFFRA. According to the documentation that the Committee has received, Mr. Randolph gave $2,000 at this fundraiser to Governor Clinton. This memo indicates that Mr. Randolph wanted to talk to the Governor about the veto of a water bill, it says, "He mentioned a meeting between you, Tucker and Jim McDougal a couple of years ago which involved $33,000. This was pretty cryptic." Now this is back in 1987. Two years ago would be 1985. Do you know any reason why Mr. Randolph would be raising the issue of this fundraiser?

Mr. PEACOCK. I have no idea.

Mr. GIUFFRA. You haven't ever discussed the fundraiser with Mr. Randolph?

Mr. PEACOCK. No, sir.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Ever discussed the fundraiser with Mr. McDougal after it happened?

Mr. PEACOCK. No, sir.

Mr. GIUFFRA. No further questions.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Did you have anything at all to do with any conversation with R.D. Randolph or this memo that Mr. Giuffra is talking about?

Mr. PEACOCK. No, sir. I would have no occasion to, sir.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Had you ever heard of this before?

Mr. PEACOCK. I have never heard of it until today.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. In connection with the fundraiser, there were thank you letters sent out, according to our records, from the Clinton for Governor for Arkansas Campaign, dated May 3, 1985. One was to Ken Peacock and the other was to Dene Landrum. Are you aware that these individuals received thank you letters for their contributions?

Mr. PEACOCK. No, I wasn't, but I am not surprised. If someone gave me that much on contribution, I bet I'd thank them.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Do you have any reason to believe that Governor Clinton or his staff had knowledge that you were the person who made these contributions?

Mr. PEACOCK. No, sir.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Mr. Hopkins, let me go to you for a minute, and let's go back to the question of what it was you said to Ms. Heritage in 1987. You've indicated that you had no evidence that there was any quid pro quo of leases for contributions; correct?

Mr. HOPKINS. As of today, I recall none.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Indeed you have indicated that it is your practice to saber rattle and to posture in connection with your everyday litigation dealings with other parties in the hope that some of the things that you talk about will eventuate into provable allegations at some point?

Mr. HOPKINS. Yes, sir.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. And you are hopeful that by making such posturing allegations, that you will be able to achieve some advantage either in settling the case or in the litigation?

Mr. HOPKINS. That's correct.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Now according to Ms. Heritage, when this matter was raised by the press in 1995 after these documents were leaked, she ran into you and you all had a brief conversation in which she said that you said you were just posturing at the time. You don't recall having made that statement; correct?

Mr. HOPKINS. That's correct.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. But you would agree that that's just what it was you would have done according to the normal way you do business; correct?

Mr. HOPKINS. Yes, I see nothing contradictory in the statements.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. You were asked about another lease in 1985 that was entered into between Madison and the State of Arkansas. That was the expansion of space in a lease which had been entered into in 1984 for a grand total of an additional 1,500 square feet, more or less the size of an efficiency apartment. Were you aware of that?

Mr. HOPKINS. The first time I have heard about that particular—that specific transaction was late this morning. I still don't know the specifics of it, but your description of it sounds consistent with what I heard this morning.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. OK. So as far as what you knew back then, all you knew is as you've testified, that there was a fundraiser and that at some point a State agency had moved into the Madison headquarters; correct? You didn't know what the timing was?

Mr. HOPKINS. That's correct.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. And as we have shown, the timing could not have possibly supported a quid pro quo of a contribution made in 1985 in return for a lease that was entered into a year beforehand.

Let me turn to you, Mr. Miller, and the memorandum that you produced. In the second paragraph you indicate that, "On April 21, Ms. Pat Heritage informed me that she had spoken with Mr. Greg Hopkins, attorney for the Peacocks. Mr. Hopkins informed Ms. Heritage that there is a move underway to have our firm disqualified for representing Madison." And then it goes on to say the purported basis for the disqualification. Was there ever any move to disqualify you?

Mr. MILLER. No, sir.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. That was another posturing or saber rattling by Mr. Hopkins that did not eventuate and had no basis in fact?

Mr. MILLER. That's correct.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Did the grounds for any such conflict have any basis in fact as far as you knew?

Mr. MILLER. No, sir, there's none that I knew, and I couldn't logically put together how that could be a conflict.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. According to Ms. Heritage, Mr. Hopkins said that the litigation had gotten too dirty for him and he was considering resigning the representation. To your knowledge, did he resign the representation?

Mr. MILLER. To my knowledge, no.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. And did you resign the representation, Mr. Hopkins?

Mr. HOPKINS. No, sir.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. This was another posturing or saber rattling, as it were, that did not eventuate. What was it that you did in court, that according to Ms. Heritage, Mr. Hopkins took issue with?

Mr. MILLER. I do not know. There are only two possibilities I can think of. One would have been Greg and I had some prior settlement discussions, and as I recall there was an effort or an attempt to try to delay that bankruptcy hearing, and that maybe he thought we had it continued or had it settled, and I wouldn't agree to that. That could have been one possibility.

The other possibility I recall was that there may have been some mention that some loan proceeds made right before this entity went into bankruptcy could have possibly been used to pay Mr. Hopkins' attorney's fees. And I do not know. There may be other possibilities. Those are the only two I can recall.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Did you recall Mr. Hopkins' reaction in court to those?

Mr. MILLER. I don't recall his reaction in court. Apparently, afterwards, he was not happy whatever the allegation was.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Did he bring that to your attention directly?

Mr. MILLER. No, sir.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. In typing up this memorandum and preserving it and turning it over to the authorities when requested to do so, did you have any concern about the underlying allegations being true?

Mr. MILLER. None whatsoever. I mean, it was typical debtor baloney. Greg is on one side and he is talking about saber rattling. I'm on the other side, collecting, and I heard it all the time. I didn't believe that it had any merit whatsoever. Case closed.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You know, Mr. Hopkins and Mr. Miller were in kind of an unusual position here because Mr. Ben-Veniste is kind of intent on showing you, Mr. Hopkins, to be just an empty saber rattler and a weaver of webs. And I'm intent on showing that you must have some heck of a saber.

Let's go first to that portion of your conversation with Ms. Hays where she remembers you talking about people going to prison. I guess we can say now here, in 1996, that a fair number of the people included in that inner circle at Madison either have pled guilty to various crimes or, in fact, been tried for various crimes. So I guess it is to that portion of the conversation you would agree with me it turns out that that prediction had a lot of substance; right?

Mr. HOPKINS. Counsel, if I said that, it appears to have been a pretty good prediction.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Now let's go to another prediction. You told Ms. Hays—and again you didn't say you were going just to discover or investigate it, you represented it, you stated it to her as a fact—that money had been diverted from one of the loans that Mr. Peacock received into this campaign fundraiser. What do you know, when you look at the documents, again, we are comparing the documents generated at the time with the testimony people choose to remember or not to remember 10 years later.

What we see is that, on the very day of the fundraiser, Mr. Peacock took out a $50,000 loan and didn't even have to sign the loan document for Madison Guaranty until the next day, meaning that he got the money even before he signed the note, which is always nice. That having gotten the $50,000, Mr. Peacock then cut a couple of checks that went to the fundraiser, and that when you look to see where the $50,000 that Mr. Peacock took out actually went, we can account for about $39,000 of it, but $11,000 of it just seems to have disappeared. Mr. Peacock has told us he can't really remember what happened to that. So one could draw the conclusion that maybe there was a reimbursement here for a campaign contribution.

Now in view of these documents showing the remarkable timing of the loan and then the cashier's checks, the sequential cashier's checks for campaign contributions occurring on the very same day, I guess you would agree with me that your statement to Ms. Hays about diversion of the proceeds of the Madison loan also has kind of a connection to some objective reality; right?

Mr. HOPKINS. Once again, I don't recall what I said. Regardless of whether I said yes, this happened or we will be looking into it, those documents, at least, would lend some foundation to what I said or what I did.

Mr. CHERTOFF. We also know that within a matter of days after this interesting sequence of checks and campaign fundraiser and loan, there was a discussion of expanding the space that the State would take in Mr. McDougal's building, and what do you know, $50,000 more of leases come through a few months later.

Mr. PEACOCK, I want to close this up by focusing to see if I can stimulate your memory on this $50,000 note. I'm going to ask that you be given a copy of a memorandum to John Latham from Jim McDougal dated March 27, 1985, about a week before this fundraiser and this loan occurred. We will put it up on the screen there. You knew John Latham from the bank; right?

Mr. PEACOCK. I did.

Mr. CHERTOFF. It says:

Have Charles Peacock execute the $50,000 note secured by the air conditioners. Have him carry a blank note and mortgage as well as a standard Offer and Acceptance form with him for he and his wife, Judy, to execute.

Have him resign from the Board, and do not fund the $50,000 loan. Tell him I will call him about it Friday.

What did he say to you about this?

Mr. PEACOCK. I don't remember him saying anything, and I certainly would have known about any note between John Latham and Jim McDougal.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Well, is there a connection here between you getting this loan and your resigning from the Board?

Mr. PEACOCK. It had nothing to do with that. I was running a farming operation, a construction business, and selling glass-lined tanks. I was working about 18 or 19 hours a day and I didn't have time to go to the Board meetings, and it was just time for me to get off. If it happened at this particular time, it was coincidental.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Wasn't it, in fact, the next day that you resigned from the Board?

Mr. PEACOCK. I don't remember, sir, but I am not going to argue with your figures right here. But it wasn't anything that they told me I had to do.

Mr. CHERTOFF. I don't want to blindside you because the minutes show you did resign the next day. But you don't see any connection between that resignation and the loan, even though we have a memo that shows that there is a connection?

Mr. PEACOCK. I don't, and I don't know that that memo had anything to do with me, really, when it comes down to it, because I wasn't aware of what Latham and McDougal did. And as I told you before, I got out there and got the jobs done that they needed to be done.

Mr. CHERTOFF. All right. Nothing further.

The CHAIRMAN. I have no further questions.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. I have a question about the notion of making a $50,000 loan as consideration for $6,000 in contributions. That arithmetic doesn't seem—

Mr. PEACOCK. Sir, I'm not very bright, but I'm smarter than that.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. When we talk about a heck of a saber, in Mr. Chertoff's words, what we are talking about, to go back to the underlying claim that is in your memorandum, and follow with me here, Mr. Miller, the statement is on page 3, "In return for the substantial campaign contribution, Bill Clinton assured Jim McDougal that a State agency would lease space from Madison at its headquarters on Main Street in Little Rock."

Now that Main Street, Little Rock headquarters was at 100 Main Street—I'm sorry—1501 Main Street, and it was the Madison Guaranty Savings & Loan headquarters. We know without a doubt that that headquarters provided space in the amount of some 7,000 square feet in a 5-year lease entered into in April 1984.

Mr. MILLER, if you are looking at this allegation and somebody is trying to rattle a saber at you but they make a mistake where they are a year off like this, is this going to have any effect on you?

Mr. MILLER. No, sir.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. We heard testimony this morning from Mr. Epes to say that, by 1985, his agency had expanded to the point where it needed additional space. They took an additional 1,400 square feet of contiguous space at the Madison Savings & Loan. Does this strike you as something in the nature of some devious conspiracy?

Mr. MILLER. I don't have an opinion either way, but it doesn't strike me as being some kind of great conspiracy.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. No one asked Mr. Epes whether there was any question but that his agency needed the space. The space was available and it was rented at market. The notion that that 1,400 square feet is the payoff for the 1985 fundraiser strikes me as just totally and utterly ludicrous. Do you have some other view?

Mr. MILLER. No, sir. We viewed all these allegations to be without merit and we proceeded within about a week or so to file in State court to try to take Mr. Peacock's house from him.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. You were undeterred by this?

Mr. MILLER. That's correct.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. I have nothing further, Mr. Chairman.

The CHAIRMAN. OK. I want to thank the panel for coming.

Mr. Peacock, I asked staff with respect to the inconvenience and they told me we were attempting to get two panels, seven people, together. They tell me that you indicated, and I want to thank you, that you were available everytime they called, trying to coordinate with the other lawyers and there was another panel of four people today was the reason. We are trying to get that in under the February 29th deadline.

Mr. PEACOCK. We worked on that thing all the way through I think December.

The CHAIRMAN. I understand that. I just want you to understand that we thank you because you were available whenever we called. It was a question of coordinating with the other six people, and we could never get that coordination; and thereafter, it came to the situation that this whole matter was suspended, so it certainly was not by intent to harass you in any way, but it was a question of trying to coordinate all of the schedules.

Mr. PEACOCK. I had a summons from the Senator, the Chairman, that said, "I would be available" presented to me. I had a notice given to me by Mark that, if I didn't show up, the U.S. Marshals would come and get me. So you're durn right, I was available but I missed out on my work.

The CHAIRMAN. But even without that subpoena coming, the staff indicates that you were willing to cooperate. I just wanted to thank you for that and try to set the record straight by explaining how that situation came about, because I did ask staff what the situation was.

Let me say that I think the testimony from the two panels was very powerful. I want to thank you for your participation.

Mr. Miller, I want to assure you that my initial observations were so that you would be in a position to testify and we could hear you. It was not an attempt to trick you or anything like that.

We thank you for your candor. We thank you for being here.

We stand in recess until tomorrow morning at 10:00 a.m.

[Whereupon, at 3:36 p.m., the hearing was adjourned, to reconvene at 10:00 a.m., on Thursday, April 25, 1996.]

STATE OF ARKANSAS LEASE AGREEMENT

THIS LEASE MADE this 1st day of April, 1984, by which Madison Financial Corporation ("LESSOR")

leases to the STATE OF ARKANSAS ("STATE") by Arkansas State Building Services ("SBS") for the use of Arkansas Housing Development Agency, 1501 Main Street, Little Rock, Arkansas 72202

or any other Department, Board, Commission or Agency of the STATE which SBS shall designate ("AGENCY"), the described property ("PREMISES") upon the terms of this lease.

1. PREMISES 6852 square feet of office space (consisting of 6385 sq. ft. of usable space and 467 sq. ft. of common use space) with 25 automobile parking spaces designated by Lessor and an additional handicapped space at 1501 Main Street all situated in the City of Little Rock, County of Pulaski,
Arkansas

The initial term will begin on July 1, 1984 or as soon thereafter the building is completed to meet plans and specifications and the Lessor's contract and SBS agree that the space is ready to be occupied and end June 30, 1989
Should occupancy occur at a date later than July 1, 1984, the portion of that month rent shall be prorated on a daily rate of $161.78.

3. RENT. The STATE agrees to pay $ 4,853.50 per calendar month (quarterly) in advance on the first day of each such period upon invoice from the LESSOR. Such

Ms. Helen Vonn
State Building Services
1515 West Seventh Street
Little Rock, AR 72201

Dear Helen:

NHDA has decided to reject the proposal of Madison Quarry to provide office space at 1501 Main Street.

We initially authorized you to negotiate a lease at Brookwood Drive for an anticipated net rent of $6.50 per square foot. The final proposal was for $7.25 per square foot, and a gross rental of $8.40 per square foot for a leased space of about 5800 square feet, which would cost us $49,680 at the gross rental price. This proposal was apparently disapproved by Building Services because the price was not acceptable. NHDA concurred in the objection of that bid because of its excessive cost.

An analysis of the Madison Quarry bid for 6698 square feet (6629 net leased space), the net rental is $44,886. But, we do not have the option of controlling the utility costs, and accordingly, are expected to pay $1.50 per square foot for utilities and services which would be a gross rental of $66,311. Therefore, the cost is about $7.07 per year higher.

We would like to lease in a location downtown, preferably within walking distance of our attorneys. In addition we are expecting approval of additional space for the Agency within a few months when we are certain of need. That space will be a large addition to our potential downtown locations. I realize that the cost of the new location is a major factor in our decision.

Sincerely,

Helen Vonn

EXECUTIVE DIRECTOR

ME/ee

[20] Q And your recollection, it was shortly after [21] it was received?

[22] A Yes.

Page 142

[11] Q And I want to be clear, ADFA left the [12] Madison space before the lease term expired: is that [13] right?

[14] A Yes.

[15] Q And I just want to make sure actually, do
[16] you recall what caused that, that departure?

[17] A Madison quit maintaining the building, and [18] Wooten had growing concerns about the maintenance
of

[19] the building, and the security issues.

[20] Q Did he still have problems with the space?

[21] A I don't recall that that was an issue as [22] much as it was that the maintenance of the building, it was dirty.

[14] Q The security problem was one they continued
[15] to have over a couple of years; is that right?

[16] A Yes.

[17] MR. O'CALLAGHAN: I have no further
[18] questions at this time.

[19] MR. FROMEWICK: I have just a couple of [20] follow-ups. This means we are really close to the [21] end.

[22] EXAMINATION

[11] BY MR. FROMEWICK:

[12] Q Mr. O'Callaghan asked you if any other
[13] bidders had been called into Mr. Mallard's office to [14] meet you and you said no. But at the point that you
[15] met Ms. McDougal, they weren't actually a bidder, [16] were they; you had never received a proposal from [17] them?

[18] A Right.

[19] Q So had this meeting never taken place, at [20] that point they are not a bidder?

[21] A That's right.

[22] Q Bidders generally sent you proposals?

[13] A Right.

[14] Q And occasionally people that, for other [15] reasons, that might not have had an official bid in,
[16] might meet you the way you met Ms. McDougal?

[17] A Yes.

[18] Q Now, when Mallard pretty much told you that
[19] the Madison proposal was the one you were going to go [20] with, did he specifically use the words "because the [21] governor wants this"?

[22] A No.

Page 144

[11] Q What did he tell you?

[12] A He said the governor's office wanted us to [13] lease this facility.

[14] Q Was it -- from your point of view, did
[15] Mallard want it as well?

[16] A Yes.

[17] Q And why did Mallard tell you he wanted it?

[18] A He wanted to support the McDougals also.

[19] Q And he told you that in those words?

[20] A I can't say he specifically said that but I
[21] knew that he wanted to. He was quite interested in
[22] it.

[13] Q But how did you know that? The reason I
[14] ask you that is, I would like you, if you can, to try
[15] and separate what you knew as a general proposition,
[16] living in a small town, about who was friends were [17] who, and what you found out, specifically during the [18] performance of duties of your job.

[19] And there is -- it is not really a fine
[20] line. There is a big distinction between the two.
[21] It is one thing for --

[22] A It is hard to do after this long a period

Page 145

[11] of time has gone by and so much has been said about [12] it now.

[13] Q So back up if we can to that period of [14] time, yes, you knew that McDougals and Clinton were [15] friends, and you said you knew that Mallard was [16] friends of the McDougals?

[17] A He was friends and he would talk about [18] seeing them in a social setting. And I don't recall
[19] exactly what he said to me when he told me that we [20] were not going to consider other proposals, only the [21] Madison proposals. But as I recall, he said the [22] governor's office wants us to lease this space, and that's the way it is going to be.

[14] Q And you are quite clear about that?

[15] A That's the way I recall it.

[16] Q Okay. And just on one final note, from [17] your point of view, the space met all the needs of [18] ADFA?

[19] A Yes.

[20] MR. FROMEWICK: Okay. I have no further
[21] questions.

[22] MR. O'CALLAGHAN: I have two more quick

Page 146

[11] ones and that should be it.

[12] EXAMINATION

[13] BY MR. O'CALLAGHAN:

[14] Q When you brought the objections from [15] Mr. Epes to Mr. Mallard's attention, you mentioned
[16] earlier that again the sentiment was expressed the [17] governor's office wanted to lease that space; is that [18] right?

[19] A Yes.

[20] Q And that there was mention that the [21] McDougals and the Clintons were friends; is that
[22] right?

[13] A Yes.

[14] Q And that Mr. Mallard was friends with the [15] McDougals?

[16] A Yes.

[17] Q Okay. And with regard to Mr. Mallard's and [18] yours and Mrs. McDougal's meeting, was that a first [19] attempt by Madison to make a bid on getting the [20] leasing contract?

[21] A Did you say was that the first attempt?

MEMORANDUM

TO: JSS
FROM: LM
DATE: April 23, 1987
RE: Madison v. Peacock

Our firm represents Madison Guaranty Savings & Loan Association ("Madison") in several collection matters related to Charles Peacock, III, his children and related entities. We have been dealing primarily with Ms. Pat Heritage, a loan and collection officer with Madison.

On Tuesday, April 21, 1987, Ms. Pat Heritage informed me that she had spoken with Mr. Greg Hopkins, attorney for the Peacocks. Mr. Hopkins informed Ms. Heritage that there is a move underway to have our firm disqualified from representing Madison. The basis of the disqualification is that Jim Guy Tucker has substantial involvement with Madison and with Mr. Jim McDougal, that this creates a conflict, and therefore, our firm should be disqualified.

Mr. Hopkins went on to explain that there was substantial wrongdoing regarding the prior administration of Madison, that several people were "going to go to prison," and that our firm will be severely embarrassed when a full disclosure is made and our firm is disqualified with potential sanctions being imposed. Mr. Hopkins also stated that the matters regarding the Peacocks and Madison was getting too dirty and he has considered resigning his representation of the Peacocks.

Mr. Hopkins further informed Ms. Heritage that Madison should seek additional counsel not only because of Jim Guy's conflict, but also because all our firm is doing is churning the files in an effort to enhance the amount of the billings and that we have no concern for the ultimate outcome or the costs incurred by Madison.

In addition, Mr. Hopkins informed Ms. Heritage that one of the loans made by Madison to Dixie Continental Leasing, upon which Marcy Taylor has undertaken foreclosure proceedings, also involves fraudulent transactions. Mr. Hopkins stated that a portion of the loan proceeds made to Dixie Continental Leasing went to Bill Clinton's campaign and that in return for the substantial campaign contribution, Bill Clinton assured Jim McDougal that a state agency would lease space from Madison at its headquarters on Main Street in Little Rock. I fail to see any conflict with regard to our firm based upon the Dixie Continental/Bill Clinton transaction, but Mr. Hopkins seems convinced that wrongdoing existed that would be imputed to our firm.

Mr. Hopkins further stated that I should not have said what I did in front of the Bankruptcy Court at the hearing held on Wednesday, April 8, 1987. At that hearing we were successful in having the Peacock Brothers d/b/a The Peacock

Company's Chapter 11 bankruptcy petition dismissed with prejudice.

I am of the opinion that Mr. Hopkins was severely embarrassed as a result of having the Chapter 11 dismissed with prejudice after he had made representations to his client that everything would be taken care of. Mr. Hopkins is now apparently attempting to slander our firm and making allegations that I feel are wholly unsupported by the facts in these proceedings. I am greatly offended that Mr. Hopkins has imputed that Mr. Tucker is some way involved with the fraudulent dealings and that our firm is involved in misdealings.

On April 21, 1987, immediately after discussing this matter with Ms. Pat Heritage, Tim Grooms and I discussed the matter with Mr. Tucker. Jim Guy reassured us that he has no conflict with regard to his personal transactions with Madison. In addition, Jim Guy informed us that a full disclosure of his transactions with Madison has been made to the FSLIC and that the representation of our firm has been approved by the FSLIC. Jim Guy suggested that I draft this memorandum to inform you of the statements made and to solicit your advice regarding the allegations made by Mr. Hopkins.

Please review the matters set forth above and, at your convenience, contact either Tim or myself regarding any comments or suggestions that you may have to an effective resolution of the matters set forth herein.

HEADLINE: CLINTON OKD STATE LEASE WITH S&L IN '84, MEMO REVEALS

BYLINE: From Associated Press

DATELINE: WASHINGTON

BODY:

While Arkansas governor, Bill Clinton resolved a dispute over leasing office space for state agencies by confirming a recommendation to award the contract to his Whitewater business partner over the repeated objections of a state agency.

The President's role, acknowledged last week by a Clinton confidant and a former state official, marks the first known instance in which Clinton was involved in a state decision that financially benefited Madison Guaranty Savings & Loan, which was owned by James B. McDougal and subsequently went broke.

Clinton's role in the state lease comes to light as the Whitewater independent counsel is studying an attorney's 1987 memo that describes thirdhand an allegation that Clinton promised state lease business to McDougal in exchange for a "substantial campaign contribution."

Arkansas records show Madison Guaranty received three state leases worth tens of thousands of dollars from Clinton's gubernatorial administration in the mid-1980s. One lease was finalized in 1984; the other two were approved after a controversial April, 1985, fund-raiser that McDougal hosted for Clinton at Madison.

Clinton's personal lawyer, David E. Kendall, said that while Clinton supported moving state agencies into the poor Little Rock neighborhood that McDougal and others were refurbishing, there was never any connection to political contributions.

The 1987 memo's allegation originated with a lawyer representing Arkansas businessman Charles Peacock III, a former Madison official who at the time was trying to stop the S&L from foreclosing on several of his business and personal loans.

Peacock's contribution to Clinton at the 1985 fund-raiser has been a focus of the Whitewater investigation. He later was hired to renovate one of the buildings that received a state lessee.

In a three-page memo dated April 23, 1987, Lance Miller, an attorney working to collect loans overdue to Madison, recounted allegations made by Greg Hopkins, Peacock's attorney. The memo quotes Hopkins as stating that some of the proceeds from a loan his client received from Madison on April 4, 1985, were diverted as a donation to Clinton's campaign.

Investigators believe the donation was delivered to Clinton at the fund-raiser later that day at Madison. They have alleged it was disguised in the name of two other contributors as part of a larger scheme to divert S&L funds to Clinton's campaign. McDougal and Peacock have disputed the diversion allegations.

"Mr. Hopkins stated that a portion of the loan proceeds made to Dixie Continental Leasing (Peacock's company) went to Bill Clinton's campaign, and that in return for the substantial campaign contribution, Bill Clinton assured Jim McDougal that a state agency would lease space from Madison at its headquarters on Main Street in Little Rock," the memo said.

Investigators also have Miller's handwritten notes, which state: "Dixie loan went to Clinton campaign, signed lease to state, a lot of people going to prison!!"

Miller wrote the memo after a call from Pat Heritage, a Madison loan officer who heard the allegations from Hopkins.

Miller and Heritage said this month that the memo was accurate but that they believed Hopkins' allegations amounted to posturing to stop the loan foreclosure. Heritage said she was recently questioned extensively about the memo by officials working for Whitewater counsel Kenneth W. Starr.

An individual close to Clinton, speaking only on condition of anonymity, confirmed that Clinton was drawn into the 1984 lease dispute after the state housing agency refused to move into Madison's headquarters. The move had been recommended by the state leasing agency.

"Two agencies had disagreed," the source said. "The governor decided to go with Madison, to go with the recommendation of the State Building Services, the expert agency."

Paul Mallard, who ran the building services office, said Clinton "never tried to influence me."

Wooten Epes, then the housing agency head, said he met with Clinton in the governor's office in 1984 shortly after Epes wrote two letters: one recommending an alternative site and the other rejecting Madison as too expensive and in an undesirable location. He then appealed to Clinton, who would not overrule the leasing agency's recommendation.

"The only thing I recall coming from it was, the governor was aware of the redevelopment in that part of town, and he thought it would be good for the state to be part of it," Epes said.

McDougal said he probably discussed the leases with Clinton.

"I'm not trying to deny I might have said, 'Hey, Bill, why don't you give us something for this area down here?' " that was mostly populated by poor minorities, McDougal said. But he said there was no connection to any political donations.

The source close to Clinton said he was unaware of any involvement by Clinton in the two leases awarded after the fund-raiser.

Hopkins did not return half a dozen calls seeking comment and refused to see a reporter at his office. Peacock would say only that "I don't know anything about" the memo's contents.

Governor

ARKANSAS HOUSING DEVELOPMENT AGENCY

October 11, 1968

Mr. Carl Brones
State Building Services
Suite 700, 1515 Building
Little Rock, Arkansas 72201

Dear Carl:

After reviewing the office space which your Agency has surveyed, the AHDA requests that you negotiate with Rector, Phillips, Morse to obtain a lease from the owner of the property located at 1120 Brookwood. There are several aspects of the lease which we would like to discuss with you including parking spaces and the location of windows, doors and interior walls. C. E. Anderson will contact you to review our suggestions for allocation of floor space.

Sincerely,

1 to your attention?

2 A The governor never said anything to me at 3 all about this lease or any other lease that we made
4 while I was at state building service, 4-1/2 years or
5 whatever length of time I was there.

6 Q Did anyone in his office tell you about a
7 meeting between the governor and Mr. Epes?

8 A Not that I can specifically remember, no.

9 Q Do you have a general recollection that 10 that might have happened?

11 A Well, it might have happened, I don't
12 know. I don't have any way of knowing for sure.

13 Q I am just trying to get a feel for, if you
14 have a -- just a general recollection, that that did
15 occur, but you can't specifically recall --

16 A Well, I can't. It might have occurred, but 17 I can't, I just don't recall anybody calling me
18 saying Mr. Epes has met with the governor or anything
19 like that.

20 Q Did you ever see any written correspondence
21 to that effect?

22 A No.

1 Q Do you remember any meetings you had with
2 Ms. Vowell or Ms. Herr with regard to the lease, the 3 AHDA lease? Did you ever say to her that one of the 4 reasons why you were going forward with the lease was
5 because the McDougals were friends of the Clintons
6 and there was a desire to help out the McDougals?

7 A No, I don't specifically remember any
8 conversation like that. You know, I am sure it was 9 assumed. You know, everybody assumed that everybody
10 was friends with the governor, you know.

11 Q At the time -- during the time of this 12 lease, were you aware that the McDougals and the 13 Clintons were familiar with each other?

14 A Why sure, I knew they were familiar with 15 each other. Everybody that was, you know, in 16 business, and, you know, I think I have seen him at 17 fundraisers and various other things or seen Jim at 18 those. And Mr. McDougal has been in politics ever
19 since he's been a little boy, so I knew that --
20 everybody knows everybody here in Arkansas.

21 Q Well, sir, did you know that during the 22 time of this lease, that -- were you aware that the

TO: Davis Fitzhugh

FROM: Sue Strayhorn

Ms. Margaret Carter came by this morning to see Jim McDougal, and was referred to him by Bill Clinton and Guy Berry. She is interested in leasing space for an art studio, possibly upstairs at 1300 Main. She can afford approximately $500 per month, plus utilities, for comparable floor space. If not at 1300 Main, then something similar.

She can be reached at 664-1136 before 4:00 p.m. today, and will be returning Friday.

Can you help her?

ARKS:

Mr. Randolph dropped by to see you this morning to talk to you about the Water Bill you vetoed. He said that he talked to you on Sunday morning. He wants to know if the veto is going to stand. He would like you to call Jim Guy Tucker about this. He said that he has a difficult time getting an answer from you. (He mentioned a meeting between you, Tucker and Jim McDougal a couple of years ago which involved $33,000. This was pretty cryptic.) He seemed angry. Someone I think he prefers you, needs to call Tucker.

INVESTIGATION OF WHITEWATER DEVELOPMENT CORPORATION AND RELATED MATTERS

THURSDAY, APRIL 25, 1996

U.S. SENATE,
COMMITTEE ON BANKING, HOUSING, AND URBAN AFFAIRS,
SPECIAL COMMITTEE TO INVESTIGATE WHITEWATER
DEVELOPMENT CORPORATION AND RELATED MATTERS,
Washington, DC.

The Committee met at 10:00 a.m., in room 216 of the Hart Senate Office Building, Senator Alfonse M. D'Amato (Chairman of the Committee) presiding.

OPENING COMMENTS OF CHAIRMAN ALFONSE M. D'AMATO

The CHAIRMAN. The Committee will come to order.

Ms. Betsey Wright would you please stand for the purposes of taking the oath?

[Witness sworn.]

The CHAIRMAN. Ms. Wright, we would be pleased to take any statement you might have at this time.

SWORN TESTIMONY OF BETSEY WRIGHT FORMER CHIEF OF STAFF FOR GOVERNOR CLINTON ACCOMPANIED BY: ALAN M. COHEN, ESQ. O'MELVENY & MYERS, NEW YORK, NY

Ms. WRIGHT. Thank you. I appreciate the opportunity to share some thoughts I scribbled down last night while trying to sleep.

I have now given nigh on to a jillion hours of testimony to this Committee, and most of the questions put to me were repetitive and duplicative. I find myself trying to assess why I am therefore here today. I have only come up with two possibilities so far:

One is that perhaps you have no confidence in Mr. Giuffra, the Chief Counsel of the Senate Banking Committee, who took my testimony. Any lack of faith in him is unfounded. He is incredibly thorough and tedious.

[Laughter.]

I noticed only one shortcoming of his. While both he and I experienced frustrations about details I couldn't remember from 10 and 12 years ago, he had frequent memory lapses about things he had asked me only hours before. I recognize that his days are overly full, stressful, and exhausting. All of our days 10 and 12 years ago were every bit as varied, full, stressful, and challenging, only we didn't come close to anything like a single focus.

My second theory is that perhaps my previous testimony was received sort of as an audition for this hearing appearance. That possibility is inconsistent with the Committee's goal of fact-finding and information gathering which is occurring in a limited timeframe. It, rather, indicates to me political motives for public display.

I have experienced cavalier and careless Committee procedures and testimony, a shedding of them, and I will give you two examples. First, Mr. Chertoff in questioning another witness falsely characterized a trip that I made to Little Rock as, "A trip to search for Whitewater records." I have never made such a trip. The second example is that an Associated Press reporter called me after being shown confidential documents provided this Committee under subpoena, a viewing he was given along with false and negative characterizations of the documents. I believe that this was done by a Member, or staff of the Committee, or the staff of a Member. These actions point to a lack of respect for procedures and more toward a political tack.

I am not going to challenge my subpoena to appear here, in spite of having already testified, because I know, though I am now a private citizen, some Members of this Committee would try to link my resistance to the President.

I want to share with you two of many observations I have to make about political figures.

The first is that in your duties, in the course of your duties and campaigning, you get to make more "friends" than most people, although you probably don't have more close personal friends than anybody else. The downside for you is that the mere association with troubled, or troublesome, or in trouble, or exaggerating friends lends itself to guilt by association, something which has probably happened unfairly to every Member of this Committee, and yet something which some Members of this Committee have tried to smear the President with day after day.

My second observation is that from time to time, political contributors give money which may have come from questionable sources. Senator D'Amato certainly had an experience with that in the not-too-distant past. Senator Dole is under scrutiny for it now. I don't believe even for a microsecond that either Senator had reason to know about the infractions committed by those contributors.

If there are problems about the source of money which Bill Clinton received at the 1985 fundraiser held at Madison Guaranty, he should receive the same benefit of the doubt Senator D'Amato and Senator Dole asked of the rest of us. They don't approve of infractions. Bill Clinton nor I approve of such infractions.

The 12 years I worked for Bill Clinton as his Campaign Manager, Chief of Staff, State Democratic Party Chair, Deputy Chair of the Presidential Campaign, were glorious years providing me rare opportunities to learn and to do. I am proud that I had a major role in a Clinton Administration which provided great and progressive leadership to the incredibly wonderful State of Arkansas, which is filled with fabulous Americans, all images this Committee's work obscures.

Having said all this, I thank you for allowing me to share these thoughts and I will now attempt to answer any further questions you have for me.

The CHAIRMAN. Thank you, Ms. Wright.

Let me say that I think you have made a number of very valid observations, but let me also assure you, first, that we do take depositions. We are going to try to cut down on them because of time and cost. It is not unusual to have someone come in and give depositions privately before we then take public testimony.

Second, there certainly has not been a conscious attempt by this Committee to in any way demean the State of Arkansas or its people. That just simply has not been.

Third, we are really attempting to get the facts as best we can. No one here that I am aware of has made any public statements as it relates to particular acts—fundraising activity, et cetera—that is part of the scope, and I don't believe as it related to the hearings that were conducted yesterday that anyone suggested that the President, then-Governor, was aware of what may or may not have been improper conduct on the part of fundraisers.

Certainly, the facts demonstrate some unusual activity—let's characterize that basically—that came, it would seem to me, from Mr. McDougal and a number of his employees, but I think you very aptly pointed out, and did a very admirable and a very credible job, in setting forth that this is a situation that no one should attempt to say, well, you see, this is something that the President himself was involved in, nor was that undertaken yesterday. But I certainly appreciate your sentiments and we'll see if we can't move this process quickly and expeditiously, gathering the facts that is our charge.

Mr. Chertoff.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Ms. Wright, you were Chief of Staff to Governor Clinton for about 10 years? Right?

Ms. WRIGHT. Seven years.

Mr. CHERTOFF. From 1983 to 1990?

Ms. WRIGHT. Correct.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You also ran Governor Clinton's campaigns during that period of time?

Ms. WRIGHT. In 1982, 1984, and 1986.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You did not run his campaign in 1990?

Ms. WRIGHT. I did not.

Mr. CHERTOFF. When you were his Chief of Staff, pretty much every piece of paper that came to him crossed your desk first; is that right?

Ms. WRIGHT. Yes, sir.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Do you think there's any area of his activities as Governor about which you were unaware?

Ms. WRIGHT. It is unlikely. There have got to be some things I was unaware of.

Mr. CHERTOFF. But you made it your business to keep track—

Ms. WRIGHT. Yes, sir.

Mr. CHERTOFF. —of his activities?

Ms. WRIGHT. That was my job.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Part of your job, in fact, was to look out for him; right?

Ms. WRIGHT. Surely.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You want to protect his interests; right?

Ms. WRIGHT. Surely.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You want to protect his reputation?

Ms. WRIGHT. Surely.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You want to see that his agenda gets carried out?

Ms. WRIGHT. Surely.

Mr. CHERTOFF. That was all part of your job description?

Ms. WRIGHT. Surely.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Now, Mr. McDougal also had been a member of the Governor's staff in his first term; right?

Ms. WRIGHT. That's—Yes, sir.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You knew Mr. McDougal?

Ms. WRIGHT. Yes, sir.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Mr. McDougal was a campaign contributor on occasion; right?

Ms. WRIGHT. Rarely.

Mr. CHERTOFF. He held a 1985 fundraiser; right?

Ms. WRIGHT. Yes, sir.

Mr. CHERTOFF. That was a fundraiser that was designed to retire a campaign debt that the President had taken out personally the previous year?

Ms. WRIGHT. It was a fundraiser to raise political money.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Part of which was designed to retire an outstanding debt——

Ms. WRIGHT. That's correct.

Mr. CHERTOFF. —the President had incurred the previous year; is that right?

Ms. WRIGHT. That's correct.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Now, you also knew Mr. McDougal had other relationships with Governor Clinton; right?

Ms. WRIGHT. Yes, sir.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You knew he had a social relationship with him?

Ms. WRIGHT. I am unaware that he did.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You knew that they were business partners?

Ms. WRIGHT. I am aware that the Clintons were investors in a one-business development operation with him.

Mr. CHERTOFF. And that's called "Whitewater Development"?

Ms. WRIGHT. Correct.

Mr. CHERTOFF. How did you first hear about that?

Ms. WRIGHT. I oversaw the filing of the Governor's annual disclosure forms, and that was always listed, and I did, I guess, on the first one ask him what Whitewater Development was, and he said it was a real estate investment with Jim McDougal.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Now, of course, the forms themselves don't indicate on their face that Jim McDougal was involved in the investment; right?

Ms. WRIGHT. That's correct.

Mr. CHERTOFF. All they show is an investment in the Whitewater Development Corporation?

Ms. WRIGHT. That's correct.

Mr. CHERTOFF. The forms also don't show how much money each of the investors in Whitewater contributed; right?

Ms. WRIGHT. No, sir.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Did you ever find out how much money each investor was contributing?

Ms. WRIGHT. No, sir.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Did you ever ask?

Ms. WRIGHT. No, sir.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Now, I assume as part of your job duties, again, in assisting the Governor and looking out for his interests, was to make sure he didn't get himself into any situations that created either actual or apparent conflicts of interest; right?

Ms. WRIGHT. Probably more often to make sure other people did not put him into those situations.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Because you understand integrity is an important principle in Government; right?

Ms. WRIGHT. It certainly is.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You were committed to that?

Ms. WRIGHT. Yes, sir.

Mr. CHERTOFF. So you wanted to make sure that he didn't get into situations where someone might question his integrity; right?

Ms. WRIGHT. Yes, sir.

Mr. CHERTOFF. And——

Ms. WRIGHT. He—that's not something I imposed upon him. He was very concerned and committed to avoiding any improper appearances.

Mr. CHERTOFF. But in your own responsibilities, you understood that was a significant part of your responsibility to make sure that nothing arose that would put the Governor in a position where he would have a conflict of interest; right?

Ms. WRIGHT. Yes, but——

Mr. CHERTOFF. Now, you knew that Mr. McDougal was in the 1980's, among other things, a banker and savings and loan executive; right?

Ms. WRIGHT. Correct.

Mr. CHERTOFF. In fact, is it fair to say that Mr. McDougal was, at least in the period of the early 1980's, a pretty prominent figure and a pretty noticeable figure around Little Rock?

Ms. WRIGHT. I think that's a slight exaggeration.

Mr. CHERTOFF. He was a colorful figure?

Ms. WRIGHT. He was colorful to people who knew him and saw him, but not everybody did.

Mr. CHERTOFF. What was Mr. McDougal's reputation in the early 1980's?

Ms. WRIGHT. I can only speak for my impressions of him, that he was a Yellow Dog Democrat; that he was a story-teller; that he had a great appreciation for history; and that he seemed to be increasingly personally shakey—perhaps ill.

Mr. CHERTOFF. This was in the early 1980's he seemed ill to you?

Ms. WRIGHT. Well, I—I didn't—I went to Arkansas—I don't know that I met him until—yeah, early 1980's; yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. When you first heard from Governor Clinton about this Whitewater investment, you understood that McDougal, because he was an executive, or actually the owner of a bank and later of a savings and loan, would have business with the State of Arkansas; right?

Ms. WRIGHT. What type of business?

Mr. CHERTOFF. Well, the State regulates banks, doesn't it?

Ms. WRIGHT. State banks.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Does the State regulate savings and loans?

Ms. WRIGHT. State savings and loans.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Do you have an understanding that in his capacity first as the owner of Madison Bank and Trust, and then Madison Savings & Loan, Mr. McDougal might have business with the State regulators?

Ms. WRIGHT. I don't know that I thought of it. I think all financial institutions did; yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Did you ever discuss with Governor Clinton taking steps to make sure that there was some kind of separation between any decisions the Governor might make in Mr. McDougal's case, or between the Governor and any decision that had to be made with respect to Mr. McDougal's interests?

Ms. WRIGHT. I can see no reason why he would.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Did you ever ask whether the nature of Mr. McDougal's business relationship with the Governor involved money moving back and forth between them?

Ms. WRIGHT. Will you ask me that again?

Mr. CHERTOFF. I'll rephrase the question, Ms. Wright. When you discussed with the Governor the Whitewater investment, what did the Governor tell you was the nature of the investment?

Ms. WRIGHT. That it was a real estate investment.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Did the Governor tell you he had put money into the investment?

Ms. WRIGHT. No. I think it was inherent to the description of it and the fact that we listed it on the disclosure form.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Well, did you list on the disclosure form the amount of money that the Governor put into the investment?

Ms. WRIGHT. The disclosure forms didn't call for that.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Did you ask the Governor whether Mr. McDougal was putting money into the investment?

Ms. WRIGHT. I didn't. I——

Mr. CHERTOFF. There was nothing——

Mr. COHEN. Excuse me. She hasn't finished her answer.

Mr. CHERTOFF. I'm sorry. Go ahead.

Ms. WRIGHT. It was of no concern to me what Mr. McDougal's business was.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Now after you first learned about this investment, did you have other discussions with the Governor over time concerning his business relationship with Mr. McDougal?

Ms. WRIGHT. [Consults counsel.]

I am certain I did. Usually when it was brought up by other people. I think, Mr. Chertoff, the point that I have not inserted into my answers of your questions but which is inherent to your questions is that we did not treat Jim McDougal with any more deference or differently than any other businessman.

Mr. CHERTOFF. My question was a little different, Ms. Wright. We will get to the treatment of Mr. McDougal in the second place, but first I want to deal with the issue of the nature of this business relationship. Did you come to learn during the 1980's that there was a debt that Mr. Clinton shared with Mr. McDougal for the initial investment in Whitewater; that there was liability to a bank on that initial investment?

Ms. WRIGHT. I was aware that the Clintons regarded their investment in Whitewater as a losing proposition and one which they were anxious to be extricated from during the entire time I was there.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You knew that in the early 1980's?

Ms. WRIGHT. Yes, sir.

Mr. CHERTOFF. From whom?

Ms. WRIGHT. From the Clintons.

Mr. CHERTOFF. So the Clintons told you in the early 1980's that they regarded Whitewater as a losing investment and they wanted to be extricated from it?

Ms. WRIGHT. Either that, or I inferred it from a tone of voice, or from a conversation that I was present for. I don't know whether they specifically said that to me, but I very much had that impression from——

Mr. CHERTOFF. Did they tell you that, because it was a losing investment, there was difficulty in making payments to the bank on the loans on the investment?

Ms. WRIGHT. You know, I don't think I ever focused that they had a responsibility. My understanding was that Mr. McDougal was in charge of running the company, and that the making payments, paying taxes, filing reports, were his responsibility. And there was an occasion or two over the years when I became concerned that he was not doing that, and I'm certain that if I was concerned, they were doubly concerned.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Well, how did you become concerned that Mr. McDougal wasn't taking care of the payments on the Whitewater investment? How did you come to be aware of that?

Ms. WRIGHT. I believe—I'm not going to be able to remember specifics—a lot of these are impressionistic—but I believe that in fact once there was a listing in a newspaper about a delinquent tax bill for the company. I believe that the Clintons once were notified about a late payment on a bank loan by the company.

Mr. CHERTOFF. And on each of these occasions, you got the impression from the Clintons that they just wanted to get out of the investment? Is that right?

Ms. WRIGHT. Yes, that they viewed it as a losing proposition. Now, I have to say to you that I think most of Jim's friends were very concerned about him. And it's always very difficult for people who are concerned for friends how you deal with being supportive of them, and hoping that they get better, versus taking care only of yourself and describing whether or not that is merely selfish. So it was not so easy as just shut the books.

Mr. CHERTOFF. So in the early 1980's, your understanding is, the Clintons felt this was a losing investment; they wanted to get out of it; but they also felt that Mr. McDougal was a little mentally unstable and they were concerned about not doing anything to injure him? Is that your testimony?

Ms. WRIGHT. Well, I don't know that I would describe it as "mentally unstable." It became obvious in later times that this was a part of the illness, but I think he had—he just seemed to be ill.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Did you know during this period of time that Mrs. Clinton and her law firm were representing Mr. McDougal and Mr. McDougal's savings and loan?

Ms. WRIGHT. During which period of time?

Mr. CHERTOFF. In the early 1980's.

Ms. WRIGHT. No, sir, I don't believe I did.

Mr. CHERTOFF. The Governor never said to you, "Listen, Betsey, you ought to be aware that Hillary's law firm is doing some business, or doing some legal work for Madison Savings & Loan"?

Ms. WRIGHT. In the early 1980's?

Mr. CHERTOFF. Meaning up until 1986. The first half of the 1980's.

Ms. WRIGHT. It is very difficult, as I'm sure you can appreciate, Mr. Chertoff, for me to separate what I knew contemporaneously from what I learned or dealt with or knew subsequently. So obviously I'm aware that the Rose Law Firm represented Madison.

Mr. CHERTOFF. I don't want to talk now about what you learned during the campaign, or what you learned in recent years. I want to know what you were told by the Governor or Mrs. Clinton at the time while you were Chief of Staff, while you were so-to-speak the gatekeeper with responsibility for monitoring all the paper in and out of the Governor's office, what you knew at that time and what you were told by the Clintons about the nature of their relationship with Jim McDougal.

At the time in the period before mid-1986, before Mr. McDougal was kicked out of the savings and loan, did you know from the Clintons that Mrs. Clinton's law firm and Mrs. Clinton herself were doing work for Jim McDougal's savings and loan?

Ms. WRIGHT. I don't think I did. I don't think I did. But back to the nature of their relationship——

Mr. CHERTOFF. I just want to make sure we have this answer. So you were not told, as far as you can remember at the time——

Ms. WRIGHT. The problem with your questions is that they come on the tail end of a long statement of other points, and it is difficult for me to respond to your statements and also your questions.

Mr. CHERTOFF. I will be real sharp. The question is: At the time, were you told by the Governor or Mrs. Clinton that Mrs. Clinton and her law firm were doing legal work for Jim McDougal and his savings and loan?

Ms. WRIGHT. I don't believe so, Mr. Chertoff.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Did there ever come a point in time, again keeping your attention focused on the early to let's say mid-1980's, that you became concerned about this business relationship between the Clintons and the McDougals spilling over or touching upon any of the official activities that the Governor or his appointees were undertaking?

Ms. WRIGHT. Well, I mean I know that this Committee has dealt with a note that I wrote to the Governor at one point, and I assume that that's——

Mr. CHERTOFF. No. Ms. Wright, I think your counsel will advise you that you are better off not assuming or trying to guess where I am going, but just concentrate on the question.

My question is: At some point during the early to mid-1980's, did you become aware of or concerned about any intermingling between the private business relationship that Mr. McDougal and the Clintons had and any official activities undertaken by the State of Arkansas?

Mr. COHEN. Mr. Chertoff, I think that is precisely the question she was trying to answer, and in doing so with respect to a particular document that evidences that concern.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Can you answer the question, Ms. Wright?

Ms. WRIGHT. It's a whole lot of questions, isn't it?

The CHAIRMAN. Let's start it again. Mr. Chertoff, try and narrow it so that the witness can be responsive without a statement.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Do you know an individual named Marlin Jackson?

Ms. WRIGHT. I do.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Marlin Jackson was the Bank Commissioner in 1985?

Ms. WRIGHT. Yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. In Arkansas.

Ms. WRIGHT. I don't remember the exact years, but he was the Bank Commissioner, yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. And he was appointed by Governor Clinton?

Ms. WRIGHT. Yes, sir.

Mr. CHERTOFF. He was a friend of Governor Clinton's?

Ms. WRIGHT. Yes, sir.

Mr. CHERTOFF. He was a former banker himself; right?

Ms. WRIGHT. Yes, sir.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Now did you know in 1985, that as part of this Whitewater investment the Clintons had taken out a personal loan to finance, I guess, a display home on a particular lot up at Whitewater?

Ms. WRIGHT. I didn't know the purpose of the loan. I did know that they had taken out a loan. After the fact, I learned this, that they had taken out a loan which was involved in helping cover some of the financial development of Whitewater Development.

Mr. CHERTOFF. And that again would be connected with their business relationship with Mr. McDougal; right?

Ms. WRIGHT. Correct.

Mr. CHERTOFF. When did you first learn about that loan?

Ms. WRIGHT. I don't know when I first learned about it. My first conscious memory of knowing about it was when the Bank Commissioner notified us I think that the loan was delinquent.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Now that's Mr. Jackson, who is the Bank Commissioner?

Ms. WRIGHT. Yes, sir.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Mr. Jackson notified you that the loan was delinquent?

Ms. WRIGHT. I think it was at his bank, was it?

Mr. CHERTOFF. Well, it was at his former bank.

Ms. WRIGHT. Yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. When he was serving as Bank Commissioner, he notified you that the Clintons' loan was delinquent?

Ms. WRIGHT. I believe that's correct; yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Did he tell you how he came to learn about that?

Ms. WRIGHT. I assume he learned it from his bank.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Was it your understanding from Mr. Jackson, the Bank Commissioner, that his old bank had called him up and complained about the fact that there was a problem with this personal loan the Clintons had taken out?

Ms. WRIGHT. Yeah.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Then what did you do after Mr. Jackson brought this problem to your attention?

Ms. WRIGHT. Well, I don't remember exactly how it was brought to my attention. Obviously, then the only goal I had was to make certain that the accounts were brought up to date.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Did you do that?

Ms. WRIGHT. I mean, I didn't pay the bills; no, sir.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Did the Governor pay the bill?

Ms. WRIGHT. I don't know.

Mr. CHERTOFF. And did you talk to the Governor about paying the bill?

Ms. WRIGHT. I was satisfied that attention had been given to it to take care of it; yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Well, how was it taken care of?

Ms. WRIGHT. I don't know that. I didn't handle their private finances, Mr. Chertoff. They were too paltry.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Wasn't this taken care of by the Bank Commissioner writing an official letter on Bank Commissioner stationery telling the bank that they should extend the loan?

Ms. WRIGHT. I know that I received—that in my deposition that your staff showed me a letter that Mr. Jackson had written on official bank stationery, and I don't remember who it was to or from, which had to do with the Clintons' loan, or the Whitewater loan, or whoever's loan it was. The first thing that struck me was how inappropriate for this to be written on official State letterhead.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Because we will agree that, as you just said, this issue involving the Clintons' private loan was a matter of private business; right?

Ms. WRIGHT. Absolutely.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Not the kind of thing that a State official would take an official interest in on behalf of the Governor; right?

Ms. WRIGHT. The letter should not have been on State letterhead, but I'm not certain what Mr. Jackson's ongoing relationship to that bank was. I'm not certain that he was extricated from that bank.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Well, let me—

Ms. WRIGHT. I don't remember what the—

Mr. CHERTOFF. Let's put the letter up.

The CHAIRMAN. Could we see that the witness has a copy of this, please?

Mr. CHERTOFF. Yes. We are going to hand her a letter dated November 1, 1985, on Arkansas State Bank Department stationery, directed to Charles Campbell, the Vice President of the Security Bank, and signed by Marlin Jackson.

Mr. COHEN. Mr. Chertoff, the "Confidential" stamp I take it was not on the letter originally? This is just for your records?

Mr. CHERTOFF. That's right. Just to be clear, all the "Confidential" stamp and the little numbers at the bottom with DKRT or DKSN were added afterwards.

Now, Marlin Jackson is the Bank Commissioner about whom you told us a moment ago from whom you learned that there was a problem with respect to the Clintons' personal loan on this White-water lot. Correct?

Ms. WRIGHT. That is correct. And this letter indicates what my rough impression in my mind was, which was that it was Mr. McDougal's responsibility to be making those payments.

Mr. CHERTOFF. And was it the responsibility of the Bank Commissioner to write a letter on his official stationery and sign it as Bank Commissioner directing that there should be an approval of an extension agreement?

Ms. WRIGHT. I have answered that question. This is not an appropriate subject for official bank stationery. It may have been appropriate in whatever his relationship to that bank was for him to have written that letter, but not on Bank Commissioner stationery.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Is this the way this problem involving the loan got resolved?

Ms. WRIGHT. I don't know, Mr. Chertoff. I have known, and obviously during the 1992 campaign a lot of this came up, and I have an incredible ability to not retain the details of the ins and outs of Whitewater.

Mr. CHERTOFF. And did you discuss this letter with Governor Clinton?

Ms. WRIGHT. I don't know if I did or not. I honestly don't.

Mr. CHERTOFF. So you may have?

Ms. WRIGHT. I may have, but I wouldn't have discussed the subject matter. I may have made some snide comment about Marlin using the stationery, and I probably made a point of pointing it out to Commissioner Jackson. I always did that kind of thing. That is why he called me "The Baroness"—what did he call—I think he called me "The Baroness." Some name.

Mr. CHERTOFF. At this point did you say to the Governor after this issue involving the Governor's personal loan, maybe you ought to sever your business relationship with McDougal?

Ms. WRIGHT. No, sir. If there were difficulties in a private investment that they had, it didn't—just so those difficulties didn't impede his duties as Governor, or the appearances of his performances, it wasn't my responsibility to deal with financial difficulties of investments.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You didn't think this letter having the Bank Commissioner intervene in his official capacity to help the Governor deal with a personal loan, you don't think this created an appearance problem?

Ms. WRIGHT. I do not believe that—while Marlin Jackson wrote this letter on official stationery, I do not believe that he wrote this letter ordering as Bank Commissioner an extension of a loan. Marlin Jackson wrote this letter, the subject matter of this letter, the content of this letter, in his capacity with that bank, not as Bank Commissioner.

Mr. CHERTOFF. What does it say at the bottom? "Marlin D. Jackson," former officer of the Security Bank? Or "Marlin D. Jackson, Bank Commissioner"?

Ms. WRIGHT. I have answered that question, Mr. Chertoff. I do not believe that the substance of this letter was in his official capacity, and it should not have been on letterhead.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Now the next year in mid-1986, Mr. McDougal got kicked out of his savings and loan; right?

Ms. WRIGHT. Yes, sir.

Mr. CHERTOFF. And that was because of a problem with the examiners; right?

Ms. WRIGHT. Yes, sir.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Then there came a point at that juncture where you communicated with the Governor about whether he still held any Whitewater stock. Do you remember that?

Ms. WRIGHT. I do.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Let me show——

Ms. WRIGHT. I certainly remember it now because you have brought it back to my memory.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Let me show you a copy of a routing slip dated 7/14 from BW to Gov. We are going to put it in front of you and see if you recognize this.

Ms. WRIGHT. I do, sir.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Now there is a little kind of reverse checkmark where it says "Gov." I take it that was Mr. Clinton's practice, when he had read a memo, he would check it off that way?

Ms. WRIGHT. That's correct.

Mr. CHERTOFF. And it says in your handwriting, "Whitewater stock (McDougal's company). Do you still have? Pursuant to Jim's current problems. If so, I'm worried about it." Now did you have a discussion with the Governor about this?

Ms. WRIGHT. No. I think this piece of paper was probably the total of our dialogue on it.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Then he says—can you read his handwriting at the bottom where he gives you a response?

Ms. WRIGHT. It says, "No, do not have any more. B."

Mr. CHERTOFF. "B" would be Mr. Clinton?

Ms. WRIGHT. Yes, sir.

Mr. CHERTOFF. So in 1986 shortly after Mr. McDougal's problem getting thrown out of the savings and loan, the Governor told you he didn't have that investment anymore; right?

Ms. WRIGHT. That's correct.

Mr. CHERTOFF. When did you learn that in fact it was incorrect?

Ms. WRIGHT. I think it was about the same time they learned it was incorrect. And I know that—here's the way it impacted my responsibilities, Mr. Chertoff.

In filing the annual disclosures, I know that there was a year that we didn't list Whitewater because they believed that they were no longer in that investment. And then the message for me when we learned that they were still attached to it was that I had to put it back on the disclosure form. So that is the way I remember learning it.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Did either of the Clintons tell you that they had actually been under the impression that somehow they had sold their stock or their interest back to Mr. McDougal?

Ms. WRIGHT. You have the Governor's note to me right in front of you, also.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Would it surprise you to learn that, in fact, the Clintons specifically declined a request or a suggestion by Mr. McDougal that he was prepared to buy their stock back?

Senator DODD. Mr. Chairman.

The CHAIRMAN. Yes.

Senator DODD. Are we keeping an eye on the clock?

The CHAIRMAN. How much time is left?

COMMITTEE STAFF. About 4 minutes, Mr. Chairman.

The CHAIRMAN. OK.

Senator DODD. Four minutes left?

The CHAIRMAN. Yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Would it surprise you to learn that, in fact, in 1986 the Clintons had specifically refused to sell McDougal back the stock?

Ms. WRIGHT. Do you know that?

Mr. CHERTOFF. Yes.

Mr. COHEN. Are you asking her whether she knew that at the time?

Mr. CHERTOFF. I am asking you, does that surprise you? Is that inconsistent with what you were being told by the Clintons in 1986?

Ms. WRIGHT. Well, those are two different questions, sir. I understood, first, that they were not in Whitewater. I then understood later that they were. Your question about whether or not Jim McDougal offered to sell them, I have no idea whether that is true or happened or—and I have no recollection of any contemporaneous knowledge of such an offer.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Let's put that to one side. You understood that before 1986 the Clintons wanted to get out of the investment. Now, you're telling us you understand that finally, probably in mid-1986 according to this note, Governor Clinton finally says, "Yep, we are out of the investment." Then you say later you learned, no, they're actually back in the investment. Did you say to Governor Clinton, why on earth did you get back into this investment when you got out of it?

Ms. WRIGHT. It wasn't "back in." They were mistaken in believing that they were out.

Mr. CHERTOFF. So Governor Clinton told you——

Ms. WRIGHT. I don't know the ins and outs of the investment. I don't know the terms of it. I don't know the components of it. I never wanted to know, and I don't even care now.

Mr. CHERTOFF. So when Governor Clinton said to you, we made a mistake, we really didn't sell the stock, you didn't push that any further? Is that your testimony?

Ms. WRIGHT. I don't think he ever said such a thing to me.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Well, what did he say to you when he finally told you, or indicated to you that you would have to now re-include Whitewater on his disclosure statements?

Ms. WRIGHT. I don't remember.

Mr. CHERTOFF. See, the question I have really boils down to this, Ms. Wright. Since the financial record is abundantly clear that the Clintons never did dispose of this investment until 1992 in December after the Presidential election, it is just baffling why the Governor would indicate to you in 1986 when Mr. McDougal's problems suddenly burst out, that he was out of the investment when it is plainly contrary to what the record shows?

Ms. WRIGHT. It isn't baffling to me, Mr. Chertoff. He misunderstood a situation.

Mr. CHERTOFF. He misunderstood whether he owned something or not? Is that your testimony?

Ms. WRIGHT. I think that there's nothing about the Whitewater Development Corporation that seems to be so straightforward as owning or not. I think it was complicated, and convoluted, and whatever it was I think he had a misunderstanding or misimpression about it.

Mr. CHERTOFF. I wanted to just ask you quickly, before my time runs out, about an episode that occurred shortly after you left as Chief of Staff in 1990. You became aware recently that in 1990 during the campaign there was an issue concerning a cash withdrawal from the Perry County Bank of a large sum of money. Is that correct? You saw it in the papers?

Ms. WRIGHT. I was aware of that, yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. That was when Mr. Lindsey was Campaign Manager; right?

Ms. WRIGHT. No, I don't believe he was the Campaign Manager. He was the Treasurer.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You were not involved in that campaign?

Ms. WRIGHT. I was not.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You do, however, have the opinion that based on what you have read concerning the amount of money withdrawn, that it was an excessive amount and curious in manner. Is that correct?

Ms. WRIGHT. Yes. In my previous testimony I was asked what my reaction to it was, and I said I thought it was excessive and curious.

Mr. CHERTOFF. In fact, you received a call from one of the campaign workers who was involved in withdrawing money, didn't you?

Ms. WRIGHT. I'm sorry?

Mr. CHERTOFF. Did you get a telephone call from one of the women, one of the volunteers in the 1990 campaign concerning the withdrawal of that money?

Ms. WRIGHT. Oh, much later. Yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Recently?

Ms. WRIGHT. Well, since these investigations got started.

Mr. CHERTOFF. In the last couple of years?

Ms. WRIGHT. Yes, sir.

Mr. CHERTOFF. What did she tell you?

Ms. WRIGHT. She told me that an FBI agent had been by to ask her about picking up the cash at the bank, and that Bruce Lindsey had told her that if anybody ever gave her trouble about it, just refer them to him and he would handle it; that it wasn't anything to worry about, and wasn't her responsibility.

Mr. CHERTOFF. So she told you that she had been given standing instructions from Mr. Lindsey that if anybody ever said something to her about it, she should call Mr. Lindsey?

Ms. WRIGHT. Refer them to him.

Mr. CHERTOFF. And why did you get called on this?

Ms. WRIGHT. Because I think she, like a lot of people in Arkansas, assume that these Arkansans in the White House got exulted positions and it might take forever to get through to them, and she had a lot of confidence in me to pass the message on more efficiently than she could.

The CHAIRMAN. It's time.

Mr. CHERTOFF. We'll revisit when we return.

The CHAIRMAN. We have gone several minutes over. I appreciate the indulgence of my colleagues on the other side, and we will certainly afford them the same time.

Senator Dodd.

OPENING COMMENT OF SENATOR CHRISTOPHER J. DODD

Senator DODD. Mr. Chairman, I will turn to Mr. Ben-Veniste.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Good morning, Ms. Wright.

Ms. WRIGHT. Good morning.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Let me start with a matter that Mr. Chertoff spent some considerable time on. That is the letter on official State Bank Department stationery that was referred to from Mr. Marlin Jackson. Now, you have indicated quite clearly that you thought it was inappropriate for that letter requesting an extension to be written on official stationery.

Ms. WRIGHT. Yes, sir.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. In fairness to Mr. Jackson, the testimony that he provided to this Committee, which was in a deposition dated February 12, 1996, indicates at page 63, Mr. Chertoff, in case you are interested in the accuracy of what is going on here, that his secretary typed this letter; that she erroneously typed it from dictation on official stationery because it was a matter that dealt with a bank; that he did not review the letter or sign it himself; that is not his signature on the document; and that it was an error that was regrettable.

Now, you have indicated that in your view this was no direction by the official State agency to extend a loan; correct?

Ms. WRIGHT. Correct. And I am certain that the recipient bank understood that, also, because they knew Mr. Jackson very well.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Now let me go on to the question regarding Mr. Clinton's understanding of the Whitewater investment and the events that occurred in 1985 and 1986. Did there come a time, to the best of your recollection, when the Governor and you learned that there was some tax delinquency associated with Whitewater which had been published in a newspaper?

Ms. WRIGHT. Yes, sir. That is a vague impression in my mind. I remember no specifics about it, though.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Let me refer to a letter which undoubtedly you did not receive, but it may refresh your recollection as to time. It is DKSJ 2794. It's dated January 20, 1986, and it is a letter to Ms. Janie Sanders, the Collector at the Marion County Courthouse. I presume that's a tax collector, in Yellville, Arkansas, and it is from Jim McDougal. It says:

I am having a heck-of-a hard time keeping up with whether the people who owe us on the various Whitewater tracks are keeping their taxes paid. If there is any way that you can advise me as to any delinquencies in the Whitewater Subdivision? I will greatly appreciate it.

Now does that help you with respect to the timeframe in which there was a publication in the local Yellville newspaper of all the individuals who were delinquent in their taxes?

Ms. WRIGHT. It should help me. I'm hopeless when it comes to—all those years blend together.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. OK. Well, this was January 1986. Do you recall that with respect to tax delinquencies, that this was a matter which a public official, not to mention the highest executive in the State of Arkansas, would be sensitive to, having an investment in which he would be associated in the minds of individuals in that area being noticed as a tax delinquent?

Ms. WRIGHT. I wouldn't work for a politician who wasn't sensitive to that, Governor Clinton was exceedingly sensitive to that.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Then there came a time, as is referenced in Exhibit DKSJ 13309 which we will provide to you and put up on our display machine—now this is dated August 14th, and we understand—I'm sorry, July 14th, and this is 1986—Mr. McDougal is just at the point of being removed from his position at the Madison Guaranty Savings & Loan—

Ms. WRIGHT. He had just been removed.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. You are writing a memo to the Governor alerting him to the fact that the Whitewater stock situation could be a problem because of Mr. McDougal's difficulties, and you asked him about the Whitewater stock. And Mr. Clinton replied to you his belief that he doesn't have it anymore.

Now, we have some guidance from a publication which has received some attention in the press entitled "Blood Sport" at page 132, where it is reflected that Mr. McDougal, cognizant of all the problems surrounding this, suggested to Mr. Clinton that he just take him out of the investment. It's a loser, and that Mr. Clinton could simply extinguish his relationship in that investment with Mr. McDougal. And that Governor Clinton said, "Well, go ahead and do it; just run it by Mrs. Clinton." Are you familiar with that?

Ms. WRIGHT. Yes, sir.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. And—

Ms. WRIGHT. I'm familiar with that—

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Part of it.

Ms. WRIGHT. —part of the book.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Right.

Ms. WRIGHT. I have little faith in the credibility or the sources of that book.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. I understand. But in terms of the notion that Governor Clinton was under the impression that he was out of this investment as of July 1986, the concept of Mr. McDougal making that offer to him and the Governor believing that it had been executed or implemented is reflected in what the Governor responded as to your inquiry about the Whitewater stock? Is that fair to say?

Ms. WRIGHT. Well, I know that the Governor did not believe they were involved in it anymore.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Let's talk for a moment about the 1985 fundraiser. In the 1985 fundraiser, a number of checks were received. If I understand your initial statement and testimony, that funds were applied both to outstanding campaign debt and were to be applied prospectively for future campaign uses. Is that correct?

Ms. WRIGHT. And political uses. We used the campaign fund to buy ads in the Young Democratic Convention Bulletin, things like that.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Now as far as the campaign was concerned, yesterday we referred to two thank-you letters that were written following the fundraiser to individuals who, according to our witness yesterday, were not the actual donors to the campaign.

Mr. Peacock came here and testified that he, for reasons of his own, wrote those checks out in the name of his son and another individual. We produced documents that show that the campaign wrote letters to those individuals, the son and the other individual, thanking them for the contribution.

There was no way for you to know, was there, that Mr. Peacock was the ultimate donor in connection with those contributions?

Ms. WRIGHT. I don't know how we would have.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. I would like to give you the opportunity to discuss not only that allegation but the notion which was the premise of yesterday's hearing, but which disappointingly for those who adhere to the premise was not fleshed out by the facts or the testimony or the documents developed in that hearing, that this fundraiser was supposedly a quid pro quo for leasing State office space in property controlled by Mr. McDougal or his savings and loan. Is there any validity to that assertion?

Ms. WRIGHT. It is a preposterous assertion. The lease on the building occurred long before the fundraiser. There just was no connection between the two.

Senator DODD. Pull that microphone a little closer to you.

Ms. WRIGHT. I'll just get closer to it, thanks.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. I'm sorry. We had difficulty hearing your answer. Could you repeat it, please? It is a preposterous assertion to link the lease and the fundraiser. The lease occurred long before the fundraiser.

Senator DODD. How much longer? Do you remember?

Ms. WRIGHT. It was a year or so, I think.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Now there was also——

Ms. WRIGHT. We even had a campaign in between where we really needed money.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. I would like to turn your attention to another matter involving Mr. McDougal. This was the memo that was sent to Mr. Bratton by Ms. Bassett involving a "heads-up" as it were, on Mr. McDougal's current difficulties.

We have heard testimony from the bank regulators who indicated that they advised the board of directors of Madison Guaranty Savings & Loan well in advance of the time that the auditors came in that it was their intention to move Mr. McDougal and take other regulatory action. The testimony from the Commissioner of Securities was that she advised Mr. Bratton of this information, that there would be regulatory action associated with Madison Guaranty Savings & Loan. Was that, in your view, an appropriate thing for a Securities Commissioner to do?

Ms. WRIGHT. I insisted that all agency and department heads keep us apprised of events that would become public, or which impacted our responsibilities for State monies, or that the Governor needed to know about in order not to be blindsided; that we always be told in advance, if at all possible. It was part of their job. The CEO of a company is not going to want to read in the newspaper about something happening in one of the divisions.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. The CEO of the State, as it were, the Governor of the State, you believed it was appropriate——

Ms. WRIGHT. Oh, it was. It was a requirements of ours to be kept apprised of major developments. Yes.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Was there a concern, in terms of protecting Governor Clinton, against being blindsided by a request that might be made by Mr. McDougal?

Ms. WRIGHT. There were myriad reasons for this heads-up. Obviously, we did not want Mr. McDougal to blindside the Governor. We didn't want to be unaware of a press question. And if we had State monies in there, we had a responsibility to the taxpayers.

Madison Guaranty was one of several savings and loans in the State of Arkansas in great crisis, as across the country. This was of great concern to the Governor. Madison was hardly the first that we had had to have an advanced warning that severe action needed to occur. I am not even sure that Ms. Bassett hadn't been urging the Federal regulators to move earlier on Madison and made us aware of that.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Could you describe your understanding of the relationship between Jim McDougal, Mrs. McDougal, and the Governor from the point that you began your service?

Ms. WRIGHT. They were friends. They were not social friends. They were not close personal friends—at least during the time I was there. Mr. McDougal had been on Governor Clinton's staff in his first administration—

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. What years were those?

Ms. WRIGHT. In 1979 and 1980. And I believe that all former staff are considered friends of the Governor's.

Senator DODD. It might just be helpful to step back, if Counsel doesn't mind. Where did he actually meet Mr. McDougal?

Ms. WRIGHT. Actually, I think maybe they both had internships in Senator Fulbright's office.

Senator DODD. Mr. McDougal worked with Senator Fulbright?

Ms. WRIGHT. I believe that is correct.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. It was when President Clinton was a student working in that office that they probably met?

Ms. WRIGHT. Yes.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Time passed and Mr. McDougal became a staff assistant to Governor Clinton during his first term?

Ms. WRIGHT. That's correct.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Again, when did you begin working for Governor Clinton?

Ms. WRIGHT. I went to Arkansas right after his 1982 re-election defeat.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. From 1982 on, would you again describe your observation of the relationship between Governor Clinton and Mr. McDougal?

Ms. WRIGHT. Well, I think shortly after I got there, McDougal received the Democratic nomination for the Third Congressional District. They were both on the Democratic Party circuit going to the Democratic Party rallies. They were both on the same ticket in that District of the State. I treated all former staff people as the Governor's friends. Beyond that, it wasn't a close relationship.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. And did you observe that Mr. Clinton and Mr. McDougal would meet from time to time?

Ms. WRIGHT. I didn't, no.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Did you observe—

Ms. WRIGHT. On the campaign trail, when Mr. McDougal was the Congressional nominee, I know that they ran into each other all the time.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. But in terms of socializing, the McDougals and the Clintons dining together in the evening, or other social events of a nonpolitical nature, if the Governor can have such events, I take it your observation was that the relationship was one that was based more on history, shared history, than on current involvement?

Ms. WRIGHT. I think that's correct; yes, sir.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Now let's talk for a moment about the appointment of Beverly Bassett, now Beverly Bassett Schaffer, as the Securities Commissioner for the State of Arkansas. Did you have some involvement in the selection process?

Ms. WRIGHT. I sure did. I am so proud of that appointment, and I wanted it so badly because I was enamored of the idea of having the first woman Securities Commissioner in the State.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Much has been made of a telephone slip message that has been introduced into evidence in these proceedings that indicated that Mr. McDougal favored the appointment of Ms. Bassett Schaffer. You were intimately involved in the appointment process. Can you explain what weight, if any, that telephone slip message may have had?

Ms. WRIGHT. It had no weight.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Why do you say that?

Ms. WRIGHT. When you are hiring cabinet and subcabinet and agency directors, it is a different process than recommendations for appointments to boards and commissions and voluntary activities. But I know that the possibility of appointing Beverly pulled together a number of areas that just made it so perfect. She was known as a very bright attorney. She came from a family that were long and deep supporters of the Clinton's in their area of the State, and she was a woman.

There never really was anybody else in the running. I was so excited about this prospect. I had ahold of this, and I wanted it bad. I don't even remember Jim McDougal calling and recommending. It really didn't matter. It was irrelevant.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. And in terms of her performance in the job, can you tell this Committee what your view was?

Ms. WRIGHT. That she was superb.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Mr. Chairman, thank you for your largess in extending us additional time, but I think I will cede it back at this point, unless Senator Dodd has anything.

Senator DODD. No, Mr. Chairman. I will move things along.

The CHAIRMAN. Mr. Chertoff.

Mr. CHERTOFF. I want to pick up the thread on the Perry County Bank. You were not involved, Ms. Wright, in the 1990 campaign as a treasurer or campaign manager. Is that correct?

Ms. WRIGHT. I was not involved at all in that campaign. During the fall, I was the State Party Chair and obviously had my responsibilities there to the ticket, and I did attend some of the strategy meetings of the campaign.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You didn't handle the money in 1990?

Ms. WRIGHT. I had nothing to do with the money.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You got a call within the last year, or the last 2 years, from Glenda Cooper who had been on the campaign staff?

Ms. WRIGHT. That's correct.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Where were you when you got the call?

Ms. WRIGHT. At my home.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You live in Washington now?

Ms. WRIGHT. I do live in Washington.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Were you surprised to hear from her?

Ms. WRIGHT. I was delighted to hear from her.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Do you have an ongoing social relationship with her or was she someone you hadn't spoken to in a number of years?

Ms. WRIGHT. No. One of the fun things about my having moved back to Washington is that a lot of Arkansans come here, and I get to see them. And so, I hear a lot from people that I didn't necessarily socialize with but who I liked, or knew. They come here, and I get to see them.

Mr. CHERTOFF. So she called more or less out of the blue, right?

Ms. WRIGHT. Yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Was she in Arkansas? Is that where she was calling from?

Ms. WRIGHT. Yes, sir.

Mr. CHERTOFF. She told you she had been visited by the FBI?

Ms. WRIGHT. That's correct.

Mr. CHERTOFF. She told you that the FBI had asked about withdrawals of cash from the Perry County Bank?

Ms. WRIGHT. She told me that they were asking her about a time when she had gone to that bank to pick up some cash, and she had signed a receipt for that cash. I don't think they were asking her about withdrawals. All I know is that she signed a receipt for the money bag.

Mr. CHERTOFF. And she picked up money?

Ms. WRIGHT. Yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Cash?

Ms. WRIGHT. Yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. She told you that she was calling you about it because Mr. Lindsey had left word that if anybody ever said anything to her about that incident, she was to let him know. Correct?

Ms. WRIGHT. Not in that tone of voice. Not in that spirit. I got the impression that she was uncomfortable with that amount of cash, that it was an uncomfortable experience, and he had told her that "If you ever get in any trouble about this, if it ever raises up, I'll handle it for you." So she wanted me to tell him.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Did she tell you why she was uncomfortable handling that amount of cash?

Ms. WRIGHT. No, and I didn't ask. But wouldn't you be uncomfortable if you were carrying around $30,000 in cash?

Mr. CHERTOFF. It depends why I was doing it.

Ms. WRIGHT. Oh. Well, I would be under any circumstances.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Ms. Wright, she calls you up and she says, about 4 or 5 years after the event, because of the fact that the FBI has come to her, she now wants to report this to Mr. Lindsey. Right?

Ms. WRIGHT. She asked me to let him know, yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Did you ask her why she didn't call Mr. Lindsey herself?

Ms. WRIGHT. I didn't, because I had this issue with a lot of Arkansans who assumed I could just talk to them all of the time, anytime, and it would be much easier to let me pass the message on.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Did you pass it——

Ms. WRIGHT. A lot of Arkansans really trusted me to take care of things for them.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Did you pass it on?

Ms. WRIGHT. I did.

Mr. CHERTOFF. By the way, did she tell you she had picked up $30,000 in cash?

Ms. WRIGHT. I don't think she did mention the amount.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Well, you said it was a large sum. How did you know it was a large sum?

Ms. WRIGHT. She told me it was a lot of cash.

Mr. CHERTOFF. She didn't tell you how much, though?

Ms. WRIGHT. I don't think she did, no.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Did you have any reaction when she told you she had picked up a lot of cash?

Ms. WRIGHT. No, Mr. Chertoff. I knew what she was talking about.

Mr. CHERTOFF. What was she talking about?

Ms. WRIGHT. I knew, at that point, that there had been three checks cashed at the Perry County Bank, and I assumed that was what she was talking about. I didn't ask her questions. I wasn't involved in that.

Mr. CHERTOFF. How did you know there had been three checks cashed at the Perry County Bank at the point when she called you?

Ms. WRIGHT. Either from press reports, or questions I had been asked; I don't know. I don't remember exactly when I first knew about it.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Oh, so this issue had come up previously in terms of questions you had been asked by the press?

Ms. WRIGHT. In the course of these investigations, yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You got this call from this witness, Ms. Cooper, after you were aware there was an investigation going on?

Ms. WRIGHT. I don't know about the investigation. It was after I was aware that three checks had been cashed on the same day.

Mr. CHERTOFF. The question is how did you become aware of that? How did you know that when you got those calls?

Ms. WRIGHT. In the course of these investigations that are going on.

Mr. CHERTOFF. How did you know this was being investigated at the time you got this telephone call?

Ms. WRIGHT. May I ask my attorney for some guidance, please?

Mr. CHERTOFF. Sure.

[Ms. Wright and Mr. Cohen consult.]

Ms. WRIGHT. Under a document subpoena I produced the documents that had the checks.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You got this call from her after you had already received the Grand Jury subpoena for the documents relating to these checks?

Ms. WRIGHT. No, I just got a Grand Jury subpoena for——

Mr. COHEN. I think she was custodian of records, Mr. Chertoff, of the documents for the campaigns until 1990, and it was in that connection, just so the record is clear and the Committee knows, those documents produced included the ones you just asked about.

Mr. CHERTOFF. But, Ms. Wright, you were custodian of the records of the 1990 Gubernatorial Campaign even though you were not involved in that campaign?

Ms. WRIGHT. That's correct. Initially I was, and I subsequently relinquished that role.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You know Bob Nash, right?

Ms. WRIGHT. I certainly do.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Where does he works now?

Ms. WRIGHT. He is in the White House Personnel Office. He heads it.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Did he give you a call about this incident of withdrawals of cash?

Ms. WRIGHT. I don't recall that he called me. I do believe that that is a correction I need to make in my deposition. In both thinking about it, and then asking him about it later, I remember he told me that he went to the Perry County Bank, and I just may have assumed it involved cash. I have no idea, actually.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Let me read you—

Ms. WRIGHT. I know. I am telling you that I was in error in my deposition.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Let's put it out there and you can tell us what is in error and what is not in error. It is on page 320 of your deposition of the first day, after you testified about your call from the campaign worker, Ms. Cooper. And I gather, by the way, you did report to Mr. Lindsey about this call you got concerning the cash withdrawal, right? From Ms. Cooper?

Ms. WRIGHT. I did, yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. And then you said here at page 321:

Answer: Well, then there was a third conversation. I was having a conversation at some point, and I don't remember where or why or how or what the subject was, but the issue of the 1990 campaign came up. I was talking to Bob Nash, and he told me that once Bruce had asked him to go to Perry County and pick up some get-out-the-vote cash for him. That's all I know about that.

Question: Did you report what Mr. Nash said to Mr. Lindsey?

Answer: No.

What part of that sworn testimony do you want to correct?

The CHAIRMAN. Why don't we give a copy of this deposition to the witness, and could I have a copy, please?

Mr. CHERTOFF. Page 320, A-1.

The CHAIRMAN. For the witness. And could I have a copy, please? [Documents distributed.]

Ms. WRIGHT. The sentence that begins "I was talking" should probably be corrected to read, "I was talking to Bob Nash and he told me that once Bruce had asked him to go to Perry County Bank for him."

Mr. CHERTOFF. For him. So the part where you told us in your sworn deposition, "and pick up some get-out-the-vote cash," that is inoperative now?

Ms. WRIGHT. Yes, sir, it is.

In the deposition, I actually had forgotten all about all of these conversations and never shared them with my attorney or anything, and the skill of Mr. Giuffra's thorough tedium reminded me in the way he asked one question, and I conferred with my lawyer, told him about these, and the major thing that I then felt was responsive to Mr. Giuffra's question was the Glenda Cooper. But in my head I knew I had heard something from Bob Nash about going to the bank. It wasn't anything I had thought through. I now can't remember the exact words. All I can remember for certain was that he went to the bank, and I think I was in error in adding the cash to that statement.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Has your changing recollection been affected by any knowledge you have that in between your deposition testimony in January and your testimony today that Mr. Nash had been asked questions and had denied ever going to the Perry County Bank for cash?

Ms. WRIGHT. I don't know about that. I did ask Mr. Nash about whether my memory was correct.

Mr. CHERTOFF. When did you do that?

Ms. WRIGHT. After the deposition.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You called Mr. Nash up?

Ms. WRIGHT. Yes, sir.

Mr. CHERTOFF. How soon after the deposition?

Ms. WRIGHT. I don't remember.

Mr. CHERTOFF. What did you ask him? You asked him, Bob, is my recollection right? Did you go to get cash at the Perry County Bank?

Ms. WRIGHT. Yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. And he said, no?

Ms. WRIGHT. He said "not cash." I went to the bank.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Now did you call him before your second day of deposition?

Ms. WRIGHT. I don't recall. I don't know.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Because you didn't correct it in your second day of deposition. Is there some reason you didn't correct it when you came back for your second day?

Ms. WRIGHT. No, sir. But I, of course, didn't have a copy of my first day of deposition and I hadn't reviewed it. There are a lot of errors in it, not that I have gotten it and reviewed it.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Your second deposition was a month later.

Ms. WRIGHT. Yes, sir.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You didn't have an opportunity to review your deposition in that month?

Mr. COHEN. Mr. Chertoff, for the record, under your rules we did not get a copy of this until 4 days ago.

Mr. CHERTOFF. I think you were entitled to come in and review.

Mr. COHEN. We were not sent a letter that we were entitled to review it under the rules in a letter sent out by Mr. Giuffra. We were not given access to it until 4 days before our appearance here.

Mr. CHERTOFF. But here's my question to you, Ms. Wright. You have just told us that after the deposition in January you called Mr. Nash to check this recollection. Obviously, this particular piece of testimony stuck in your mind. My question to you is, why didn't you correct this in your second day of testimony?

Ms. WRIGHT. I wish I had, I don't know why I didn't. I've never been through a process like this. I know it is a very comfortable process for you, but I don't know what going to a deposition like this is. I don't know what Mr. Giuffra will let me do and not do.

I just know that I was caught in an endless series of questions. I don't even remember what I was asked about most of the time. I do know from reading this that I was misunderstood on some occasions. I mean, at one point I referred to "Burl Anthony" and it's in this deposition as "Bill."

Mr. CHERTOFF. But you remembered enough of that deposition to call Mr. Nash and get his version of the story, so you could refresh your memory?

Ms. WRIGHT. I doubt that I called him just on that issue.

Mr. CHERTOFF. What else did you call him about?

Ms. WRIGHT. I frequently call him on behalf of people who want to know the status of an appointment request in the White House.

The CHAIRMAN. Let me say that we'll come back. We want to move the hearing and I recognize our colleagues even yielded back time. Senator Sarbanes, do you have questions to raise?

OPENING COMMENT OF SENATOR PAUL S. SARBANES

Senator SARBANES. I yield to Mr. Ben-Veniste.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Let me follow up on the question that has been put to you, which was why you didn't—

The CHAIRMAN. I am going to ask that as long as we are down to three Members, that we go to 15 minutes so we can keep a more orderly flow and possibly even conclude this sooner, if my colleague has no objection?

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. I'm sure we won't need that much, but thank you, Mr. Chairman.

The CHAIRMAN. OK.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Ms. Wright, the question was put to you, why didn't you correct the prior testimony regarding Mr. Nash when you had the opportunity to review your transcript. Now, Mr. Chertoff apparently was under the impression that the transcript was, in fact, made available to you for your review sometime in the interim between your first day of testimony and when you were recalled by Mr. Giuffra to give a second day of testimony. Was that the case? Were you so advised?

Ms. WRIGHT. No, sir.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Mr. Cohen, were you so advised?

Mr. COHEN. No, Mr. Ben-Veniste.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. So no one advised you that you would have the opportunity to review the transcript. Let me ask you a second question.

Ms. WRIGHT. Is it inappropriate for me to correct it today? That's what I'm attempting to do.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. No, of course not. It is quite appropriate for you to do so.

Ms. WRIGHT. Thank you.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. But the inference was that you had some obligation because you were advised you were entitled to review the transcript. In fact, no such offer was made to you and you were not allowed to review the transcript between the 2 days of depositions, even though they occurred in the space of a month apart. I think you ought to be entitled to develop that response to a question which implies facts which are not quite accurate. In your second day of testimony, were you asked about the same subject matter, to the best of your recollection?

Ms. WRIGHT. I don't believe so.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Therefore, there was not an opportunity, in the second day of testimony, to go back to the same subject matter unless you had initiated it. I take it your day was largely consumed with trying to get finished with the process during your second appearance before this Committee in deposition.

Ms. WRIGHT. I have been trying to get finished with the process since the beginning of the first deposition.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Having gone through all of that, and having corrected your version of your conversation with Mr. Nash, do you have anything further to add? If not, we'll go to another subject.

Ms. WRIGHT. No, sir. I mean, the only thing—not to that specifically, but Mr. Chertoff made reference to the words that I used in the deposition responding to my impression as that the money was excessive and curious. And the only comment that I would like to make on that is I knew nothing about that campaign. I have no idea what they were doing with that money. For me to even say it was excessive and curious is playing a regrettable Monday morning quarterback role, which is inappropriate, and I have no idea whether it was excessive. It did strike me as curious to do three checks on the same day. That's all.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. In any event, this matter has been investigated by the Independent Counsel, as Mr. Chertoff brought out. And your records were produced to the Independent Counsel or the FBI or both. The matter has been the subject of questioning, by you, by individuals or authorities other than this Committee. You have testified to the full extent of your knowledge regarding the 1990 campaign which you have indicated you were not directly associated with?

Ms. WRIGHT. Correct.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Let me ask you this. Allegations have been made regarding the relationship between Governor Clinton and David Hale. Mr. Hale has characterized his relationship with the Governor in a certain way in testimony which was given publicly, for the first time, recently in the trial in Arkansas. I would like to get your understanding of who Mr. Hale was in early 1983 and beyond in Arkansas and what his relationship was to the best of your ability to observe and provide this Committee with information in connection with Governor Clinton.

Ms. WRIGHT. Mr. Hale was a municipal judge who had been appointed initially by Governor White.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. I'm sorry to interrupt you, but for those who are not familiar with the politics of Arkansas, was Governor White a Democrat or a Republican?

Ms. WRIGHT. He was a Republican when he ran for Governor. But he had been a Democrat before that. Mr. Hale was not someone we knew well. He did not have a good reputation. He was sort of sleazy and we basically didn't have anything to do with him except where we had to run into him, and we were friendly.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. He has indicated in statements he has made—and I'm paraphrasing—that he was a friend of Governor Clinton.

Do you have any information that would substantiate a claim of friendship between Mr. Hale and Mr. Clinton?

Ms. WRIGHT. As I tried to say in my opening remarks, political figures get to make an awful lot of friends, and they did know each other. Governor Clinton was very friendly to him, as he is to even people I don't think deserve his being friendly to. And he had some relatives who were friends. I also think Mr. Hale is someone who has always played loose with facts and exaggerated.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. We have had testimony in that regard from officials of the Small Business Administration, who noted that Mr. Hale had exaggerated and embellished and lied to them and was a "frequent name-dropper." But in terms of your personal observation, was that true in this regard?

Ms. WRIGHT. I just didn't want anything to do with Mr. Hale. I didn't have—unless he called about some matter that he thought he needed—that needed the Governor's office's attention about his court. We didn't have much to do with him. He had a brother who was a good supporter and loyal friend, and he also was Judge Hale. He helped put together several fundraisers for us, the brother did, and I think David came to those.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. What does a municipal judge deal with? Was this a high-level judicial authority?

Ms. WRIGHT. I think they deal with traffic violations and driving under the influence violations, things within the city's jurisdiction for enforcement.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Did there come a time when you learned Mr. Hale was making allegations concerning now President Clinton?

Ms. WRIGHT. I did. I began hearing that he was making wild accusations about some kind of pressure about loans and money.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Did you have any contact with the President or Mrs. Clinton regarding those allegations?

Ms. WRIGHT. Yes. Early on, President and Mrs. Clinton called me on the phone one day, I believe it was on a weekend, and we had a conversation trying to imagine what on earth David Hale was talking about. We were trying to figure out if maybe he was alluding to some project of the State that he had made a grant to or a loan to and we couldn't remember anything like that. We were all very perplexed trying to figure out what it might be related to. None of us could remember. I mean, he was clearly somebody we didn't deal with or have a lot to do with, and I'm not even certain that the information we had at that point, which was primarily through the press, we understood that it was allegedly a pressure for something dealing with the personal holdings of the President. We were just absolutely perplexed trying to figure out what he was talking about, and we couldn't any of us remember ever being involved with him in any kind of a loan situation.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. This was at a time when Mr. Hale was under investigation and about to be indicted in Little Rock and was trying to plea bargain to get a lesser sentence. As his lawyer, Mr. Coleman testified before this Committee, he was trying to make a deal to get immunity for Mr. Hale and allow him to stay on as a judge, while refusing to provide information to Federal law enforcement authorities about information he might know. He approached the media to try to sell his story and to enhance his position vis-à-vis his bargaining. And all that comes from Mr. Coleman. So it was at this point that you had the conversation you have just described to us?

Ms. WRIGHT. To my understanding, yes.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Mr. Chairman, we will cede back whatever remaining time we have.

Senator DODD. How much time do we have left here?

The CHAIRMAN. Two minutes.

Senator DODD. I think it should be 2 minutes. I just wanted to come back, Ms. Wright, because we get involved in these hearings and obviously there is a lengthy line of questioning on a certain point that, if one were not necessarily familiar with everything, one might draw some conclusions. It also reflects the amount of time and attention paid to a particular issue. I am speaking specifically about the Whitewater issue and the President's preoccupation, or lack thereof, with this issue. Given your description of the relationship between Mr. McDougal and Governor Clinton, I would like to ask you about how important the Whitewater investment appeared to the Governor during the 1980's. The questioning that went on could lead one to believe that this investment was discussed almost on a daily basis.

Ms. WRIGHT. Oh.

Senator DODD. You laugh, but people aren't familiar with this and they go through 2, 3, or 4 hours of questioning about a particular note or letter, and I'm not minimizing the importance of it, but when you spend 2 or 3 hours on this, one could be left with the impression that this was a constant subject of preoccupation or questioning or discussion. I want to ask you, was that so? Was that the case?

Ms. WRIGHT. Not so at all. The only preoccupation with Whitewater occurred once a year when we filled out the disclosure forms to file as to whether it was among the things that was listed on the form—

Senator DODD. Well, did—I'm sorry.

Ms. WRIGHT. —and neither were we preoccupied with Mr. McDougal. Generally, anything to do with Mr. McDougal occurred when he contacted the office for it.

Senator DODD. For instance, was there any discussion between you and the Governor about how important Whitewater was to the future Governor's security? Was this a necessary investment for him to sort of build up a financial portfolio of some kind?

Ms. WRIGHT. I have the impression, probably not—from general conversations, not those specific words, that at one point they had had an errant fantasy that it might have something to do with the financial future, but that notion had long disappeared by the time even I arrived in Arkansas.

Senator DODD. Was there any notion of expressions of deep appreciation to Jim McDougal for having brought this investment to him, speaking of the Governor?

Ms. WRIGHT. Oh, no, sir. There was from time to time, concern arose over the years about whether he was handling things properly, and then as time went on, whether he was keeping them properly informed.

Senator DODD. So, in your opinion, Whitewater was not something that was of such paramount importance to the Governor that he would feel obliged to extend special favors or attention to Mr. McDougal?

Ms. WRIGHT. Whitewater was like a pesky gnat that you kept batting away and it never would completely go away. What are these lights?

Senator DODD. That's letting me know that I have terminated my questioning. It's not for you, it's for me.

The CHAIRMAN. Mr. Chertoff.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Actually, Ms. Wright, it was kind of like a $200,000 albatross, because you understood, as you have testified, that this investment always lost money; right?

Ms. WRIGHT. I think I testified that my impression was that the Clintons thought it was a loser.

Mr. CHERTOFF. And of course, your common sense tells you, that when someone takes out a big loan on an investment and the investment doesn't produce any revenue, someone has to keep that loan current. In fact, as we discussed in your opening testimony, you became aware that there were some issues that arose sometime about keeping loans related to Whitewater current or being current on tax payments; right?

Ms. WRIGHT. Yeah, a couple of times that came up.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Can you understand that it was therefore of some interest to the Clintons to make sure that this entire project didn't crash and they then come on the hook for a $200,000 loan? I mean, that would be a pretty serious financial setback for a couple that didn't have a lot of money on hand. Would you agree with that?

Ms. WRIGHT. I never gave it that kind of thought.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Since you were asked questions about it, let's work through it. You can understand that if during the period from 1982 to 1986, roughly the paying of the loan, keeping it current so it doesn't go into default, was basically McDougal pulling money out of his other ventures. If he did go into default, and if the loan was called and it was forced to be paid off, and if McDougal didn't have enough money, the Clintons would ultimately have a lot of substantial financial liability and a big embarrassment. That makes sense; right?

Mr. COHEN. Mr. Chertoff, do you want her to assert all those facts? I understand the Committee has taken a lot of testimony on the subject.

The CHAIRMAN. Counselor, you're really going afield. I think he's setting a framework by which he will raise a question. She can ask for it to be repeated and we can narrow the question. I'll ask him to narrow it. Why don't you sit next to Ms. Wright so if you have any suggestions you want to give to her or if she wants to turn to you, she can. I want you to be able to give your client good representation. Why don't you come on up to the podium?

Mr. COHEN. Mr. Chairman, I'm fine from here.

The CHAIRMAN. We are not going to have you interposing your objections from the first row. You have every right to do that and to protect your client, but I want you to do it at the table if you're going to do it.

Mr. COHEN. I understand, Mr. Chairman.

The CHAIRMAN. All right, I really want to accord you that. I think you should take the benefit of that. Please, why don't you do that? It will be more orderly.

Senator SARBANES. Ms. Wright can turn to counsel in the first row if she needs to, can't she?

The CHAIRMAN. Senator, when you weren't here, this has happened several times. I think it would make more sense unless, counsel, you have some specific reason why you don't want to do it, why don't—

Mr. COHEN. We are fine from here, Mr. Chairman.

The CHAIRMAN. OK, but I am going to ask you not to interpose your objections from the first row. I am according you that opportunity. Please attempt to narrow your question so that we don't lose the witness along the way, Mr. Chertoff. I think that's reasonable.

Senator DODD. Mr. Chairman, can I just suggest, I understand your point, but I think we want to be careful. The witnesses here, they're not lawyers necessarily. If there's a line of questioning, just so we don't set a precedent, I wouldn't want to have every witness have lawyers sitting at the table.

The CHAIRMAN. No, but I just wanted to let counsel know, and Ms. Wright know, that she has a right to have counsel at her side. Nothing should be imputed or implied by that, but it would provide for a more orderly way of giving advice to your client. Also, if you want to stop her and interpose a thought or an objection to a line or the manner in which a question is put forth, it would be a more orderly way to do it. That's all I am suggesting.

Mr. COHEN. I'll be at the table, Mr. Chairman.

The CHAIRMAN. Thank you, Ms. Wright.

Senator DODD. The question was preceded by a—

The CHAIRMAN. But Senator Dodd, I understood that and I asked Counsel to refrain from a long big dialogue on it and to narrow the question, so why don't we take it from there.

Mr. Chertoff.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Ms. Wright, would you agree with me—

Senator DODD. Why don't you get a microphone for the lawyer so he can pipe right up?

Mr. COHEN. I have good lungs, Senator, thank you.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Would you agree with me, Ms. Wright, there would be a great interest on the part of the Clintons of having this note not go into default where they would be responsible for part or all of that; right?

Ms. WRIGHT. Any investor, I believe, would have that concern. I do believe that is still tied to your series of phrases and sentences earlier.

The CHAIRMAN. Let's strike Mr. Chertoff's previous statement which led up to a question. Let's strike this one just raised. Let's not try to spell out a whole series. Now the question is a pretty simple one. I want you to frame it in that manner as it relates to whether the failure of Mr. McDougal, or this investment, to be able to keep payments up would have been a concern to the Clintons in this particular case. I think you know that's really the question, but Mr. Chertoff, please put the question to Ms. Wright.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Would you agree with me, Ms. Wright, that it was in the Clintons' interest to make sure all those Whitewater loans were being kept current and paid so that they didn't default? Would you agree with that?

Ms. WRIGHT. It was in the Clintons' best interest that they be kept current and not in default.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Because if they defaulted, the Clintons might personally be liable for a lot of money; right?

Ms. WRIGHT. Yes, but Mr. Chertoff, I was not—I didn't regard Whitewater with this kind of depth even.

Mr. CHERTOFF. But it's a very simple—

The CHAIRMAN. Ms. Wright, let me tell you, one of the problems here, is that you are anticipating what he's going to say. It's not a trick question.

Ms. WRIGHT. No, I am not, sir. I believe he is asking me what I think the Clintons were feeling.

The CHAIRMAN. No, he is not. He is going to ask you a specific question. If you have no opinion, you can say you have no opinion. If you have no knowledge, you can say you have no knowledge. Let's try to be responsive to the question, though. Go ahead.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Would you agree with me that if the loan did go into default, that would have a serious negative effect on the Clintons because they would be liable to pay the loan off?

Ms. WRIGHT. I don't know enough about Whitewater to be able to agree or disagree with you on that. I know that I would be in serious trouble if I didn't get a loan paid off from me.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Therefore, you would agree the Clintons had an interest in making sure that Mr. McDougal was able to keep the loans current; right?

Ms. WRIGHT. Well, it was important to the Clintons that the McDougals run the business in a responsible and current fashion.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Because if Mr. McDougal himself, if his financial house fell down and he wasn't able to keep the investment up, then the burden would fall on the Clintons. That's just simple common sense; right?

Ms. WRIGHT. I don't know. I don't know that until recently we linked Whitewater, in any way, to the other McDougal investments.

Mr. CHERTOFF. As far as you know? You didn't link them in your own mind is what you're telling me?

Ms. WRIGHT. I can only talk about what I thought.

Mr. CHERTOFF. The 1985 fundraiser was spurred by another loan that Mr. Clinton had taken out, this time to fund his 1984 campaign; right? There was a deficit from the 1984 campaign; right?

Ms. WRIGHT. It was spurred by our need for political money.

Mr. CHERTOFF. There was a deficit from the 1984 campaign because Mr. Clinton had taken out a personal loan?

Ms. WRIGHT. We still had some left to pay off, yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. He had to pay it off. It was a personal loan that he took out?

Ms. WRIGHT. Yes, sir, but that is a formality. The loan was to the campaign, not to Mr. Clinton. Under Arkansas law, a bank could not make a loan to a campaign committee but only to the candidate. There was no question we were going to pay that loan.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You don't have to be defensive. I just want to be clear. The loan was in Mr. Clinton's name, the 1984 loan?

Ms. WRIGHT. Yes, sir. Yes, sir, it was.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Some of the 1985 money for the fundraiser was used to pay back that loan; right?

Ms. WRIGHT. Correct.

Mr. CHERTOFF. I assume you filed that in campaign disclosure reports?

Ms. WRIGHT. Yes, sir.

Mr. CHERTOFF. When were those filed, in 1985?

Ms. WRIGHT. Yes, sir.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Do you remember how much of the money that was taken in at the fundraiser was used to pay off that 1984 debt?

Ms. WRIGHT. I don't.

Mr. CHERTOFF. When we were talking about the 1990 fundraiser, I think you made the observation a few moments ago that what you found—I'll use the words you used in your deposition—"excessive in amount and curious in manner" about the 1990 cash withdrawals was the notion that you have separate checks written on the same day at the same time. Can I conclude from that, as someone who has experience in campaigns, when you see that kind of sequence of checks, it sets off like a little red flag in your mind. You have to look at something a little more closely; right?

Ms. WRIGHT. I found it curious. I don't know enough about the campaign to know whether it's red flags. And my even—my usage of words like that reveals that I still do Monday—what do you call it—Monday morning quarterbacking, about Mr. Clinton's campaigns when I had nothing to do with them.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Well, let's talk about the one you did have to do with, the 1985 fundraiser. I would like to put before you three cashier's checks, all three of them dated April 4, 1985, which were turned in at the fundraiser. I'll give them to you in a second. The fundraiser was actually held at the Madison Guaranty Bank building; right?

Ms. WRIGHT. Yes, sir.

Mr. CHERTOFF. It was in the lobby?

Ms. WRIGHT. Yes, sir.

Mr. CHERTOFF. About 20 people attended?

Ms. WRIGHT. I do not remember for sure, but it was not many people.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You collected the checks?

Ms. WRIGHT. I did.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You deposited them in the appropriate accounts; is that right?

Ms. WRIGHT. I did.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Interestingly, we have here $9,000 worth of checks. Am I right that some of the checks came in later, but on that day you took in around $20,000, give or take?

Ms. WRIGHT. I believe it was $22,000 that day and then the total, I think we got two subsequent mailings of checks. I think the total was around $30,000.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Now on the day where you take in about $20,000, almost half of that comes in these three checks. If you look at these checks, you see that one is——

The CHAIRMAN. Would you identify the checks you're speaking of, Mr. Chertoff?

Mr. CHERTOFF. I will do it as we speak. There is a check from J.W. Fulbright for $3,000 to the Bill Clinton Campaign Fund, one from Ken Peacock for $3,000 to Bill Clinton, and there is one from Dean Landrum for $3,000 to Bill Clinton. They are all dated April 4th. If you look at the checks, they are all cashier's checks; right?

Ms. WRIGHT. Yes, sir.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Was that common to get cashier's checks in the campaign?

Ms. WRIGHT. It was not uncommon.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Not uncommon. That means they were checks someone purchased from the bank, not regular checks you use in the course of your ordinary checking; right? That's what cashier's checks are?

Ms. WRIGHT. If you say so.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You don't know what cashier's checks are?

Ms. WRIGHT. [Nonverbal response.]

Mr. CHERTOFF. Since we talked about sequential checks written to you the same day in 1990, did it seem odd to you these checks were sequentially numbered 2496, 2497, 2498, as if they were issued right at the same time, one after the other, on the same day, at the bank?

Ms. WRIGHT. No, sir, it didn't.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You didn't see anything odd about that?

Ms. WRIGHT. I didn't know then, and I don't know now anything about what any of these people's banking relationships was, and Mr. McDougal had a deadline of producing money for a fundraiser that day, and whatever the arrangements were, they did. No, it didn't occur to me as odd.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Mr. McDougal had a deadline for that day?

Ms. WRIGHT. He set the date and that was the day—was this the day of the fundraiser?

Mr. CHERTOFF. Yes, but you say you had a deadline of producing the money that day. Is that true?

Ms. WRIGHT. Yes, but that is absolutely no comparability to what I meant was curious about the other three checks, Mr. Chertoff.

Mr. CHERTOFF. But let me come back to your—

Ms. WRIGHT. The other three checks were for cash.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Let me ask you this question. You're saying to us that Mr. McDougal had an obligation, or had a deadline, to produce the money on that day. Why was it Mr. McDougal's obligation to produce the money on that day?

Ms. WRIGHT. I don't mean an obligation. He had set that day as the fundraiser and I think most people who agree to put together a fundraiser want to produce money at the fundraiser, so I mean it was his self-imposed deadline, not anything we put on him. I don't think we had any notion of how much money he was or wasn't going to raised before we went.

Mr. CHERTOFF. In fact, you told us some of the money came in after the deadline; right?

Ms. WRIGHT. Yes, sir.

Mr. CHERTOFF. These three checks, when you look at them, and you have already acknowledged this is about half the money you picked up on that day, did you wonder—I mean, you knew who J.W. Fulbright was; right?

Ms. WRIGHT. Certainly.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Was he at the fundraiser?

Ms. WRIGHT. He was not. It was a great disappointment, because the date had been selected and suggested by Mr. McDougal because it was a date when Senator Fulbright could come.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Did you think that, when you looked at these sequential checks issued one right after the other on the same day at the bank, Mr. Fulbright, Mr. Peacock, and Mr. Landrum had all walked in together and stood in line to purchase cashier's checks for the maximum allowable limit for contributions?

Ms. WRIGHT. I didn't concern myself about their banking practices at all, Mr. Chertoff.

Mr. CHERTOFF. But you concerned yourself about complying with the campaign rules; right? That was your job, a principal job of yours as a Campaign Manager; right?

Ms. WRIGHT. Yes, sir.

Mr. CHERTOFF. And you were the person who took in the money; right?

Ms. WRIGHT. Yes, sir.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Didn't this sequence of checks kind of leap out at you, and say this looks a lot like someone is deliberately structuring a large contribution, in three separate cashier's checks, in three separate names?

Ms. WRIGHT. No, sir, I didn't.

Mr. CHERTOFF. It didn't raise any question in your mind? You didn't have any desire to inquire or ask any questions about the remarkable coincidence of three contributors taking out the maximum allowable contribution under law, in three cashier's checks, issued by McDougal's bank, on the same day—literally one after the other after the other. None of that caused you to have any question in your mind?

Ms. WRIGHT. Were there three or four cashier's checks?

Mr. CHERTOFF. Well, I have three. If you know of a fourth, I would be interested in hearing about it.

Ms. WRIGHT. I mean, I just don't remember.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Let's work with these three.

Ms. WRIGHT. It wasn't uncommon. As you know, I don't really know what a cashier's check is, except that it is a valid trade of money that we put into the bank and the bank accepted it as a deposit. I don't know what cashier's—

Mr. CHERTOFF. It is awfully hard to believe that a woman who has managed three or four Gubernatorial campaigns—

Ms. WRIGHT. It was not uncommon that we got cashier's checks.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Let me finish. In a system where there are campaign limits as to how much you can give, where it's not appropriate to give money or reimburse other people's contributions, you were the chairman of the party, and you're going to tell us that you don't even know what a cashier's check is?

Ms. WRIGHT. I don't know why people use cashier's checks. I have never bought one, so I don't know. All I know is that it was not uncommon that we received contributions in cashier's checks.

A far greater concern to me, Mr. Chertoff, was—

Mr. CHERTOFF. If you don't mind, my concern first.

Ms. WRIGHT. Except that you put this concern in your question.

The CHAIRMAN. Please, let her finish. Go ahead.

Ms. WRIGHT. You made reference to the amounts, and that was the concern to me, and I know that I immediately checked to make certain that these people were giving legal amounts. That was my concern.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Because you knew if one of them or someone else wanted to give $9,000 himself, you couldn't give $9,000 in a single block. The only way you can legitimately book it in the campaign is to have it in separate checks; right? Separate amounts for each individual?

Ms. WRIGHT. Mr. Chertoff, I never looked at these three checks and thought that a person was giving $9,000.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You acknowledged a moment ago, I think, that you do understand that cashier's checks have to be purchased, you go to the bank to purchase them?

Ms. WRIGHT. I don't know where you get cashier's checks. I think you get them at banks, and I don't know, I have never bought a cashier's check. I don't know why people use them.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Sometimes they use cashier's checks because their credit history isn't good and people want to make sure the check is good, but we'll come back to that.

The CHAIRMAN. Senator Sarbanes.

Senator SARBANES. I yield to Mr. Ben-Veniste.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Well, Mr. Chertoff has posed——

Senator DODD. Can I venture one point before you start? You may not be aware of this, Ms. Wright, but there was a line of questioning that was asked of you about Whitewater being predicated on the premise, and I think an inaccurate premise, that the Clintons knew that Mr. McDougal was keeping the Whitewater loan current. Therefore, the question about whether the Clintons were concerned about McDougal's financial condition. The law firm of Pillsbury Madison hired by the RTC, at a cost of around $4 million to do their investigation, concluded, and I quote:

There is no basis to assert that the Clintons knew anything of substance about the McDougals' advances to Whitewater. The source of the funds used to make the advances or the source of the funds used to make payments on bank debt.

So the premise of Mr. Chertoff's question about whether or not the Clintons should have been nervous or you should have been nervous about Mr. McDougal's financial condition is false because there is no indication based on a $4 million study by Pillsbury Madison that they were aware of that. I just want to make that point because it sort of lays out the assumption you should somehow know about it. In fact, the investigation said that there was no way they should have.

I'm sorry, Mr. Chairman. I apologize. Go ahead.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Ms. Wright, let me address another sort of presumption that was built into the questioning regarding these three cashier's checks. If this were a court of law, one would make an objection based on a fact not in evidence. What I'm referring to is the assumption that you studied these cashier's checks to determine that the checks were sequentially numbered. Did you make such a study of the checks, other than their amounts and who the donors were?

Ms. WRIGHT. Not only did I not, in the course of these investigations that have gone on—which have considered the 1985 fundraiser, which are many, even beyond this Committee, I have produced documents about this fundraiser. And I have to say, Mr. Chertoff made me aware for the first time that they were sequentially numbered. I have never noticed it even in all the studying I have done of them in the course of investigations.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. To the best of my knowledge—and I am sure Mr. Chertoff will correct me if I am in error—in all of his extensive questioning of you over 2 days, such a question did not occur to Mr. Giuffra. Nobody has questioned you before about this obvious and blatant sequential numbering of cashier's checks; isn't that so?

Ms. WRIGHT. When Mr. Chertoff mentioned that they were sequential was the first time, I never noticed that, ever. And believe me, I have touched these a lot in the last couple of years, and I have never noticed it, much less at the time.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Now, your issue in reviewing the contributions, as I understand your testimony, was to determine that no donor had exceeded the permissible amount. Is that correct?

Ms. WRIGHT. That's correct.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. What process would you go through to do that?

Ms. WRIGHT. I went to the computer terminal, looked up the dates of the last contributions and if they didn't exceed, then they applied them to the 1984 campaign for the debt. If that would put them over, I applied the contribution to the 1986 campaign.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. And that was done in connection with this fundraiser as well as others, I take it?

Ms. WRIGHT. Oh, yes, that was my routine.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Who was responsible for writing letters thanking the donors for their contributions at such events?

Ms. WRIGHT. It would have occurred under my supervision.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Well, we have here the list of all of the individuals who contributed either in person or otherwise through that fundraiser, and the letters that were sent out thanking those individuals. But I have to say that if we are going to get in this Committee into presumptions based on campaign contributions, that the candidate or his chief finance committee operative must know things about the contributions that are not apparent on their face, then I have to say, Senator, that we could be here for years investigating any number of differential allegations that could easily be made on the benefit of hindsight.

Following up on the point that you made in your initial comments to this Committee, Ms. Wright, that political figures are very vulnerable to the problems that people who make contributions to their campaigns get into subsequently, because there is an association. If we spend our time in this Committee on that time, not just from the mid-1980's but even more recently, we'll never get finished with our job. The June 17th date would be laughable.

Ms. WRIGHT. I cannot imagine that the Chairman who has been through a comparable experience would pursue that, and certainly I am very sympathetic right now with the problems that Senator

Dole is undergoing with the public scrutiny about sources of contributions that he took, and I don't believe that either Senator D'Amato or Senator Dole had an awareness of improper sources. And we had no awareness that there was anything suspicious about the sources.

Senator DODD. I want to point out too, and I don't know how much involvement Mr. Chertoff has had in campaigns. A lot of us have. I look down at the dates and 4/4 seems to be the prevalent date of the checks. Something was made of the fact that they are all dated that day, but that's fairly customary. I mean, people that come to events of mine, it's not uncommon for them to write the check at the event or write it before they come to the event, as a practical matter. Normally—again, now, there is a Gubernatorial requirement to meet, and I have not been a candidate for State office, but there's certain things that people look for, and obviously the amounts involved to make sure you don't exceed, and we have other requirements such as occupations and so forth. We have to require, and basic instructions to my staff is to check those sorts of things.

One of the things that the Federal Elections Commission has not asked us to do, and that is unless you're aware of it, is to sort of probe and call a person and ask the question about if the check is written in someone's name, and accordingly, the assumption is it's from that individual. You start calling everybody and saying is this really your check, it gets a little ridiculous, so none of us do that that I'm aware of.

So again, I don't know how aware Mr. Chertoff is or others are of these kind of processes that people who are seeking offices go through. It's not uncommon.

Senator Dole—and I wouldn't disagree with your conclusion on that. It would be a rare occurrence, an occasion, if someone was aware of that going on, but it's not unique. So the implication somehow that this should have been jumping off the page at you when you see J.W. Fulbright writing a check, you're not going to sit there and call Senator Fulbright and say, boy, I wonder where that one comes from. Unless I'm wrong, it's just the practicalities of this.

In fact, the other day in a response, in a column written by Joe Stevens, Senator Dole said, "In this business you don't know who is giving you money. We turned it over to the FEC."

For all of us sitting here, you hope this is done right, you have to watch for some of these things that may be glaring, but to suggest somehow that this should have jumped off the page at someone, I have to tell you, as a practical matter, you know, 20/20 hindsight is a wonderful luxury, and even there, no indication in the sense that you would have anything but to suspect you're looking at check numbers here, that you should have been calling Senator Fulbright or doubting somehow that he made a contribution is ridiculous on its face in my view.

Thank you, Senator.

Ms. WRIGHT. That's correct. I would point out, though, in addition, that one of the headaches about cashier's checks is that they don't bear an address, and we were required to have an address both for sending the thank you letter and for the official records.

And the addresses for two of these checks were among ones we didn't have and had to get sent to us afterwards. You have the response to that providing those addresses.

The CHAIRMAN. Mr. Chertoff.

Ms. WRIGHT. I never sat around fondling campaign checks to study them. I always deposited them just about as fast as I could.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Now this 1985 fundraiser, you had been asked some questions about David Hale. I mean, some of the figures who were involved in the transactions which Mr. Hale was part of in 1985 and 1986, moving money in and out of his Small Business Administration-funded company into various properties owned by Madison Guaranty Savings & Loan and out again. Let me ask you whether a number of the people who were part of that group that handled that money in 1985-1986 happened to come to this fundraiser, whether to your knowledge there were people who were at the fundraiser because they were very close associates of Jim McDougal. I guess Jim Guy Tucker was at this fundraiser; right?

Ms. WRIGHT. Yes, he was one of the few people there that I knew.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Actually, didn't he give the money in the name of his cable company?

Ms. WRIGHT. Correct.

Mr. CHERTOFF. The Henleys were there?

Ms. WRIGHT. That was the first time I had seen him since we had defeated him in the 1982 primary and times had been very tense, so I was very aware that he was there in 1985.

Mr. CHERTOFF. David and James Henley were there; right?

Ms. WRIGHT. I think at least one of them was there.

Mr. CHERTOFF. They gave money?

Ms. WRIGHT. Yes, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. Who are the Henleys?

Mr. CHERTOFF. They are the brothers of Susan McDougal.

Ms. WRIGHT. Yes, and one was a State Senator at that time, I believe.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Do you know whether they engaged in some of the transactions which are the subject of the case in which Mr. Hale has testified?

Ms. WRIGHT. The Henleys?

Mr. CHERTOFF. Yes.

Ms. WRIGHT. I don't know.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Larry Kuca, do you know him?

Ms. WRIGHT. No, sir.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Do you know whether he gave money?

Ms. WRIGHT. His is among the checks that we provided you, yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Is he the individual who pled guilty in connection with the investigation down in Little Rock?

Ms. WRIGHT. I don't know.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Ken Peacock, do you know Ken Peacock?

Ms. WRIGHT. I don't.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Steven Smith, do you know Steven Smith?

Ms. WRIGHT. I don't.

Mr. CHERTOFF. What about Chris Wade? Was Chris Wade—

Ms. WRIGHT. I have met Mr. Wade.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Did he give money?

Ms. WRIGHT. He was a regular contributor.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Do you know whether he was involved as the broker on the Whitewater matter?

Ms. WRIGHT. I know that now, and I am not certain that he was at that fundraiser.

Mr. CHERTOFF. But he gave money?

Ms. WRIGHT. I think we got the check subsequent to the fundraiser.

Mr. CHERTOFF. It was a check from Chris Wade?

Ms. WRIGHT. Yes, sir.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Did you know, at the time, that he was the broker for Whitewater?

Ms. WRIGHT. No, sir.

Mr. CHERTOFF. R. D. Randolph, do you remember him giving money?

Ms. WRIGHT. Yes, sir, and I believe Mr. Randolph was present at the fundraiser.

Mr. CHERTOFF. He was a director of Madison Guaranty; right?

Ms. WRIGHT. I don't know.

Mr. CHERTOFF. What was his relationship with the Governor?

Ms. WRIGHT. I don't know how they knew each other. He was someone who had been around politics in the State. I don't remember, he may have also—I don't remember.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Did you know he was involved in one of these transactions that Mr. Hale has testified about involving a partnership between himself and Governor Tucker and Mr. McDougal?

Ms. WRIGHT. I know that now.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You did not know that at the time of the fundraiser?

Ms. WRIGHT. Not at all.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Didn't Mr. Randolph, in fact, kind of throw this fundraiser back in your face a couple of years later when he wanted the Governor to sign off on some legislation that affected one of Mr. McDougal's projects, the Castle Sewer & Water matter?

Ms. WRIGHT. I think you are referring again to one of the office memos that we had, and I think that's what he was doing. I don't know that for sure.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Let's get the memo to you. It is dated April 14th, and it's to "BC from NH," NH being Nancy Hernreich, and we will pull it out for you.

Ms. WRIGHT. I have it, sir.

Mr. CHERTOFF. It has that characteristic checkmark from the Governor indicating he had read the memo; right?

Ms. WRIGHT. Yes, it also has a comment from him on the memo.

Mr. CHERTOFF. It says:

Mr. Randolph dropped by to see you this morning to talk to you about the Water Bill you vetoed. He said that he talked to you on Sunday morning. He wants to know if the veto is going to stand. He would like you to call Jim Guy Tucker about this. He said that he has a difficult time getting an answer from you. He mentioned a meeting between you, Tucker and Jim McDougal a couple of years ago which involved $33,000. This was pretty cryptic. He seemed angry. Someone, I think he prefers you, needs to call Tucker.

Now when you saw this, I take it you understood the reference to the meeting between the Governor, Tucker, and McDougal involving $30,000 to be a reference back to this 1985 fundraiser?

Ms. WRIGHT. I didn't understand that. I suspected it because it also was not uncommon that people who had contributed money, when they got angry with an action of yours, decided that they would throw it in your face. And I, in fact, have engaged in that, when someone voted in a way that displeases me to whom I had written even a $50 check. I'll say I wish I had never given you that $50. I mean, it was not an uncommon thing for people to link their unhappiness with a regret of being associated with money, and I saw that—and my guess was that Mr. Randolph was doing this, although I also thought he was wildly exaggerating the amount.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Well, in fact, he was pretty close. How much did the fundraiser take in, about $39,000?

Ms. WRIGHT. No, sir. I think it was $30,200 or $30,500.

Mr. CHERTOFF. So this $33,000 isn't really—

Ms. WRIGHT. But I have to tell you, at that time I thought that fundraiser raised the amount of money I left there with. It has—only in the reconstruction of the investigations have I linked the checks that came subsequently as part of that fundraiser.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Did you actually have a conversation with Mr. Randolph about this, with R.D. Randolph?

Ms. WRIGHT. I don't remember whether I did or not.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Whether Randolph didn't say to Ms. Hernreich that he was sore about the thousand dollars or the $3,000 he had given or the $2,000 he had given, he talked about the $33,000. How did Mr. Randolph know what the total take was on that?

Ms. WRIGHT. I have no idea, Mr. Chertoff. You'll just have to ask Mr. Randolph. I didn't give it another thought. I wouldn't have spoken to anybody about it. It is not uncommon that a former contributor will throw something about having raised money for you or giving money to you up in your face when they are unhappy with you. I took note of that as likely theory behind what Mr. Randolph meant. I felt very irritated about it. I had to set it aside in my mind and deal with the substance of the anger.

Mr. CHERTOFF. During the year before the fundraiser, almost exactly a year before the fundraiser, Mr. McDougal was fortunate enough to have a State agency, the Arkansas Housing Agency, lease space in his building. Do you remember that incident?

Ms. WRIGHT. Yes, sir, I do.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Were you actually involved in that decisionmaking process?

Ms. WRIGHT. Yes, sir, I was.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Were you at the meeting where Mr. Epes was present?

Ms. WRIGHT. I don't remember that. I didn't, until yesterday, recall that Mr. Epes had met with the Governor.

Mr. CHERTOFF. But now you remember it?

Ms. WRIGHT. No, I don't.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You don't know if you were there or not?

Ms. WRIGHT. I don't know.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You heard the testimony of Ms. Herr that she was told by Mr. Mallard at the time that this was something the Governor's office wanted done in 1984. They wanted to have this lease go to Mr. McDougal's building. Is that, in fact, what happened? Did the Governor's office want it done?

Ms. WRIGHT. No, sir, that is not, in fact, what happened. I didn't hear that testimony. Not much of yesterday was on C-SPAN. The State Building Services made the determination that ADFA was a good fit for that building. It happened, more often than I wish it had, that departments didn't like the locations that State Building Services liked. Usually this involved the downtown area. And I did, on two or three different occasions, including this one, meet with both the State Building Service officials and the resisting department people to try to ascertain what the problems were and see if they could be addressed.

Very often, it was just that they didn't want to be downtown. It wasn't ritzy enough. It was depressed areas. And the policy that we felt very strongly about was keeping a revitalized—helping to revitalize downtown Little Rock and the area adjacent to it. My job was to try to ascertain if there was a resistance merely based on the location as opposed to the adequacy. I believe I remember that, in this case, concerns were expressed about security. I think we did, in fact, add more lights to the parking lot, stuff like that, address those concerns.

Mr. CHERTOFF. So you actually remember participating in this in 1984?

Ms. WRIGHT. Oh, yes, sir, I did.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Then there was a subsequent meeting where it was taken to the Governor himself?

Ms. WRIGHT. I learned that yesterday. I don't recall it from the time.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Evidently Mr. Epes felt strongly enough, or someone in his agency felt strongly enough, that they took it up to the Governor himself; right?

Ms. WRIGHT. Evidently so, and not surprisingly.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Did you know that Mr. Epes continued to complain about the lease during the balance of that year to the State Building Services? Just yes or no. Did you know that?

Ms. WRIGHT. No, I don't remember that specifically. Mr. Epes is a very bright and very competent professional, but he also complains a lot.

Mr. CHERTOFF. In fact, there was an expansion of the lease, an additional lease was signed the following year in 1985; and that process was set in motion right around the time of the April fundraiser. Did you know about that?

Ms. WRIGHT. No, sir, I had forgotten about the expansion until he was reminded about it at yesterday's hearing.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Did you remember that additional new space was taken in another McDougal building across the street for the Revenue Department of ADFA also in 1985? Did you remember that?

Ms. WRIGHT. I do have a recollection of the Revenue Department moving in that area.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Now, Ms. Herr, the woman responsible for these leases, told us yesterday that at least during her tenure in this period of time, the only buildings in the downtown area, the Quapaw Quarter, into which State agencies were moving or opening new leases as they came up were Mr. McDougal's buildings. Do you have a memory contrary to that?

Ms. WRIGHT. No, but I am trying to understand what you are saying.

Mr. CHERTOFF. What I'm saying is, that whatever the general intention was of developing or helping to develop this particular quarter of Little Rock, the only landlord who benefited during this period, from new leases that were being obtained for agencies, was Mr. McDougal. No other landlord had a new State agency in his or her building in that quarter.

Ms. WRIGHT. I don't know that there were other areas being renovated and developed in that area. I don't recall any. One of the things that was admirable about Madison Guaranty is that it went into that area, it renovated an old building, made a very interesting structure and there was great hope that it was going to bring new life into the area.

But Mr. Chertoff, we did not make a determination that ADFA would be in that building. We never made a determination where an agency would be. We did not make a determination whether space that a landlord wanted rented out was adequate, but once SBS made the decision that it was appropriate space and there was a complaint and the complaint was about a downtown area, I had a responsibility to make certain that it wasn't a bias or prejudicial or bigoted concern.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You surely didn't think Mr. Epes was prejudiced or bigoted?

Ms. WRIGHT. No, sir.

Mr. CHERTOFF. In this case, though, I'm a little puzzled because actually the testimony we had yesterday was not that the Governor's office only got involved in the process at the end, but rather we had testimony from Ms. Herr, who has certainly no discernible reason to make up stories and who has apparently quite a clear memory about this. Her testimony was that from the very beginning, as soon as there was a request made by the agency not to take this space, she was told by Mr. Mallard—and you remember Mr. Mallard, right, Paul Mallard?

Ms. WRIGHT. Absolutely.

Mr. CHERTOFF. In fact, he was a friend of the Governor?

Ms. WRIGHT. And a cabinet member, yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. She was told from the very get-go that the Governor didn't want to take any other proposals, the Governor's office wanted this in this particular building. That was her testimony yesterday. Was that customary for the Governor's office to express views early on, about what buildings they wanted to have State leases in?

Ms. WRIGHT. We never did that. And I don't believe we did it in this case.

Mr. CHERTOFF. So you don't agree with her testimony.

Ms. WRIGHT. I have an enormous respect for Helen Herr. I'm not saying I disbelieve it. I'm saying something is not jibing.

Mr. CHERTOFF. By the way, you didn't have any policy or rule in effect at this time or just even a practice of having the Governor screen himself out from making decisions where there was an economic benefit to Mr. McDougal. I am not talking about general regulatory decisions, but a decision like this, where it was $300,000 of lease payments over 5 years. I mean, that was a very nice piece of business for a commercial landlord to have a guaranteed 5-year tenancy, for $300,000, from a very responsible tenant who is not going to go bankrupt.

You didn't have any rule or principle—because of McDougal's business relationship with the Governor on the personal side, that the Governor ought to keep out of any issues that might have a financial impact on Mr. McDougal?

Ms. WRIGHT. Any interest that we had about a State agency having rental property in that area was of an interest in seeing the area develop. It had nothing to do with Jim McDougal.

Mr. CHERTOFF. So when Ms. Herr testified yesterday, as she did in her deposition, that she was told that one of the reasons the space was supposed to go into that building was because the Clintons and the McDougals were friends, she was wrong? You don't agree with that?

Ms. WRIGHT. I didn't tell her that. The Clintons didn't tell her that. Mr. Chertoff, one of the wonderful things about Arkansas that is always interesting but also gets you in trouble sometimes—and I bet this happens in other States too, it certainly did in Texas where I grew up—is that people invoke the name of an authority figure like the Governor frequently with great license. We never directed that—I think it was the housing authority at that time, we didn't direct that they go into that building. It had nothing to do with Jim McDougal that I then insisted that they comply with SBS decision.

Mr. CHERTOFF. I'm out of time.

The CHAIRMAN. Senator Sarbanes.

Senator SARBANES. I yield to Mr. Ben-Veniste.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Well, my recollection of yesterday's testimony is a lot different than Mr. Chertoff's. My recollection is that Mr. Mallard testified that he was the one who identified the Madison property as appropriate for the moving of the housing authority. He testified that it was consistent with the policy of selecting a downtown location, if that were possible, and particularly one in the Quapaw Quarter which was targeted for redevelopment. There was no one on the panel who disagreed with that.

Moreover, the notion that someone was told to select this property because of a relationship between Mr. Clinton and Mr. McDougal was rejected by the people on the panel who testified here under oath. What they did say was that when Mr. Epes sent a letter which was requested by his deputy because some of the employees of the housing authority expressed concerns about safety issues, that he felt he was obliged to sit down and discuss that matter. Essentially, to be the ombudsman carrying the concerns forward to the Governor's office. He did that.

Mr. Epes was very candid in saying he lived in that area himself, and he had no concerns about safety. Indeed, when balanced against the economics of the deal, the space that was available for contiguous expansion, and the policy of helping to resuscitate an economically downtrodden area, albeit a historic one, of Little Rock, the safety concerns were not that significant.

Moreover, the testimony yesterday was consistent that the safety concerns were never realized, fortunately, in terms of any incidence of violent acts to which the employees of that agency were subjected. Mr. Epes said he was entirely satisfied with the Madison property. When it came time to expand, they took an additional 1,400 square feet of space.

The notion that this was a quid pro quo for Jim McDougal throwing the Madison fundraiser, I think, was soundly rejected by every member of the panel yesterday. The proposition that the agency was led to expand and that the expansion space was somehow this big payoff for having a fundraiser at the Madison Savings & Loan, was roundly rejected as preposterous.

Ms. WRIGHT. It is preposterous. It is a preposterous allegation, and I might point out and I don't know whether it was pointed out yesterday, when the agency did continue to grow after we changed the nature of it, legislatively, that they did move to another downtown property which had been more seriously depressed and abandoned by station, and that one happened to be owned by a right-wing Republican opponent of the Governor's, but we were thrilled in encouraging the move to that building.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. And I trust that there was a similar expression of dismay by the employees of the agency because the new location was also beset by crime and they would be imperiled, and so forth and so on.

Ms. WRIGHT. There was.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. But, that was overcome and the agency was moved there?

Ms. WRIGHT. That's correct.

Senator SARBANES. This Quapaw Quarter, it has improved over the years; is that correct?

Ms. WRIGHT. Parts have enormously, but it is not all the way through. We still have a ways to go.

Senator SARBANES. I understand that it's generally credited that the location of the agency was helpful in the subsequent improvement that took place?

Ms. WRIGHT. We believed that, yes.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. The $33,000 raised at this fundraiser in 1985 has been identified in several theories that have been expressed before this Committee. It has been expressed as being the quid pro quo for getting off leases. Although the witness who testified yesterday about having made such an allegation recognized that he was merely "saber rattling," I think a euphemism for outright fabricating, because it was shown quite clearly that the fundraiser occurred a year after the property was rented.

Then we have, in 1987, the suggestion that after Governor Clinton vetoed water and sewer legislation which resulted in one of the contributors complaining that, "my gosh, you better remember that back in 1985, we all raised $33,000 for you and that you better think about vetoing legislation that affects us." Of course, if there were any such wired-in understanding of support legislatively or otherwise by the Governor's action, it's preposterous to think that the Governor would have vetoed the bill in the first place.

It was passed, according to testimony that this Committee has received, unanimously by both Houses of the legislature. Yet, the Governor vetoed it. When they took out the unconstitutional aspects of it, it again passed unanimously by both Houses of the legislature. It was totally uncontroversial, and indeed, at that point the Governor signed it.

Now in the memo that has been provided to you, "He seemed very angry, I think he prefers you, needs to call Tucker." Governor Clinton wrote one word on that memo.

Ms. WRIGHT. Yes, sir.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. What was it?

Ms. WRIGHT. "Ugh."

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Meaning that the notion of calling Mr. Tucker and getting involved in such a matter based on this complaint was not something that he wished to involve himself in; would that be fair to say?

Ms. WRIGHT. Either that or that the entire matter was "ugh." You don't—you know, Mr. Randolph, obviously it was rantings. He wants to know if the veto is going to stand. Vetoes stand. There's no way to reverse a veto. So yeah, I mean it was just "ugh."

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. I mean, we have had days of testimony concerning what occurred with respect to that, and I don't mean to burden you with that, except to ask you on the basis of everything that you knew, was there any quid pro quo for the Governor approving water and sewer legislation tied somehow to this fundraiser that occurred 2 years beforehand?

Ms. WRIGHT. There was not only no quid pro quo, but until recently, we never even gave them credit for the amount of money that they did raise. I thought it was much less than what it actually turns out to have been. There was no quid pro quo, and if you're talking big political money, even in our small reasonable State of Arkansas, this is not big political money.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Mr. Chertoff, in his prefix to his questioning, somehow wove in Mr. Hale.

Ms. WRIGHT. Yeah, I was confused about that.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Well, I think justifiably. Was there any connection of Mr. Hale, that you know of, in 1985, to the contributions that were made at the 1985 fundraiser?

Ms. WRIGHT. No, sir, not at all.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. The fact that some of these individuals may have done business with Mr. Hale does not to my mind suggest that Mr. Hale was somehow involved in this fundraiser, or that Mr. Clinton should have known that. Does it suggest that to you?

Ms. WRIGHT. It does not suggest that. We were oblivious to Mr. Hale having any business dealings with these people, I believe.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Now the idea that the individuals would be associated with Mr. McDougal, however, was nothing that came as a shock to you? Mr. McDougal had arranged for the fundraiser.

Ms. WRIGHT. Correct.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Showing you that these individuals had done business with Mr. McDougal was entirely within the expectation that one would have at the time, I presume?

Ms. WRIGHT. Absolutely.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. He arranged it and presumably, he brought people who were associated with him whom he could lasso into a fundraiser; correct?

Ms. WRIGHT. Correct.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Perhaps you could clarify something that I think has been a presumption in this Committee and certainly in the press—about the relationship between Mr. Clinton and Jim Guy Tucker. Because the two of them have served as Governor of the State of Arkansas, there seems to be some presumption that they are good buddies and have been political allies. I wonder whether you could provide us with your understanding of what that relationship was, based on your own observations.

Ms. WRIGHT. It was a civil relationship, but distant. As I had earlier, Mr. Tucker being at this fundraiser was my first encounter with him since the 1982 primary where he also ran, and we defeated him. I think it's very difficult to, when there is a tough race like that, to expect people to be great buddies. They weren't great buddies. There was a rivalry. There was a tension. Mr. Tucker proceeded to become exceedingly wealthy, and I have always questioned which one really lost that election.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. I don't have anything further.

The CHAIRMAN. Mr. Chertoff.

Ms. Wright, we could do one of two things.

Ms. Wright.

Ms. WRIGHT. Yes, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. We could take a break now or we could attempt to finish up so we don't have to come back. I will defer to you at this point.

Ms. WRIGHT. That is a wonderfully heavy responsibility.

The CHAIRMAN. Well, no—

Ms. WRIGHT. A short break would be nice.

The CHAIRMAN. Why don't we take a 5-minute break, and see if we can't conclude this without having to take a break for lunch; all right? That will be our goal.

Ms. WRIGHT. Fine, thank you.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. How much questioning does Mr. Chertoff still have, do you know?

The CHAIRMAN. Do you have about a half-hour?

Mr. CHERTOFF. About 20 minutes to a half-hour. I think we could possibly do that.

The CHAIRMAN. So that we can operate with a little more humanity for everybody, why don't we take a break until 2 p.m. We will resume at 2 p.m. because I know what's going to happen. We tell you 20 minutes to a half-hour, then the other side is going to have some time, they will probably take less but we will probably go a lot longer than we anticipate. Everybody is going to be uncomfortable, kind of strained, so why don't we break until 2 p.m.

Ms. WRIGHT. Thank you.

[Whereupon, at 12:45 p.m., the hearing was recessed, to be reconvened at 2 p.m. this same day.]

AFTERNOON SESSION

The CHAIRMAN. The Committee will come to order.

Mr. Chertoff.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Ms. Wright, in 1992, you wound up working in some capacity, on the Presidential Campaign. Is that right?

Ms. WRIGHT. That is correct.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Let me ask the question this way. You had some involvement in responding to present inquiries on Whitewater in 1992?

Ms. WRIGHT. Yes, sir.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Who worked with who on the campaign in getting information to respond to those press questions?

Ms. WRIGHT. Well, we had a division that worked on the Arkansas record. There were a whole lot of people who helped me out.

Mr. CHERTOFF. But who did you work with specifically on Whitewater and the Rose Law Firm and those issues? Who did you get your information from to respond to those types of questions?

Ms. WRIGHT. Those are two different types of questions. The Rose Law Firm, if I received a new question, I generally would call the person who seemed to me to be the most appropriate person at the Rose Law Firm to ask for whatever facts they could share with me.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Who, the names? What are the names of the people you would deal with?

Ms. WRIGHT. Well, it depends on what the issue was. But the managing partner—is that what you call them in law firms, the managing—I think Webb was most often the person I called.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Webb Hubbell?

Ms. WRIGHT. Yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. And also Vince Foster?

Ms. WRIGHT. I don't think I ever called Vince, but I may have.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Did you talk to Mrs. Clinton about questions involving the Rose Law Firm?

Ms. WRIGHT. I talked to Mrs. Clinton about any answer I had drafted which concerned her.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Did you deal with Susan Thomases on the Rose Law Firm?

Ms. WRIGHT. I don't recall doing so.

Mr. CHERTOFF. With respect to Whitewater, did you deal with or talk to Mrs. Clinton about Whitewater?

Ms. WRIGHT. Most of the Whitewater research and initial flurry occurred before I came to the campaign. Like the Gerth story in The New York Times came out before I came back to Arkansas to the campaign. So I used, you know, what had built up from there, from that research. The Lyons report was in process at that point. And then I think the first really official thing I did was be a part of issuing that report from the campaign.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Was there a point in the campaign that you became aware of the possibility that there were criminal referrals in the pipeline that dealt with or mentioned the Clintons?

Ms. WRIGHT. I don't think so, Mr. Chertoff.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Do you recall an RTC investigation that might touch on the Clintons at some point during the campaign?

Ms. WRIGHT. I did, yes, sir.

Mr. CHERTOFF. How did you come to hear about it?

Ms. WRIGHT. I received a call from someone in California.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Who?

Ms. WRIGHT. I don't know. Who had talked to somebody they knew there, a lawyer who had just returned from a business trip to Kansas City and while at a cocktail party in Kansas City, a woman had mentioned to him that there was—I don't believe RTC was a phrase used—but a referral about an S&L officer which would implicate the Clintons in Arkansas. It was a very cryptic rumor.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Who told this to you?

Ms. WRIGHT. I don't know the name of the person.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You mean some stranger just called you?

Ms. WRIGHT. They do every day.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Any stranger was able to get through to you directly during the campaign, and pass on information like this?

Ms. WRIGHT. Absolutely.

Mr. CHERTOFF. So you're not telling us you don't remember who called you. You're just telling us you don't know the identity of the person who communicated the rumors to you?

Ms. WRIGHT. That's correct.

Mr. CHERTOFF. It wasn't Jack Palladino, by any chance, was it?

Ms. WRIGHT. Oh, no, sir. Mr. Palladino worked for me.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Mr. Palladino was an investigator?

Ms. WRIGHT. He was an attorney who was working with me on the campaign.

Mr. CHERTOFF. So you get this information from someone you don't know. What do you say to that person? Did you ask them for details?

Ms. WRIGHT. I think I had all the details that person had.

Mr. CHERTOFF. What did you do next? Did you try to run down the story?

Ms. WRIGHT. I called a criminal defense attorney in Little Rock who I knew and asked him if there was some kind of consideration of an indictment or criminal referral in a Federal Court in Arkansas, was there any way to find out about it that was legal and ethical, et cetera, and he told me that there wasn't.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Who was the person you called?

Ms. WRIGHT. Bill Wilson.

Mr. CHERTOFF. He's now a judge?

Ms. WRIGHT. Yes, sir.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Appointed by President Clinton?

Ms. WRIGHT. Correct.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You did this on the basis of a call from a person who didn't identify themselves to you?

Ms. WRIGHT. Actually sir, the person probably did identify himself to me.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Did you make a note of the call?

Ms. WRIGHT. Not that I have been able to find.

Mr. CHERTOFF. It's somehow not around anymore?

Ms. WRIGHT. I may have, but I haven't located it.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Mr. Wilson told you you couldn't find out if there was any kind of indictment or something pending because there was no way to do that?

Ms. WRIGHT. Correct. Those procedures are all in confidence.

Mr. CHERTOFF. So what did you do next to find out what was going on?

Ms. WRIGHT. Nothing. There wasn't anything I could do.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Did it concern you?

Ms. WRIGHT. Well, I think I actually just thought it was a rumor. I tried to guess whether we had any friends that might be in criminal trouble, and I struck out there.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Did you try to guess yourself, or did you enlist someone else in trying to guess? Did you enlist Mrs. Clinton in trying to guess?

Ms. WRIGHT. I don't think so.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Did you and Mrs. Clinton discuss whether there was anybody you both knew, any mutual friend involved in the savings and loan business, who might be the subject of this investigation?

Ms. WRIGHT. I might have. I don't recall doing it. It wasn't particularly notable if I did.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Isn't it a fact that you actually went scrambling around to try to find out about this?

Ms. WRIGHT. On my scale of scramble? No, sir.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Let's go back to that deposition that Mr. Giuffra took on January 26th, page 156. Got it?

Ms. WRIGHT. Yes, sir. I do.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Page 156:

Question: When did you learn of this investigation, RTC investigation?

Answer: Well, the first time I heard about it was in the fall of 1992, and at that point I regarded it—there was no way to verify it. So, I didn't know whether it was true or not. I now know it was.

But in about September or October of 1992, some RTC official at a cocktail party in Kansas City told somebody who supported Bill Clinton from California who was visiting in town that they had just sent a criminal referral up to the prosecutor in Little Rock. And that is all I was given over the phone. I went scrambling trying to find out what on earth they were talking about.

Did you give those answers in response to the question in the deposition?

Ms. WRIGHT. Yes, I trust that this is correct.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Do you want to change your answer now?

Ms. WRIGHT. No, sir.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You said that's correct?

Ms. WRIGHT. You may have had enough exposure to me now to know that I pull out funny words sometimes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. I beg your pardon?

Ms. WRIGHT. I pull out funny words sometimes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. I want to ask you again, did you discuss this with Mrs. Clinton? Did you take it seriously enough to sit down with Mrs. Clinton and try to put your heads together to figure out who this might refer to?

If you need some help, it's page 164:

Question: Other than this communication with the person from California about a criminal referral during the campaign, did you have any other communication with anyone about criminal referrals?

Answer: I remembered I asked Hillary if she was aware of any friend of theirs who was in the savings and loan business who might be under criminal investigation, and we couldn't think of anybody.

Did you have that conversation with Mrs. Clinton during the fall of 1992?

Ms. WRIGHT. Yes. I don't think I would have pulled that out of thin air.

Mr. CHERTOFF. So you recall having the conversation?

Ms. WRIGHT. Yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You two couldn't think of anybody that you knew in the savings and loan business, who was a friend of the Clintons, who might be under criminal investigation?

Ms. WRIGHT. That's correct.

Mr. CHERTOFF. The name McDougal did not come to mind?

Ms. WRIGHT. It didn't.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Of course at that time, you knew Mr. McDougal had already been tried once for some criminal activity relating to the savings and loan, right?

Ms. WRIGHT. That's correct. I didn't regard him as any longer a savings and loan official.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Had you heard that Mr. Clinton actually had helped Mr. McDougal with the opening statement that the lawyer gave in his trial back in 1989?

Ms. WRIGHT. I didn't know that until the very recent accounts of that.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Do you know it now?

Ms. WRIGHT. What I know of it is only from the recent accounts that have come out in press stories about that.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Did you learn during the campaign that Loretta Lynch and Jim Blair went down to talk to Mr. McDougal about his relationship with the Clintons and some of the issues that had arisen in the campaign?

Ms. WRIGHT. I am aware that they did, yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Did you learn that one of the things they heard from Mr. McDougal was that he had, at least at that moment, warm feelings for Mr. Clinton because in part he believed Mr. Clinton had been sympathetic and Mr. Clinton had helped him with the opening statement in the trial?

Ms. WRIGHT. Probably. I don't remember it.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Neither you nor Mrs. Clinton, at this point in time, when you're trying to think of any friend of yours who was in the savings and loan business who might be under criminal investigation, McDougal never came to mind?

Ms. WRIGHT. No, sir.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Even after all the publicity about Whitewater and Madison Guaranty that had been in the press earlier in 1992? Do you remember Mr. Gerth had written some articles about Mr. McDougal and Whitewater?

Ms. WRIGHT. I didn't have any more information than that. We had had a number of S&L problems in the State, far bigger and more serious than the Madison one as an S&L problem. I soon discarded this, and any conversation I had with Hillary didn't encompass very many seconds.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Let's keep this in mind, the issue of this referral involving, or the information about a possible referral involving a savings and loan executive, and ask whether you were the person who was kind of supervising campaign files during 1992? Did you have that as part of your job responsibilities, handling the files?

Ms. WRIGHT. Supervising campaign files?

Mr. CHERTOFF. Handling the files, the informational files that the campaign used for responding to issues being raised by the press?

Ms. WRIGHT. I had files regarding Governor Clinton's Arkansas record and then I collected information about allegations about him personally that came up. I guess, Mr. Chertoff, it's very difficult for me to articulate this. You can't imagine the number of rumors of dastardly deeds and undeeds involving the Clintons that were conveyed to me on a daily basis. And this was a nothing rumor.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Ms. Wright, earlier in 1992, national media attention had been focused for a period of time on Whitewater and McDougal. You're not telling us that by the fall of 1992, you had forgotten that Mr. McDougal ever had a position with the savings and loan?

Ms. WRIGHT. No, sir. But I also know that it had been quite awhile since he was in a savings and loan, that he'd been tried and acquitted.

Mr. CHERTOFF. This issue—

Ms. WRIGHT. Listen. I knew very clearly that the Clintons had not been involved in anything with Mr. McDougal that involved wrongdoing, and so it would never occur to me that there was some criminal rumor going on about it.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Then you didn't dismiss this rumor out of hand? You made inquiries?

Ms. WRIGHT. I did not dismiss any rumor out of hand, Mr. Chertoff.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You sat down with Mrs. Clinton to talk about it?

Ms. WRIGHT. I did.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Did Mr. Hubbell ever tell you that he was taking files out of the Rose Law Firm?

Ms. WRIGHT. No, sir.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Were you aware, from any other source, that Mr. Hubbell or Mr. Foster were taking files out of the Rose Law Firm so they could be used by the campaign?

The CHAIRMAN. We'll get back to that because the light is on, and we are going to go to Senator Sarbanes and Mr. Ben-Veniste.

Senator SARBANES. I yield to Mr. Ben-Veniste.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Ms. Wright, let me go into this matter of the cocktail party conversation because this is obviously very troubling. Do you recall at what point in time you received this information. Was it fairly close on to the actual election?

Ms. WRIGHT. Yes, sir.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Are we talking about the fall of 1992?

Ms. WRIGHT. Yes, sir.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Can you tell us again what it was that you recall having heard from this caller?

Ms. WRIGHT. That an acquaintance of this caller had been in Kansas City at a social function and a woman there told him that there was a consideration in Federal Court in Little Rock of an S&L official's criminal misdeeds that the Clintons were very close to. The Clintons were very close to this official.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. This was overheard by a third party, not the person who called you?

Ms. WRIGHT. That's correct.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Did you say that this cocktail party was being held in Kansas City?

Ms. WRIGHT. Yes, sir. That was what I was told.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. The speaker was a woman?

Ms. WRIGHT. Who conveyed the information.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Conveyed the information. At that time, did you have any idea that the RTC had assigned anyone from its Kansas City office to investigate Madison Guaranty Savings & Loan?

Ms. WRIGHT. None whatsoever.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Based on the testimony we have received, the principal investigator in the fall of 1992, was trying to pressure the FBI in Little Rock to open an investigation and to proceed with a Grand Jury on Madison Savings & Loan, and had identified Mr. and Mrs. Clinton as witnesses in connection with that investigation. But you didn't know anything about that?

Ms. WRIGHT. No, sir.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. But apparently someone in Kansas City at a cocktail party was talking about a highly confidential matter involving a Federal investigation and stated that Mr. Clinton would be implicated, by association, with an individual who was under investigation.

Ms. WRIGHT. Yes, sir.

Senator SARBANES. Now this was in the fall of 1992?

Ms. WRIGHT. That's correct, sir.

Senator SARBANES. How far ahead of the election?

Ms. WRIGHT. Very near the election. It was September or October, weeks before the election.

Senator SARBANES. September or October of 1992. This conversation was then reported to you by a friend, is that it?

Ms. WRIGHT. I didn't know the person.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. And if I understand your testimony at page 157, during deposition, I believe Mr. Giuffra asked you who was the person that contacted you. You said a friend of this person from California who was at a cocktail party with somebody from the RTC. Did that indicate that the individual who supposedly made this statement was somehow associated, so far as you were told, with the RTC?

Ms. WRIGHT. It should have. I didn't know from beans what the RTC was, so I didn't associate it with anything.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Obviously if in fact it was someone from the RTC, making this kind of a statement at a cocktail party, that would be most improper and very troubling. Let me go to the question of your attempts to find out whether there was any truth to this rumor.

When you say, in response to Mr. Chertoff's questions, that it did not occur to you that the individual who was being discussed was Jim McDougal, I think you said, first of all, Mr. McDougal had been out of banking for quite some time. Indeed, he had left the Madison Guaranty Savings & Loan in 1987. This conversation was in 1992, correct?

Ms. WRIGHT. Correct.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Mr. McDougal had already been prosecuted in Little Rock for alleged improper operation of Madison Savings & Loan and had been acquitted?

Ms. WRIGHT. Yes, sir.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. For those two reasons, it did not occur to you that someone would resuscitate an investigation against an individual who had long been out of banking and had been tried and acquitted for alleged misdeeds associated with running the bank?

Ms. WRIGHT. That's correct.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Let me take up a matter which has been discussed here over the last couple of days, and that is the second McDougal property which was a gas station which had then been renovated into office space.

We had testimony yesterday from our panel, including a former State building official, who testified that indeed the Revenue Department office, which was relocated on 16th and Main Street, also in the Quapaw Quarter of Little Rock and is still operating. The people have found that location to be convenient from the standpoint of serving the public, and convenient and acceptable from the standpoint of the individuals who have been moved there from their prior location? Is that consistent with your understanding of that office facility?

Ms. WRIGHT. Yes, sir. It was absolutely fabulous to be able to put a government service office in that area of town, and the gas station locale made it particularly convenient for people to visit. I don't remember linking it to McDougal or what; the main thing was providing the service to people in that area.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. The implication again was this was something that had been instigated by the Governor's office and crammed down the throats of the agencies involved, including the building services people and the agencies involved. Fortunately, we have a record on this. That is what this Committee's staff does when they are not doing these hearings; they are doing depositions and other inquiry.

With the Chairman's permission, I would like to read from the testimony of Morris Patterson. May I, Mr. Chairman?

The CHAIRMAN. Certainly.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Mr. Patterson gave his sworn deposition on February 16, 1996. Mr. Patterson was the leasing manager of the State Building Services Administration. And at page 35 of his testimony, he stated, in response:

Question: Now how did that lease come about?

Answer: Well, the Revenue Department told me they wanted to go into the space and they wanted to move from over on Wealth Street.

Question: Hold on for a second. The Revenue Department wanted to move from which street?

Answer: Wealth Street.

Question: How do you spell that?

Answer: W-e-a-l-t-h, from Wealth Street. It was east of there. And then they were being robbed frequently and they wanted out of the old building. They—they were broken into I don't know how many times. I would say more than two or maybe three or four times. And they wanted to move out of there, and I don't know how they found this old service station here that Madison owned at the time, but they wanted to move in it, and I was directed to do it.

Question: Who directed you to do it?

Answer: John Cox was the Administrator at that time, and, of course, since that time he has—he is no longer with us. He is dead at this time. And he wanted to go in it, so I proceeded to work up some plans on it, and we went in the—renovated the old service station.

Question: John Cox was Administrator for which agency?

Answer: Department of Finance and Administration.

Question: Now, he went to you directly about this, or went to your supervisor, Helen Herr or Helen Vowell?

Answer: He called me—he talked to me about it.

Question: Why did he talk to you directly instead of going through your supervisor?

Answer: Well, now, that I couldn't answer you there, sir, because—it would be guesswork on my part.

Question: Didn't you have to get approval from your supervisor?

Answer: Yes, she knew about it and she approved it or it never would have happened.

Question: Were there other buildings with available space at a similar price or a price that was less expensive than that at the time?

And then he responded to that.

In terms of all of the questions and the memorandum contemporaneously made on November 7, 1985, it is all papered and documented that the agency wanted to move out of its quarters. It located the 16th & Main Street location. Renovation was made, the plans were acceptable. The agency moved in. It was happy to do so, and it's still apparently happy to be there.

So another one of these allegations, when you look at the facts and you look at the testimony that has been developed by this Committee, there is a refutation of the notion that this was some political payback or favor, I guess pay forward would be more appropriate under the circumstances.

Now, I think at this time, Mr. Chairman, we can save some time by ceding our time back.

The CHAIRMAN. I thank Counsel.

Senator Shelby.

OPENING COMMENTS OF SENATOR RICHARD C. SHELBY

Senator SHELBY. Mr. Chairman, I have a few questions. I will try to move as fast as I can.

Ms. Wright, did you keep files from the 1992 campaign? Did you keep the campaign files from the 1992 campaign? Didn't you keep those files?

Ms. WRIGHT. I'm not exactly certain which files you're asking me about, Senator.

Senator SHELBY. I'm talking about the 1992 Presidential Campaign. Did you keep those files?

Ms. WRIGHT. I kept some that were in my office. There were probably 2,000 or 3,000 storage boxes of files from the campaign.

Senator SHELBY. Which ones did you keep?

Ms. WRIGHT. From my office?

Senator SHELBY. Yes.

Ms. WRIGHT. I kept, I took from my home, I mean, I took from my office about 10, 11, 12 boxes. You understand in my section, I had 2,000 boxes that I had compiled or pulled together containing Bill Clinton's entire public record, all of his campaigns. I had gone all over Little Rock getting these boxes out of storage, pulling them together. So I only took a few things which included personal items and correspondence, areas that I thought might come up again that the White House staff might need access to.

Senator SHELBY. Like what for example? You said things that the White House staff might need. In response to other things?

Ms. WRIGHT. Yes, sir. I tried to put a copy of all of the press questions and our answers to them in those boxes. I mean, I'm big on consistency and checking with what's been said before. There were a couple of people who said they might write books and so the information I gathered about that that came up during the campaign were in there.

Senator SHELBY. Ms. Wright, did you ever have the billing records or the Madison files?

Ms. WRIGHT. No, sir.

Senator SHELBY. Have you ever seen them?

Ms. WRIGHT. The billing records?

Senator SHELBY. Or the Madison files?

Ms. WRIGHT. I have seen the Rose Law Firm billing records.

Senator SHELBY. Where did you see those?

Ms. WRIGHT. When I did my deposition with Mr. Giuffra, he showed them to me.

Senator SHELBY. Did you do financial disclosures? Did you prepare those?

Ms. WRIGHT. For the campaign in 1992? I did not.

Senator SHELBY. You did not?

Ms. WRIGHT. No. My responsibility was defense of the Arkansas record and the Clintons' character.

Senator SHELBY. In January 1994, you traveled to Little Rock, did you not, to gather finance records from Mr. Clinton's Gubernatorial Campaign or Campaigns?

Ms. WRIGHT. That's correct.

Senator SHELBY. Who told you to go to Little Rock?

Ms. WRIGHT. No one did, sir.

Senator SHELBY. You did it on your own?

Ms. WRIGHT. I did it on my own.

Senator SHELBY. Why did you travel down there? Couldn't you have gotten someone to box them up, if they were boxed up, and send them to Washington? Or did you feel like you needed to go down there and go through them and see what was pertinent to whatever your inquiry might be?

Ms. WRIGHT. Well, there weren't people, quote, down there who might necessarily recognize the Gubernatorial Campaign. I mean, I was frustrated because now we had people working there who didn't know the difference between the Gubernatorial office and the Gubernatorial Campaign and the Presidential Campaign. And it drove me nuts because of course—

Senator SHELBY. You had been through all of them so you knew?

Ms. WRIGHT. I was continuing to get press questions about various contributors in the past or about campaign finance questions. The White House would call me up and ask me questions about them. And I finally said, I have got to have the records here where I am so I can look them up because I'm no good about guessing. I try to operate from facts. So I finally got fed up with not having the documentation, so I went to Little Rock and identified a number of boxes which they then shipped to me.

Senator SHELBY. Where were they stored in Little Rock?

Ms. WRIGHT. Whatever you call the legal entity that exists after a Presidential Campaign had leased space in a storage facility.

Senator SHELBY. Did you say in your deposition that you found Whitewater records at the storage facility?

Ms. WRIGHT. I found one small box, yes.

Senator SHELBY. Were those records indexed? Weren't they indexed?

Ms. WRIGHT. No.

Senator SHELBY. Are you sure? Are you positive?

Ms. WRIGHT. Well, I guess, I am not certain what you mean by indexed.

Senator SHELBY. An index showing what you could find in the records. An index would speak for itself, wouldn't it?

Ms. WRIGHT. I think so. They weren't. One of the things that was very disappointing to me is that of the 2,000 boxes from all of Governor Clinton's years as Governor, Attorney General, the stuff that we had compiled during the 1992 campaign, they just put Betsey Wright on all of them. That was the name of them. So I didn't regard that as a very helpful index.

Senator SHELBY. Let me ask you this. Were the boxes indexed as opposed to the files being indexed?

Ms. WRIGHT. No, sir.

Senator SHELBY. The boxes were not indexed?

Ms. WRIGHT. No, sir.

Senator SHELBY. You're saying the files weren't indexed either?

Ms. WRIGHT. There were some file folders inside boxes that had names on the file folder, yes, but there wasn't a directory within a box. No, sir, these things were just sort of cavalierly thrown in. And, you know, I would identify numbers of boxes, have them bring them to me in a room, open them, quickly go through, see if they were campaign finance records. Most of these were the large banker's boxes. There was one small cardboard box. When I opened it up, it did have Whitewater Development Corporation bank statements or receipts or something in it, yes.

Senator SHELBY. You looked at the documents, in other words?

Ms. WRIGHT. I didn't.

Senator SHELBY. You didn't look at them at all?

Ms. WRIGHT. I didn't take anything out and look at it. I saw that it was Whitewater Development. I knew that things were being given to the Justice Department under subpoena at that time about Whitewater, and that clearly this would be responsive.

Senator SHELBY. So you didn't look at the contents of the documents at all?

Ms. WRIGHT. I could visibly see that they were some kind of financial records, yes, sir.

Senator SHELBY. But as far as searching through them?

Ms. WRIGHT. No, sir, I didn't.

Senator SHELBY. For content you didn't do that?

Ms. WRIGHT. No, sir. Which is consistent with my not really wanting to know the details of all this.

Senator SHELBY. But you did know that there were Whitewater documents before your eyes, didn't you?

Ms. WRIGHT. Yes, it said Whitewater Development on it.

Senator SHELBY. Did you talk to Mr. Bruce Lindsey about what you had found?

Ms. WRIGHT. I did. I called to tell him.

Senator SHELBY. From Little Rock?

Ms. WRIGHT. Yes, sir.

Senator SHELBY. What was his response when you called him from Little Rock to tell him that you had found Whitewater documents? What did he tell you?

Ms. WRIGHT. I don't know what your experience with Bruce Lindsey is. My experience has been that it's been very difficult to get him to say stuff back. I feel like I have one-way conversations with him.

Senator SHELBY. Well, it wasn't completely one way. Did he say hello or anything when you called him?

Ms. WRIGHT. He does, but I don't think that that would count as a response. To my telling him, it basically was, oh, that's interesting. I need to get them to David Kendall, the Clintons' attorney.

Senator SHELBY. Did he say that to you?

Ms. WRIGHT. I said that.

Senator SHELBY. You said I need to get these Whitewater records to David Kendall the attorney of record for the Clintons, right?

Ms. WRIGHT. Yes.

Senator SHELBY. What did Bruce Lindsey say about that?

Ms. WRIGHT. I think I told him that I had learned that Mr. Kendall was on his way.

Senator SHELBY. No, let's go back. What did Mr. Lindsey say in response to your statement, I need to get these Whitewater records to David Kendall? Did Mr. Lindsey say something? Did he say nothing? Did he sigh?

Ms. WRIGHT. The rest of my sentence to Mr. Lindsey was, I have now learned that Mr. Kendall is on his way here for Virginia's funeral, and so I intend to give them to him when he arrives. He said, fine, good idea.

Senator SHELBY. Did Bruce Lindsey, did you all disconnect your telephone then? Was there any other conversation about this?

Ms. WRIGHT. No, sir.

Senator SHELBY. How many records are you talking about you were going to give to Mr. Kendall dealing with Whitewater?

Ms. WRIGHT. It was a small box, as I recall, a brown cardboard box about this big.

Senator SHELBY. A file box?

Ms. WRIGHT. No, it wasn't a file box. It was like you could get a package from a catalogue order in of a small item because I did ultimately carry it back in my arm on the airplane so it wasn't large.

Senator SHELBY. How many days or hours did you spend at the storage facility looking through these records?

Ms. WRIGHT. Actually, longer than I spent in deposition with this Committee.

Senator SHELBY. How long, in your best judgment?

Ms. WRIGHT. I spent like 2½ to 3 days going through boxes.

Senator SHELBY. What did Mr. Kendall say to you when you gave him the documents? You said you were going to give them to him. Did you, in fact, give the Whitewater documents to Mr. Kendall?

Ms. WRIGHT. Eventually I did, yes.

Senator SHELBY. Did you do it when he came to Little Rock?

Ms. WRIGHT. No, sir.

Senator SHELBY. Did you take the documents back to Washington yourself?

Ms. WRIGHT. Yes, sir.

Senator SHELBY. How long was it before you gave them to Mr. Kendall?

Ms. WRIGHT. One day.

Senator SHELBY. What did he say, in response, to the records when you gave them to him? Did he do like Mr. Lindsey and didn't say anything?

Ms. WRIGHT. I don't recall a conversation. I think actually a courier came from his firm to get them from me.

Senator SHELBY. You didn't give them to him yourself, did you?

Ms. WRIGHT. No, sir, I didn't.

Senator SHELBY. That's all I have, Mr. Chairman.

The CHAIRMAN. I want to ask you something if I might.

Ms. WRIGHT. Senator Shelby, I do want to clarify about there being an index. There was an index with whatever identification had been applied to each box. It was not detailed or helpful.

Senator SHELBY. But an index basically is an indicator of what's in a file or a box, is it not?

Ms. WRIGHT. Yes, sir.

Senator SHELBY. That's why we do an index.

Ms. WRIGHT. Yes, sir. And my disappointment was——

Senator SHELBY. My question earlier was whether there was an index. In other words, the boxes were indexed that was my understanding.

Ms. WRIGHT. There are two kinds of indexes, one would be the contents of a box and one would be of all of the boxes.

Senator SHELBY. That's right.

Ms. WRIGHT. The disappointment I had in the progress or lack thereof of indexing those boxes at that time was that just about everything had my name on it as the identifier and it might have had, it then did have a box number, but not any clue as to content.

Senator SHELBY. OK. Go ahead, Mr. Chairman.

The CHAIRMAN. I am going to let others explore the index question. I don't know where we go from there. Obviously you felt a sense of frustration because all these boxes had your name on them, as opposed to having better classifications. Is that what you're saying?

Ms. WRIGHT. Absolutely.

The CHAIRMAN. So instead of it saying, "Campaign 1980 Gubernatorial Campaign 1982," for example, it did not have that? Governor's actions with respect to legislature? This year, that year, the following year?

Ms. WRIGHT. That's correct, they did not.

The CHAIRMAN. I have to tell you I don't know how relevant this is or where we go from here. There's a cocktail party someplace in Kansas City and some RTC official is overheard speaking to someone regarding an RTC criminal referral in which the names of the Clintons come up in conjunction with this possible referral. That conversation is then reported by someone who overhears these two people to someone in California. Do I have the sequence right?

Ms. WRIGHT. I think that's correct, yes, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. Then that person in California reaches out to you to relay that situation. The fact that they heard this situation taking place at a cocktail party in California. Is that correct?

Ms. WRIGHT. That's correct.

The CHAIRMAN. In Kansas City, excuse me. Let me ask again, you don't know the person who called you to relay that information to you?

Ms. WRIGHT. No, sir, I don't.

The CHAIRMAN. Do you recall if that person identified himself or herself?

Ms. WRIGHT. I believe they did. I just don't recall that it was an anonymous call.

The CHAIRMAN. You know the reason and you then follow that up. You are sufficiently concerned so you contacted an attorney and fill in the story or the details of what was revealed to you. You thought that the story or the details of what was revealed to you was compelling enough.

We all get crank calls once in a while. You did follow through on this? You didn't treat it as a crank, but as something that should be pursued. You called an attorney who handles criminal matters by the name of Wilson in Little Rock, is that right?

Ms. WRIGHT. Yes, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. Let me give you a certain comfort level. I'm not suggesting that there was anything improper or unethical, et cetera. You said, now look, this is what I heard. Is there anyway to ascertain the truth or falsity of something like this going on in which they might drag in Bill and Hillary. After all, they are your principals. You are working for them, and that would be perfectly logical.

He indicates to you that there is no way without interfering for you to do this properly without perhaps creating something that would be more than it is. Is that right?

Ms. WRIGHT. He just told me that there wasn't. I asked if there was a way to know that, and he said no, there wasn't. I turned to him for information.

The CHAIRMAN. All right. Now, I would think that if you were to pursue this to the point that you did, you would really know that person who called you. You would have had a name because you would follow up with a call down to Little Rock to a respected counsel to ask if there is any way we can get a line on this.

You may not have said it in exactly that fashion, but you would seek to get information to verify or to confirm. You would have done that on the basis of someone, and you just didn't pick it up, and that person knew enough to call you.

I dare say, I have been active in the body politic going back to the 1992 campaign. I must confess my ignorance. I wouldn't have known enough to call you. Who do you reach? What Republican operative do you call? I don't mean that in a pejorative sense. Do you call a campaign manager or deputy campaign manager? That's why I think, remember this is an action that you then pursued. You put enough credence in this story. I believe that the conversation probably did take place in Kansas City and somebody overheard it and called someone in California.

What I am having trouble with is why you wouldn't know who the person was that called you and identified an occasion with such specificity that you saw fit to follow through. That's what leaves me a little bit puzzled.

Ms. WRIGHT. If I might respond, Senator, you of course wouldn't have been inclined to call our campaign with a warning about some new rumors.

The CHAIRMAN. That is fair.

Ms. WRIGHT. Therefore, it wouldn't have been of interest to you who to call. And I certainly would hope I wasn't famous and in a lot of cases I was notorious but I certainly had a higher visibility in terms of newspaper stories, magazine stories, TV coverage than I had wished because of the damage control operation I had set up.

But if I could attempt to give you some perspective, if it seems to you that I did a great deal of follow up on this tip and lead, I got dozens of these kinds of calls a day, dozens. I followed every one. I did a very good job for Bill Clinton in that campaign. And part of the reason is that I didn't assume anything and I didn't ignore anything, and fortunately most of the stuff came to naught.

But for the rest of the stuff, because I followed it up, I was able to find what piece of lint was used to weave the whole cloth. This was a nothing issue.

I think in the deposition I was asked when I first heard about the RTC referral. It is in retrospect that it is all clear to me now what is happening. At that time, I didn't. I called to find out whether I could know more. I called to see if anybody knew of an S&L official in serious criminal scrutiny, and that was essentially all I did. I didn't know anything else I could do. And I still had all these other dozens of calls coming in every day. I mean, I wish I could meet all those people. I really do.

The CHAIRMAN. All right.

Senator SHELBY. Mr. Chairman.

The CHAIRMAN. Senator Shelby, I understand. We are going to go back. We really do want to move it. I think we have been accomplishing that.

Yes, Senator.

Senator SHELBY. I have a couple of questions, if I could.

The CHAIRMAN. Let me go to the other side, then we'll come right to you.

Senator Sarbanes.

Senator SARBANES. Ms. Wright, first of all, I think it's clear the improper action was the RTC employee. Apparently she was talking out of school, so to speak, and violating all the requirements of confidence at this cocktail party. But when you got the call, how soon after the cocktail party discussion was it? Did they tell you this was something that had just occurred?

Ms. WRIGHT. I seem to recall that it was within 3 or 4 days.

Senator SARBANES. You went to Mr. Wilson to find out if there was some way to find out whether this could be checked out in some public way, is that correct?

Ms. WRIGHT. Correct.

Senator SARBANES. He told you that wasn't the case?

Ms. WRIGHT. That's correct.

Senator SARBANES. Mr. Ben-Veniste.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. There is no mystery about why you might have been identified as a person to be called by someone who had received that kind of information. As you indicated, you were a person whose name was well known in the press at that point. You were involved in the campaign and, indeed, played the role as, I believe every major campaign has now, somebody who does damage control.

An allegation is made against a candidate in a Gubernatorial or Senatorial or Presidential race and there is a team of people who are working in the campaign who try to get the bottom of it, get the facts out and get it dealt with. You were performing that function. It was a well known fact that you, Betsey Wright, were doing that; correct?

Ms. WRIGHT. That's correct.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. And once you had put in motion what you felt was an adequate way to try to check this out, you went onto the next project as the day for the election got closer and closer. Right?

Ms. WRIGHT. That is correct.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. My sense, based on your testimony and from the other facts we have developed before this Committee, is that by the time this matter was prepared and sent over to the U.S. Attorney's Office in Little Rock, it was fairly close to the election. So I imagine this occurred fairly hard by the election date. Is that consistent with your recollection?

Ms. WRIGHT. Yes, sir, it is.

Senator SARBANES. We yield back our time.

The CHAIRMAN. Senator Shelby.

Senator SHELBY. Ms. Wright, you were talking about taking a piece of lint, I believe was your metaphor, and weaving it into the whole cloth. We are trying to get at the whole bolt of cloth ourselves. What's troubling to me is why your name would be on the Whitewater files? In other words, who sent the Whitewater files to storage with your name on it? Did you do this?

Ms. WRIGHT. No, sir.

Senator SHELBY. You were the possessor, if we could use the phrase, of the files? In other words, it had your name all over the files, Betsey Wright. Is that right? Or did it have Clinton campaign written all over those boxes of files? In other words, how were they designated? You had 2,000 boxes. What did they say on the boxes? They weren't blank, were they?

Ms. WRIGHT. No. I think that one might have been.

Senator SHELBY. There were 2,000 boxes?

Ms. WRIGHT. There were numbers.

Senator SHELBY. You had a number for the boxes, OK.

Ms. WRIGHT. Yes, sir.

Senator SHELBY. If you had a number, then you have to have an index to tie to the number, would you not, a topical index? Whitewater, Madison, political consultants' names, you know, and so forth. In other words, just having box 1, 2, 3, 4, through 1,000 wouldn't mean anything to you unless you had some inkling of what might be in the box that you were looking for?

Ms. WRIGHT. That is correct, sir. You understand what my frustration was.

Senator SHELBY. Sure.

Ms. WRIGHT. Because they would say Betsey Wright 13, Betsey Wright 27. So I had to go through quickly a whole bunch of file boxes to see if—

Senator SHELBY. Did you go through 2,000 boxes?

Ms. WRIGHT. No, sir. Because among those were some that I had had in storage of the Governor's papers.

Senator SHELBY. You knew what those boxes were?

Ms. WRIGHT. And they were better indexed. So I was able to eliminate them, once I could see them. Betsey Wright 47 happened to have been have the mark from this other index I had from the Governor's office, so I wouldn't have to go through it.

Senator SHELBY. How did you find the boxes that had the Whitewater files without an index? You were looking for the Whitewater files?

Ms. WRIGHT. No, sir. I was looking for finance records.

Senator SHELBY. Finance records. What type of finance records?

Ms. WRIGHT. The political finance records of the Clinton years.

Senator SHELBY. That was the reason you went to Little Rock?

Ms. WRIGHT. That's correct, sir.

Senator SHELBY. You didn't go to Little Rock to look for the Whitewater files?

Ms. WRIGHT. No, sir.

Senator SHELBY. Why did they associate, whoever they is, put Betsey Wright's name on all these files? Why would they—you can identify they better for the Committee than I could—why would they put Betsey Wright's name on the Whitewater files that were in storage?

Ms. WRIGHT. I don't know, sir.

Senator SHELBY. Who is responsible for this?

Ms. WRIGHT. I don't know.

Senator SHELBY. You don't have any idea who was the keeper of these files?

Ms. WRIGHT. No, sir. I wasn't a part of closing down the campaign headquarters and how they collected up all the boxes into storage, I don't know that.

Senator SHELBY. Could that have been Mr. Hubbell?

Ms. WRIGHT. No, sir, I don't think Mr. Hubbell would do that kind of work.

Senator SHELBY. He didn't have anything to do with organizing the files and so forth?

Ms. WRIGHT. My point is they weren't organized.

Senator SHELBY. Somebody organized something and put the Whitewater files in these boxes. Who, that's what we are trying to get?

Ms. WRIGHT. I don't know, I wasn't responsible for that.

Senator SHELBY. You have no judgment on who would put the Whitewater files in a box that you later came upon in storage?

Ms. WRIGHT. No, sir.

Senator SHELBY. Would it have been someone with the Clinton Gubernatorial Campaign? Would it have been someone in the Presidential Campaign?

Ms. WRIGHT. It had to have been Presidential because I had all the stuff in the Presidential Campaign. Senator Shelby, it is possible that that box was among papers that had been brought to the campaign headquarters prior to my arrival when there were some Whitewater documents there. And it had just become stored with all of my other boxes that I added to, to stuff. But by and large, Whitewater documents were not at the campaign during the time I was. So I assume it was a leftover from that that had gone astray and it could have been stored in the same secure rooms that I had fixed for all of the 2,000 boxes. So it could have been, that's why my name was on it.

If it was about Arkansas, I became, for a lot of people who were not from Arkansas, Arkansas? Betsey Wright's in charge of that. It didn't quite go to my head.

Senator SHELBY. Was this designation with your name on it the files Betsey Wright, was that typed or was it written out?

Ms. WRIGHT. There was nothing as neat and orderly as typing these things.

Senator SHELBY. No, let me go back again. Let me ask you the question. You had a box that said Betsey Wright on it, and it had a number on it. As you have indicated, a number on the box, say number 82, did it have on top of the box on the outside Betsey Wright? In other words, it had your name on it, did it not? It's what you have indicated here. If so, if it had your name on it, was it on a label or something that was typed, printed, or written?

Ms. WRIGHT. There was no consistency and there was no typed label and it probably was a magic marker on the side of the box and it didn't have my whole name, it had B.W.

Senator SHELBY. B.W.?

Ms. WRIGHT. Yes, sir.

Senator SHELBY. Did you recognize the handwriting?

Ms. WRIGHT. No, sir.

Senator SHELBY. Were most of the boxes done by the same hand, or do you know?

Ms. WRIGHT. I don't know.

Senator SHELBY. Thank you.

The CHAIRMAN. Mr. Chertoff, we are down to about 5 minutes on a vote that is taking place right now. I'm going to suggest that we take a break, go down and vote. At the conclusion of the vote, we'll try and come right back. We'll take a 10 minute break and maybe another 5 minutes to get back.

[Recess.]

The CHAIRMAN. Mr. Ben-Veniste has several questions. Then we will come back to Mr. Chertoff.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Actually, only a couple of questions on this issue of the records that were located and what you did with them. As I understand it, you had expected that someone would catalogue these records or index them. It was not your function to perform this task at the end of the campaign.

When you got down to the warehouse in which they were stored, you found that, disappointingly, the cataloguing simply had your name on a large number of boxes without any further descriptive material, and that wasn't particularly helpful?

Ms. WRIGHT. Right.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. When you found the documents that contained financial records that you have described were associated with Whitewater, that investment, you advised Mr. Lindsey that you intended to turn them over to David Kendall who was then representing the President in his personal capacity, correct?

Ms. WRIGHT. That's correct.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Mr. Lindsey didn't tell you to do something else, I take it? Mr. Lindsey listened to your proposal and did not disagree with it?

Ms. WRIGHT. That's correct.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. You indicated that you had intended to give the records to Mr. Kendall while he was to visit Arkansas?

Ms. WRIGHT. Yes, sir.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Apparently that did not happen?

Ms. WRIGHT. That's correct.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Why didn't you turn those records over at that time, do you recall?

Ms. WRIGHT. He didn't want to accept them from me there, and told me just to take them back to DC.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. So then they were transported by you to Washington, DC. It was a finite, if I understand it, small number of documents?

Ms. WRIGHT. Yes, sir.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. They fit in a small box. You brought them to Washington, and upon your arrival, you advised Mr. Kendall that they were available, and he sent a messenger over to receive them from you?

Ms. WRIGHT. That's correct.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. There was never any question about whether he would receive them or about what the contents were or any such questions from Mr. Kendall I take it?

Ms. WRIGHT. No, sir.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. You said you wanted to give him the records and he was there to accept them. The logistics of that you worked out when you got back to Washington?

Ms. WRIGHT. That's correct.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. I have nothing further.

The CHAIRMAN. Mr. Chertoff.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Ms. Wright, I just want to make sure I have an understanding of the sequence of events involving your handling of the issue of Whitewater/Madison as it erupted from time to time. You came into the campaign in 1992, and you said one of your responsibilities was to deal with the character issue, right?

Ms. WRIGHT. Yes, sir.

Mr. CHERTOFF. I take it, when you came in, you prepared yourself by looking at what had been written, what was out there in the media as to various character questions that had been raised. Is that right?

Ms. WRIGHT. For years.

Mr. CHERTOFF. So you certainly had to be aware of the really voluminous amount of attention paid by The New York Times and The Washington Post and other national papers to the issues of Whitewater, Madison, McDougal, and the work of the Rose Law Firm in the spring of 1992, right?

Ms. WRIGHT. Absolutely.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You certainly were aware, as of the time you came in, that the issue of McDougal, Madison, Whitewater, and the Rose Law Firm was on the front burner on the character issue, is that right?

Ms. WRIGHT. I don't know on the character issue it was on a mini-burner at that point, awaiting a forensic accounting report.

Mr. CHERTOFF. It's against that background that you then get word in the fall of 1992, about a possible criminal referral from the RTC involving a savings and loan, someone who was a savings and loan operator in Arkansas, right? You got that news?

Ms. WRIGHT. It's not in that background, sir. In the campaign, the distance between March and September or October is enormous, several life times.

Mr. CHERTOFF. So your testimony to us is that, notwithstanding the tremendous amount of attention paid to this story by the national media in the spring of 1992, including The New York Times, The Washington Post, and the L.A. Times, that when you got word in September-October of 1992, that there's some story or rumor about a potential referral involving a savings and loan operator in Arkansas, you don't make the connection between McDougal and that referral. That's your testimony?

Ms. WRIGHT. That's correct.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You then sit down with Mrs. Clinton. If the record is clear, Mrs. Clinton certainly had conversations during the spring with people like Mr. Hubbell and Mr. Foster about the Rose Law Firm and its representation of Madison and Whitewater and McDougal. She can't figure out that there's any connection or any potential connection between this referral and McDougal, right?

Ms. WRIGHT. Mr. Chertoff, I didn't sit down with her. It was a passing conversation on the phone or something.

Mr. CHERTOFF. While in the passing conversation on the phone, she didn't even say to you, maybe it's McDougal, but you know that he was acquitted so do you think it's McDougal or not. McDougal's name never came up in the conversation between you and Mrs. Clinton?

Ms. WRIGHT. The way I absorbed the information it sounded like some new thing, and as I told you, I no longer even thought of Mr. McDougal as a savings and loan official.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Mrs. Clinton didn't think about it either, at least in her conversations with you, is that your testimony?

Ms. WRIGHT. Clearly, Mr. Chertoff, Mrs. Clinton only heard what I articulated and I don't recall the words, but I know that to me it was like there was something new.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Your character files, did they contain material from the Rose Law Firm?

Ms. WRIGHT. Character files?

Mr. CHERTOFF. The files you had that dealt with the character issue, the Arkansas record. Your set of files that you maintained as Deputy Campaign Manager in 1992? Did they contain information from the Rose Law Firm?

Ms. WRIGHT. On various questions that I had to prepare answers for, I would obtain information from the Rose Law Firm and it was in the files in my office. I think before the last time break, you had made reference to files from the Rose Law Firm coming for campaign use. That never occurred during the time that I was there.

Mr. CHERTOFF. The information you received from the firm you got from either Hubbell or Foster, right?

Ms. WRIGHT. Or if it was on a business matter, I think there were a couple of items I called Ms. Huber on for information or maybe Hillary's secretary.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Speaking of Ms. Huber, did you at any time during the campaign see or become aware of the existence of Rose Law Firm billing records?

Ms. WRIGHT. I did not, sir.

Mr. CHERTOFF. When you finished with the campaign—

Senator SARBANES. Are those the Rose Law Firm billing records?

Mr. CHERTOFF. For the record, these are the records discovered or at least turned over to us. These are copies of the records that were turned over in January of this year.

Senator SARBANES. They seem to be about the same size they were before.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Pretty recognizable.

Mr. COHEN. So the record's clear and so that we are clear, those are the documents the witness was shown?

Mr. CHERTOFF. Yes, these are the documents the witness was shown in the deposition.

Senator SARBANES. I think she said earlier that this was the first time she had ever seen them.

Mr. CHERTOFF. I think that's right. I just want to be real clear about that. After the campaign was over, after the election, you took your set of files and gave them to Mr. Hubbell. Is that correct?

Ms. WRIGHT. My set of files?

Mr. CHERTOFF. The files you had?

Ms. WRIGHT. They were selected files. The campaign viewed the 2,000 boxes as my files.

Mr. CHERTOFF. I want to know what you viewed as your files?

Ms. WRIGHT. Two thousand boxes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. The files you maintained that you were personally involved in maintaining involving questions about the Arkansas record and character?

Ms. WRIGHT. No, sir. The boxes that I took from the campaign were selected files. I didn't take all of my files. That's 2,000 boxes. I took selected files on issues that were of personal nature that I didn't think belonged mixed up in some warehouse, that I thought the Clintons should have the prerogative to deal with, things that I thought the White House would need to comment on in the future. Now what was your question?

Mr. CHERTOFF. You gave those files to Hubbell?

Ms. WRIGHT. I did.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Everything except the one file you kept?

Ms. WRIGHT. That's correct.

Mr. CHERTOFF. The file you kept had to do with a case that you were involved in personally?

Ms. WRIGHT. That's correct.

Mr. CHERTOFF. It did not have to do with the Rose Law Firm?

Ms. WRIGHT. That's correct.

Mr. CHERTOFF. The next time you dealt with files that were connected with the campaign or with Whitewater was on this trip down to Little Rock in 1994, right?

Ms. WRIGHT. No, sir. I believe that my files were moved from Mr. Hubbell to Mr. Kendall before I went to Little Rock, and I had been over to Mr. Kendall's office then.

Mr. CHERTOFF. So Kendall asked you to come over in the fall of 1993 to look at the files in his office?

Ms. WRIGHT. He didn't necessarily ask me to come look at them, but a lot of the things I kept getting questions about were in those files, so I would go look them up. And at one point, I pulled White-water-related things, questions and answers that we had compiled and stuff, for him.

Mr. CHERTOFF. So then these files you continued to work with in 1993 but as of the time they were in Kendall's possession, you used them in Kendall's office, is that right?

Ms. WRIGHT. That's correct.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Did you contact Bruce Lindsey about these issues during the fall of 1993? Did you call him up to discuss some of the issues contained in these files? Was he the person in the White House with whom you dealt on this issue in the fall of 1993?

Ms. WRIGHT. On which issue?

Mr. CHERTOFF. Anything to do with the files you were looking at?

Ms. WRIGHT. Oh no, sir. The files were much broader than that. But I did, you know, Bruce was, I think he had at that time responsibility for some of the damage control issues in the White House, so I might have had a number of conversations with him.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You didn't indicate to him that you were going to go down to Little Rock in 1994, to look at records, campaign records in a storage facility?

Ms. WRIGHT. I told Bruce Lindsey I was going to go get campaign records, that I was tired of not having them here.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You told him you were going to go down in order to get the records and bring them back?

Ms. WRIGHT. That's correct.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You also indicated you had a conversation—actually, before I get to that, you made reference to an index of some value, whether it was good or bad, at the storage facility. Whatever happened to that index?

Ms. WRIGHT. I don't know who keeps the index. Whoever the custodian of all of those records is.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You didn't take it with you?

Ms. WRIGHT. No, sir.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You also said you had a conversation with Mr. Clinton about David Hale at some point in 1993?

Ms. WRIGHT. I don't remember the date but, yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Do you remember the year?

Ms. WRIGHT. No, sir, I don't. But I did have a conversation with Mr. Clinton as the information that he was making some kind of allegations about the President were surfacing.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Was it just you and Mr. Clinton on the phone or was there someone else?

Ms. WRIGHT. I think Hillary was in on that conversation.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Mr. and Mrs. Clinton were on the phone. How did that call come about? Did they reach out for you?

Ms. WRIGHT. Yes, sir.

Mr. CHERTOFF. How long was the call?

Ms. WRIGHT. Half hour or so.

Mr. CHERTOFF. A half hour, maybe 40 minutes?

Ms. WRIGHT. Thirty, 40 minutes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. The discussion was about Mr. Clinton asking you what you knew about Mr. Hale?

Ms. WRIGHT. No. The discussion was about trying to figure out what he was talking about in the allegations about a loan.

Mr. CHERTOFF. As I recall, the allegations, as they were reported in the papers at the time, were pretty straightforward. He alleged that he had three meetings with the President, that they had been in connection with the President urging him——

Senator SARBANES. Are you kidding? Three meetings?

Mr. CHERTOFF. He had three encounters with the President?

Ms. WRIGHT. None of that was public yet, sir.

Mr. CHERTOFF. What were the allegations that you were dealing with? Wait a second. Let me withdraw the question.

Are you saying that at the time you had the conversation with the President and Mrs. Clinton about Mr. Hale's allegations, they had not yet become public?

Ms. WRIGHT. No. All of that kind of stuff had not become public.

Mr. CHERTOFF. When you say all of that kind of stuff, you mean the detail of the numbers?

Ms. WRIGHT. We didn't have information as to exactly what he was alleging, how many times he said he talked to Bill Clinton. It had something to do with pressure on a loan and we were trying to figure out what he was talking about.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You couldn't figure out what the loan was or what he was talking about. Is that your recollection?

Ms. WRIGHT. That's correct, Mr. Chertoff, because he made it up.

Mr. CHERTOFF. I want to figure out what occupied 30 to 40 minutes in this telephone call. If, as you recall it, what happened was that——

The CHAIRMAN. Wait a minute. Let's do this again. Would you attempt to reconstruct the telephone conversation you had with the President and Mrs. Clinton, Ms. Wright? They reached out to you?

Ms. WRIGHT. Yes, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. Is that correct?

Ms. WRIGHT. Yes, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. I'm just trying to get——

Ms. WRIGHT. I understand. No, I received a call from them.

The CHAIRMAN. Where were you at the time?

Ms. WRIGHT. I was at my house and I believe they were at Camp David, so I believe it was on a weekend.

The CHAIRMAN. Did anyone tell you that they were going to call or did they just reach out to you over the weekend?

Ms. WRIGHT. No. When I picked up the phone was the first time.

The CHAIRMAN. In other words, no assistant or aide said, Betsey, would you stay around because the President wants to call. He and Mrs. Clinton are very busy, and you are coming and going.

So to the best of your recollection, there was no scheduled call. It was a weekend? You think they were at Camp David. The phone rings. Go ahead, you tell us what happened.

Ms. WRIGHT. I remember going through on that trying to do a laundry list, checkoff list of government programs that we had that would have ever encouraged or involved an SBA-related loan or private sector projects that we were encouraging. I walked through a notion of who on staff might have ever worked with Mr. Hale because it seemed like this would probably have something to do with economic development. I mean, we came up short with nothing.

During the course of the conversation, the entire conversation wasn't on this, you know. I always want an update on Chelsea and an update on various things, so part of it was about, it was a visit.

The CHAIRMAN. You are saying to us that you went through a compilation of possible areas where the SBA and Mr. Hale may have come into contact with the administration directly or indirectly or even in the private sector where there might be some kind of—

Ms. WRIGHT. Where they might have sought a partnership with him or something.

The CHAIRMAN. Some kind of relationship in which he could make some allegations.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Now in this conversation, as you are trying to ruminate about what this might be related to, did anybody come up with McDougal and say, geez, I wonder if this guy had any connection with McDougal?

Ms. WRIGHT. No, sir.

Mr. CHERTOFF. The light didn't go on with respect to McDougal in this conversation either?

Ms. WRIGHT. No, sir. There's no reason that it would have.

The CHAIRMAN. The red light has just come on now. In fairness to our colleagues, I want to know because they have been yielding back time so we can continue to move it, if at this time they would like to undertake any examination.

Senator SARBANES. I think we will take a few minutes. Hopefully we won't use the whole time.

The CHAIRMAN. Senator Sarbanes.

Senator SARBANES. I yield to Mr. Ben-Veniste.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. There was no obvious connection between Mr. McDougal and Mr. Hale in your mind viz-à-viz President Clinton or then-Governor Clinton?

Ms. WRIGHT. Not at all.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. You were trying to think whether Mr. Hale had some project or some kind of dealings with the State of Arkansas and something that would have required some official action in some way or another?

Ms. WRIGHT. We were just trying to think of any program that we might have sought to involve him in or that he might have approached to be involved in. We couldn't think, I mean we really didn't ever deal with him.

I have to say that if Mr. Chertoff remembers that in some early stage in some early report there was an indication by Mr. Hale that he had three meetings, Mr. Chertoff has got a recollection that differs from mine. Mr. Hale has told a whole bunch of different stories to different people at different times. And I think there's a pretty clear record of how unclear those allegations have been as time has gone by, and as the motivation may have waxed or waned for Mr. Hale to embellish. But that is a matter which presumably we'll take up when we see Mr. Hale here.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. In terms of your direct knowledge of Mr. Hale, you had no reason to believe, did you, that Mr. Hale had any business with Mr. Clinton?

Ms. WRIGHT. No. I was certain that he didn't have any personal business with Mr. Clinton.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Did you have any reason to believe that Mr. Clinton, in any way, shape or form, encouraged, coerced, cajoled, or otherwise asked Mr. Hale to do anything?

Ms. WRIGHT. No, sir. It never occurred to me then, and I don't believe it now.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Thank you.

Senator SARBANES. All right. We yield back our time.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Other than this discussion with the President and First Lady about David Hale, did you talk about David Hale with Bruce Lindsey?

Ms. WRIGHT. It's very likely that I did. I don't recall a specific conversation. Mr. Chertoff, after his allegations became more public, I hardly passed a stranger on the street without cursing about what a sleaze bag, exaggerating windbag David Hale was. So I doubt that anybody who crossed my path, my phone lines, or anything else was spared a diatribe from me about him.

Mr. CHERTOFF. So you became very active in beating the drum of this issue?

Ms. WRIGHT. No, sir, I didn't. I couldn't believe that a man who had so little credibility with us and in the State of Arkansas someone we never dealt with, that basically most of us tried to stay away from because he was kind of sleazy, would suddenly have national credibility. And I didn't understand it. Because I don't think that people from New York and other places are more gullible than people from Arkansas, but something happened.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Now let me turn to another individual whose name I think from time to time came up in your experience and for whom you may have beaten the drum. That is Daniel Lasater. Are you familiar with Mr. Lasater?

Ms. WRIGHT. I am, sir.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Mr. Lasater operated an investment company in Arkansas in the 1980's called Lasater & Company?

Ms. WRIGHT. That's correct.

Mr. CHERTOFF. He did business with the State of Arkansas?

Ms. WRIGHT. That's correct.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Was he a social friend of the Governor's?

Ms. WRIGHT. No, sir.

Mr. CHERTOFF. No?

Ms. WRIGHT. No, sir.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Did he give contributions to the Governor?

Ms. WRIGHT. Yes, sir.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Did he hold a fundraiser for the Governor?

Ms. WRIGHT. I believe he did, yes, sir.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Did he employ the Governor's brother?

Ms. WRIGHT. At one point he did. I think that might have been before I came to Arkansas. I don't remember the year.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Do you know, or did you learn whether he employed the Governor's brother at the Governor's request?

Ms. WRIGHT. That's, I have always heard that he did. I wouldn't be surprised.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Just to be clear, you always heard that Daniel Lasater employed Governor Clinton's brother at the request of Governor Clinton?

Ms. WRIGHT. I appreciate your asking for that clarification. In the recent years, swirling about Mr. Lasater, meaning in the 1992 campaign when he started coming back up again in news stories, that's when I recall for sure that Bill Clinton asked Dan Lasater if he might have a job for Roger. I don't know that for a fact. But I would be impressed if Mr. Clinton did that for Roger.

Mr. CHERTOFF. But you do know for a fact——

Ms. WRIGHT. Roger had worked for a brief period of time for Mr. Lasater. I think it didn't work out or something.

Mr. CHERTOFF. I was interested in the statement you made in connection with your observations about Mr. Hale. That you wanted to steer away from sleazy people in Arkansas. Was that again in your function as being a gatekeeper for the Governor? Was that one of your roles to kind of protect the Governor from sleazy people who might want to get close to him?

Ms. WRIGHT. It wasn't an official role. I guess it's a mission in my life to ostracize sleaze bags.

Mr. CHERTOFF. In terms of the fundraiser that Mr. Lasater held in October 1984, was about $50,000 raised?

Ms. WRIGHT. I don't remember, Mr. Chertoff.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Were you involved in that fundraiser?

Ms. WRIGHT. Other than in getting the money spent, no, sir, deposited, banked, recorded, reported, and spent, no, sir.

Mr. CHERTOFF. So you were the Campaign Manager for the 1984 campaign, right?

Ms. WRIGHT. Yes, sir.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You do remember Mr. Lasater holding a fundraiser on October 5th?

Ms. WRIGHT. I don't remember the date, but I do remember that he held a fundraiser.

Mr. CHERTOFF. In the latter part of 1984, before the election?

Ms. WRIGHT. Sounds right.

Mr. CHERTOFF. In early January of the next year, the Governor and the State police were discussing the possibility of a new communications system for the State Police. Is that correct?

Ms. WRIGHT. I am trying to pin the dates down. The discussion about the communications for the State Police happened simultaneously with the murder of one of our troopers in a blind area of the State where we just simply had no communications ability.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Those conversations progressed into 1985, right?

Ms. WRIGHT. They progressed until we got it underway, yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Would it help you to put a timeframe on this if I told you it was in April 1985, that the legislation was signed to authorize going forward with the system and funding it through the issue of State bonds? Does that help? Does that ring a bell?

Ms. WRIGHT. I mean, I know we passed legislation to that effect, yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. I want to make sure we all understand the process. First you had the legislation, the laws that authorized the system in issuing the bonds. Then there was a process of deciding which investment company would be hired to sell the bonds.

The CHAIRMAN. Can I ask for a point of clarification? There came a point in time when the legislature passed legislation authorizing this project and the sale of the bonds. Is that correct?

Mr. CHERTOFF. Yes.

The CHAIRMAN. I'm asking you.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Yes, in April 1985.

The CHAIRMAN. When did that legislation pass in April 1985?

Mr. CHERTOFF. 1985.

The CHAIRMAN. The Governor signed it in April 1985?

Mr. CHERTOFF. Yes.

The CHAIRMAN. Now, we have established the point. It is not fair to have the witness try to recall that, that in April 1985, legislation did pass in the State of Arkansas which authorized this project to go forward.

Mr. CHERTOFF. In May 1985, and I am giving you the date but I want to ask your recollection. The next stage in the process was to award the contract to the investment company that would be selling the bonds, right?

Ms. WRIGHT. It wasn't from my process. You didn't get the first step. You're doing steps. I'll go back and fill in the steps.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Just so we understand chronologically, it begins by passing the law that says we are going to have the communications system and we are going to issue bonds so that we can pay for the communications system. Then the next step is you have to pick the company that's going to sell the bonds. Now whose responsibility in the structure of government in Arkansas was it to make a decision about the selection of the investment company that would sell the bonds?

Ms. WRIGHT. OK, I want to go back and insert some omissions from your statement and then answer your question.

The first step when we committed to having a State Police Communications System is that we did a very exhaustive study with the Governor's office, the State Police, and the Department of Finance and Administration, seeking information about the type of system we would need to cover all the blind areas, and an exhaustive study of the various methods of financing it. After that, we determined what kind of system we would have to have to cover all the blind areas and how much it would cost. And that we would seek legislation.

We had to make a lot of choices and decisions about the form of this legislation since it was going to be funds, and this was our major economic development session where we had a lot of initiatives there. And then once it was signed, it went to the State Police. It was the State Police Commission's responsibility to select the financial investment company that would issue the bonds.

Prior to the awarding of the contract, I put together, because the State Police Commission didn't issue bonds, this is not what they did, it wasn't something that they were accustomed to doing, and

I put together a team to work on advising them about setting up the request for proposals from investment bank firms.

So we got the State Purchasing Director in on it, maybe someone else from the Department of Finance and Administration. I brought in a couple of lawyers who were aware of this to keep the Director and the Commission briefed on procedures. After that, they issued their request for proposals. And after that, proposals were presented to them.

Then the Commission selected a firm. Then there was a process of anything dealing with telecommunications to go back through a legislative, semi-legislative committee, a telecommunications study committee that would then sign off on it.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Briefly then, and you have exhibited a very good memory for this.

Ms. WRIGHT. I remember it well. It was very important to me and I was very involved in it.

Mr. CHERTOFF. That will be helpful. So the process is basically that the legislation is passed, it authorizes the system and the way to fund the system. Then there's a process of sending out requests for bid for the companies that want to sell, and then the State Police Commission was supposed to make the selection of the company that would be picked to sell the bonds, and then it would be approved subsequently through the legislative language. Is that generally speaking accurate?

Ms. WRIGHT. The word "approved" I am not certain is accurate. I am not certain that the legislative committee had an approval authority. I think it was advisory authority, sign off authority.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Was the Governor's office supposed to be involved in the process of deciding which of the investment companies would be picked by the State Police Commission?

Ms. WRIGHT. We not only were not supposed to be, we refused to be, and we were not.

Mr. CHERTOFF. So your position was—and it makes sense—that the Governor's office, while it's perfectly appropriate to be involved in deciding the policy question of the system and how to fund the system, it should be hands off in terms of putting a thumb on the scales for the selection of the particular bond firm, right?

Ms. WRIGHT. Absolutely. I was involved in the procedures that they would follow, but we were not involved in the selection of the firm.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Did you, in fact, have some kind of mechanism to screen out any relationship between the Governor's office and the selection process for the investment firm to kind of keep a wall so that there would be no potential for even any unintentional influence of the selection process by the Governor's office? Was that part of the way you operated in Arkansas in 1985?

Ms. WRIGHT. Well, I mean, we would put the wall down. I don't want kind of, I mean, there was no gag order not to speak to anybody who was involved in the process. There was a refusal to be involved in the process.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Ultimately, of course, you know Lasater & Company got the contract, right?

Ms. WRIGHT. The team that they were on.

Mr. CHERTOFF. They were part of a group. In fact, am I right that in January 1985, before the original legislation was passed, Mr. Lasater and Governor Clinton had contact in general on the issue of Lasater's desire to do more bond work for the State of Arkansas?

Ms. WRIGHT. I believe that I know that from documents that your staff showed to me. And again I'm not positive of the date. I will accept your word for that. But may I point out, Mr. Chertoff, that January was the beginning of our economic development initiatives. One of those initiatives was the creation of a very creative agency called the Arkansas Development Finance Authority. This was of great interest to all investment bank companies and nearly all of them came to talk to us.

Mr. CHERTOFF. In fact, Mr. Clinton had a meeting with Mr. Lasater and others in his group in January at the Legacy Hotel?

Ms. WRIGHT. They had a meeting, as I recall, with the legislatures. And as they were talking, the kinds of things that can augment from the private sector and augment the kind of economic development initiatives that were being talked about. The Governor went, for a period of time, to that meeting that they were hosting for legislators.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Did that meeting include a discussion of the Police Communications System?

Ms. WRIGHT. I don't recall that. Is that on any of our information? I think it was far more related to the development finance authority vehicle.

Mr. CHERTOFF. I can show you DKS 27487 which is the presentation to the State of Arkansas regarding financing structures and investment banking services. It has, in its table of contents, and in Section 5, a discussion of Police Communication System financing. It was presented by E.F. Hutton and Lasater & Company. See if that refreshes your memory that the Police Communications System was on the agenda.

Mr. COHEN. What page again?

Mr. CHERTOFF. It's 27487, the particular section is 27531.

Mr. COHEN. Thank you.

The CHAIRMAN. The first page after the index, I believe. Do you have it there?

Mr. CHERTOFF. Does that refresh your memory?

The CHAIRMAN. Let's let her take a look at this first.

Ms. WRIGHT. Mr. Chertoff, there's no reason that this document by these companies would refresh my memory. This was not a State operation, even though they loosely used the State seal, a thing which irritates me and is a pet peeve.

It was well known that we were looking at methods of financing a State Police Communications System. These companies were not the only ones who proposed financing them by bonds. In fact, Mr. Chertoff, it seems to me that at one point we may have considered that legislation because it was talking about bond financing as part of the legislation, but then later split them apart.

Mr. CHERTOFF. My time is up so this is a good time to pause.

The CHAIRMAN. Senator Sarbanes.

Senator SARBANES. As I look at the table of contents—do you have this in front of you, Ms. Wright?

Ms. WRIGHT. Yes.

Senator SARBANES. As I look at the table of contents, there were, in fact, nine sections and three appendices. So a lot of different items were covered other than this police communication financing. Is that correct?

Ms. WRIGHT. That's correct.

Senator SARBANES. At least that's what I make. I mean, all we have here, and what's been put before you is a table of contents, and apparently just the few pages that pertain to Section 5 of the police communication financing. But all the other pages, I'm trying to see if we have them—the full documents are not present. So this was, I take it, a small part of a much larger document. At least that's the inference I draw. Does that sound reasonable?

Ms. WRIGHT. It does, sir, and it is really indicative about how much attention we had succeeded in getting focused on new financing structures for the economic future of the State. And many of the private investment bankers had stuff like this going on where they were trying to make suggestions.

Senator SARBANES. But apparently their presentation covered housing financing, correctional facilities financing, patrol car financing, health care financing, State assistance for water and sewer financing, along with I guess a description of the Hutton group and the marketing and distribution strength of the Hutton group and so forth and so on.

I yield to Mr. Ben-Veniste, ah, Mr. Cole.

Mr. COLE. Good afternoon, Ms. Wright.

You had begun to describe the process by which these bonds ultimately came to be issued, and you described the legislation that was enacted, as I understand it, in order to authorize the issuance of bonds. Then, I believe, Mr. Chertoff asked you some other questions. Could you pick through there and walk through the process for the benefit of the Committee as to how these bonds ultimately came to be issued, and how the underwriters were selected?

Ms. WRIGHT. The State Police Commission went through a process of preparing a request for proposals. They issued that, I forget exactly how all they did it, but they narrowed it down. They had presentations and proposals and the State Police Commission made the selection of the investment banking group.

Mr. COLE. So there was a general solicitation of requests for proposals, I think they are called RFP's, generally in the business, and any securities firm that wanted to participate was free to submit a proposal to the State Police Commission?

Ms. WRIGHT. Yes. Quite a few did.

Mr. COLE. Then the selection process was one that was undertaken by the State Police Commission, separate and apart from the Governor's office?

Ms. WRIGHT. Totally.

Mr. COLE. Did the Governor's office play any role in that process?

Ms. WRIGHT. No, sir.

Mr. COLE. Now, in terms of the underwriters that were actually selected for this particular offering, do you recall the names of the firms that were a part of the team that included Lasater & Company?

Ms. WRIGHT. Hutton, Lasater and Raney, I remember, because of all the contemporaneous discussion about it, the current discussion about it.

Mr. COLE. And E.F. Hutton was a national securities firm at that time that would have been the lead underwriter on this offering?

Ms. WRIGHT. That's correct. E.F. Hutton was, as the lead underwriter, the name that I knew the proposal submission from, rather than Lasater.

Mr. COLE. In addition to Lasater & Company, there was another Little Rock securities firm that was a part of this team. Correct?

Ms. WRIGHT. Yes, the Raney firm.

Mr. COLE. T.J. Raney & Sons. So Lasater was just one of three firms that was responsible for distributing these securities to the State?

Ms. WRIGHT. That's correct.

Mr. COLE. In fact, Lasater & Company was not even the lead firm. The national Hutton firm was the lead underwriter?

Ms. WRIGHT. That's correct.

Mr. COLE. Do you know a gentleman named Johnny Mitchum?

Ms. WRIGHT. Yes, sir. He was a member of the State Police Commission.

Mr. COLE. And as a member of the State Police Commission, did he participate in the selection of the underwriters for this bond offering?

Ms. WRIGHT. He should have.

Mr. COLE. Mr. Mitchum has given a deposition to the Committee and if I could refer to page 133 of his deposition on February 9, 1996, I want to read something and see if your recollection differs from what Mr. Mitchum described.

Question: You testified earlier that representatives of the Governor's office attended Commission meetings and also meetings of the subcommittee that looked into police radio financing. I believe you also testified "they were just there, primarily just listened." Is that an accurate statement of your recollection of your participation?

Answer: Yes, I never recalled anyone from the Governor's office taking an active role in that process.

Question: They didn't try to direct the Commission to select a particular underwriter?

Answer: No.

Question: Or not to select a particular underwriter?

Answer: Never.

Question: Or to structure the deal in any way?

Answer: No.

Question: They just observed?

Answer: Correct.

Now from your knowledge, did participants from the Governor's office observe the selection process?

Ms. WRIGHT. Yes, but not per se, Mr. Cole. The Criminal Justice Liaison from the Governor's office attended all State Police Commission meetings.

Mr. COLE. I take it that you or no one on your staff ever tried to influence the members of this Commission to select a particular underwriter. Is that correct?

Ms. WRIGHT. Absolutely not.

Mr. COLE. In fact, Mr. Mitchum testified a couple of pages earlier, on page 131, he is asked:

Question: Turning to the period when you were considering various underwriters for the issuance of the State Police bonds, I would just like the record to be clear. Other than the underwriters themselves, did anyone try to influence you to select a particular underwriter?

Answer: No.

Question: Did anyone try to influence you not to select a particular underwriter?

Answer: No.

Question: What would you have done if someone had made such an effort?

Answer: I was in the CPA business for 13 years, and ethics was a cornerstone of my existence. I would have to weigh the ethical considerations of such an approach. If I deemed it inappropriate, then I would have responded accordingly.

So I think that we have a clear record on that.

Did there come a time after the offering process proceeded to the point that the Raney/Hutton/Lasater group had been selected that there were complaints from other firms about the selection of the Raney/Hutton/Lasater group?

Ms. WRIGHT. Yes, there did. But if I could back up and add to what you just relayed from Mr. Mitchum's testimony, if we had been trying to influence the votes, it probably, the only votes in opposition from the Commission to that team were our appointees. That the majority of the votes for that team were the Republican predecessor's appointees. So you know, if we were trying to deliver votes, I think we would have done a better job of our own folks. The notion of complaints, oh, there was a lot of paranoia about this all the way through the process.

Investment bank companies are fairly cut throat in the way they deal with each other, talk about each other, spread rumors about each other, send up red flags about each other, tell on each other. And I was constantly being fed scuttlebutt or things that weren't fair, et cetera. So there were complaints and I was just staying grounded with if the Commission's staying with its process, here's an allegation I have been given. Make sure it's within the process. So that, you know, I took it all very personally that this was going to be a clean, clean, above reproach award.

Mr. COLE. And so you had personal involvement throughout this process?

Ms. WRIGHT. In deflecting away from our office any attempt to get us involved and in preserving and protecting the process that the Commission had established.

There probably were things that, either based on hearsay or information or even my own concerns, I asked the Commission through the Director or their attorneys or the State purchasing directors to consider.

I know that I was concerned about what the public relations impact of an E.F. Hutton association with the State Police would be because E.F. Hutton had recently had some legal problems as a firm. I didn't tell them what the answer to that was. I asked that to be considered and looked at. But certainly after the Commission made its selection of the Raney/Hutton/Lasater team, then there were complaints, and there was an attempt by some of the losing competitors to change the process, revoke the legislation, et cetera.

Mr. COLE. So in essence then, was the selection of the Raney/Hutton/Lasater group reviewed a second time by a board of the State Legislature?

Ms. WRIGHT. Reviewed is I think the proper word, not approved. Initially it would go to the Telecommunications Study Commission.

It did go there. Now the Governor's office had a member on that committee under Arkansas statute. The chairman of that commission ultimately I think his public statement was that he really didn't understand all the bond stuff, that it was too confusing to him, and so he wanted the interim decision body for the legislature to hear it. So it went to the legislative council then.

Mr. COLE. The council reviewed it and didn't take any action?

Ms. WRIGHT. And gave its favorable advice.

Mr. COLE. We started with this because Mr. Chertoff asked you some questions about the particular financing of this State Police radio network. It might be helpful to back up for a minute and talk generally in the time that I have remaining about the selection of underwriters for State bond business. Was there a policy in the Clinton administration, beginning with his reelection in 1982, to open up the bidding process to more firms in the State?

Ms. WRIGHT. There most certainly was. During the years, during the 2 years that Governor White had been the Governor, the Housing Development Authority's bonds had gone into a monopolistic shape to the same people.

We got lots of complaints from other investment bankers that Governor Clinton made the commitment that if he were reelected, there would be an open process and it would be highly competitive and there would be no more monopolistic bond awards within the State. I think we went in a short period of time from maybe 3 or 4 firms to 40 some odd firms receiving State bond business.

Mr. COLE. When you refer to a monopolistic situation, if I understand you correctly, you mean that 1 or 2 or 3 firms received the lion's share?

Ms. WRIGHT. All of it.

Mr. COLE. All of the bond business.

Ms. WRIGHT. A national underwriter and a local firm got nearly all of it.

Mr. COLE. The same firms kept getting the business over and over again?

Ms. WRIGHT. That's correct.

Mr. COLE. Did that change during the Clinton administration?

Ms. WRIGHT. Totally.

Mr. COLE. Was Lasater & Company one of the local firms that, in the Clinton administration, began to get bond business from the State?

Ms. WRIGHT. Yes. It was one of many, yes.

Mr. COLE. Do you know whether Lasater & Company ever contacted the Governor's office to indicate that they would like to have more bond business?

Ms. WRIGHT. Almost all of the firms contacted us complaining that they weren't getting enough bond business.

Mr. COLE. When your office received those kinds of complaints, what would you do?

Ms. WRIGHT. Of course these had to do with the Housing Development Authority first, and then the Arkansas Development Finance Authority, its successor agency. And I would ask the person on the Governor's staff in charge of economic development and working liaison with those agencies to make certain that they were being treated fairly, that they were being included, and that we weren't sliding them. There wasn't anything else to do.

Mr. COLE. So you would refer to a staff member and instruct them to assure that the process that had been set up was being followed appropriately?

Ms. WRIGHT. That the policy was, yes.

Mr. COLE. Do you know whether Lasater & Company was ever selected or named as the lead underwriter on any of the offerings by the State of Arkansas?

Ms. WRIGHT. I don't recall that they were.

Mr. COLE. In fact, are you familiar in securities offerings, there are tiers of brokers that get the business and the lead underwriter will be listed at the top, and then there is a second tier and often a third tier. Do you know which tier Lasater & Company usually was found in terms of the share of State business they received?

Ms. WRIGHT. I think I remember them telling me that they were usually in the bottom.

Mr. COLE. One last question, Mr. Chairman. They were usually on the bottom and they were trying to move up to the second tier?

Ms. WRIGHT. I do not know what they wanted. It was never enough but believe me, this was not just Lasater. They are all alike. Lasater didn't get any business because of money they contributed. All investment bankers contributed, none of them got money because of contributions and we didn't direct bond business.

Now the State Police Commission was a very different situation because the State Police Commission was not in the business of issuing bonds. See this was a unique event. Getting this communications system up and running and saving troopers' lives was a high priority concern to the Governor's office.

Mr. COLE. Thank you.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Ms. Wright, after this January meeting Lasater had a second meeting with the Governor. In February, right?

Ms. WRIGHT. I don't have—if you tell me he did.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Let me show you this. He wrote a letter to the Governor shortly thereafter on February 15, 1985, which we have, together with the notations you made on it.

The CHAIRMAN. Wait. Counsel is going to give it to her. She has it in front of her. Go ahead.

Mr. CHERTOFF. What you should have before you are 3 pages, a 2-page letter and a copy of the front of the envelope in which the letter—

Ms. WRIGHT. I don't have the envelope.

Mr. CHERTOFF. It's DKSJ 27572.

Ms. WRIGHT. We have 573.

The CHAIRMAN. They will bring a copy of the envelope down. Do you have it? OK.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Do you recognize this letter?

Ms. WRIGHT. I recognize this letter because it has been shown to me recently.

Mr. CHERTOFF. The letter begins with Mr. Lasater saying, "Dear Governor, thank you very much for the opportunity to sit down and visit with you regarding the many issues facing Arkansas." Then it goes on to list a number of things that were discussed.

Mr. Lasater suggests "that Lasater & Company be advised of all financing proposals effecting the State" contact person in Lasater & Company—that name is given to the Governor. Then there's discussion of an appointment to the Arkansas Housing Board, and a confirmation of our understanding regarding the appointment. There's a suggestion that a representative of the staff attend a particular study meeting. Mr. Lasater goes on to say that "we would recommend competitive proposals be required on the up-coming financing to permit Hutton to submit a proposal." And he goes, "It is important for us to know that because we have made commitments to Hutton and unless competitive proposals are accepted, it would leave us, Lasater & Company, in an untenable position."

On page 2, Mr. Lasater goes on to offer the Governor the services of "Dan Moody, who is very familiar with State government and who serves on the Constitutional Convention, is a lobbyist and he is available on strategy." Mr. Lasater then says, "In addition, we would be more comfortable if you would take the opportunity or ask someone on your staff to take the opportunity to appraise me or my staff of any actions by you or your staff prior to any public announcements, so that we will not be surprised or in some instances embarrassed because of the announcement."

And he goes on to say, "Finally, I believe it would serve us both well to have regular monthly meetings between the two of us to discuss the effects of the economy on Arkansas." Now, you saw this letter when it came in in 1985?

The CHAIRMAN. Because I think it's important, I want you to finish the rest.

Mr. CHERTOFF. I will read the last three paragraphs:

In addition, we would be more comfortable if you would take the opportunity or ask someone on your staff to take the opportunity to appraise me or my staff of any actions by your or your staff prior to any public announcements, so that we will not be surprised or in some instances embarrassed because of the announcement.

Finally, I believe it would serve us both well to have regular monthly meetings between the two of us to discuss the effects of the economy on Arkansas. Bill, I do not ask for this to have undue influence or to try to apply undue pressure to you or your administration, but because of my background in business, I believe that I can make a positive contribution to you in your efforts to promote a better climate in the State of Arkansas.

Again, thank you for the opportunity to sit down and discuss with you these points and I hope you will act favorably on my suggestion for a regular meeting.

Now, you wrote a reaction to this in which I think you said it was outrageous, didn't you?

Ms. WRIGHT. Yes, sir.

Mr. CHERTOFF. And it is outrageous, isn't it?

Ms. WRIGHT. Yes, sir.

Mr. CHERTOFF. What did Mr. Clinton write? What was his reaction, in his own handwriting on the envelope?

Ms. WRIGHT. He said, "not the time to go this far," which is, if you know Mr. Clinton, his very gentle way of saying no. He is a far more diplomatic person than I.

Mr. CHERTOFF. This note, "not the time to go this far." This wasn't a response he wrote to Mr. Lasater. This was his note to you right? When he scribbled the note, "not the time to go this far," he wasn't writing it to Mr. Lasater with whom he had to be diplomatic. He was writing it to you.

Ms. WRIGHT. I don't know for certain the sequence of this but my guess is, I'm guessing different from what you did, and it's only a guess, Mr. Chertoff, is that the Governor read this letter first. It then came to us. Maurice made his comment, I made my comment, and I sent it back into him to see our two comments. He then said we must discuss.

Mr. CHERTOFF. His reaction was "not the time to go this far." And he said, "we must discuss." So what was his discussion about this outrageous letter?

Ms. WRIGHT. I don't remember, Mr. Chertoff. What I think of when I wrote these things, like this is outrageous, this is stupid, he got scared so he said, we must discuss to assure that my tone was properly respectful of the citizen.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Did Mr. Clinton tell you this was an outrageous letter and that Mr. Lasater was kind of a loose cannon who should be watched?

Ms. WRIGHT. I think we were all aware that this man had a very heady trip going because he'd had a visit with the Governor. And the Governor certainly understood that this was not appropriate. The Governor was probably more concerned that I not be rude to Mr. Lasater and to assure himself that my tone of rejection was proper, and that we work it through the agency, as we did. We notified them and set up a procedure.

Mr. CHERTOFF. During this period of time, was Sam Bratton the staffer in the Office of the Governor who was actually working on writing the legislation that would start this Police Commission bond issue going?

Ms. WRIGHT. We didn't write much legislation out of our office. We didn't have enough staff to do that.

Mr. CHERTOFF. He was supervising the person who was dealing with the legislation?

Ms. WRIGHT. He was responsible for making certain that our legislative package was prepared and in good form and ready.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Therefore in terms of your legislative package on this police financing bill, he was the person who had the responsibility for being the contact point at the Governor's office, right?

Ms. WRIGHT. Very likely, in terms of reviewing whatever work we got done on it.

Mr. CHERTOFF. And who actually did the work of writing the legislation?

Ms. WRIGHT. As I said earlier, Mr. Chertoff, I think that we initially envisioned the State Police financing being a part of the legislation establishing ADFA. We then broke it off. As I recall, the same firm that we used to write the ADFA legislation wrote the State Police legislation.

Mr. CHERTOFF. That was Mitchell Williams?

Ms. WRIGHT. That's correct.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Wasn't that Dan Lasater's firm?

Ms. WRIGHT. I don't have any idea. They were a firm that we used to write legislation regarding bonding a lot.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Do you know whether Mr. Lasater retained them to work on his behalf in terms of this bill?

Ms. WRIGHT. I have not a clue.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Do you remember them saying to you, we had better not be involved in this because we actually represent one of the bidders?

Ms. WRIGHT. They said that to me?

Mr. CHERTOFF. I'm asking you did they say that to you?

Ms. WRIGHT. There were no bids. We were establishing legislation. The Mitchell firm wrote our ADFA legislation, Mr. Chertoff. This was a spinoff piece of separate legislation. The Mitchell firm obviously was going to continue doing this. I know nothing about the Mitchell firm's relationship with Mr. Lasater, nothing. I'm not in the business of keeping track of who has what law firm.

Mr. CHERTOFF. So you don't see any problem—

The CHAIRMAN. Wait a minute. Why don't you ask—if this particular law firm drew up not only the overall legislation, but this particular legislation dealing with the State Police that authorized going forward with this bonding. The question was also asked if Ms. Wright was aware if Mr. Lasater's firm was represented. Is Ms. Wright aware of that? I think that's the way you ought to put the question. Let's rephrase that.

Mr. CHERTOFF. The Mitchell Williams firm wrote the legislation for the State on this State Police radio financing bill, correct?

Ms. WRIGHT. I think that is correct.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Whether or not, now did you know that they had been hired to work on this particular matter by Dan Lasater?

Ms. WRIGHT. I did not.

Mr. CHERTOFF. That I take it was not disclosed to you?

Ms. WRIGHT. I don't even know that now, Mr. Chertoff.

Mr. CHERTOFF. We'll have the witnesses on that later.

Let me ask you this. Had you known about it, would you have seen a big problem with having the lawyers for one of the bidders writing the legislation?

Ms. WRIGHT. It depends on what the nature of the representation the firm was doing for Mr. Lasater. I don't know.

Mr. CHERTOFF. They were working on this bill for Mr. Lasater. Do you see a problem with that?

The CHAIRMAN. Let's understand so that the record is clear. You were not aware of that, and you're saying you don't know that to be the case even today? You were not aware that this firm was working for Mr. Lasater while it may have been doing work for the State agency. You were not aware of that. You knew they were doing work.

Ms. WRIGHT. No, sir, I'm not aware of that. But frequently firms hire law firms to draft up legislation they want to suggest to various people who introduce it or consider it, and I don't think there's anything wrong with that. I think you get a lot of helpful stuff that way. So I guess, you know, I'm foggy on the problem, I'm foggy on the time, I'm foggy on the relationship.

The CHAIRMAN. There might be a very real problem in the event that they were working on the proposal for Mr. Lasater to help the State, suggesting how the State should draft legislation, and then were drafting legislation for the State. But again we are establishing that you were not aware of this at that time. It's not a trick. So that can't be your problem. It's not your fault if you weren't aware of it.

Ms. WRIGHT. All I know is that the work that the Mitchell firm did at our request in working with us was on our legislation that was part of the Governor's package on the Governor's Initiatives, and it had nothing to do with whatever else they were doing for Dan Lasater. That's all I know.

The CHAIRMAN. So you were not aware that they may have been working for Mr. Lasater, in conjunction with this, is that correct?

Ms. WRIGHT. I am not. I do know that they produced our document.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Let me make sure we are clear on this. It is your testimony that the Governor's office selected the Mitchell firm to work on this piece of legislation?

Ms. WRIGHT. That is my recollection because, in my head, which is very faulty at times, Mr. Chertoff, the Mitchell firm was helping us design the legislation for the Economic Development Agency, and that we first envisioned this as a part of that.

Mr. CHERTOFF. This is a very simple, straightforward answer. With respect to this bill, your understanding is that it was the Governor's office that selected the lawyers, yes?

Ms. WRIGHT. Mr. Chertoff, I just answered that question and why I seem to recall that that was the case.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Let me read from the testimony of Mr. Michael Drake, who was the Senior Vice President at Lasater & Company at the time, at page 88.

The CHAIRMAN. Can we get a copy of this to counsel?

Mr. CHERTOFF. This is Mr. Drake's deposition.

The CHAIRMAN. On page 88 of Mr. Drake's testimony. I think we want to get a copy to counsel and to Ms. Wright. We are going to try and make a couple of copies of this.

How are you doing, Ms. Wright?

Ms. WRIGHT. I'm tired and I'm bored, but there isn't anything you can do about that.

The CHAIRMAN. We are going to try and get through this. We can take a 5-minute break if you want.

Ms. WRIGHT. I'm OK right now.

The CHAIRMAN. All right, we are going to get this down to you. This is the testimony of who, Mr. Chertoff?

Mr. CHERTOFF. This is the testimony of Michael Drake.

The CHAIRMAN. Who is Michael Drake?

Mr. CHERTOFF. At the time, he was the Senior Vice President of Lasater & Company.

The CHAIRMAN. What line?

Mr. CHERTOFF. We'll start at page 87.

The CHAIRMAN. Let's make sure we are all there. Counsel, are we all there? OK.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Line 13, he is referring to Dan Lasater:

Answer: So, I took it to Dan, and said Dan, this is what we want to do. He said proceed. Just let me know how I can help you.

Question: How did you present it to them? Did you discuss with them how they mentioned that they knew that Lasater and Dabbs Sullivan had helped the Governor?

Answer: Yes.

Question: Could you explain to me, in your words, how you relayed that to him and how you characterized it? What did Mr. Synder—

Answer: I said as well as I can remember—it was a long time ago—a T.J. Raney has come to us, because of your relationship with Bill [that's Bill Clinton], to try to get this legislation passed that will enable us to take a proposal to the State Police Commissioner to sell these securities and help them acquire this new communications system, this hotshot thing Motorola has come up with.

He said, fine, what are the steps? I said the steps are, (A) we had to find a law firm to draft the legislation; (B) we had to work with the staff, with the Governor's office to explain why we are doing this, what we hope to accomplish; and (C) we have to go to the State Police and explain to them what we are trying to do. He said no problem, go do it.

We chose the Mitchell law firm in Little Rock to draft the legislation for us. I don't remember now who we got to introduce it. It might have been that the Governor introduced it in his package. I don't remember.

We met with—over a period of several months, we met with Colonel Goodwin of the State Police, and that subordinate whose name I don't remember who was a major at the time, and who was given direct responsibility for the project at the staff level.

Then it goes on to discuss further developments.

Now the relevant part for the question I'm asking you is, Mr. Drake's testimony under oath that he and his group chose the Mitchell law firm to draft the legislation for them. Does that change your recollection or do you believe that perhaps the Mitchell firm was working for both the Governor's staff and one of the bidders?

Ms. WRIGHT. I don't have a recollection of that. I have a recollection of the Mitchell firm working the legislation for us. It was our package, it was our initiative. I don't care what Michael Drake thinks about them picking it up, and I don't know, I didn't know and I don't know that there may have been a convergence. I still don't know enough facts, Mr. Chertoff.

Mr. CHERTOFF. There may have been a convergence of interests, you were about to say?

Ms. WRIGHT. Of involvements.

Mr. CHERTOFF. A convergence of involvements.

Ms. WRIGHT. Yes. I don't know.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Do you know a Mike Gaines?

Ms. WRIGHT. I certainly do.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Who is Mike Gaines?

Ms. WRIGHT. He was the Public Safety Liaison of the Governor's staff for the time.

Mr. CHERTOFF. So he was a member of the Governor's staff?

Ms. WRIGHT. Yes, sir.

Mr. CHERTOFF. As was established on April 4th, the legislation which had been drafted by the Mitchell firm—

The CHAIRMAN. What year was that?

Mr. CHERTOFF. 1985.

The CHAIRMAN. Let me just stop to make a point of inquiry. The little red light has gone on. Are you prepared to yield now, or do you want us to keep going, whichever.

Senator Sarbanes.

Senator SARBANES. Ms. Wright, I notice in this deposition, he says Win Rockefeller was a member of the State Police Commission?

Ms. WRIGHT. That's correct.

Senator SARBANES. Is that the former Governor of Arkansas?

Ms. WRIGHT. The son of the former Governor.

Senator SARBANES. The Republican Governor, this is his son?

Ms. WRIGHT. Yes, sir.

Senator SARBANES. Mr. Ben-Veniste.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. This again is fascinating for some people, I'm sure. The history of legislative drafting in the State of Arkansas and how people went about doing this back 12 years ago. We got all the way up to 1984 now.

My question is if there's to be some level of pertinence or relevance to this, it would be if the legislation that was presented for consideration to the legislature, if, in fact, it was drafted by a law firm retained by one of the companies that was going to bid on it, whether that legislation was drafted in a way that favored Lasater, Hutton, or any other member of their group.

If that were the case, so that it was tailored in a way that nobody else could bid on it, or it would provide a great advantage to Lasater or Hutton in their bidding process, then I think, even with the thing happening 12 years ago, maybe that would be interesting to somebody. Was there anything in the way this legislation got drafted, so far as you knew, that excluded others and favored Lasater & Company?

Ms. WRIGHT. No, sir. I don't think that the legislation specified the procedures by which proposals would be taken or the bonds would be awarded. It just authorized the awarding of bonds. And I am, with all deference to both you, Mr. Ben-Veniste, and Mr. Chertoff, there is nothing I am saying to you today that I can swear by. It is distant memory. Distant memory. And I am doing my best to share with you that which I can dredge forth.

But the opportunity to skewer the thing in favor of one firm or another would have come after the legislation passed and in developing the procedures. And I personally know that did not happen.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. I think that is the sole relevant question to ask about this historical event for the bidding of police radios in Arkansas in 1984, and I thank you for providing it.

Mr. Cole.

Mr. COLE. Just a couple of questions more, Ms. Wright, on Mr. Lasater's contacts with Governor Clinton. Did Mr. Lasater meet frequently with Governor Clinton?

Ms. WRIGHT. No, sir.

Mr. COLE. Mr. Chertoff made reference to a fundraiser that Mr. Lasater held for Governor Clinton in 1984. Did he hold any other fundraisers?

Ms. WRIGHT. I only recall one.

Mr. COLE. Were you ever present at a meeting between Governor Clinton and Mr. Lasater in the Governor's office?

Ms. WRIGHT. I don't remember.

Mr. COLE. Perhaps this would refresh your recollection. Mr. Lasater testified that he recalled a meeting with the Governor and his testimony is:

Mr. LASATER. What I recall is that I was upset because we were the second largest capitalized broker-dealer in the city and we were not being treated fairly in my opinion in the amount of bond business that we received. We were down on the bottom tier instead of on a tier with Stevens and some of the other larger firms.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Why do you think you were on the bottom tier?

Mr. LASATER. I don't know, maybe because we were new. You know, I don't know, but I wasn't happy about that. I felt we were entitled to be a larger participant.

Mr. GIUFFRA. What do you recall Governor Clinton saying in response to your request?

Mr. LASATER. All that I recall is he was noncommittal and would have to, you know, present our case to his staff, whoever was in charge of that.

Mr. GIUFFRA. And approximately how long was this meeting?

Mr. LASATER. Ten minutes.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Did there come a time when you improved your position in terms of bond underwriting?

Mr. LASATER. No.

Mr. GIUFFRA. So you remained at the bottom tier?

Mr. LASATER. Right.

Do you recall, Ms. Wright, anything about that meeting?

Ms. WRIGHT. Was I there?

Mr. COLE. Mr. Lasater did not recall your being there one way or another.

Ms. WRIGHT. I don't recall being there.

Mr. COLE. But I take it that Mr. Lasater's recollection, as far as whether or not his firm ever improved its position in terms of the share of State underwriting business that it received as a result of meetings with the Governor is consistent with your recollection that that didn't happen?

Ms. WRIGHT. I know there was no relationship between any business that he got and anything he asked of us.

Mr. COLE. To your knowledge, the Governor's office never intervened or took any action, either Governor Clinton personally or one of his staff, to try to influence the selection process to benefit the Lasater & Company?

Ms. WRIGHT. Not to benefit a specific company. We would try to make certain that there was an open process, that there was a lot of communication outward to the investment bankers. The investment bankers could find all kinds of things to complain about.

Mr. COLE. And your purpose was to expand the number of firms that received a share of the State's bond underwriting business?

Ms. WRIGHT. The purpose was to have competitive bids that were genuinely and truly competitive so that you could get not only good deals for the State, but you could also spread the business around and you could get some creative thinking going. All of that was accomplished.

Mr. COLE. I take it there were some securities firms in Little Rock or in Arkansas at that time that were not political supporters of Governor Clinton?

Ms. WRIGHT. Yes, sir.

Mr. COLE. Did some of those firms receive State bond contracts during the Clinton administration?

Ms. WRIGHT. Absolutely. The awarding of State bond contracts had nothing to do with being a supporter of Governor Clinton's. Almost all were supporters or at least contributors. I'm rather cynical about the kinds of ways that investment bank companies become supporters.

But opponents, I mean there were a couple of firms who were outright opponents. Nothing ever interfered with their entering competitive bids and being awarded contracts.

Mr. COLE. Actually that was what I was getting at because in my review of the records, and I won't take the Committee's time to put them on the screen, the documents that we have received showed that the firms who were receiving the contracts during the prior Frank White Republican administration continued to receive bond underwriting contracts during the Clinton administration.

The difference was that instead of being two or three firms, it was open to a half dozen or more firms.

Ms. WRIGHT. That is correct. And those firms obviously kept hoping that the day would go back when they didn't have to do all of this competition and sharing, and they fought our economic development package. They fought our legislation.

And what we did was right and it was wonderful for the State. It opened it up and even though they fought that legislation, they still benefited from it when it went into effect.

Mr. COLE. Thank you.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. I take it from your testimony, Ms. Wright, that it is your view that by reason of the increase in competition rather than this monopolistic or oligarchic concentration of the bond business in one or two or three different firms, as had been the case for 2 years prior to the administration in which you served, the State benefited, in your view, from the fact that there was now competition which would mean that the State would get a better deal in connection with the sums charged by these investment bankers?

Ms. WRIGHT. That's correct.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Is there anything in terms of the complaints that were raised, and I take it in a competitive environment, you know, we have this in Washington all the time, if one company gets the award of the contract, the competitor cries that the process was unfair and there are six or seven or eight reasons why the whole thing should go back to square one. Then when that company gets the next contract, their competitor cries foul, and the same thing happens again.

I trust on a somewhat smaller scale, the experience in Arkansas was the same. But in terms of the criticisms that were leveled, was there a criticism that the State was paying more than it should have as a result of this legislation or the increased competitiveness in the marketplace?

Ms. WRIGHT. Not at all.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. We will cede back our time and hope we can finish up here.

The CHAIRMAN. Mr. Chertoff.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Ms. Wright, I just want to be clear, because when we left the last portion of our back and forth, I believe that your indication to me was that whatever arrangement the Mitchell firm, and by the way, that was Jim Guy Tucker's firm, right?

Ms. WRIGHT. He was in that firm, yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. He was a partner at the firm, right?

Ms. WRIGHT. I don't know the law firms.

Mr. CHERTOFF. I think we left it with saying that whatever Mr. Lasater's arrangement with the Mitchell firm, in terms of Lasater having hired Mitchell to work on this legislation, as far as you were concerned, the Mitchell firm was working for the Governor's office or for the State on this legislation. Is that your recollection?

Ms. WRIGHT. I know the Mitchell firm did legislation as a volunteer assistant to us on pieces of our Economic Development Package. It is my vague recollection that we spun the State Police thing off of that, and that's why the Mitchell firm was involved in it.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Isn't it true, that at the time of the contract itself, you were well aware of the fact that the legislation was actually, for all intents and purposes, prepared by the Raney/Hutton/Lasater group, Mr. Lasater's group of bidders? You were aware at the time, were you not, that they were drafters of the legislation?

Ms. WRIGHT. I don't remember that, sir.

Mr. CHERTOFF. I mentioned Mike Gaines before. I want you to look at DKSJ 18184. This is a memo to you from Mike Gaines on 5/15/85 which I'm calling out now.

The CHAIRMAN. Wait until she gets this.

Mr. CHERTOFF. This is that Mike Gaines I asked you about before we broke who was in the Governor's office dealing with public safety issues, right?

Ms. WRIGHT. Yes, sir.

Mr. CHERTOFF. This memo was prepared 5 days after. I'll just represent to you it was prepared 5 days after the formal award of the contract on May 10th by the Arkansas State Police Commission. It refers to one of those very complaints by another bidder, that disappointed bidder that you were just testifying about.

It lists the complaints. In particular, I want to draw your attention to the paragraph that begins after the paragraph which has an Arabic numeral 2. It says, "Capitol"—which is the disappointed bidder—"points out that the legislation (written by H,L,R) requires monthly payments."

You will agree with me—and take as much time as you need looking at the memo—that H,L,R in the context of this memo refers to Hutton/Lasater/Raney. I would suggest to you, after you have satisfied yourself of the memo, that this memo makes it very clear that at the time, Mr. Gaines understood and you understood that it was the bidding team of Hutton/Lasater/Raney that—

Ms. WRIGHT. Excuse me, Mr. Chertoff. I'm not certain you have the same document I'm reading. Can you just hold yours up?

Mr. CHERTOFF. It's May 15, 1985. To: Betsey Wright; From: Mike Gaines, Subject: ASP Communication System, DKSJ 18184.

Mr. COHEN. Mr. Chertoff, I think the problem is that even if you look on your screen, I think the portion you just read—and we will accept your representation of what it says—is pretty difficult to read. That's why we couldn't pick it out.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Take my copy.

Mr. COHEN. I don't need your copy. I just read it. We're just fine.

Ms. WRIGHT. I am now at the point I understood where you were reading.

The CHAIRMAN. Let's do it again so that we are all together. Where are we starting?

Mr. CHERTOFF. We are starting with the fifth paragraph. "Capitol points out that the legislation (written by H,L,R) requires monthly payments." And if you look earlier in the memo, you see that H,L,R refers to Hutton/Lasater/Raney, which was the bidding group that was Dan Lasater's bidding group. Now does this help you to conclude that, in truth and in fact, you knew in May 1985, that the legislation had been written, for all intents and purposes, by the Lasater bidding group?

Ms. WRIGHT. No, sir, it doesn't. It means that I would assume Mr. Gaines had his information wrong or had been told it wrong, because he wasn't involved in that part of it.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Did you say to Mr. Gaines when you saw this—in substance, I don't mean in exact words—"Mike, you're not telling me that the bidders wrote the legislation?" Did you ask him that?

Ms. WRIGHT. No, sir, I didn't need to, because I knew it was our legislation.

Mr. CHERTOFF. So notwithstanding the contemporaneous memo written right at the time by Michael Gaines that Hutton, Lasater and Raney wrote the legislation; notwithstanding Mr. Drake's sworn testimony in a deposition that Hutton/Lasater/Raney paid the Mitchell firm to do the technical work; and notwithstanding your own admission that the Mitchell firm actually wrote the legislation, you're going to continue to tell us that, in fact, the legislation was not written by Lasater and his lawyers, but it was written totally independently?

Ms. WRIGHT. It is my recollection that the Mitchell firm wrote this legislation for us. I am unaware of a relationship with Lasater. I am not positive of anything. It did not—the telling point of this memo was not something flying through the air about some unfair practices, but to make certain that the procedures had monitored these kinds of issues, and that these allegations were either baseless or could be explained and dealt with.

Mr. CHERTOFF. It would seem to me from the memo that the disappointed bidder was, in fact, complaining that the winning bidder had written the legislation. Isn't that exactly one of those process issues that you just told us you wanted to be sure were absolutely perfectly carried out?

Ms. WRIGHT. There are a couple of far more substantive complaints conveyed to me here in this memo.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Now in between the time the legislation that enabled this project was passed on April 4th, and the time that the final decision was made by the Police Commission on May 10, 1985, during that intervening period of about 5 or 6 weeks is when the request for proposal went out to investment groups that would want to bid to get the work, right?

Ms. WRIGHT. I don't recall the dates.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Accept my dates. That's the stage of the process. Now, I want to show you a memo dated May 1, 1985, right in the middle of this period where the proposals are coming in, written from the same Mike Gaines to Governor Clinton and Betsey Wright. It's DKS 27162. It's May 1, 1985.

Mr. COHEN. I'm afraid we don't have it on this side of the room.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You have seen this before, right?

Ms. WRIGHT. I have seen it in my deposition, but prior to that it was read to me by the Associated Press reporter that someone on your staff showed it to.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Putting aside your accusation about someone on the staff having shown it to somebody, it's addressed to Governor Clinton and yourself, correct?

Ms. WRIGHT. That's correct.

Mr. CHERTOFF. It has the characteristic checkmark that shows the Governor has read it?

Ms. WRIGHT. That's correct.

Mr. CHERTOFF. It says:

The State Police Commission is meeting Friday to review proposals for financing the communications system. The following are Tommy Goodwin's observations of where things stand.

Now before we continue, Tommy Goodwin was head of the State Police?

Ms. WRIGHT. That's correct.

Mr. CHERTOFF. And this is part of the process of the State Police Commission evaluating the bids and evaluating who was going to be selected to do this work. So we continue on.

Billy Simpson—appears to have switched his support from another vendor to Dan Lasater. Johnny Mitchum—solidly behind Lasater. Tennyson—Lasater. Mashburn—probably Lasater, since McElroy Bank did not submit proposal. Gene Raff—probably Lasater. Rockefeller—?

Am I correct that you were in the Governor's office keeping tabs on the vote count, the head count for Lasater?

Ms. WRIGHT. No, sir. You are not correct.

Mr. CHERTOFF. So Mr. Gaines just wrote this memo?

Ms. WRIGHT. No, sir. Colonel Goodwin passed on intelligence thinking we might be interested and want to know it. Mr. Gaines sent it on to me. I wasn't monitoring it. Mr. Gaines was not involved in this particular issue other than attending the meetings. I was monitoring the process for this. I wasn't keeping tabs on the votes. But I have to tell you, Mr. Chertoff, people kept telling me who was leaning what way all the time unsolicited, and this is yet another time.

Mr. CHERTOFF. So you didn't say to Mr. Gaines—

Ms. WRIGHT. I didn't even think this turns out to be good information.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You didn't say to Mr. Gaines or Colonel Goodwin, "Look. We are not part of the process of the selection of the firm. We don't need the vote count. We don't need to know where things stand, because we are indifferent. We are neutral." You didn't pass that message on when you got this memo, right?

Ms. WRIGHT. The concluding effect of this memo was on quite a different subject. Colonel Goodwin knew that we weren't involved in it. That doesn't mean to Colonel Goodwin that we don't care what was happening, and I think he assumed we might want to know how it looked like things were lining up.

It was an unsolicited piece of information. I'm not going to chew him out for sending me information. It was meaningless. We weren't monitoring. We didn't ask for it. I don't believe this is the way the vote count came out. It was passed secondhand to me from a staff person who was not intimately involved in communications with the State Police Commission about this process like I was.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Ms. Wright, this whole memo was written by Mr. Gaines, the same Mr. Gaines who wrote the memo a couple weeks later indicating that Hutton, Lasater and Raney had written the legislation. The whole purpose of the memo—and we'll get to the other writing in a minute—but the whole purpose of the memo was, as it originally came into you and the Governor, to give a head count on the selection of the particular investment company. Do you disagree with that?

Ms. WRIGHT. I do. The purpose of the memo was to convey to me information that Colonel Goodwin had given to me——

Mr. CHERTOFF. And about the head count of the investment company?

Ms. WRIGHT. He thought I might be interested.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You wrote a memo to the Governor. You said, "Gov, we have real problem here, since 'street talk' is that Lasater put in unreasonably low bid knowing he can raise it once he gets it." Then I must confess I can't read the next line, so I'll ask you to do it, since it's your writing.

Ms. WRIGHT. "I hope the ASP"—Arkansas State Police—"had experts review everything. Also, how does this"—and then there's not enough.

Mr. CHERTOFF. "How does this gibe with"—and you don't know what the rest of that is?

Ms. WRIGHT. I can't read it.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Now, you had heard street talk that Lasater was lowballing the bid?

Ms. WRIGHT. Yes, sir. I think I made reference earlier that investment banking companies play a very bloody kind of politics. They spread rumors, they send out alarms and red flags, and I was told dirty things about all of them. And what I was conveying to the Governor is that one of the contentions that was going on is that Lasater assumed that they could increase this after they got it, and they put it in at the low.

Mr. CHERTOFF. This street talk or rumor or scurrilous stuff you transmitted to the Governor in this memo, right?

Ms. WRIGHT. I did.

Mr. CHERTOFF. In fact, what you did was, you wrote it on the bottom of the memo with the head count. You didn't prepare a separate memo. I mean, you can only draw the conclusion from looking at the writing that the memo came in with the head count. You then added your information about the lowballing bid, and then the last writing is the Governor's writing, which is in the top right-hand side of the memo. Is that right? That's the Governor's writing? Number one there, it says, "Lasater should be told bid must be price." Is that it?

Ms. WRIGHT. Yes, sir.

Mr. CHERTOFF. So, the Governor directed you to tell Lasater that he should bid what he was actually going to make the price. Is that correct?

Ms. WRIGHT. He didn't direct me to, no.

Mr. CHERTOFF. "Lasater should be told"—underlined—"bid must be price." Was that a direction that someone should tell Lasater that what he bid ought to be the price?

Ms. WRIGHT. I know that I went to the team monitoring the process and said, "This is a rumor, and you all need to make certain that Lasater's bid is in compliance and that he understands."

Mr. CHERTOFF. Well, why did you bring this to the Governor's attention?

Ms. WRIGHT. I don't know. I don't remember why I brought it. I was just passing on rumors that were going on around—why I didn't write a separate memo? Governor Clinton told me that he got more paper than any Governor in the history of western civilization—

Mr. CHERTOFF. Let's not talk about all paper.

You said, Ms. Wright, in this particular instance at the beginning of this part of the examination, this was totally hands off, totally out of the process.

You have repeated several times your concern here is the process. Given all of that, why would you convey the head count and your discussion about lowball bidding to the Governor? Why did the Governor need to know this? And why did the Governor then have to come back to you and have an instruction about what Lasater ought to be told about his bidding? Is that your interpretation of neutral, keep your hands out of the process?

Ms. WRIGHT. Keep our hands out of the selection of the firm. We were very much involved in the design of the process, Mr. Chertoff—very much involved. And making certain—

Mr. CHERTOFF. Is this about—

The CHAIRMAN. Wait, wait.

Ms. WRIGHT. Go ahead and talk, and maybe some time next week I'll come back and answer you.

The CHAIRMAN. Wait, wait, wait. It appears that this memo is a head count by the very members who are going to pick the firm, or on the members, and with specificity.

It would appear that, by the writer of this memo, this related to Lasater's position and being selected. It's always with respect to Lasater. "Johnny Mitchum—solidly behind Lasater." So-and-so behind Lasater. The third one, "probably Lasater." And they mention this other bank didn't bid. "Probably Lasater," the next fellow. Billy Simpson—support from another vendor, and then street talk about Lasater. And then the instruction, "Lasater should be told that he must meet the price."

So you see, the memo would indicate that certainly, there is someone who was very cognizant over at the police. By the way, it may have been a press person got a hold of this, but this is the first time I have seen this memo. And I try to make it a point, I do not review these matters prior. But it appears very clear here, Ms. Wright, that there was somebody that was really following this process as it related to how Lasater was lining up with respect to the selection committee.

The red light is on. Senator Sarbanes.

Senator SARBANES. Ms. Wright, I was interested. Did you say that you were called by a person in the press that asked you about this memo?

Ms. WRIGHT. Yes, sir. I was called by a reporter who had been shown this memo and had been given oral annotations about it.

Senator SARBANES. Was that before—

Ms. WRIGHT. Negative oral annotations.

Senator SARBANES. Was that before you had your deposition, or after?

Ms. WRIGHT. Before.

Senator SARBANES. So the first time you saw it in some official way was when you had your deposition?

Ms. WRIGHT. That's correct.

Senator SARBANES. And how far ahead of your deposition did that take place?

Ms. WRIGHT. A week or two.

Senator SARBANES. Mr. Chairman, I have been worried about this problem, because this was not the only instance of this happening. I mean, we encounter these press stories and material leaking, and I think it's a reasonable surmise that it's coming out of this Committee, I regret to say. And I think we should meet and discuss that.

I thought we agreed that we would ask the FBI to look—I mean, I don't mind Ms. Wright being confronted here today with this memo and questioned in public session, or indeed at her deposition. But obviously, things are amiss if staff people with access to this material are leaking it to the press in order to set a certain framework or climate ahead of time, and this isn't the only instance of such an occurrence. I think the Committee needs to address it.

We are now into this final 8-week period, and I can't think of anything that would poison our ability to carry forward in some reasonable fashion than this activity. We have here Senate investigators for the Senate Whitewater Committee, internal memos assembled by Senate investigators, et cetera. And then they go on and lay out this material, which has not yet been put in the public domain. It's not a reasonable way to do business, obviously, and I think it's going to simply poison.

Now it's my understanding we agreed, did we not, that we would have the FBI look into these leaks when they occur?

The CHAIRMAN. I will discuss with the Ranking Member—

Senator SARBANES. I think we did that back toward the end of the year.

The CHAIRMAN. —the manner by which to pursue who, if anyone, from this staff may have leaked this. It may have been the staff. It may not be the staff. But we will take that up, and will take the necessary action. I think we should proceed now.

Senator SARBANES. Well, I very much hope we can bring the FBI into it. We had this discussion, as you will recall, back in the fall. We were quite concerned about what was transpiring.

The CHAIRMAN. Now this took place back some time in January? Is that right?

Ms. WRIGHT. It was in February, I believe, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. February.

Mr. COHEN. We can give you a precise date, Mr. Chairman.

Ms. WRIGHT. Almost all of these documents which you have provided me in this line of questioning regarding Mr. Lasater were read to me by that reporter.

Senator SARBANES. The particular newspaper article was April 8th. When the discussion occurred, I don't know.

The CHAIRMAN. January or February sometime. You'll provide us a date?

Mr. COHEN. We can, Mr. Chairman. There were some telephone calls that Ms. Wright and I were on with a reporter who told us that he had been shown the documents, permitted to view them. We asked for a copy of the documents just to verify that, in fact, that was so. He said he wasn't permitted to take the document with him, but was permitted to review it, and copied it down and read us a scrawl that he couldn't wholly interpret.

Ms. WRIGHT. And told us whose handwriting said what.

The CHAIRMAN. All right.

Ms. WRIGHT. We did give the staff in my second deposition a copy of the letter that the reporter sent to me initially about wanting to talk to me on these documents. So the date of the contact is in that letter.

The CHAIRMAN. We'll pursue it.

Senator SARBANES. I yield to Mr. Cole.

Mr. COLE. Thank you, Senator.

If we could put the May 1, 1985 memorandum back up.

Mr. COHEN. Excuse me, Mr. Cole. I apologize.

Mr. Chairman, we had provided the Committee on the second day, and it's attached at the end of the deposition for the second day, Senator Sarbanes and Mr. Chairman.

Mr. COLE. Ms. Wright, if I could ask you to look for just a moment more at this memorandum, and I think we have covered it thoroughly. But I do want to reassure you about one thing, because as I understood your testimony, you were taking issue with the characterization of this memorandum from Mr. Gaines as somehow an effort by the Governor's office to keep tabs on the bidding process. Is that correct?

Ms. WRIGHT. That is correct.

Mr. COLE. And in fact, I think since this memo has had such scrutiny, it's worthwhile to note what the author of the memorandum said about it, Mr. Gaines, whose deposition Committee staff took on February 16. And at page 71, he was asked:

Question: Do you recall why Mr. Goodwin would have been calling you to report on this?

Answer: No, unless—just conveying information or observations he was making. Again, I mean I can't answer for him, but if he had spoken to the individual members and had a sense of how they were leaning on this matter, he may have felt that it needed to be conveyed to the Governor's office, and called and gave me a rundown of it.

And I think important, then, for your purposes, Ms. Wright, he was asked:

Question: Before receiving the call from Mr. Goodwin, were you aware of any interest that the Governor or Ms. Wright had expressed with regard to which underwriting company received the underwriting contract?

Answer: I don't think so.

So his testimony, which the Committee has in evidence, confirms your recollection that you and the Governor's office had not asked that he or anyone else keep tabs on this process.

I would also like to show you a document, since we are looking at documents from this time period in May 1985, I guess the issue being what influence Mr. Lasater did or didn't have on the Governor's office. This is a memorandum dated May 2, 1985, if we can put that up, it is from Mr. Nash to, it appears to read—perhaps you can help me with the handwriting—"BC/Betsey"—and someone else that I can't read there. Ms. Wright, do you recognize that as a memorandum to you and others from Mr. Nash?

Ms. WRIGHT. Correct.

Mr. COLE. Who was Mr. Nash at that time?

Ms. WRIGHT. He was our Economic Development Liaison.

Mr. COLE. So would he have been the staff liaison with matters relating to the Arkansas Development Finance Authority?

Ms. WRIGHT. That's correct.

Mr. COLE. Am I correct in understanding that at this time, most of the bond underwriting business that the State of Arkansas was doing was through the Arkansas Development Finance Authority, or would be through the Arkansas Development Finance Authority?

Ms. WRIGHT. That's correct.

Mr. COLE. The handwriting on this appears to be: "Dan Lasater gave me this letter when I met with him on Wednesday for lunch. Bell is not my kind of person. Has always caused the agency (AHDA) problems." Just to put this in context, let's put up on the display the letter that was attached to this memorandum and it's dated April 10, 1985. I think you have been given a copy of that. This is a letter to Maurice Smith from a Mr. Dennis Mills, from the Mortgage Bankers Association of Arkansas, recommending that James T. Bell be appointed to the Arkansas Development Finance Agency Board.

First let me ask, Ms. Wright: am I correct in reading this letter and Mr. Nash's cover memorandum to you and Governor Clinton as indicating that Mr. Nash does not agree that Mr. Bell is the person of his choice for appointment to the ADFA Board, notwithstanding Mr. Lasater's recommendation?

Ms. WRIGHT. Yes. It was Mr. Nash's way of making his comment.

Mr. COLE. So what we have here is that Mr. Lasater is putting someone's name forward to be named to the Board that controls the State bond business, and you have a staff member that's reporting to you and the Governor that Mr. Lasater's recommendation is not his choice for that Board. Do you recall whether Mr. Bell was, in fact, appointed to that Board?

Ms. WRIGHT. I'm fairly certain he was not.

Mr. COLE. I think we could confirm that for you if we could put up and provide to you a copy of a January 24, 1986 listing of the current members of the Arkansas Development Finance Authority Board, and you'll see that Mr. Bell is not listed there.

As I read these documents—and please correct me if I'm wrong—this indicates that at precisely the time we are talking about, in May 1985, Mr. Lasater had lunch with a staff member who was responsible for this Board, passed on a letter of recommendation, recommended a candidate, and that candidate was not appointed to the Board. Is that correct?

Ms. WRIGHT. Oh, there were more contacts with us by Mr. Lasater's company on behalf of Mr. Bell. I was contacted two or three times by people who worked for him. Mr. Bell was not appointed.

Mr. COLE. So Mr. Bell was not appointed. Mr. Lasater testified that he met with Governor Clinton, complained about the amount of bond business that he got, and by his own accounting didn't get any more bond business. And that's all consistent with your recollection of what happened 11 years ago, now?

Senator SARBANES. The Governor's office gets contacted all the time by people who want somebody else appointed to one or another board and commission, don't they?

Ms. WRIGHT. Yes, sir. We invited it.

Senator SARBANES. Pardon?

Ms. WRIGHT. We invited it.

Senator SARBANES. Yes. In a sense, you were sort of flooded by people saying, "Well, I want so-and-so to go on the Board or so-and-so to go on the Commission." I mean, it seems to me it's standard operating procedure in Governor's offices across the country, as far as I know. Wasn't that the case?

Ms. WRIGHT. Yes, sir.

Mr. COLE. One more area of inquiry, Ms. Wright, that I think has been widely reported in the press, and likely has come up in Committee's depositions, and is likely to come up in our hearings. Mr. Lasater ultimately pleaded guilty to a Federal drug charge. Is that correct?

Ms. WRIGHT. That's correct.

Mr. COLE. Do you recall at some later time, did he make an application to the Governor's office for an approval of the application he had submitted to the Federal firearms authorities to be able to carry a firearm for hunting purposes?

Ms. WRIGHT. I believe, Mr. Cole, that happened after I left the Governor's staff. But I do recall from the 1992 campaign that, yes.

Mr. COLE. What has been reported in the newspapers is that Mr. Lasater was pardoned by Governor Clinton.

Ms. WRIGHT. No. The Governor has no authority to pardon a Federal conviction.

Mr. COLE. I thought, that since you were the Governor's Chief of Staff, you would be a good witness to speak to that issue.

Ms. WRIGHT. Oh, absolutely.

Mr. COLE. Because I think it's been reported erroneously.

Ms. WRIGHT. A conditional pardon by a Governor on a Federal conviction only allows them to apply to ATF for firearms.

Mr. COLE. So not only were we dealing with a Federal conviction here, but the license that Mr. Lasater was seeking, which he testified was for permission to carry a firearm when hunting, was an application to the Federal authorities, and he just needed approval from the Governor's office to submit that application?

Ms. WRIGHT. To apply; that's correct.

Mr. COLE. So it was not a pardon? Bill Clinton did not pardon Dan Lasater?

Ms. WRIGHT. No. Governors have no authority to pardon Federal criminals.

Mr. COLE. Thank you. That's helpful.

The CHAIRMAN. Mr. Chertoff.

Ms. WRIGHT. Could I have a break?

The CHAIRMAN. Absolutely. We have a vote, so it comes at a good time. We'll take 10 minutes.

Senator SARBANES. Mr. Chairman, could I just inquire how much longer it's estimated—

Ms. WRIGHT. Twenty or 30 minutes.

Senator SARBANES. No, no, no. I'm inquiring of Mr. Chertoff.

The CHAIRMAN. That's what she's suggesting; 20 or 30 minutes.

Senator SARBANES. I mean, look. I don't mind if after lunch you had said, we are going to need 3 or 4 hours here to finish up.

The CHAIRMAN. I don't think anybody anticipated—

Senator SARBANES. If you had told us that then we could have made plans accordingly. But to be told 20 to 30 minutes when we took the break, and then accounting for a little bit of time on this side, and then to come back and start at 2:00 p.m., and now it's 5:00 p.m., and we are still going on.

Now, you can go on for as long as you want, as can this side. And obviously, you should go on as long as you feel it's necessary. But just give us a realistic evaluation or estimate of how long you are planning to proceed, that's all. Then people can make their plans accordingly.

The CHAIRMAN. Let's see if we can't get back here within the next 10 minutes, so that we can try to conclude this, certainly before 6:00 p.m.

[Recess.]

The CHAIRMAN. We are going to see if we can't wrap this up.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Again, I still want to focus your attention on the period of time before the final vote on the Arkansas State Police Commission to award the contract to the Lasater group. Was there a point right before then where you became concerned that there might be a problem with the Hutton component of that Lasater group because of some unrelated investigation involving checks?

Ms. WRIGHT. Involving checks?

Mr. CHERTOFF. Yes.

Ms. WRIGHT. As I have already testified today, Mr. Chertoff, I know that at some point, I did admonish the people working on the Police Commission decision to make certain that there wouldn't be a bad PR impact from the Hutton legal problems they had had.

The CHAIRMAN. Which are totally unrelated to anything—

Ms. WRIGHT. In another State, some other thing.

The CHAIRMAN. That was a national thing, totally unrelated.

Ms. WRIGHT. Thank you. Thank you.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Were you also concerned about Lasater's reputation at this point in time, in the early part of 1985, and the impact that might have on reputational issues? Did you have Lasater checked out in terms of whether he was being investigated?

Ms. WRIGHT. I probably suggested to the State Police Director that he find out whether there were any investigations going on.

Mr. CHERTOFF. What caused you to do that?

Ms. WRIGHT. Oh, either another rumor or whatever. I basically think they probably should have made sure nobody had any law enforcement problems, and I probably told them that too, but with—I was getting a lot of rumors and allegations about people, but Dan Lasater had always been the subject of things I was told.

Mr. CHERTOFF. What things?

Ms. WRIGHT. Oh, God. I didn't maintain a Dan Lasater catalogue, Mr. Chertoff. Things about—it was like the street talk is that it's a low bid, or that it was drug use. And it's a very difficult thing in public responsibility, Mr. Chertoff, as I am sure you are far more learned than I because of your previous experiences and positions, but you get told a rumor and you have to balance that very carefully. If it isn't true, you don't want to damage somebody because of it.

And I did, over the course of the years before Mr. Lasater's conviction, I did have Colonel Goodwin check around with law enforcement agencies when rumors were hot and heavy to see if anyone was investigating him.

Mr. CHERTOFF. In particular, you asked Colonel Goodwin to find out if he was being investigated for drug activities?

Ms. WRIGHT. Probably.

Mr. CHERTOFF. And you knew at this point in time, I take it—and when I say “this point in time,” I mean by March or April of 1985—you knew that there was information that, in fact, Mr. Lasater had paid a drug debt for Governor Clinton’s brother, Roger?

Ms. WRIGHT. No, sir, I don’t think I knew that.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Wasn’t Roger Clinton testifying as a witness in a Federal criminal narcotics trial in U.S. District Court in Arkansas during the early part of 1985 in which he brought up Dan Lasater’s name?

Ms. WRIGHT. I don’t remember.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Would it help you to remember if I showed you a newspaper article that was dated February 26, 1985, with the headline that says, “Governor’s brother testifies at Spa attorney’s drug trial”?

Ms. WRIGHT. I now remember the trial that he testified in, yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. The trial was of a guy named Anderson; right?

Ms. WRIGHT. Yes, sir.

Mr. CHERTOFF. And Anderson was being tried for narcotics distribution?

Ms. WRIGHT. I don’t remember the charges.

Mr. CHERTOFF. It was a drug case, right?

Ms. WRIGHT. Yes, it was a drug case as I recall.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Roger Clinton testified as a witness in the case; is that right?

Ms. WRIGHT. Right.

Mr. CHERTOFF. He testified in the case, and this case was going on literally at the same time that you were gearing up to do this bond contract, Roger Clinton testified that Lasater had loaned him $8,000 to help him clear some drug debts; right?

Ms. WRIGHT. If that’s what it says. I didn’t follow Roger Clinton’s testimony carefully. I mean, I can’t affirm what Roger Clinton said, I’m sorry. I haven’t boned up on that.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Whether you boned up or not, putting aside vague rumors, there was at the very same time you were dealing with Lasater as one of the bidders on this issue, a Federal criminal trial in which the Governor’s brother was giving sworn testimony under oath about having received a loan from Dan Lasater for $8,000 to clear the Governor’s brother’s drug debts. That’s not a rumor; that was sworn testimony at the same time. Is it your testimony that this news totally escaped you?

Ms. WRIGHT. No, sir, it isn’t, but I do not draw a conclusion from that that Dan Lasater was involved in drugs.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Well, we’ll come to that in a second. Do you draw a conclusion from that that Dan Lasater had, in fact, done a substantial favor for Governor Clinton’s brother by loaning him money to clear his drug debts?

Ms. WRIGHT. I would call that a substantial—$8,000 to Roger Clinton as substantial, yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Did you raise with the Governor whether there was an appearance issue that had to be dealt with if the Governor was involved in making decisions on a bond issue going on at the very same time this was being testified about in which Dan Lasater was the bidder? Did you address this issue?

Ms. WRIGHT. Mr. Chertoff, I didn't have to address that issue. We were not involved in the selection of the finance team on that State issue. We were involved, as I have told you, in the establishment and maintenance of a process by which the State Police Commission made that selection.

The award was based on bid and proposals that were in compliance with the process that was developed after a piece of legislation was passed and signed into law within that process. We were not involved in the selection of a firm.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Now, we have already heard the testimony about who the lawyer was and who became the lawyer, enacted the legislation, we have seen the memo, the head count memo and the messages back and forth to you and the Governor on Lasater's bid. And you have also testified to us that you asked Colonel Goodwin to see whether there was an investigation pending of Mr. Lasater.

Were you aware that at the very same trial, this one in which Roger Clinton was testifying at the very same time in February 1985, that the defendant testified that he had been told or he had been asked to set up a sting operation or to target for law enforcement a number of people, including Dan Lasater?

Ms. WRIGHT. I might have been aware. I don't recall.

Mr. CHERTOFF. So that would indicate that, as of that period of time, there was actually sworn testimony in Federal Court that law enforcement authorities were looking to make a case against Dan Lasater. This escaped your notice or Colonel Goodwin's notice when this review of Dan Lasater's background was being done?

Ms. WRIGHT. I don't know whether it escaped my notice or not. I told you, Mr. Chertoff, that on two or three occasions over the years that I was there, I did ask Colonel Goodwin to see whether there were drug investigations going on of Mr. Lasater. I recall that most of them came in the form of rumors but perhaps it came in the form of testimonies. I didn't want State business going to someone who was under drug investigation.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Did the Governor meet with Colonel Goodwin about the selection or about the particular proposals that were coming in from the investment companies before the award was made on May 10th?

Ms. WRIGHT. I don't believe he did.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Did the Governor meet with Colonel Goodwin in particular to ask him his opinion of the Lasater proposal before the selection was made on May 10th?

Ms. WRIGHT. I don't recall that he did.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Didn't he, in fact, do it in your office?

Ms. WRIGHT. The Governor would go to a meeting in my office?

Mr. CHERTOFF. With Colonel Goodwin about the Lasater proposal before the award was made.

Ms. WRIGHT. I might have been having a meeting with Colonel Goodwin on matters not about who to select on this bid and the Governor may have walked by and come in, but in the 7 years that I was honored to have that office, the Governor had never scheduled for a meeting in my office.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Putting aside whether it was a scheduled meeting or a meeting that happened to unfold because people found themselves there. Was there a meeting or a discussion in your office before the bid was awarded by the Police Commission in which the Governor specifically asked Colonel Goodwin what he thought of Lasater's bid?

Ms. WRIGHT. I don't recall it but there may have been.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Is there any particular reason why, before the bid was awarded, the Governor would have been making a specific inquiry of Colonel Goodwin about Lasater and his bid?

Ms. WRIGHT. Maybe by telling him rumors of an allegation about Lasater's bid, like there's street talk that it's low——

Mr. CHERTOFF. I don't want to——

Ms. WRIGHT. —and he wasn't quite as good about being precise as I in remembering that the issue here is to make sure it was in compliance, and it was audited or evaluated properly, analyzed correctly.

Mr. CHERTOFF. I want to be more precise, and I don't want you to speculate. If you don't know, don't remember, I'm not trying to force you to give us testimony that you can't comfortably give us.

Isn't it a fact that there was a meeting, whether it be scheduled or unscheduled, in your boardroom or your conference room at which the Governor was present and Colonel Goodwin was present in which the Governor asked for Colonel Goodwin's opinion about the Lasater proposal before the selection had been made?

Ms. WRIGHT. I don't recall it, Mr. Chertoff.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Fair enough. Now let me finally turn to the issue of the review of the award by, I guess you said a communications study committee of the legislature that came after the Police Commission had awarded the contract to Lasater. I think your testimony was that after that award by the Police Commission, it went back to this legislative committee for review; right?

Ms. WRIGHT. For review and advice, I believe.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Now during this, were you present or involved in this review process?

Ms. WRIGHT. I was not the member of the Governor's staff who was a member of that committee. I was—at this point we had passed another major milestone toward getting a new communications system for the State Police, and I was back involved in trying to expedite its final approval and getting it installed.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Who is Mr. Erxleben?

Ms. WRIGHT. He was the State Purchasing Director, Republican appointee of Governor White's, who we maintained and who I asked to be a part of the team at the State Police Commission to design their process for proposal.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Now, I want to put it in context. This is now after Lasater gets the contract and you are in the post-award process, and you're setting up the documentation to make this bond deal go through. Do you recall learning that one of the Senators on the Committee specifically raised the question with Mr. Erxleben about whether the Mitchell firm was representing the State or the bond company in this transaction?

Ms. WRIGHT. I remember that Senator Nelson, the Chairman of the Committee, expressed to us—he was obviously being fed a lot of the same information—expressed to us concerns about both the decision to finance and buy bonds and about the firm. I recall that an opposing losing firm, a competitive losing firm, directly appealed to try to get the Committee to revoke it. I recall having the State Police Commission and members of the award team go to that Senator and try to talk him through and walk him through what was going on here and what the plan was.

I recall that Senator saying finally publicly that he didn't understand all this bond stuff and so therefore he wanted it to go to the interim committee on behalf of the legislature, the legislative council, and it went. I think there were two different meetings or two different votes, and finally the review and advice was given.

Mr. CHERTOFF. To be brief, my question to you is, was there, in fact, a question raised after the fact about who exactly the Mitchell firm was representing? And this would be in the post-award.

Ms. WRIGHT. It could be, sir. I don't recall that. As you can tell, I recall—I don't recall questions about the Mitchell firm's representation and involvement about that piece of legislation.

Mr. CHERTOFF. I really only have about a minute more but I will hold back. I want to show you DKS N 17322.

The CHAIRMAN. Let's wait until we give it out.

Mr. CHERTOFF. It is a handwritten note. Do you have the document?

Ms. WRIGHT. I do, sir.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Do you recognize the handwriting?

Ms. WRIGHT. I recognize the category of the document, and this was one of many documents which was prepared at the Presidential Campaign before I arrived there, prepared by people who didn't know Arkansas, didn't know the people. This was the document I instantly discarded because there was nothing about it that linked the right people to the right information or had any bearing on truth. So it was deep sixed, file 13'd, something.

Mr. CHERTOFF. It says, "Lasater ADFA." Was this prepared by someone in response to an L.A. Times story?

Ms. WRIGHT. I have no idea. No, no, I was there as the L.A. Times story—I was there for the L.A. Times story on Lasater and ADFA, and this—I definitely—people outside of Arkansas refused to give me information on that.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Since you recognize this to have been a campaign document, it makes a reference to "Buddy Young and Mike Gould—2 more days." Who were those people?

Ms. WRIGHT. Buddy Young was the Governor's head of security. Gould was the press secretary.

Mr. CHERTOFF. "Clinton and Lasater in deals with State money and State Police bond for radios in 1985 or 1986. New high-band radio system for State Police, $20 million." Was it your understanding this related to a story that either had appeared or was being worked on by the L.A. Times?

Ms. WRIGHT. It wasn't my understanding. It was an irrelevant document. To me it is not a document I dealt with once I arrived at the campaign. My guess, in your reading it with this detail at this point, is that within a couple of days of my arrival, the L.A.

Times did a story on the State Police Commission award. And this may have, in fact, been notes taken by a volunteer on—or someone on the staff that the L.A. Times was working on a story on that.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You don't recognize the handwriting?

Ms. WRIGHT. I recognize it as being someone who worked in my area, and I'm sorry, it's just been too long for me to assign names.

Mr. CHERTOFF. It says at the bottom, "L.D. Brown—used to be in Governor's security—concerned re: what he would say." What's that mean?

Ms. WRIGHT. It means nothing to me. It's jibberish.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Did you know who Mr. Brown was?

Ms. WRIGHT. I certainly did.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Was he a member at one time of the Governor's security detail?

Ms. WRIGHT. Yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Did he have any knowledge concerning Lasater, to your knowledge?

Ms. WRIGHT. I have no idea.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Have you spoken to him since the Presidential election?

Ms. WRIGHT. To Mr. Brown, no, sir.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Have you asked anybody else to speak to him?

Ms. WRIGHT. No, sir.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Well, let me make sure I framed the question properly. When did you start with the campaign?

Ms. WRIGHT. Toward the end of March, right before the Sunday edition of the L.A. Times carrying the Dan Lasater story.

Mr. CHERTOFF. So you do remember the story?

Ms. WRIGHT. I do, sir. It made me so angry because it so distorted the truth of how that system was awarded and bid that it made me angry enough to decide yes, I would resign my fellowship at Harvard, and I would come back to Little Rock and work on the campaign.

Mr. CHERTOFF. So then between March 1992, when you joined the campaign and the present day, did you ever either yourself or through somebody else ask or direct that somebody speak to L.D. Brown?

Ms. WRIGHT. About what?

Mr. CHERTOFF. Well, we'll get into topic later. Did you ask anybody to communicate with Mr. Brown?

Mr. COHEN. Mr. Chairman, could I object on sort of scope grounds?

The CHAIRMAN. I will state that I am going to ask Counsel to be more specific if you can be.

Mr. CHERTOFF. What I would like to do, if I may, Mr. Chairman, is first find out if the witness ever asked—without getting to topic.

The CHAIRMAN. After you came to work at the campaign back in March 1992—is that right, late March 1992—did you have occasion to seek out Mr. Brown to speak to Mr. Brown on anything specific?

Senator SARBANES. Mr. Chairman, wouldn't she have had to speak to him about something within the scope of our Resolution?

The CHAIRMAN. Well, obviously, so let me ask you, and I don't say "obviously." I'm not talking about an incidental, saying hello, somebody walking one way, another person walking another way.

Did you have occasion to seek him out to speak to him in connection with any of the matters—and if you want me to list them—that the Committee is looking into, and you are aware of the areas of the Committee's interest? Did you have occasion to speak to Mr. Brown specifically, whether in relation to Lasater or anything else?

Ms. WRIGHT. I recall running into Mr. Brown a couple of times and the extent of it was hello and how are you, how is Peggy, and how are the kids.

The CHAIRMAN. So other than just running into him and saying hello—in other words, that's exactly the thing I want to exclude.

Ms. WRIGHT. I can't remember any other exchange with him.

The CHAIRMAN. You had no other exchanges, you never had occasion to seek him out to speak to him?

Ms. WRIGHT. I don't recall having one. By this time, Mr. Brown was quite an adversary of the President's, or of the Governor's.

The CHAIRMAN. Did you send anyone to Mr. Brown to speak to him with respect to matters involving the campaign or any of the matters that we are looking into? The reason I mention that is because you were the damage control person at the campaign; right?

Ms. WRIGHT. I was the damage control person and I now that I—that what you're—I'm back into guessing what you're dealing with, where this is going. It comes to me clear out of the blue. I do know that he made an allegation that I sent someone to visit with him.

Senator SARBANES. Well, that allegation, if I'm working off press reports, is outside the scope of this Resolution.

The CHAIRMAN. I'm not——

Senator SARBANES. Well, I mean, if we are going——

The CHAIRMAN. I am asking the witness if she asked or directed anybody to speak to L.D. Brown now, and as it related to any of the matters that we are looking into or when she was the campaign damage control person. So I can't get so specific that I can go through a list of things. We would be here for two days. If she did, say yes, or if she didn't, say no. If you don't recall, say you don't recall.

Senator SARBANES. Mr. Chairman, if she talked to L.D. Brown about matters outside the scope of this Resolution, she shouldn't be asked about that. She should be asked about matters within the scope.

The CHAIRMAN. Senator, we have provided everyone with wide authority here, and I'm going to ask again. She's indicated that other than—and if the witness wishes to correct the testimony or reflect on it—an occasional how are the kids, et cetera, that she has not spoken to him. Is that a fair statement?

Ms. WRIGHT. I am still a bit confused about why we are having this conversation, so I am going to try to see if I can——

The CHAIRMAN. I'll tell you what, because I have a document here that says "L.D. Brown," what's that?

Mr. CHERTOFF. "Used to be in Governor's security—Concerned re: what he would say." And it's headed "Lasater/ADFA."

The CHAIRMAN. Where did we get this from?

Mr. CHERTOFF. You have indicated it came from the campaign.

The CHAIRMAN. Where did you get this from?

Mr. CHERTOFF. We got it from Mr. Kendall's production.

The CHAIRMAN. We got this from Mr. Kendall's production, apparently came from the campaign. You were there, we have this, we are following this line. We are asking you, did you have occasion to speak to L.D. Brown with respect to either the Lasater matter, campaign matters, damage control, et cetera.

Senator SARBANES. No, no, no. The Lasater matter, I think, is within the scope but not the other things.

The CHAIRMAN. I am not attempting to draw you into a situation where you saw him at a gathering and said hello or you asked how are the children, or the pleasantries. Did you have occasion to speak to L.D. Brown after the 29th or late March, after you came on to the campaign team?

Senator SARBANES. Is this about Lasater/AFDA matters, as this memo is headed?

The CHAIRMAN. You know something, Senator, if indeed, Ms. Wright had no conversations with him, she will tell us she had none. Now, she indicated previously that she does not recall any and that the only ones that she may have had were those that would be normal with somebody who is working with the Governor who she might bump into, say hello or how are the children. So I am asking that question again. Do you recall having any specific conversations with L.D. Brown as it relates to—let's start being a little more specific—Lasater.

Ms. WRIGHT. No, sir, it would never occur to me that L.D. Brown would be a source of any kind of information about Dan Lasater. I have no imagination why one would ask him about Dan Lasater.

The CHAIRMAN. The only reason I mention Lasater, specifically, is because we have here a memo, "Lasater/ADFA." This comes from Mr. Kendall's law firm. And it indicates L.D. Brown—his name is there. Now, you're the damage control person, you were working on the campaign. Did you attempt to make contact with him with respect to damage control?

Ms. WRIGHT. I have already said that that is jibberish, it is unrelated, it was written by people who didn't know how to make A and B follow each other. It wasn't anything I dealt with. I knew about the State Police Communication System, I knew who to contact on my own. I didn't need someone who barely knew where Arkansas was putting L.D. Brown's name on a piece of paper to guide me.

I never spoke to Mr. Brown about anything substantive except that I did have a genuine interest in his wife and children.

The CHAIRMAN. Fine. We understand that. And you never sent anybody to speak to him about anything of any substance?

Ms. WRIGHT. Mr. Chairman, I am aware that he has alleged in right-wing publications that I sent someone to talk to him. I assigned no one to talk to him. There was a person who worked with me who did end up talking to him occasionally. He did send me messages back through her. And nothing that I can recall of that had one iota of connection or relationship to anything within the scope or interest of this Committee. It barely did to me.

The CHAIRMAN. When you said he sent you back messages from this person, did this person work for you, work for the campaign?

Ms. WRIGHT. Yes, sir. Yes, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. On the campaign?

Ms. WRIGHT. Yes, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. What message did he send back to you?

Ms. WRIGHT. I have not gone back to try to refresh my mind. I don't carry it around. I know it had nothing to do with Madison Guaranty, ADFA, Dan Lasater, Jim McDougal, whatever the scope of your—I know it didn't have anything to do with this Committee's interests.

The CHAIRMAN. We have no further questions. I believe we have concluded.

Senator SARBANES. Mr. Ben-Veniste.

Ms. WRIGHT. Thank you.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. I will only take a New York minute as opposed to a Majority minute.

The CHAIRMAN. It's a New Jersey minute now.

Mr. COHEN. In that case, you're done.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Almost. The involvement of your office in the selection process for the bond underwriting was nonexistent, is that your testimony? You did not try to get Mr. Lasater to get selected, and you did not try to knock out Mr. Lasater?

Ms. WRIGHT. That is correct, we were not involved in the selection.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Both of those propositions were put to you: Whether you tried to get the business for Mr. Lasater, you have said no; whether you got involved in trying to knock Mr. Lasater out because Mr. Chertoff has read you some headlines about Roger Clinton testifying at trial where Mr. Lasater gave him a loan unrelated to anything improper, that also did not concern you; is that correct, because you did not make the decision of who to select?

Ms. WRIGHT. That's correct.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. And finally, with respect to Mr. Lasater, even if somebody in some law enforcement capacity had expressed some interest in trying to run a sting operation against him, as Mr. Chertoff suggests, that, in your view, would not provide the basis for your office to try to knock out E.F. Hutton & Company, and everybody else associated with this bid proposal, on the basis of that kind of a rumor; is that correct?

Ms. WRIGHT. That's correct.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Nothing further.

The CHAIRMAN. Senator Sarbanes.

Senator SARBANES. No.

The CHAIRMAN. I want to thank counsel and I want to thank you for coming in. I'm sorry we went longer than anticipated. We stand in recess until Tuesday at 10:00 a.m.

[Whereupon, at 6:16 p.m., the hearing was adjourned, to reconvene at 10:00 a.m., on Tuesday, April 30, 1996.]

Note balance - $10,000.00 - Accrued interest - $2,322.42

Dear Charles:

I am enclosing the Extension Agreement which Governor Bill Clinton signed yesterday.

It is my understanding that Jim McDougal, a close friend as well as business associate of Governor Clinton, is to forward to you a check for $2,322.42 representing the interest due on the note.

In discussing this matter with Jim today via a pay telephone, he indicated that he intended to make a $5 or $5,000 principal reduction in addition to the interest payment.

After making the appropriate approval of the Extension Agreement, please return the appropriate copy to me and I will personally deliver it to Governor Clinton. Also, please return copies of the receipt to me.

So that Jim McDougal may know that the proper credit has been given, please provide Jim with a copy of the receipt for the payment of the interest and principal along with a copy of the Extension Agreement.

I trust this meets with your approval and that it will soon remove the note from the past due list.

Sincerely,

 Martin O. Jackson

1211 Q Did she say anything more to you during 1212 that conversation about the picking up of this cash

Page 319

1213 at the bank or anything Mr. Lindsey said to you?

1214 A No. I think that is all I remember.

1215 Q I just want to vacuum your knowledge about
1216 this matter.

1217 MR. COHEN: What a strange word to hear
1218 coming from you. That can be used in an innocent
1219 way, I understand.

1220 MR. GIUFFRÀ: Some people say

1221 BY MR. GIUFFRÀ:

1222 Q Did you recall anything more about your 1223 conversation with Mr. Lindsey?

1224 A No.

1225 Q Have you spoken to anyone else about this 1226 conversation you had with Ms. Cooper and then the 1227 conversation with Mr. Lindsey, other than your 1228 lawyer?

1229 A And I just now remembered it and told him.

1230 MR. COHEN: Other than your lawyer.

1231 BY MR. GIUFFRÀ:

1232 Q Did you discuss this with the Independent
1233 Counsel?

1234 MR. COHEN: None of your business what she

Page 320

1235 has discussed with the Independent Counsel. It would 1236 be in my judgment a violation of all sorts of 1237 things.

1238 MR. GIUFFRÀ: We actually have asked
1239 witnesses whether they have in fact said this, this 1240 has been in public testimony, what they have told the 1241 Independent Counsel.

1242 MR. COHEN: Before I would let her answer
1243 that question, I would have to consult with people as 1244 to the Independent Counsel.

1245 BY MR. GIUFFRÀ:

1246 Q Is there any documentation reflecting this 1247 communication with Ms. Cooper?

1248 A No.

1249 Q Why did your role change between the -

1250 A Wait, I didn't finish.

1251 Q Okay, Giuffrè.

1252 A I'm in trouble again, aren't I?

1253 MR. COHEN: Not at all.

1254 BY MR. GIUFFRÀ:

1255 Q You have the Cooper conversation and the 1256 Lindsey conversation.

Page 321

1257 A Well, then there is a third conversation.

1258 I was having a conversation at some point, and I
1259 don't remember where or why or how or what the 1260 subject was, but the issue of the '90 campaign came 1261 up. I was talking to Bob Nash, and he told me that 1262 once Bruce had asked him to go to Perry County and 1263 pick up some get out the vote cash for him. That's 1264 all I know about that.

1265 Q That's all he said. Did he say whether 1266 Mr. - did Mr. Nash indicate he had been asked about

1211 this by the FBI?

1212 A No.

1213 Q Did you report what Mr. Nash said to 1214 Mr. Lindsey?

1215 A No.

1216 Q You had no other conversation with

1217 Mr. Lindsey about picking up cash from the Perry
1218 County Bank in connection with the '90 campaign?

1219 A That's all I remember.

1220 Q You don't remember any conversation with 1221 anyone else about picking up conversation from the 1222 Perry County Bank?

Page 322

1223 A Not so far. I'm doing my best.

1224 MR. COHEN: She went from remembering no
1225 conversations to three conversations.

1226 MR. COLE: It is skillful examination by 1227 Mr. Giuffrè.

1228 MR. GIUFFRÀ: Thanks. I appreciate that.

1229 MR. COHEN: I think the record was it was 1230 Ms. Wright who remembered the conversations, took

1231 a
1232 break and then disgorged them.

1233 BY MR. GIUFFRÀ:

1234 Q Why did your role change between the '88
1235 campaign and the '90 campaign? Or was it the '86
1236 campaign?

1237 A Why did my role change?

1238 Q Because you became the state party
1239 chairman? Why weren't you as actively involved in 1240 the campaign of '90 as opposed to prior years?

1241 A I didn't manage the '90 campaign, and I had 1242 managed the prior years.

1243 Q Again, you have no - in terms of the way
1244 that those withdrawals were done for the get out the 1245 vote drives, you don't have any sense as to how it

Page 323

1246 could have been done differently?

1247 A I don't know how they did it.

1248 Q Did Mr. Nash indicate to you what use was 1249 made of the money?

1250 A No.

1251 Q Do you have any idea as to what use was 1252 made of the money?

1253 A No. I didn't have any further discussion
1254 with him.

1255 Q Last question. Why did your role - why
1256 were you no longer the Governor's campaign manager?

1257 A Well, I left the Governor's staff toward 1258 the end of 1989, though I didn't technically go off
1259 the payroll until January of '90. So I was no longer
1260 working for him, and I didn't want to run the 1261 campaign in '90.

1262 Q Who became the campaign manager?

1263 A Gloria Cabe.

1264 Q C-a-b-e?

1265 A C-a-b-e.

1266 Q Have you ever spoken to Ms. Cabe about the 1267 withdrawal of cash from the Perry County Bank?

ARKS:

Mr. Randolph dropped by to see you this morning to talk to you about the Water Bill you vetoed. He said that he talked to you on Sunday morning. He wants to know if the veto is going to stand. He would like you to call Jim Guy Tucker about this. He said that he has a difficult time getting an answer from you. (He mentioned a meeting between you, Tucker and Jim McDougal a couple of years ago which involved $33,000. This was pretty cryptic.) He seemed angry. Someone I think he prefers you, needs to call Tucker.

101 Mrs. Clinton about David Hale?

102 MR. COHEN: Is there anything else other
103 than what you said?

104 THE WITNESS: That's it.

105 BY MR. GIUFFRA:

106 Q Where were you at the time of this phone
107 call?

108 A At my house.

109 Q In Washington, D.C.?

110 A Uh-huh, yes.

111 Q Do you recall any other discussions since

112 January 20, 1993 with President Clinton about

113 Whitewater/Madison-related matters?

114 A I had one conversation with him on a topic

115 which probably has nothing to do with a strict

116 definition of Whitewater-Madison-related matters.

117 though it is synonymous in my mind, and that is how

Page 153

118 on earth was I going to pay for the legal bills
119 associated with this.

120 Q Any other conversations that you can
121 recall?

122 A That's the only one I can recall.

123 MR. COLE: Before we leave this

124 conversation regarding David Hale -

125 MR. GIUFFRA: I know what you want to ask.

126 That's what I'm going to get into.

127 BY MR. GIUFFRA:

128 Q What did President Clinton say to you about

129 Mr. Hale's allegations?

130 MR. COLE: You are on the right track.

131 THE WITNESS: We couldn't figure out what

132 he was talking about.

133 BY MR. GIUFFRA:

134 Q Did the President indicate he believed

135 these allegations were false?

136 A We knew they were false. We all knew they 137 were false. We couldn't figure out what he was 138 hanging it on though.

139 Q Did the President ever indicate to you that

Page 154

140 he had ever met Jim McDougal and David Hale on any 141 occasion together?

142 A No. He asked me whether I could remember
143 if he had ever met with them.

144 Q Did the President indicate to you whether

145 he had ever met with David Hale?

146 A Did I know whether he ever had?

147 Q Did he indicate to you whether he had ever

148 met with him?

149 A He clearly couldn't remember any such

150 meeting.

151 Q He couldn't remember anything about any 152 contacts he might have had with David Hale; correct?

153 A Other than the informal running-into-him

154 context.

155 Q Is the President somebody who has a good

156 memory?

157 A Yes.

119 Q Are you someone who has a good memory?

120 A On some things, not on numbers. Anything
121 that has numbers I don't remember.

122 Q Is Mrs. Clinton someone who has a good

Page 155

123 memory?

124 A I don't know.

125 Q Do you recall anything more about your

126 conversation with the President and Mrs. Clinton

127 about David Hale, just anything?

128 A That's it. We were just in total

129 perplexity about what on earth this guy was talking

130 about.

131 Q And you knew that the allegations related

132 to a $300,000 loan that had been made to an entity

133 that was controlled by Susan McDougal; is that right?

134 A Actually, I don't think we knew that much

135 about it at that point. But it was some loan that he

136 thought Bill - he was claiming Bill got him to make

137 or something like that.

138 Q When did you first learn of an

139 investigation of Mr. Hale, if you know?

140 A I would only have learned of it from the

141 press.

142 Q Did there come a time when you learned that

143 the RTC was investigating Madison?

144 MR. COLE: That's a very difficult question

Page 156

145 if you don't distinguish between RTC regular

146 examinations which they do of all savings and loans

147 or are you talking in terms of civil liability?

148 BY MR. GIUFFRA:

149 Q Do you recall any investigations by the RTC

150 with regard to Madison relating to civil or criminal

151 liability?

152 MR. COHEN: Are we talking about Jay

153 Stephens?

154 MR. GIUFFRA: Let's go back.

155 MR. COHEN: Is this the RTC referral

156 issue?

157 MR. GIUFFRA: Yes.

158 MR. COHEN: Let's tag the issue so we

159 know.

160 BY MR. GIUFFRA:

161 Q Did there come a time when you learned of 162 an investigation by the RTC that ultimately led to 163 certain criminal referrals being made to the 164 Department of Justice?

165 A Yes.

166 Q When did you learn of this investigation?

Page 157

167 RTC investigation?

168 A Well, the first time I heard about it was 169 in the fall of 1992, and at that point I regarded

170 it - there was no way to verify it. So, I didn't

171 know whether it was true or not. I now know that it

172 was.

173 But in about September or October of '92.

174 some RTC official at a cocktail party in Kansas City

B5A

Depo of: Betsey Wright In Re: Whitewater January 26, 1996 cr:63422.0

AMANI 32 32

109 told somebody who supported Bill Clinton from 110 California who was visiting in town that they had 111 just sent a criminal referral up to the prosecutor in 112 Little Rock. And that is all I was given over the 113 phone. I went scrambling trying to find out what on 114 earth they were talking about.

115 Q Who was the person that contacted you?
 116 A A friend of this person from California who 117 was at the cocktail party with somebody from the 118 RTC.

119 Q Who was the person that contacted you? The 120 name?

121 A I don't remember the name.

122 Q So, there was a person from California who

Page 158

111 called you, correct?

112 A A friend of a person from California.

113 Q A friend of a person from California.

114 Where does the friend reside?

115 A I think in California.

116 Q So a friend of a person you knew in

117 California called you -

118 A I didn't know them. I was fairly high
 119 visibility as somebody who was dealing with Bill
 120 Clinton's person and personal defense. So, I didn't 121 necessarily have to know them.

122 Q They called you, and this person, was it
 123 the friend of the person you knew who was at the 124 cocktail party in Kansas City? I'm getting 125 confused

126 A The person at the cocktail party did not 127 call me.

128 Q The cocktail party was in Kansas City?

129 A Correct.

130 Q And at the cocktail party some RTC official
 131 said there had been criminal referrals made or a
 132 criminal referral -

Page 159

111 A Involving the Clintons.

112 Q This person in Kansas City, was that the 113 same person who was in California or was it a
 114 different person?

115 A This is much ado about nothing, since the 116 referral never came to light. But the first time I
 117 ever heard of a criminal referral regarding Madison
 118 Guaranty was when I received a call from a guy in 119 California. He had been told by another person in 120 California that this other person in California had 121 returned from Kansas City on some business where 122 he

123 had attended a cocktail party where a person from
 124 RTC

125 had told him that there had just been a criminal
 126 referral regarding a savings and loan official in 127 Arkansas and it involved the Clintons. That's the 128 totality of what I was told.

129 Q This phone call occurred before the 130 election?

131 A Absolutely.

120 Q So, it was a September-October phone call?

121 A Correct.

122 Q You were in the campaign headquarters when

Page 160

111 you got the call

112 A Correct.

113 Q Who did you advise of this phone call at 114 the campaign?

115 A Probably nobody.

116 Q You never spoke to Mr. Lindsey about the 117 fact that there might be this criminal referral
 118 naming the Clintons as witnesses?

119 A I don't know why I would have.

120 Q Did you -

121 MR. COHEN: You understood it because you
 122 sort of stopped the question: the naming them as 123 witnesses didn't come from her.

124 MR. GIUFFRA: Just mentioning the
 125 Clintons.

126 BY MR. GIUFFRA:

127 Q Did you speak to anyone, anyone in the 128 campaign, outside the campaign, anyone, about this 129 telephone call you had received regarding an RTC
 130 criminal referral mentioning the Clintons?

131 A I called a friend who was a criminal 132 defense attorney.

Page 161

111 Q Who was that?

112 A And I asked him -

113 Q Who was that friend?

114 A Let me finish. I asked him whether there
 115 was any way to find out whether there was any grand
 116 jury consideration of anything that we could know,
 117 and he told me no, because those things would always 118 be in secret. So there really wasn't any way for me
 119 to find out if there was anything there or not.

120 His name was Bill Wilson. He was an 121 attorney in Little Rock.

122 Q Was Bill Wilson involved in your efforts in 123 terms of defense work?

124 A No. I think that is the only time I ever
 125 talked to him.

126 Q Who is Bill Wilson?

127 A He was a criminal defense attorney in 128 Little Rock at that time.

129 Q Now he is a federal judge?

130 A Correct.

131 Q He was a law partner at the Wright, Lindsey
 132 firm with Mr. Engstrom?

Page 162

111 A No. Mr. Engstrom is not at Wright,
 112 Lindsey.

113 Q Is that where Mr. Wilson was?

114 A At Wilson, Engstrom, whatever it was. He 115 has now left that firm. It is a different name.

116 Q Did you regularly speak to - strike that.
 117 Did you speak with Mr. Wilson about defense
 118 matters during the campaign?

119 A No, I didn't. Fortunately I didn't know a

BSA

Depo of: Betsey Wright In Re: Whitewater January 26, 1996 cr: 63422.0

NMN/3/13

110 whole lot of criminal defense lawyers. I knew
 111 Mr. Wilson represented Roger Clinton. Therefore I
 112 knew he was someone who practiced criminal defense
 113 work in federal courts. So I just called to say is 114 there a way to know, is there a public record on 115 this. The answer was no, there isn't, and that was
 116 it.
 117 Q Did you speak to anyone else other than
 118 Mr. Wilson about the allegation of an RTC -
 119 A Not that I can remember.
 120 Q Have you ever spoken -
 121 A To tell you the truth, the words "RTC"
 122 weren't mentioned. The person was RTC, but I didn't

Page 163

111 make the connection that it was an RTC referral at 112 that time.
 113 Q You had no other conversation with anyone
 114 else about - strike that.
 115 Did there come a time when you discussed
 116 the fact that this communication from California with
 117 regard to criminal referrals regarding the Clintons
 118 and an S&L person with anyone other than Mr. Wilson?
 119 You clarified that contact. Was there anyone else?
 120 A I don't think I did. I can't recall doing
 121 so. Usually when I couldn't verify things I didn't 122 proceed on them. I did think that it was highly 123 improper for an official to be talking about a
 124 criminal referral at a cocktail party. With that in 125 mind, I did once mention it to Mr. Kendall after he 126 had been hired. But it was so cold and so long ago
 127 that it was gone.
 128 Q Did you ask Mr. Wilson to take any actions
 129 with regard to the criminal referral?
 130 A No. I asked him whether there was a way to 131 find out about it.
 132 Q Do you know whether Mr. Wilson contacted

Page 164

111 anyone with regard to this?
 112 A He said there wasn't any way to know
 113 anything about it.
 114 Q Other than this communication with the 115 person from California about a criminal referral
 116 during the campaign, did you have any other
 117 communication with anyone about criminal referrals?
 118 A I remembered I asked Hillary if she was 119 aware of any friend of theirs who was in a savings
 120 and loan business who might be under criminal
 121 investigation, and we couldn't think of anybody.
 122 Q This was a conversation you had with 123 Mrs. Clinton during the '92 campaign? Was it - the 124 same time you spoke to Mr. Wilson you spoke to 125 Mrs. Clinton, correct?
 126 A I mean, it wasn't at the same time, but it
 127 was in that time period.
 128 Q Prior to the election? Prior to the '92
 129 election?
 130 A Yes.
 131 Q Did you speak to anyone else?
 132 A I don't remember anybody else. This is not

Page 165

111 anything I have thought about for a long time,
 112 frankly.
 113 Q Do you think you spoke to Ms. Lynch about 114 it, about the criminal referral?
 115 A I don't remember doing so.
 116 Q Did you have staff meetings with the other
 117 members of your defense group during the campaign in 118 which you would discuss -
 119 A More team meetings.
 120 Q Did you have team meetings to discuss the 121 allegations that were being made?
 122 A Yes.
 123 Q You don't recall raising this issue of the 124 criminal referral at the team meeting?
 125 A I don't remember doing so. I didn't have 126 enough to go on. It is only in hindsight that I
 127 realized the real significance of it.
 128 Q Do you know Paula Casey?
 129 A I do.
 130 Q How do you know Paula Casey?
 131 A Democratic party activities.
 132 Q In Arkansas?

Page 166

111 A Correct.
 112 Q What do you know about the appointment of 113 Paula Casey?
 114 A I'm sorry?
 115 Q What do you know about the appointment of 116 Paula Casey as U.S. Attorney?
 117 A Nothing.
 118 Q Did you have any role in the appointment of 119 her?
 120 A None.
 121 MR. COLE: Do you know whether Governor
 122 Clinton had any role in the appointment of Paula
 123 Casey as U.S. Attorney?
 124 THE WITNESS: Does the President do the 125 appointment?

SECTION 3. POLICE COMMUNICATION SYSTEM FINANCING

Set forth below are some of the alternatives which the Arkansas State Police Commission may utilize in acquiring the proposed communications systems. The information which follows is intended to provide you with a summary of the items which our firm and the firm of Lasater and Company believe to be attractive alternatives for the Police Commission communication equipment financing.

FINANCING STRUCTURE

From our review of the needs of the Commission, it is fairly clear that there are two basic structures which the financing of the acquisition of the communications system can take. The first of these structures would involve the issuance of long term fixed rate tax-exempt bonds. The second structure involves the issuance of tax-exempt Certificates of Participation in a lease. Each of these structures is more fully described below:

TRADITIONAL BOND STRUCTURE

The issuance of long term fixed rate bonds is an alternative which the State Police Commission can probably accomplish without significant changes in legislation or procedures. Basically, the Commission would issue bonds through an appropriate state agency, the "Issuer". The proceeds of the bonds, would be used to purchase the communications system from the chosen vendor. The Commission through the appropriate issuer of the bonds would agree to make payment sufficient to pay the principal of and interest on the bonds. The bondholders would have a lien on the communications equipment and the revenues pledged to the bond issue. While we have not had our legal review of this alternative, it does appear that there is sufficient legal precedence to allow this transaction to be treated as a traditional revenue bond financing and therefore comply with the constitutional, legislative, and judicial requirements for non G.O. bond financing within the State of Arkansas. Such a financing will most probably require the use of some form of supplemental security such as bond insurance or letters of credit in order to make the bonds more attractive to the investing public.

CERTIFICATES OF PARTICIPATION

A second and perhaps more attractive means of financing the system would be to utilize the sale of Certificates of Participation in a lease. This type of transaction is very similar in form to a traditional bond financing. However, there may be a substantial and a significant difference in the legal interpretation of a "lease" subject to appropriation. Basically, the Certificate of Participation transaction (hereinafter "COP") would work as follows: The State Police Commission would find the appropriate issuer of COP's (the "issuer"). The certificates once structured would be sold either through private placement or to the public. The proceeds of the sale of the certificates would be utilized to purchase the communication system and the State Police Commission would enter into an agreement through the issuer of the certificates to pay to the certificate holders an amount necessary to meet principal and interest payments on the certificates.

DKSN027531

As you can see, this is very similar to the above traditional financing. The major difference, however, is that unlike a traditional bond issue in which the revenue source must be identified, dedicated, and pledged for the entire life-of the transaction, a COP transaction is done subject to annual or biannual appropriations. We believe that such a transaction more closely accomplishes the goals and desires and the standards and procedures of fiscal officers throughout the State of Arkansas. However, because a COP transaction is subject to annual appropriations, the safeguards necessary for protecting the certificate holders are somewhat more stringent. For example, there is included in the transaction a covenant that the commission will not replace the leased equipment and that the commission will not use the equipment during the term of the lease-if appropriations-for-the-payments-under the lease are not made. Moreover, because of the uncertainty, however small, with respect to annual appropriation, it is often necessary to obtain some form of supplemental security such as a letter of credit or bond insurance if the certificates are sold to the public.

FINANCING ALTERNATIVES

Regardless of which basic financing structure is chosen, there are several innovative bond techniques which we would recommend that the Police Commission review and utilize. Each of these items listed below is designed to provide the State Police Commission with increased flexibility and lower financing costs. The use of innovative financing techniques implies a commitment on the part of investment bankers to obtaining a reduction in borrowing cost on their clients' behalf.

Described below are several ideas which we believe the State Police Commission can use to significantly reduce its costs.

ANNUAL TENDER (PUT) OPTION BONDS

The benefit to the State Police Commission in implementing this structure would be substantial. A bond issue including put bonds will result in interest cost savings of approximately 25 to 35 basis points, a larger potential arbitrage amount, a significantly lower gross spread, and consequently, a lower financing rate. This type of bond is discussed at greater length in the preceding section entitled "Housing Finance."

CAPITAL APPRECIATION BONDS (CABS)

The Arkansas Housing Development Agency has successfully used this financing technique in several series of its Mortgage Revenue Bond issues. The concept has allowed AHDA to lower the True Interest Cost (TIC) of its financings and to include only the initial offering price of the bonds (not the final maturity value) toward its bond allocation for the year.

When this concept was first introduced to the municipal marketplace in 1981, CABS sold at yields significantly below those of comparably rated and maturing interest bearing bonds. This trend has been largely reversed during the past several years, due primarily to insufficient call protection provided to holders of CABS. At the time of marketing the issue, it is necessary to reassess whether interest cost savings will be achieved with CABS.

DKSN027532

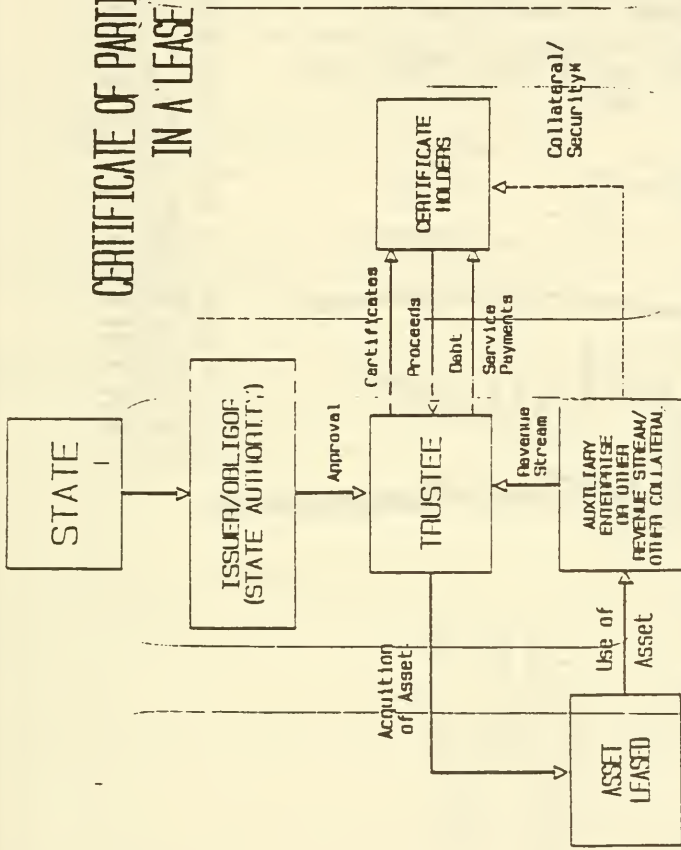

LONG-TERM FLOATING RATE MONTHLY DEMAND BONDS
THE "LOWER FLOATER"

The long-term floating rate monthly demand bonds, another E.E. Hutton innovation, also achieves substantial interest cost savings. There is a full discussion of this very attractive alternative in the "Housing Finance" section of this presentation.

Additional information on communication financing can be found in the booklet entitled "Tax-Exempt Telecommunications Lease Financing" in Appendix C of Section 1C.

Dear Governor:

Thank you very much for the opportunity to sit down and visit with you regarding the many issues facing Arkansas and relative to areas in which Lasater & Company can assist you in your efforts to promote and develop Arkansas.

In order to maximize our relationship, I believe that it is essential that we take some positive steps to set up specific lines of communication to enable both our understanding and to make sure that those lines are kept open and functioning.

To begin, let me suggest that Lasater & Company be advised of all financing proposals affecting the state of Arkansas and suggest that your contact person in our company on extremely urgent is the Controller, Michael Drake and Dan Muddy.

Secondly, we have discussed the appointment of Donnie Spears to the Arkansas Housing Board and I have confirmed our understanding regarding the appointment in my letter of January 23, 1968, and I want to again reaffirm our interest and desire in seeing Mr. Spears in this position.

Next, let me suggest that we believe it would be in your best interest to send a representative of your staff to each Arkansas Housing and Development study meeting which usually precedes the regular meeting of the agency. Normally, the study meeting occurs on the third Wednesday of each month.

Fourth, we would recommend to you that competitive proposals be required on the up-coming ARDA FHA/VA financing to permit Hutton to submit a proposal. It is important for us to know that because we have made commitments to Hutton and unless competitive proposals are accepted, it would leave us, Lasater & Company, in an untenable position.

Dan Moody, who is very familiar with state government and who serves on the Constitutional Convention is a lobbyist and he is available on strategy or any other matters in which you believe his input would be effective. Let me encourage you to call on Dan; his experience and knowledge is valuable.

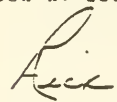

In addition, we would be more comfortable if you would take the opportunity or ask someone on your staff to take the opportunity to appraise me or my staff of any actions by you or your staff prior to any public announcements so that we will not be surprised or in some instances embarrassed because of the announcement.

Finally, I believe it would serve us both well to have regular monthly meetings between the two of us to discuss the affairs of the economy on Arkansas. Bill, I do not ask for this to have undue influence or to try to apply undue pressure to you or your Administration but because of my background in business I believe ~~that I can make a positive contribution to you~~ in your efforts to promote a better climate in the state of Arkansas.

Again, thank you for the opportunity to sit down and discuss with you these points and I hope you will act favorably on my suggestion for a regular meeting.

Sincerely,

 Dan H. Casater

MEMORANDUM

TO: BETSEY WRIGHT
 FROM: MIKE GAINES
 DATE: MAY 13, 1985
 SUBJECT: ASP COMMUNICATIONS SYSTEM

The financing K will be discussed by the Communications Sub-committee tomorrow and by Legislative Council on Friday.

The Capital Resources group, which did not get the ASP Commission's nod, intend to contest the award to Rutton, Lasater, Roney on the following points:

1. Capital offered a fixed rate rather than a floating rate, and
2. Capital's proposal was based on monthly payments by the state to repay the debt while R,L,R based their proposal on payments every 6 months.

Capital points out that the legislation (written by R,L,R) requires monthly payments (Att 317 attached, see highlights on page 5).

A proposal based on 6 month payments can be lower because it allows the state to earn interest on the pledged revenues during that 6 month period. Capital argues that this is not allowed under the law as written.

I have discussed this with Sam, and he is looking into it.

 From: Mike Pancer (1) Leaster should be told

 Subject: ASP Communications K (2) Keele's letter indicates which helps the State to know this equipment for cheaper equipment - but cost

The State Police Commission is meeting Friday to review proposals for financing the communications system. The following are Tommy Goodwin's observations of where things stand:

Will Simpson - appears to have contacted his agent from another vendor to Dan Leaster.

Johnny Mitcham - solidly behind Leaster.

Tennison - Leaster

Machlenn - probably Leaster, since McElroy back did not submit proposal

Gene Raff - probably Leaster

Rockefeller - ?

DKSN027162

Joe - we have real problem - have in "street talk" that Leaster put in unsoundly low bid knowing he can raise it once he gets it. A Page ASG has indicated something about the cost of the system.

I would like to recommend that James T. Bell be appointed to the Arkansas Development Finance Agency Board.

Mr. Bell has been in the mortgage banking business in Arkansas for sixteen years. He is a past President of the Mortgage Banker's Association of Arkansas. In addition, he has been involved in bond issue financing more than any one lender in the State. His knowledge of bond financing as relates to real estate would be of great assistance to your new board.

Sincerely,

Dennis Mills

Governor's brother testifies at Spa attorney's drug trial

Clardy

By JERRY MITCHELL
A-R Staff Writer

Roger Clinton, 28, the brother of Gov. Bill Clinton, testified Monday in U.S. District Court that "my life and my family's life was in considerable jeopardy" due to his cocaine debts.

Roger Clinton told his best friend, Dan Lasater, a Florida businessman and racehorse owner, about his drug debts, and Lasater loaned him $8,000, Clinton testified during the trial of Sam Anderson Jr., 28, of Hot Springs, a local attorney charged with cocaine distribution. U.S. District Judge Oren Harris is presiding.

Clinton said at first he tried to protect Anderson when investigators told him he would be arrested during the summer of 1984.

U.S. Attorney Ann Hutchinson asked Clinton why he is testifying now.

"My life was slipping away from me, ..." he replied. "I thought I had a friend in Sam."

Clinton then broke into tears: "I want to be honest with myself. This is a very good step in that direction It's a step to have my life. I'm here to tell the truth."

Clinton told the jury he sold cocaine to Anderson on several occasions between November 1983 and February 1984.

Clinton said he and Anderson used cocaine extensively and that Anderson used approximately 75 percent of what he bought for them.

Anderson is accused of purchasing cocaine from Clinton, chasing cocaine from Clinton and Maurice Rodriguez, 20, of New York City.

Clinton and Rodriguez pleaded guilty to conspiracy to distribute cocaine charges.

Myers

Clinton also pleaded guilty to one count of distributing cocaine.

He received a two-year prison sentence, and Rodriguez received three years.

Clinton also received a three-year suspended sentence.

Clinton said Monday he was slipping into debt with Rodriguez and "this was causing friction."

Clinton then arranged to buy 10 to 15 ounces of cocaine for him and Anderson from Rodriguez, with the majority of the cocaine to go to Anderson, Clinton said.

Clinton said he picked up 9 ounces of cocaine from Rodriguez and after going into a Hot Springs club for a short time he returned to his party and the roof crashed and the cocaine stolen from the party.

Clinton said he became frightened because he did not have the money to pay Rodriguez.

After borrowing the money from Lasater, Clinton told he paid Rodriguez $4,000. The rest of the money went to pay other debts, he said.

Under questioning by Floyd Clardy, a Bryant attorney representing Anderson, Clinton said he used cocaine in the back of a Volkswagen, Reg. 13, after he had already pleaded guilty to cocaine charges — something he said when sentenced Jan. 28.

When asked by Clardy why he did not tell the truth about a cocaine transaction which Clinton told the grand jury involved Anderson and took place June 27, 1984, he replied that he was in a "state of shock."

The government dropped the charge of distributing cocaine after Clardy filed an alibi which showed Anderson was in Fort Worth June 27.

"How about today?" Clardy asked. "Are you still in a state of shock?"

"Quite frankly I am," Clinton replied.

Clinton said he sold cocaine to government informant Rodney Meyers on three occasions for three grams, with prices between $100 and $150 per gram.

Clinton said he bought the cocaine on June 20, 1984, for Meyers from Anderson.

Clinton said he took as a joke Meyers offer to sell him up selling condominiums.

Clardy asked if Meyers had sought his aid for obtaining the governor's help in lifting a building ban.

Mark Webb, of the U.S. Attorney's office, objected to the testimony as irrelevant.

Harris sustained the objection.

Meyers testified that he bought cocaine from Clinton on June 20 and that Clinton told him the cocaine was from Anderson.

Meyers said he received a $200 check for airfare from the government and a $200 check for attending the trial. "I was not a paid informant."

In his opening statement, Hutchinson told the jury that "we will see what life on the fast track in Hot Springs, Ark., in 1983 and 1984 was like ... Every fast track has its end and this one has an end in this courtroom."

Clardy said in his opening statement that Anderson has used cocaine but has been not been charged with that.

Clardy spent most of his time attacking the credibility of Clinton as a witness and argued that Clinton decided to use Anderson as a "scapegoat."

A nine-woman, three-man jury was selected by noon Monday, and one man and one woman were selected as alternates. The trial is expected to last several days, possibly a week.

Clardy filed a motion Monday requesting a determination of whose fingerprints were found on a bag of cocaine sold to Meyers June 20. The government said in a motion Friday that the fingerprints were not Anderson's.

Clardy said in court Monday he will call the lab technician who examined the bag to determine whose fingerprints they are.

Clardy also requested permission to play videotaped conversations between Clinton, Meyers and others and included numerous pages of transcript from those conversations in the court record.

The trial will resume at 8:30 a.m. today in federal court.

Rodriguez may testify for the prosecution during today's proceedings.

INVESTIGATION OF WHITEWATER DEVELOPMENT CORPORATION AND RELATED MATTERS

TUESDAY, APRIL 30, 1996

U.S. SENATE,
COMMITTEE ON BANKING, HOUSING, AND URBAN AFFAIRS,
SPECIAL COMMITTEE TO INVESTIGATE WHITEWATER
DEVELOPMENT CORPORATION AND RELATED MATTERS,
Washington, DC.

The Committee met at 10:00 a.m., in room 216 of the Hart Senate Office Building, Senator Alfonse M. D'Amato (Chairman of the Committee) presiding.

OPENING COMMENTS OF CHAIRMAN ALFONSE M. D'AMATO

The CHAIRMAN. The Committee will come to order.

At this time I am going to ask our witnesses, Mr. Mitchum, Mr. Goodwin, Mr. Myers, and Mr. Young, if they would all rise for the purpose of taking the oath.

[Whereupon, Johnny B. Mitchum, Former Commissioner, Arkansas State Police; Thomas L. Goodwin, Former Director, Arkansas State Police; John W. Myers, Investment Adviser & Actuary; Paul B. Young, Jr.; Vice President, Public Finance Department, T.J. Raney & Sons; were called as witnesses and, having first been duly sworn, were examined and testified as follows:]

The CHAIRMAN. I would ask if any of the witnesses have any statements that they would like to make before we start, we would be pleased to receive them?

Mr. Mitchum.

SWORN TESTIMONY OF JOHNNY B. MITCHUM FORMER COMMISSIONER, ARKANSAS STATE POLICE

Mr. MITCHUM. Nothing.

The CHAIRMAN. Mr. Goodwin.

SWORN TESTIMONY OF THOMAS L. GOODWIN
FORMER DIRECTOR, ARKANSAS STATE POLICE

Mr. GOODWIN. No, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. Mr. Myers.

SWORN TESTIMONY OF JOHN W. MYERS INVESTMENT ADVISER & ACTUARY HIRED TO ANALYZE POLICE RADIO UNDERWRITING PROPOSAL

Mr. MYERS. No, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. Mr. Young.

SWORN TESTIMONY OF PAUL B. YOUNG, JR.
VICE PRESIDENT, PUBLIC FINANCE DEPARTMENT
T.J. RANEY & SONS

Mr. YOUNG. Nothing.

The CHAIRMAN. Senator Sarbanes, do you have a comment or a statement before we start?

Senator SARBANES. No, I am ready to go right to the questioning, Mr. Chairman.

Senator MACK. Mr. Chairman.

The CHAIRMAN. Senator Mack.

Senator MACK. I wonder if I may make a comment?

The CHAIRMAN. Certainly.

OPENING COMMENTS OF SENATOR CONNIE MACK

Senator MACK. Given yesterday's report in Newsweek that the First Lady's fingerprints were found on the long-lost billing records, I would like to ask that this Committee subpoena the FBI agent who conducted the analysis of the original records. It is clear to me that, whoever left those records in the White House residence is guilty of a felony. It is a question of who and what crime, perjury or obstruction of justice.

This is one of the most serious questions I think this Committee has to answer. If the FBI analysis brings us closer to a conclusion as to who is behind the mysterious appearance of these records, I think we have a duty to examine that evidence. I would assume that we would coordinate with the Independent Counsel's Office so as not to interfere with the pursuit of this matter.

The CHAIRMAN. I think it is important to ascertain the correctness—the facts as it relates to whose fingerprints may or may not be on the billing records. I don't think it is fair to anybody to have it out there that indeed the First Lady's fingerprints may or may not be on there. I think, aside the question of the First Lady, the question of whose fingerprints, if any are there. That is something I think we should ascertain.

Recognizing that the original documents were sent to the Independent Counsel. The manner in which we proceed to obtain them is something that I will look to Mr. Chertoff and Mr. Ben-Veniste for their advice as to the best manner in which to go forward. We have a number of other issues, legal entanglements, that they are reviewing, I will ask them if they wouldn't review them for us and suggest the appropriateness of seeking this information. Specifically, first, whose fingerprints, if any, are on the billing records; and, second, the manner in which they might advise us to move forward on that. I will ask them to confer during a break and we would go forward from there.

Senator MACK. I thank the Chairman.

OPENING COMMENTS OF SENATOR PAUL S. SARBANES

Senator SARBANES. Mr. Chairman, could I just observe that I think the use of the language "felony, perjury, and obstruction of justice" is a gross unfairness. We don't have any facts that would support any of that.

Talk about leaping to conclusions. You know, it's quite reasonable to think that the reason—if those fingerprints are on there, as has been asserted in a press story which I take it reflects a leak which, to the credit of the Independent Counsel's Office, they have denounced in very strong terms. A perfectly rational explanation for it is they were placed on there in the course of 1992 when apparently these records were being looked at as part of a response to questions raised during the campaign.

I don't think it does a service to anyone, and it certainly doesn't serve a fair and objective inquiry, to come in and start using language of that sort this morning.

The CHAIRMAN. Well, we are going to review the matter. I think it is absolutely essential that we ascertain whose fingerprints, if any, are on the documents. I don't think it is fair to anyone to have a story—and, of course, that raises a question of how did that even get out, but that is another matter.

Senator MACK. Mr. Chairman.

The CHAIRMAN. Certainly, Senator.

Senator MACK. Mr. Chairman, I think it's important here, again, what I said was: Whoever left the records would be involved, in my opinion, either in perjury or an obstruction of justice. "Whoever." I didn't say a particular person. But this Committee, as well as other Committees, and the Independent Counsel, have pursued this information for 2 years and they just showed up one day. And to kind of imply that somehow or other I have jumped to a conclusion by using these words, I think is a distortion of what I had to say.

The CHAIRMAN. We will review that. I believe it is important because if certain people have fingerprints there, the questions are: How did they get there? When did they get there? Why and when did they have access to them? And were they responsible for bringing the documents there? So that is a very real concern and it does raise important issues.

Mr. Chertoff.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

Good morning, panel.

Mr. GOODWIN, you were the head of the State Police in 1984 and 1985; correct?

Mr. GOODWIN. That's correct. Yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Am I right that it was in 1984 during the course of flying back from the funeral of a trooper who had been killed that you recommended to the then-Governor that a new rehabilitated communications system for the State Police be purchased by the State?

Mr. GOODWIN. That is correct.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Mr. Young, you were part of the syndicate of investment companies that ultimately got the contract to underwrite and sell the bonds? Is that correct?

Mr. YOUNG. Yes, that's correct.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You were with the firm of T.J. Raney & Sons?

Mr. YOUNG. That is correct.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Who were the two other members of your group?

Mr. YOUNG. E.F. Hutton and Lasater & Company.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Lasater & Company was a company owned by Daniel Lasater?

Mr. YOUNG. That's correct.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Did you know Daniel Lasater before you joined him in this syndicate?

Mr. YOUNG. I did not.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Now, I take it that because there were three partners in this syndicate, you agreed to split expenses three ways?

Mr. YOUNG. That is correct.

Mr. CHERTOFF. For example when you got legal bills they would go to one of the partners and then the other partners would be asked to contribute their share?

Mr. YOUNG. That is correct.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Am I also right that when you were dealing with these kinds of expenses, like legal bills, it was the typical requirement that the bills be itemized? You would get a lot of detail about what you were actually paying for?

Mr. YOUNG. Well, it's my recollection that there was really only one bill that we received other than those that were settled at closing. And that bill did have some detail of time and expense expended.

Mr. CHERTOFF. I take it that's important because under the regulations that control public finance in the municipal securities area you need to have some degree of detail and itemization on bills that are being paid by the underwriting group?

Mr. YOUNG. I think that's just good business.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Did you ever get a bill or a request for money from Lasater & Company that didn't give you any clue as to what they were asking for?

Mr. YOUNG. I don't think I received a bill that didn't give us any indication of what they suggested it was for.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Did you ever get a bill that didn't have any itemizing details?

Mr. YOUNG. We did get a bill, and I think that was a part of the documents that we submitted to the Committee that indicated what they expected to be reimbursed for at closing.

Mr. CHERTOFF. I want to direct your attention to that bill. I think it's in your package. It is dated August 21, 1985, and it was produced by your company.

Mr. YOUNG. Is it in this package of information?

Mr. CHERTOFF. It is in this package of information in front of you. It might be the first document, in fact.

Mr. YOUNG. I didn't see it as I glanced through this information.

Mr. CHERTOFF. All right. I'm going to have someone take it down to you.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Do you have a number on this?

Mr. CHERTOFF. It has got a little number "15" on the bottom in handwriting.

Mr. YOUNG. All right. Here it is. I see it.

The CHAIRMAN. Could we just hold up for a moment? Let's see if we cannot get some copies made for the Senators as well.

Mr. CHERTOFF. While we are waiting, you can look at the bill.

Mr. YOUNG. I have looked it over.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Apparently there is a problem with the copying machine, and I do not know where the other copies are.

The CHAIRMAN. Let me suggest this, while we are trying to get copies made, Mr. Chertoff, that you move on to some of the other witnesses. All right? Or another part of the question.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Let me ask you this, Colonel Goodwin. You first learned about this contract, or the possibility of this contract, when you were flying back with Governor Clinton from this funeral. Is that right?

Mr. GOODWIN. We were flying to the funeral.

Mr. CHERTOFF. And you raised the issue with him; right?

Mr. GOODWIN. Yes, I did.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Then you had further discussions about this early in the next year in 1985; is that right?

Mr. GOODWIN. Early in 1980—in fact, I think there was probably continuous conversation about it throughout that time.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Was there a point in time that Governor Clinton indicated to you that Dan Lasater, or Lasater's group, was interested in this contract?

Mr. GOODWIN. No, sir.

Mr. CHERTOFF. No?

Mr. GOODWIN. Any particular time?

Mr. CHERTOFF. Yes, was there a time in 1985 before the contract was actually awarded to Lasater—

Mr. GOODWIN. I don't think I ever knew of it until we advertised for proposals, and proposals were submitted in April 1985.

Mr. CHERTOFF. At that time you learned that Lasater was interested?

Mr. GOODWIN. Yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Did you have a discussion with the Governor about that?

Mr. GOODWIN. Yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. What did the Governor say to you about it?

Mr. GOODWIN. The Governor either said or implied—and this was after a brief conversation—Mr. Lasater had a reputation, I think everybody that was in the position to know, knew that Mr. Lasater was a user of cocaine—and the Governor either implied or said: We need to find out if Mr. Lasater is in trouble. We sure don't want there to be a chance of any of these financial institutions getting the contract and being arrested in the middle of it, something to that effect.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Now, I want to be quite clear on this. It is your testimony that at the time the Governor—did the Governor raise this with you, or did you raise this with him?

Mr. GOODWIN. I honestly cannot remember. I know it was discussed with him, but I do not know if I raised the question or if he did.

Mr. CHERTOFF. The understanding in the discussion was that Mr. Lasater was someone who used cocaine; right?

Mr. GOODWIN. That's correct.

Mr. CHERTOFF. In that discussion with Governor Clinton, did you raise with him whether it was appropriate to have someone who uses cocaine being the underwriter on a bond contract for a State Police Communications System?

Mr. GOODWIN. No, I don't think I did.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Do you see a problem with that, having a financial adviser with a cocaine problem doing State work?

Mr. GOODWIN. In my mind, yes, I would have seen a problem. However, Mr. Lasater had not been arrested, convicted, or even investigated.

Mr. CHERTOFF. We'll get to that in a second, but I want to start with this. You have indicated to us, and you have testified to this in your deposition, that you and Governor Clinton and other people as well understood or knew that Dan Lasater was a cocaine user. Did that fact alone in your mind create a reason to disqualify him from getting this State contract?

Mr. GOODWIN. Yes, I would say it did.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Did you say that to the Governor?

Mr. GOODWIN. Probably not in those words, no.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Did you say it in any words?

Mr. GOODWIN. Well, again, I think if I didn't say it I implied it.

The CHAIRMAN. Let me ask you this, Mr. Goodwin. Did you indicate that you were concerned?

Mr. GOODWIN. Yes, sir.

Mr. CHERTOFF. What did the Governor say to you?

Mr. GOODWIN. I think that's when he said, you need to find out, you know, if there is a possibility that Mr. Lasater would be arrested in the middle of this transaction. That may not be the exact words, but that's—

Mr. CHERTOFF. The substance.

Mr. GOODWIN. —essentially what it boiled down to, yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. That is important because it seems to me what you are saying is that you raised the question of having someone who has a cocaine problem handling this deal, but what the Governor came back to you with is not, we ought to find out whether the guy uses cocaine and disqualify him if he does, but rather whether he was going to be arrested or caught for using cocaine. That's what you said in your testimony, too. The Governor's focus was not on does he use cocaine; it was on whether he was going to be arrested while he was handling the transaction. Correct?

Mr. GOODWIN. That's the way I remember it. I think that that's the only way it would have affected him if he had of been arrested.

Mr. CHERTOFF. So you were to find out basically whether there was an investigation in the works that was targeting Mr. Lasater?

Mr. GOODWIN. Yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Did you do a background check on Mr. Lasater?

Mr. GOODWIN. No.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Do you do background checks on bidders normally when they bid on bid contracts for the State?

Mr. GOODWIN. No.

Mr. CHERTOFF. At the time you went out to examine whether Mr. Lasater was potentially the target of an investigation, were you familiar with the fact that in one of his former investment firms, was a partnership with a fellow by the name of George Locke?

Mr. GOODWIN. Yes, I am.

Mr. CHERTOFF. He's a former State Senator?

Mr. GOODWIN. That's correct.

Mr. CHERTOFF. And he had been a partner in Mr. Lasater's predecessor firm?

Mr. GOODWIN. Yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Am I right that around the same time this discussion came up, which is to say in early 1985, there was actually a Federal Court case, a bankruptcy case involving Mr. Locke? Do you remember that?

Mr. GOODWIN. I remember it. I remember that Locke was arrested. I don't think we had any investigative work done within that case. I'm not familiar with it at all.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Let me see if I can refresh you a little bit. Do you remember that at the same time that Mr. Lasater was being considered, or was in the mix for this contract, there was a Federal Court case going on in Little Rock in which a Federal bankruptcy judge, made a statement, or made a determination that he disbelieved Dan Lasater's sworn testimony, and that there was evidence that he was involved in a conspiracy to defraud creditors of Mr. Locke?

Mr. GOODWIN. No, sir, I'm not aware, or I don't remember that.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Where is Federal Court in Little Rock relative to where your offices were in Little Rock?

Mr. GOODWIN. The Federal Court in Little Rock is downtown on East Capitol Street, about 700 West Capitol, something like that. My office was located about 6 miles west in the western part of Little Rock.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Would it have been difficult to send someone down to Federal Court in Little Rock and get the records of Mr. Lasater's testimony and the finding by the Federal judge that Mr. Lasater had lied under oath?

Mr. GOODWIN. I don't know if it would have or not. I don't even know if we were aware that the trial was going on, or what the testimony was.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Now, I still want to keep focused on this effort that you made at the Governor's request to find out the likelihood that Mr. Lasater would be arrested or be the target of an investigation during this transaction.

At around this same time, again in early 1985, while this work was being done on this radio issue, there was a trial of a lawyer by the name of Anderson, also in Federal Court in Little Rock, that was a drug case. Do you remember that case?

Mr. GOODWIN. I remember Anderson, and I remember a problem with him concerning drugs; yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. And that was a case in which the Governor's brother testified as a witness? That's Roger Clinton?

Mr. GOODWIN. I don't know if I was aware that he testified as a witness or not. I probably was.

Mr. CHERTOFF. It was in the newspapers?

Mr. GOODWIN. Like I said, I don't remember, but I'm sure I was aware.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Do you remember from the trial that Roger Clinton testified that Mr. Lasater had loaned him $8,000 to pay off a drug debt?

Mr. GOODWIN. I remember reading that in the newspaper, and probably saw it on the evening news.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Did you also know during the trial that one of the witnesses testified that there was actually an ongoing undercover effort to target Dan Lasater for narcotics trafficking?

Mr. GOODWIN. When would that have been?

Mr. CHERTOFF. In the trial in February 1985, which is a matter of a month or so—

Mr. GOODWIN. No.

Mr. CHERTOFF. —before the Governor spoke to you.

Mr. GOODWIN. No, sir, I don't remember that.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Let me see if I can refresh your memory by showing you a portion of an article in the Arkansas Gazette. It is DKS 17635. It has a headline that says, "Didn't Have Large Cocaine Dealings With Roger Clinton, Lawyer Testifies."

Mr. GOODWIN. It's headed "The Governor's Brother Testifies That Spa Attorneys"—

Mr. CHERTOFF. No. I think it is the next couple of articles. It is a 3-column article from The Gazette.

The CHAIRMAN. If you look at the monitor, Mr. Goodwin, you will see what it looks like.

Mr. GOODWIN. All right. I have it. Yes, sir.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Am I right that at this point in time the Arkansas Gazette was one of the two statewide newspapers?

Mr. GOODWIN. That's correct.

Mr. CHERTOFF. I want to direct your attention to the middle column. It is reporting on the testimony of Mr. Anderson, who is the lawyer who was charged with cocaine dealing in this particular case. You see there is a little subhead that says, "Meeting Arranged" and it goes down and it says:

In the summer of 1984, Anderson said Roger Clinton contacted him and told him that he had to see him. They arranged to meet in a boat on Lake Hamilton because [Roger] Clinton said he didn't want to be seen in a public place with Anderson—

Then I can't read the next few words.

Anderson said [Roger] Clinton told him that he had been approached by State Police investigators and that he was "very, very frightened . . . , totally frightened to death." He said [Roger] Clinton informed him that the investigators wanted to "set up" three people—[Roger] Clinton's drug supplier, Anderson and Lasater.

Do you remember reading that article?

Mr. GOODWIN. I don't remember reading it, but I remember the investigation. I think we were deeply involved in the investigation on Roger Clinton.

Mr. CHERTOFF. What this indicates is that in February 1985, which is 2 months before the Governor asks you about Dan Lasater and whether he is going to be the target of an investigation, 2 months before that request from Governor Clinton, there was actually sworn testimony in U.S. District Court reported in the newspaper that you've acknowledged is based on an investigation your own police were involved in that indicated specifically that Lasater was the target of a drug investigation. Is that correct?

Mr. GOODWIN. I don't think that is correct; no, sir. I don't think we started the investigation on Lasater until after the contracts were awarded on the communications system.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Well, the article is dated February 28, 1985. It is based solely on sworn testimony in a Federal Courtroom with a prosecutor, a defense attorney, a judge and a jury. This witness gets up and takes the oath and testifies that he was told that there was an investigation—that he'd been told by Roger Clinton that Roger Clinton had been asked to set up Anderson, a drug supplier, and Dan Lasater.

This testimony in Court occurred 2 months before the Governor asked you whether Mr. Lasater was the subject of an investigation or the target of an investigation. Is it your testimony you were unaware of any efforts to target Mr. Lasater as reported in this paper and as sworn to in Federal Court?

Mr. GOODWIN. What I remember is that on the Lasater investigation, that sometime shortly after this financial transaction on the communications system, one of our employees, an investigator in the Criminal Investigation Division, I don't know if you'd say luckily, or just happened to talk to a former employee of Mr. Lasater, which started the investigation on Mr. Lasater.

Now, I know his name was mentioned back during the time we were investigating I guess Sam Anderson and Roger Clinton, but I don't think we ever did an investigation on him.

Mr. CHERTOFF. I take it you neither brought to Governor Clinton's attention nor did he bring to your attention anything about this testimony in Federal Court in a case in which his own brother testified which established that Lasater had been the target of a drug investigation as early as February 1985, before the contract was awarded?

Mr. GOODWIN. No, sir. I don't think he ever brought it to my attention, and I don't think I was ever aware of it. If I was, I have forgotten it.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Let me go back to this bill, Mr. Young, I asked you about, which I now think we all have copies of. It is a bill dated August 21, 1985, and it is to you from Michael Drake, Senior Vice President of Lasater & Company. What it says is: "Lasater & Company submits the following expenses for reimbursement on the referenced transaction: Travel, entertainment, and miscellaneous $750; Legal, organizational, and miscellaneous $26,500." Do you remember getting this bill?

Mr. YOUNG. Yes, I do.

Mr. CHERTOFF. And am I correct that this bill differed from other bills you had received earlier involving legal expenses from the Mitchell Williams firm which actually had a detailed, itemized list of what the firm did?

Mr. YOUNG. Yes, that's correct.

Mr. CHERTOFF. What did you do with this bill?

Mr. YOUNG. It is my recollection that when we settled the account for this transaction, we paid the $750.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Did you pay the $26,500?

Mr. YOUNG. No, we did not.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Why not?

Mr. YOUNG. As you pointed out, I don't think they submitted any detail for what this out-of-pocket expense was.

Mr. CHERTOFF. And was this a matter that was discussed at the board of T.J. Raney & Sons?

Mr. YOUNG. I don't recall, or I wouldn't have any way of knowing because I'm not a member of the board, or wasn't a member of the board of T.J. Raney.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Did you hear about discussions at the board of T.J. Raney about this $26,500 and what it was for?

Mr. YOUNG. I do not remember that.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Was there some question about whether this was a legitimate bill, since it had no backup and no detail?

Mr. YOUNG. Well, without any detail about what it was for, clearly if we didn't pay it we had some question about whether it was something we should pay.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Did you call Mr. Drake up and ask him what the heck the $26,500 was for?

Mr. YOUNG. I'm sure I probably did.

Mr. CHERTOFF. What did he tell you?

Mr. YOUNG. I don't recall.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Did he give you any detail?

Mr. YOUNG. He must not have. We didn't pay it.

Mr. CHERTOFF. I can reason that out myself. What I'm trying to get from you is what actually happened? I mean, here you get a bill for a sizable chunk of change. It has no backup. It makes common sense you're going to call Michael Drake up. You're going to say, what is it? What did he say to you?

Mr. YOUNG. I really don't recall. Looking at the bill, I would have thought that maybe it might have been just a way to readjust the profit percentages in the transaction; just, in effect, a request for a little bit more of the pie, so to speak.

Mr. CHERTOFF. In other words, you thought it might be a way to get some money that was not really for legal, organizational, and miscellaneous expenses, but would be used for some other reason?

Mr. YOUNG. Well, just in effect, would be a little bit higher profit distribution.

Mr. CHERTOFF. And that was never paid; right?

Mr. YOUNG. That's correct.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Speaking about law firms, your syndicate actually hired the Mitchell Williams firm to work for you in the period that was running up to the preparation, the passage, and the signing of the legislation that authorizes this police contract; right?

Mr. YOUNG. Early on I'm not sure I considered that we engaged them, so to speak, to work on our behalf. They did work on behalf of our team, together, to help develop the legislation and other things to implement the transaction.

Mr. CHERTOFF. It was, in fact, Mr. Lasater who hired them to do it; right?

Mr. YOUNG. If there was some arrangement early on that amounted to an engagement, they would have done that; correct.

Mr. CHERTOFF. This is now-Governor Jim Guy Tucker's law firm; is that right?

Mr. YOUNG. I think that Governor Tucker was a member of that firm at that particular time.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Of course, he wasn't Governor at that time; right?

Mr. YOUNG. Right. Correct.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Now, you actually got bills from Mr. Tucker's law firm for the work they did during this period of time before the legislation was passed; right?

Mr. YOUNG. I think that we got a bill, and I think that again was a part of the submission of materials we presented to the Committee. We got a bill that was forwarded to us from Michael Drake that had been submitted to their firm by the Mitchell firm requesting that we pay a portion of that expense—a third, as I recall.

Mr. CHERTOFF. So there is no mistake in your mind that in the period during which the legislation was being prepared, that the Mitchell firm was working for your syndicate and you were paying the money to do the work on the bill; right?

Mr. YOUNG. They were working with us in that effort, and after the legislation was passed we received the bill and, from my recollection, we paid a third of it.

Mr. CHERTOFF. I want to even show you, there is an itemized bill which is in your package. It bears the handwritten number "83" in the corner, and it is dated February 20, 1985. It is "For Services Rendered as of 1/31/85." I want you to turn to page 83. The numbers are at the bottom. Do you see a statement for 1/18/85, "Review revised DFA"—that would be Development Finance Authority—"Bill for Governor's Office, prepare revised bills for distribution." Do you see that?

Mr. YOUNG. I see that.

Mr. CHERTOFF. That is part of the bill that you shared in paying for the Mitchell Williams firm's work on preparing this bill, which began as an ADFA bill, and then later became the Police Radio Bill; is that right?

Mr. YOUNG. That's what that statement appears to refer to, but I don't recall that it was originally drafted as an ADFA bill, but that may have been the case.

Mr. CHERTOFF. And you paid this bill?

Mr. YOUNG. I think that is correct. We paid a third of it.

Mr. CHERTOFF. So you and your syndicate, this firm was working for you and you were paying them for preparing this legislation; right? That is what it says in the bill.

Mr. YOUNG. Well, it says in the bill that it was a bill to Lasater & Company. It wasn't a bill to our firm, or our account.

The CHAIRMAN. You did pay one-third?

Mr. YOUNG. Yes, we did.

The CHAIRMAN. Come on, let's stop quibbling.

Mr. CHERTOFF. I want to read you the testimony of Ms. Betsey Wright last Thursday:

Ms. WRIGHT. There were no bids. We were establishing legislation. The Mitchell firm wrote our ADFA legislation, Mr. Chertoff. This was a spinoff piece of separate legislation. The Mitchell firm obviously was going to continue doing this. I know nothing about the Mitchell firm's relationship with Mr. Lasater, nothing. I'm not in the business of keeping track of who has what law firm.

Now this is again Betsey Wright. You remember Betsey Wright? She was the Chief of Staff to the Governor at this time?

Mr. YOUNG. I do know who she is.

Then we go on:

Mr. CHERTOFF. Whether or not, now did you know that they had been hired to work on this particular matter by Dan Lasater?

Ms. WRIGHT. I did not.

Then she concludes by saying:

Ms. WRIGHT. All I know is that the work that the Mitchell firm did at our request in working with us was on our legislation that was part of the Governor's package on the Governor's initiatives and it had nothing to do with whatever else they were doing for Dan Lasater. That's all I know.

Now, you would agree with me, Mr. Young, that that's not true? That this bill—which you paid one-third of—absolutely proves that when they were prepared this ADFA bill for the Governor's office, they were actually working for your syndicate, for Mr. Lasater, and you were paying them for it. Right?

Mr. YOUNG. They were working as part of our group, and to the extent that we made a payment on the bill, I guess you are correct that they were working for our efforts.

Mr. CHERTOFF. And Betsey Wright is incorrect when she says that they were working exclusively for the Governor?

Mr. YOUNG. Well, I cannot really evaluate the accuracy of what she's saying.

Mr. CHERTOFF. In fact, would you agree with me that the reason that you—I mean, you actually began this effort to get this contract working with Hutton, and Lasater only came in as the third partner a little bit later? Is that right?

Mr. YOUNG. No, that is not correct.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Well, putting aside the timing of this, would you agree with me that the reason Lasater was brought in was precisely because Lasater was seen as having a relationship with the Governor?

Mr. YOUNG. No, that is not correct.

Mr. CHERTOFF. I want to read you the testimony of Mr. Michael J. Drake concerning his conversation with Dan Lasater back at the time, and this is at page 87 of his deposition.

Question: Could you explain to me in your words how you relayed that to him and how you characterized it? What did Mr. Synder—

Answer: I said, as well as I can remember—it was a long time ago—a T.J. Raney has come to us, because of your relationship with Bill, to try to get this legislation passed that will enable us to take a proposal to the State Police Commission to sell these securities and help them acquire this new communications system, this hot-shot thing Motorola has come up with.

You dispute that you went to Lasater & Company because of Mr. Lasater's relationship with Bill Clinton?

Mr. YOUNG. That's correct.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You dispute Mr. Drake's testimony?

Mr. YOUNG. That's not my recollection of what—

Mr. CHERTOFF. Mr. Drake also goes on to say, "We chose the Mitchell law firm in Little Rock to draft the legislation for us." Now, you agree that that part of the testimony is true and is supported by the bill; right?

Mr. YOUNG. That's correct.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Did you know that the Mitchell firm also rendered the legal opinion that ultimately decided the outcome of the bidding contest between the Lasater group and First Capitol, which was the bidder that was the kind of next-in-line to get the contract?

Mr. YOUNG. They did what? I'm not sure I understand what your statement was.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Didn't the very same law firm that you guys paid for to write the legislation with the Governor's office, didn't they also get called upon to write the critical opinion that wound up determining that the Lasater bid would be the winning bid on this contract?

Mr. YOUNG. No, they did not.

Mr. CHERTOFF. I am going to show you a letter dated May 16, 1985, from the Mitchell Williams firm. It is in your package. Take a moment to get that out. Do you recognize that?

Mr. YOUNG. I have not seen this letter. If I have seen this letter, it's been some time ago. I don't recall it.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Mr. Young, let me set the stage. The stage is that when this selection was made, First Capitol, which was one of the competing bidders, complained because what they said is that the Raney/Hutton/Lasater bid was based upon a proposal that allowed the winning bidders to kind of keep the money and invest it for a period of 6 months before they distributed it back to the investors. What the losing bidder said was, "Hey, we didn't know you were allowed to do that under the law. As we read the legislation, you have to pay the investors every month. And if we had known that, we could have redone our bid and beaten the Lasater Company."

To resolve this critical issue of interpreting the legislation, not surprisingly the Director of Purchasing turned to the Mitchell Williams firm and got an opinion from the Mitchell Williams firm which had drafted the legislation that said that it was within the legislation to have Lasater structure the deal the way he had done in his bid. And that is what allowed Lasater to win the contract.

So my question to you is this: Whether or not you specifically remember this letter, Mr. Young, do you recognize the Mitchell, Williams, Selig, Jackson & Tucker firm, Jim Guy Tucker's firm, that wrote this opinion that made the final decision on who would win this as being the very same firm that wrote the legislation for the Governor's office while you were paying them to do it?

Mr. YOUNG. Well, I would disagree with your statement about what the issue in this letter is. This letter says the question presented is whether Section 5 of the Act requires the lease payments as defined in Section 3 of the Act are required to be made on a monthly basis to investors who purchase an interest in a lease agreement authorized by the Act.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Right. This is my last question. Wasn't the complaint that was raised by the losing bidder that they thought you had to pay on a monthly basis? Whereas, the Lasater, your group, took the position you could hold the money for 6 months and invest it and then pay the money back after you've made some money in the stock market, or in other securities? And didn't this letter reach a decision that said that the proposal that your group put in was in fact permissible, notwithstanding what appeared to be in the law a requirement of monthly payments?

Mr. YOUNG. Our proposal was prepared, in my recollection, exactly like all the other proposals that were presented to the State Police. I think the one that you are referring to was the only one that interpreted the law as requiring monthly payments to investors. They simply misunderstood the law. And the other presenters, or proposers, on this transaction had other law firms in addition to the Mitchell firm involved with their transaction that took the same interpretation we did.

Mr. CHERTOFF. The legal firm that decided that your interpretation was right and theirs was wrong was the legal firm that you had hired; right?

Mr. YOUNG. They presented an opinion on that issue. I don't think that resolved the question of who had the best proposal.

The CHAIRMAN. Senator Sarbanes.

Senator SARBANES. I yield to Counsel.

The CHAIRMAN. Mr. Ben-Veniste.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Good morning, panel.

Before we get into the business of this panel, let me simply note that in addition to the leak relating to Mrs. Clinton's fingerprints being present on the billing records, there was an additional leak that we ought to mention, I guess, in the spirit of equal opportunity leaking from the Independent Counsel's Office, to say that Margaret Williams' fingerprints were not found on the billing records. We've had much speculation and much to do about whether Ms. Williams carried those records out of Mr. Foster's office, the presumption being made that they were in Mr. Foster's office the night of Mr. Foster's suicide, and it would seem that those conclusions by the FBI are equally consistent with the notion that Ms. Williams did not handle those billing records.

The record that we have established is that in 1992 these records were the subject of press inquiries during the 1992 campaign; that they were reviewed by Mr. Foster and others; and it was certainly logical that Mrs. Clinton would have handled them in 1992.

So getting to this morning's hearing—

Senator SARBANES. Mr. Chairman, could I just interject there?

The CHAIRMAN. Certainly.

Senator SARBANES. I do think that this question of leaks is an important one. We discussed it last week, and we obviously will follow up on it. But I do want to read in what the spokesperson for Mr. Starr said. She said:

That the Office would not comment on the accuracy of reports that Mrs. Clinton's fingerprints had been lifted off the billing records, or even whether such investigative information exists.

We do, however, take seriously the claim that confidential information might have been disclosed. The public disclosure of any investigative information by a member of this office or any other law enforcement agency would constitute an intolerable breach of confidentiality.

I just think that ought to be in the record. We had that article, and then there's a story today that says, "FBI fingerprint experts who found First Lady Hillary Rodham Clinton's prints on long-lost Rose Law Firm billing records . . ." So now it has become, as it were, supposedly an established record. It just shows how this thing progresses. It goes on to say, ". . . did not find those of her Chief of Staff, Margaret A. Williams, law enforcement sources say."

This kind of leaking of material really makes it very difficult to carry on, I think, an orderly inquiry by this Committee, and it certainly complicates the inquiry by the Independent Counsel.

The CHAIRMAN. If I might, Senator, I think that goes to the heart of the matter that Senator Mack raised. I think we should ascertain how we can go about getting that information, and whether it is true or not true. I have no way of knowing, nor have I indicated that I believe fingerprints are there, or not there, or whose may, or whose may not be there.

I am somewhat surprised that there are any fingerprints, given the manner in which the original papers were handled. We had extensive testimony with respect to that. We had the testimony that came from Jane Sherburne who was here. Ms. Sherburne was concerned about the methodology, whether they should make copies at the time, or exactly what should be done, and she raised that issue.

I think there was the counsel, Mr. Schulke, who was there for Ms. Huber, as well as Mr. Kendall, and the judgment was made to make copies and to send the original over to the FBI. So I don't know whether there are any fingerprints there. Certainly no one on this Committee had this information. No one on this Committee could have leaked it. Whether it was leaked from FBI sources or sources with the Independent Counsel, I have no way of knowing; and whether they are legitimate or not; or whether Maggie Williams' fingerprints are there or not there, or the First Lady's, I just don't know.

But I do believe that Senator Mack's request is one that this Committee should follow through on. The manner in which we do it I would certainly, as I have indicated, look to work with the Minority Counsel and with the Ranking Member to establish a methodology for attempting to find out whose fingerprints, if any, were on those billing records.

Senator SARBANES. I don't object to the method. I do object to the use of the terms "felony, perjury, and obstruction of justice" as though it was some sort of established fact. I note that in the story in The Washington Post it was pointed out that it was possible Mrs. Clinton handled these records during the 1992 campaign.

The CHAIRMAN. Well, it could be——

Senator SARBANES. And that story goes on to say, "Fingerprints can remain intact on some materials, including paper, for years." So, you know, it is one thing to try to get an explanation; it is another to sort of leap and start making charges or accusations.

The CHAIRMAN. I think it is important that we——

Senator MACK. Mr. Chairman.

The CHAIRMAN. Yes, Senator Mack.

Senator MACK. My colleagues on the other side want it both ways. They want to charge that I'm jumping to conclusions, but yet in the same discussions they make the charge that the Special Counsel, the Special Prosecutor, is the one responsible for leaking the information, which is somebody jumping to a conclusion there. I mean, all I am doing is raising the issue here, and I think it is a legitimate issue to raise.

Senator SARBANES. All I did was quote the language of the Independent Counsel. I didn't make the charge one way or the other. I mean, they're the ones who have the records, and as I understand it, are doing the fingerprint examination. But in any event——

Senator MACK. I am referring to Mr. Ben-Veniste. He certainly, I think, made the comment that the Special Prosecutor or Independent Counsel had leaked that information.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Well, if I may, what I said was that the FBI, or the Independent Counsel, someone working with these records, appeared to have leaked the information, and I think that's consistent with the statement made by the Independent Counsel's Office which regretted the fact that a leak had occurred.

The CHAIRMAN. I think we all regret when leaks occur. But I also think we shouldn't rush to judgment, and I am not suggesting who did or didn't, but there's a question as to some information that appeared back in late January or early February. I am convinced that no one from our staff leaked that; that there was great access to those documents. We'll attempt to narrow that down, who may or may not have in this instance, and certainly it would appear that no one from the staff has ever had any access whatsoever to it.

But questions remain: What about the facts? Are there fingerprints? I don't know. Should we ascertain if there are? I think it is reasonable before we conclude our inquiry to certainly attempt to ascertain that. The appropriate manner in which we do it, I am going to leave to our two distinguished Counsels to see if they can't work out in what manner we should proceed to get the information as to whose fingerprints, if any, are on there. That I believe is appropriate and is something I think we should follow through on.

Mr. Ben-Veniste.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. I presume that my time has been restored?

The CHAIRMAN. We will give you whatever time you feel is necessary.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Thank you.

Let's talk about, in context, what this contract back 11 years ago in Arkansas between the State of Arkansas and the Bond Underwriters was all about. First, let's find out what it's not about. Is there anyone on this panel who believes that this bond contract had something to do with the Madison Bank or Madison Savings & Loan?

[Witnesses nod in the negative.]

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Did it have anything to do with Whitewater?

Senator SARBANES. You are all shaking your head "no," but that doesn't show up with the reporter. So if you don't think it had anything to do with it, you need to say, no, it didn't.

Mr. YOUNG. No.

Mr. MYERS. No.

Mr. GOODWIN. I have no knowledge.

Mr. MITCHUM. No.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Did it have anything to do with the Whitewater investment which was entered into, as I understand it, back in 1978? Did this transaction somehow intersect with Whitewater?

Mr. YOUNG. No.

Mr. MYERS. No.

Mr. GOODWIN. No.

Mr. MITCHUM. No.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. So we are looking at a transaction that involved the State of Arkansas and some business that it was doing with bond underwriting back 11 years ago that had nothing to do with the McDougals, Madison Savings & Loan, or the Whitewater investment. Just so that we are all on the same page here.

Mr. YOUNG. Yes.

Mr. MYERS. [Nods in the affirmative.]

Mr. GOODWIN. That is my understanding.

Mr. MITCHUM. No, sir, not to my knowledge.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Now since we are looking at this, I suppose what one would want to find out, if there was some kind of a rigged or phony deal back 11 years ago in Arkansas, was whether this whole bond underwriting was a pretext to build a bridge, as it were, over a gully that no one travelled over, essentially something that was unnecessary.

Let me turn to you, Mr. Goodwin. Your background is with the Arkansas State Police. I understand you had 38 years of service before your retirement?

Mr. GOODWIN. That's correct.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Who appointed you to be the Director?

Mr. GOODWIN. Governor Frank White.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Governor Frank White. Was he a Republican or a Democrat?

Mr. GOODWIN. He was a Republican.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. When did Governor White appoint you to be the Director of the State Police?

Mr. GOODWIN. July 1, 1981.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Mr. Mitchum, what was your role back in the 1980's in Arkansas?

Mr. MITCHUM. Relative to this issue, I was on the Arkansas State Police Commission.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. As I understand it, you served on the Arkansas State Police Commission from 1982 until 1989? Is that correct?

Mr. MITCHUM. That's correct.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Who appointed you to the Arkansas State Police Commission?

Mr. MITCHUM. Governor Frank White.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. So you were also appointed by a Republican Governor prior to the bond underwriting that we are going to look at here today?

Mr. MITCHUM. That's correct.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Now do either of you individuals feel that the proposal put together by Raney, E.F. Hutton, and Lasater was not the best bid put in for that contract?

Mr. MITCHUM. I believe it was the best deal for the people of Arkansas.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Mr. Goodwin.

Mr. GOODWIN. Yes. I had to depend on other people, but I think I depended on good people; good, honest, and hard-working people.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Mr. Myers, you are an actuary? Correct?

Mr. MYERS. That's correct.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. You were brought in by Mr. Mitchum, if I understand it, to essentially run the numbers to compare the various bids that had been put forward for this underwriting contract?

Mr. MYERS. That's correct.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. What was your conclusion, sir, as to who had put forward the best bid for the State of Arkansas?

Mr. MYERS. I believe at the time that I concurred with their decision that it would be the Raney/Hutton/Lasater bid.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Of course, Mr. Young, you were a partisan since you were a part of that triumvirate who put in the best bid, but I take it your position was that you had put forward the best bid?

Mr. YOUNG. Yes, it was.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Now let me ask whether there was a need for police radios in Arkansas in 1985? Mr. Goodwin, could you tell us how it came to pass that you needed to raise the funds which this bond underwriting addressed?

Mr. GOODWIN. Well, to begin with, the system we operated under was a low-band AM radio system. If I'm not mistaken, our studies showed that we got about 35 to 40 percent coverage statewide with that system.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. What does that mean? That more than half of the State was out of radio communication?

Mr. GOODWIN. More than half the State was dead as far as police communications. The new system brought us up, and the contract was for, to 90 percent coverage, statewide—90 percent coverage 90 percent of the time. All indications that we got from the surveys that we ran, they exceeded the 90 percent required.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Was there a particular incident in Arkansas that highlighted the need to upgrade and replace the existing radio communications network for the State Police?

Mr. GOODWIN. Yes, I think it did. I don't know that it really had anything to do with it, but we had a trooper by the name of Louis Bryant that was shot and killed on a traffic stop just east of De Queen, Arkansas.

Louis Bryant was in one of those dead spots where he could not call into his Troop Headquarters. I confirmed that myself shortly after the killing by being in that location and tried to transmit out. Yes, that particular case was used as an example of why we needed a new system.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. So it is clear beyond any doubt that there was a need to replace the antiquated communications system being used by the Arkansas State Police in the mid-1980's. Now the question is: Was it appropriate to raise the funds to pay for the new radio communications system by issuing bonds. Was there any question about that in your mind?

Mr. GOODWIN. I don't recall any questions, ever, by anybody that it was inappropriate to do.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. So there was a need for the radio equipment. There was a need for a way to finance the purchase of the radio equipment. And there is no one who says that it was inappropriate to finance those purchases through the use of bonds.

That radio equipment has been in place now for 11 years. Was there any suggestion that the equipment or the purchase of that equipment was a phony deal, or was rigged in some way, and you got kind of a lemon that no one else would take?

Mr. GOODWIN. To my knowledge we had very little criticism—the biggest criticism I think we had probably came from the Sheriff's Departments who did not have the funds to actually piggyback onto the program. You know, I don't know if it was disappointment or what, but there was some feedback from Sheriffs on it.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. But in terms of the State Police itself, you indicated that with the upgraded system, the new system, you now had better than 90 percent coverage statewide by your troopers communicating through the new equipment; correct?

Mr. GOODWIN. That's correct.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Now let's talk about how the process went forward. Mr. Mitchum, were you specifically designated to be the hands-on representative of the State Police in connection with the solicitation and receipt of the bids?

Mr. MITCHUM. Not specifically.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. What role did you play?

Mr. MITCHUM. Since I was the only Commissioner with a finance background, I became sort of the in-house number-cruncher, if you will, by virtue of my—

Senator SARBANES. When did you become a Commissioner, Mr. Mitchum?

Mr. MITCHUM. In 1982.

Senator SARBANES. Is that by appointment of the Governor?

Mr. MITCHUM. Yes, sir.

Senator SARBANES. Confirmed or just a Governor's appointment?

Mr. MITCHUM. Confirmed by the Senate.

Senator SARBANES. Who appointed you?

Mr. MITCHUM. Governor Frank White.

Senator SARBANES. Governor White?

Mr. MITCHUM. Yes, sir.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Did you draw upon Mr. Myers' expertise in connection with evaluating the bids that were received?

Mr. MITCHUM. Yes.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. How did that come about?

Mr. MITCHUM. I did some computations on the proposals that were received in response to the RFP's and came to a conclusion that I thought the Raney/Hutton/Lasater proposal was the best one in concept. And, knowing that this was a volatile issue—and at that time I think it was the largest bond issue that had ever been done by the State government in Arkansas—I wanted some independent verification or corroboration. So I talked with my attorney, Robert Hardin, who referred me basically to Mr. Myers.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. He referred you to Mr. Myers as an expert who could look at the numbers and the proposals with a fresh eye and determine whether you were correct in terms of your analysis?

Mr. MITCHUM. That's correct.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Mr. Myers, you have indicated that at the end of the day after you were finished with your evaluation, and I won't ask you to get into the actuarial processes at this point that were applied, but perhaps at some point today we will hear all of that, but I would like to get, again, to the bottom line. Did you agree with Commissioner Mitchum?

Mr. MYERS. It has been a long time, and I am looking at what these notes are here.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. I understand that.

Mr. MYERS. I calculated some numbers in the analysis as not readable. I can't say exactly whether I said the number one bidder was First Capital or Raney/Hutton/Lasater as the way these numbers are presented right here. I really don't have a very clear picture of that.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Well, I understand it is a long, long time ago, and to ask for your recollection on the computation is one thing—

Mr. MYERS. I think as I said early on the basis of what I recollect, I think I went along with Mr. Mitchum's concurrence on it. I believe that's what I came to the conclusion.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Mr. Young, the notion here has been put forward that you were very interested in associating with Mr. Lasater for some reason, associated with Mr. Lasater's perceived connection to Governor Clinton. Let me ask you when you first heard about the opportunity to submit a proposal with respect to this radio contract, did you seek out Mr. Lasater or did you go somewhere else to partner up?

Mr. YOUNG. We initially, when we first became aware of the transaction because of its size and complications, and because of our size and capitalization at that time, this was the type of transaction we would normally partner with another investment firm on. Our first call to consider another partner was to Stevens, a Little Rock investment firm.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Now according to Ms. Wright's testimony before this Committee, prior to Governor Clinton's election in 1992—1982, I'm sorry, I get decades mixed up sometimes, that Wurthen & Company, and I take it you in partnership with Wurthen & Company, had essentially a lock on the bond business; that you were the principal or Wurthen was the principal underwriter who got the State of Arkansas' business?

Mr. YOUNG. I think you might be referring to Stevens?

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Stevens, I'm sorry.

Mr. YOUNG. Well, both Stevens and Raney had been in existence in Arkansas since the early 1930's, and we had, of the two firms, we probably did more business in Arkansas than any other of the firms in the State at that time.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. And is it fair to say that following Governor Clinton's 1982 election and going forward, the process was opened up and that more underwriting companies were awarded contracts with the State?

Mr. YOUNG. I think it is fair to say that after that time that certainly more firms have been involved in State business.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Now the notion has put forward that legislation creating the opportunity to raise funds by way of a bond offering somehow was tailor-made to favor you, Mr. Young, and your group. Is there anyone sitting at this table who subscribes to the position that, as a result of the legislation, the other bidders were disadvantaged because the bid process was skewed toward the Raney/Hutton/Lasater bid?

Mr. YOUNG. No.

Mr. MYERS. I have no knowledge.

Mr. GOODWIN. I don't believe that.

Mr. MITCHUM. No.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. I am advised that the legislation for the bond underwriting that provided for the State to solicit the bids was signed on April 4, 1985. That is the same day there was a fundraiser in the Madison Bank. Now it is possible that this could just be a coincidence. Is there anyone sitting at this panel who has any reason to believe that on April 4, 1985, there was some connection between a fundraiser over at the Madison Savings & Loan and the signing by the Governor of the legislation allowing you to go forward to solicit bids for the radio contracts?

Mr. Mitchum.

Mr. MITCHUM. No

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Mr. Goodwin.

Mr. GOODWIN. I have no reason to believe there's a connection.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Mr. Myers.

Mr. MYERS. I have no reason to believe anything—

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Mr. Young.

Mr. YOUNG. No.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. One of the things one might look at, if there was some kind of shenanigan going on associated with this contract back 11 years ago, is whether there was a windfall made by the winning bidders. I guess, Mr. Young, you are the person who could comment on that. Certainly from the police standpoint, if I understand the testimony of Mr. Mitchum and Mr. Goodwin, they were satisfied with the process. They thought that you had submitted the best bid. The radios all performed satisfactorily, and from the State of Arkansas' standpoint everything worked out well.

From your point of view as one of the three in the triumvirate that made the winning bid for the bond underwriting, can you tell us whether you made a profit or suffered a loss?

Mr. YOUNG. We did make a profit.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. How much of a profit was it?

Mr. YOUNG. I'd have to look at some documentation just to refresh myself on the actual profit, but I know that the total gross spread for the total underwriting fee that we charged was 2.5 percent of the par amount of the bonds, which would approximate $730,000. Now that was split amongst the underwriting firms and was used in part to pay selling commission to those that sold the bonds, and also to pay expenses.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. In terms of those who sold the bonds, could you explain whether those bonds were taken into the companies at their own account as they were then sold out?

Mr. YOUNG. As I recall, when the bonds were offered all the firms that were selling the bonds would have been taking orders from customers. Ideally, once we agreed to underwrite the issue, all the bonds would be committed for.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. What happened in terms of interest rates in the interim between the time that the bonds were issued and the time they were all sold out?

Mr. YOUNG. Well, I had occasion just to look back and verify my recollection about just the state of the bond market at that particular time. During the 2 weeks or so before the actual offering of the bonds, interest rates went up substantially. I know it was my recollection that that was a tough market to sell bonds when interest rates were going up.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. So as a result of interest rates going up, you got caught offering bonds that had been pegged at a lower interest rate and you three had taken these bonds in for your own accounts to sell them out?

Mr. YOUNG. Essentially what we try to do is price the bonds, or offer the bonds at the most favorable rate for the client, which we did. And we ultimately were successful in delivering an interest rate that was actually slightly below what we put in our proposal.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Let me read you from Mr. Drake's testimony which Mr. Chertoff has previously alluded to at his deposition at pages 178 to 179:

Question: Do you have any idea whether it was generally profitable for the firm?

Answer: I can tell you Mr. Lasater was on my rear end constantly to sell bonds because interest rates were going up. We had purchased them at a level, and we had to underwrite. We owned the bonds at that level, and we had a huge inventory, and every day that interest rates went up we lost money. So from that perspective, it was not a very profitable deal.

Do you agree with that characterization?

Mr. YOUNG. I heard that they had a problem in getting rid of, or selling the bonds that they had taken down, or taken liability for. Our particular situation was that we had a very successful sale. And I think each firm and their ultimate results depend upon how they were able to deal with their own bonds.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Now the issue of Mr. Lasater's use of cocaine has come up here. First of all, how many employees were there at Lasater & Company? Do you know, Mr. Young?

Mr. YOUNG. I don't really know.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Approximately 50?

Mr. YOUNG. 10 to 100, including support personnel. I don't know.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. The bid was put in by your company, Raney, E.F. Hutton, a major national company, as well, and Mr. Lasater.

Now the question that has been posed is whether cocaine use by one individual who was not under investigation for distribution or narcotics trafficking as in Mr. Chertoff's terms, would somehow disqualify the whole shebang of the three companies—and I stress the word "companies"—that put forward a proposal. Would you have felt that was appropriate, Mr. Young?

Mr. YOUNG. I certainly would be concerned about cocaine use by somebody I was doing business with.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. In terms of the cocaine use in the United States, and I certainly am not justifying this, but the figures are in the tens of millions, are they not, of individuals who use cocaine? I am not talking about cocaine dealers, now. Was that fair to say, Mr. Goodwin?

Mr. GOODWIN. Very prevalent, yes, sir.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. So the matter of Roger Clinton and his drug problem was obviously one of considerable pain to his brother, Governor Clinton. Is that fair to say, Mr. Goodwin?

Mr. GOODWIN. Yes, sir.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. And if I am not mistaken, although this has absolutely nothing to do with the subject matter of our mandate as a Committee, but since it has been interjected here into these hearings, it is my understanding that the Governor was aware that a "Sting Operation" was directed toward Roger Clinton in which "he," Roger Clinton, was prosecuted for violation of the laws regarding controlled substances. Is that correct, Mr. Goodwin?

Mr. GOODWIN. I don't believe it is, sir. I don't think the Governor was aware of the "Sting Operation" until shortly, 2 or 3 days before we arrested Roger Clinton.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. But the fact is, that prior to his brother's arrest, he was made aware of it. He reluctantly, I suppose, took in this information. I am sure he was saddened by it, and said, "go ahead, do what you have to do"?

Mr. GOODWIN. That is correct.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Thank you.

Senator MACK. Mr. Chairman, I yield my time to Mr. Chertoff.

The CHAIRMAN. Senator Bennett.

Senator BENNETT. I have no questions at this time.

The CHAIRMAN. Mr. Chertoff.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Mr. Myers, you were hired by Mr. Mitchum to do an independent analysis; right?

Mr. MYERS. That's correct.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Mr. Mitchum, you hired Mr. Myers to do it before the final meeting at which the final presentations were made on May 10th; right?

Mr. MITCHUM. Correct.

Mr. CHERTOFF. There was a meeting on May 10th when all the finalists were supposed to make their final presentations; right?

Mr. MITCHUM. Correct.

Mr. CHERTOFF. But you had in your own mind an idea of who you thought should be selected; right?

Mr. MITCHUM. After we got the proposals, I started——

Mr. CHERTOFF. And that was the Lasater group; right?

Mr. MITCHUM. Yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. So you brought Mr. Myers in.

Mr. Myers, isn't it a fact that what Mr. Mitchum told you to do was to run some—well, let me ask you this question. He didn't really say to you, just do a blind analysis, look at these proposals and tell me which is the best? What he really said to you was to run some numbers to see whether the bid that they had selected was, in fact, the best of the four bids; right?

Mr. MYERS. I don't recollect exactly what he said to me.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Do you recollect what you testified to on February 20th of this year?

Mr. MYERS. And that's?

Mr. CHERTOFF. I will give you the page number. It is page 14 of your deposition. This goes right to the heart of the question about whether this is, as Mr. Ben-Veniste sought to establish, a real, independent doublecheck by someone just to kind of call it as he sees it, or whether this is something that is a done-deal. The question at line 22 of page 13 is as follows:

Question: And I realize this was awhile ago, but I wondered if you could explain to me, when he [Mr. Mitchum] called you up to ask you to do the work, how he described what task he wanted you to perform and what he asked you, what you were capable of doing?

And this, Mr. Myers, is your sworn answer:

Answer: He asked me whether I could look at the three or four different proposals that had been presented to the State Police Board, and whether I could run some numbers to see whether or not the bid that they had selected was in fact the best of the four bids. And that was a present-value calculation, and my memory says that's what I did.

Would you agree that that was your testimony under oath?

Mr. MYERS. That is what I said in the deposition, yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. What that means is, not that you came in doing kind of a blind taste test, but that you came in being told that there was already a decision and an outcome had been reached, and now they wanted to find out whether the bid they had selected was actually the best bid. Right?

Mr. MYERS. That's correct.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Now—by the way, had you ever done this kind of analysis of underwriting bids before?

Mr. MYERS. No.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Have you ever done one since?

Mr. MYERS. No.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Do you wonder why Mr. Mitchum then hired you to do something that you had no experience in doing, and you've never done since?

Mr. MYERS. He asked me to look at those, give my opinion on them, and I did.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Mr. Young, you had a meeting in a hotel room with Mr. Mitchum and Mr. Myers before the general meeting on May 10th when the final proposals were supposed to be due; right?

Mr. YOUNG. That's correct.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Who was in that meeting? You are in a hotel room, where? Where is it relative to the regular Commission meeting place?

Mr. YOUNG. It's my recollection it was in a hotel room in downtown Little Rock.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Who set up that meeting?

Mr. YOUNG. It was my recollection that Mr. Mitchum did.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Mr. Mitchum gave you a call?

Mr. YOUNG. At some point in time we had some communication that set up the meeting.

Mr. CHERTOFF. And you knew that later that day you were going to be making your, what you imagined, or you assumed would be your final proposal, the final round of the competition with the other bidders; right?

Mr. YOUNG. It wasn't on the day of the presentation. As I recall, it was in the evening sometime.

Mr. CHERTOFF. So it was the day before?

Mr. YOUNG. Well, my recollection is I was somewhere else the day before, so I don't think it was the day before.

Mr. CHERTOFF. A couple of days before?

Mr. YOUNG. Relatively close, I think.

Mr. CHERTOFF. The important thing is this, though. It was before the final round of the competition; right?

Mr. YOUNG. That's correct. That's correct.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Mr. Mitchum said he wanted to meet with you and Mr. Myers in a hotel room; right?

Mr. YOUNG. I may not have met Mr. Myers by that time. I'm not sure he told me exactly who I was going to be visiting with.

Mr. CHERTOFF. All right. But he told you to come to a hotel room, or meeting him in a hotel room; right?

Mr. YOUNG. Right.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Who was there when you met him? Mr. Mitchum was there?

Mr. YOUNG. And Mr. Myers.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Any other bidders there?

Mr. YOUNG. Not that I—no, there weren't.

Mr. CHERTOFF. What did they tell you?

Mr. YOUNG. They told me that they had done an analysis that established that our group had the best bid for the State Police transaction.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Did they ask you to look over your analysis?

Mr. YOUNG. I did, briefly. I didn't have a chance to study it.

Mr. CHERTOFF. And I'll bet you that you agreed that your proposal was the best of all the proposals; right?

Mr. YOUNG. I knew that before I went to the meeting.

Mr. CHERTOFF. So that wasn't a hard decision for you.

Mr. YOUNG. No.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Is it common for you in a situation where you have, you know, a competition is ongoing, before the final round when the competitors are making their final arguments, to get called in by the person who is judging the competition to be told you have won?

Mr. YOUNG. Well, I don't think they said that we'd—he said we'd won. He just said, or they both said they thought we had the best proposal.

Mr. CHERTOFF. This was in a private meeting in a hotel at least a day before the final session when everybody else came to the meeting to make a presentation figuring that the deal was still wide open; right?

Mr. YOUNG. Well, it was before the meeting, and as far as I knew the deal was still wide open. We were just talking about one vote of seven potential votes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Didn't you know that Mr. Mitchum was the person who had been—

The CHAIRMAN. Are we talking about one vote?

Mr. YOUNG. Mr. Mitchum only had one vote of all the Commissioners.

The CHAIRMAN. You mean you knew you had the other votes?

Mr. YOUNG. No. Mr. Chertoff asked me if I knew that that was conclusive about whether or not we were going to win the transaction, and I said, no.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You knew you had his vote.

Mr. YOUNG. I assumed we had his vote.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Did you know he was the one who was specifically designated as the person on the Commission with the financial expertise to kind of be the lead point person to do the analysis?

Mr. YOUNG. I am not sure I knew that he had had any formal designation, but I certainly knew he was a CPA and had that background.

Mr. CHERTOFF. So he had a lot of influence with the Commission.

Mr. Mitchum, weren't you in fact the guy who was selected by the Commissioners to kind of take the lead on doing this analysis?

Mr. MITCHUM. Not formally.

Mr. CHERTOFF. But informally; right?

Mr. MITCHUM. Yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Your vote carried a lot of weight; right?

Mr. MITCHUM. Probably.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Mr. Goodwin, did you do some scouting around during this period before the final presentation on May 10th to kind of find out what the head count was among the Commissioners, so you could report that to the Governor's office?

Mr. GOODWIN. I probably did, but I think I missed it.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Well, putting aside whether your head count was accurate—and I am sure there are people on this Committee who have the experience of knowing how difficult head counts can be—my question to you is: Who asked you to do that?

Mr. GOODWIN. I don't believe anyone asked me. I saw this memo just a few minutes ago—

Mr. CHERTOFF. We will put the memo up. It is a memo of May 1, 1985, from Mike Gaines to Governor Clinton and Betsey Wright. This was in the last 10 days before that final presentation where the decision was supposed to be made. Do you have that?

Mr. GOODWIN. It's the memo from Mike Gaines?

Mr. CHERTOFF. Right. Mike Gaines was the liaison between the Governor's office and law enforcement?

Mr. GOODWIN. Mike was the liaison between the Governor's office and law enforcement.

Mr. CHERTOFF. He was the guy you dealt with?

Mr. GOODWIN. Pardon?

Mr. CHERTOFF. You dealt with him on a regular basis?

Mr. GOODWIN. Yes. Yes, I did.

Mr. CHERTOFF. It says here: "The State Police Commission is meeting Friday to review proposals for financing the communications system. The following are Tommy Goodwin's observation of where things stand." Then there is a list, and it says next to Johnny Mitchum, "solidly behind Lasater." Now do you remember telling Mr. Gaines about this?

Mr. GOODWIN. No, I don't remember it but, you know, there's no doubt that I did.

Mr. CHERTOFF. And the reason you did is because you knew Mr. Gaines was interested; right?

Mr. GOODWIN. I'm not sure that it was just in general conversation. I was never asked to submit this.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Did you know that he wrote it up, that he sent it to the Governor, that Betsey Wright wrote a note at the bottom saying, "Gov, we have real problems here since "street talk" is that Lasater put in unreasonably low bid knowing he can raise it once he gets it." Did you know that was on the bottom of this memo?

Mr. GOODWIN. No, I'd never seen this memo before.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Then Betsey Wright goes on to say, "I hope Arkansas State Police has expert review everything." Mr. Myers, do you suppose you're the expert that was retained to do the review that Betsey Wright thought was important to make sure that this thing looked like it was proceeding properly?

Mr. MYERS. I don't know.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Do you know of any other experts who were hired to review this before the final decision?

Mr. MYERS. Not that I'm aware of.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You were told what Mr. Mitchum's view was before you did the review, and you were told to see whether, in fact, the decision had picked the best bid, as we've established; right?

Mr. GOODWIN. Yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Then it says, in Governor Clinton's own handwriting at the top, "Lasater should be 'told' bid must be priced." Mr. Goodwin, did you ever get any feedback from Mr. Gaines or Ms. Wright about the Governor's instructions that Lasater should be informed that the bid must be a real price?

Mr. GOODWIN. No, I don't recall anything like that.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Mr. Young, you know from your experience that there are sometimes bidders who think that they can put in a low-ball bid and later change it after they have the contract?

Mr. YOUNG. I've seen that occur.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Did you hear any street talk to that effect?

Mr. YOUNG. I think that at some point in time I might have heard a suggestion that—well, of course I heard somebody suggest, a fellow, with another bidder, suggest that they didn't think our interest rates were on the market.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Well, for interest rates, yes. So someone suggested your interest rates that you were figuring were not really accurate or real interest rates?

Mr. YOUNG. That's what I understood.

Mr. CHERTOFF. And that was out there? That was the street talk that you were aware of?

Mr. YOUNG. Well, I heard one person say that. I don't know what the street talk was.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Now, I want to go back to something else. As we established earlier during the first round of this, on May 10th when the final presentations were made where all the other bidders came in and they thought it was still an open issue, the decision as predicted by Mr. Goodwin to Mr. Gaines and as told to Mr. Myers by Mr. Mitchum surprise, surprise, turned out to be that the Raney/Hutton/Lasater offer was considered to be the best plan.

Mr. Myers, correct me if I'm wrong, isn't the fact that the reason they won was not because they had the lowest price, but because they had in their total concept or plan this notion of being able to kind of hold the money for awhile and invest it until they paid it out to the least investors?

Mr. MYERS. That's my recollection.

Mr. CHERTOFF. All right. That was the critical thing.

Isn't it a fact, Mr. Mitchum, that after the selection was made, some of the firms that were at the meeting requested permission to revise their proposals because they thought there had been a misunderstanding of the law? Right?

Mr. MITCHUM. That is correct.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Then we have a May 16th letter which says that, in fact, the Raney/Hutton/Lasater people did not misunderstand the law. And that was written by the law firm that was paid by the Raney/Hutton/Lasater people. Correct, Mr. Young?

Mr. YOUNG. They were paid by us, but they also drew up the law, as well, so they should understand the law.

Mr. CHERTOFF. They were paid by you to draw up the law; right?

Mr. YOUNG. They were paid for services in connection with drawing up the law; that's correct.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Which, in plain English, means they were paid to draw up the law; yes or no?

Mr. YOUNG. Correct.

Mr. CHERTOFF. So in sum, with the way this looks, this is like having a football game. You have the referee meeting with one team before the game, and the referee who makes the call that decides the game gets paid by one team, and it does not look like it is a level playing field, does it?

Mr. YOUNG. Well, I do not think that adequately states what the circumstances were. This was all done in public, and everybody knew what the legislation was.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Was your meeting in a hotel—

The CHAIRMAN. Let me tell you something, it may have been done in public, and I believe Ms. Wright that she didn't know that the Mitchell law firm was working to prepare this legislation on behalf of yourself and your group. She says, "I had no knowledge of this. None."

Now what you have is a situation where the attorney retained by yourself and the Lasater group, and I don't know if the E.F. Hutton group was part of it, was the same attorney who drew up the legislation.

Then when there was a question as it related to the propriety of someone else's bid, or them raising a question as to whether you could bid in a 6-month period as opposed to the 30 days, that is the same law firm that issues this opinion in which they, right on the top of it, say: You have asked our opinion on questions of interpretation, and then they make the interpretation.

Now if you do not see an absolute, incredible conflict there, it just jumps right out. It is obvious on its face. Here is your lawyer that you retained saying that your interpretation was OK, and that somebody else's that they shouldn't really in essence be given the opportunity to complain about that but that the law permitted them to do that. What did you think they were going to say?

Mr. YOUNG. Well, as I tried to say earlier, this particular opinion in my view was not the linchpin of the decision of who was going to get the contract.

The CHAIRMAN. Oh, I agree with you. This was used as a cover. I think the linchpin was made well before. I mean, I think you were out there rounding up votes. We have memos in the file as to who was voting. And the only people they talked about was Lasater, whether they were going to vote for Lasater or not vote for Lasater. They didn't say that they were going to vote for anybody else. This whole thing was: Will they vote for Lasater? Won't they vote for Lasater?

Give me the memo that has all that scribbling on it. "Johnny Mitchum—solidly behind Lasater." Is that true, Mr. Mitchum?

Mr. MITCHUM. Ultimately.

The CHAIRMAN. Yes. Well, this memo was written before "ultimately." This was a memo on the Governor's office on May 1st.

Mr. MITCHUM. I didn't write the memo, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. Yes, but somebody had to. Let me see. Oh, it is written by, who is this, Mike Gaines?

Mr. CHERTOFF. Mike Gaines.

The CHAIRMAN. Who is this fellow Gaines?

Mr. MITCHUM. He was the liaison from the Governor's office.

The CHAIRMAN. Liaison from the Governor's office. Do you think he made this judgment? Did he talk to you?

Mr. MITCHUM. He didn't talk to me.

The CHAIRMAN. He never talked to you?

Mr. MITCHUM. At committee meetings.

The CHAIRMAN. On or before May 1st? In other words, when he wrote this, "Johnny Mitchum—solidly behind Lasater," do you think he made that up?

Mr. MITCHUM. I don't know.

The CHAIRMAN. Do you remember talking to him?

Mr. MITCHUM. He was at committee meetings. I talked to everyone at the committee meetings.

The CHAIRMAN. Did you tell him you were behind this?

Mr. MITCHUM. He may have formed that opinion.

The CHAIRMAN. Did you tell him that you thought that the Lasater proposal was the one you were going to vote for? I mean, this is a memo to the Governor by this fellow Gaines.

Mr. MITCHUM. At some point I may have.

The CHAIRMAN. Obviously, you told him on or before May 1st. He has this written down here. You don't think he would lie to the Governor, do you? Who is this other guy?

Mr. CHERTOFF. Thompson.

Mr. MITCHUM. Tennyson.

The CHAIRMAN. Did you know Tennyson?

Mr. MITCHUM. Yes.

The CHAIRMAN. Is he a member of the committee?

Mr. MITCHUM. Yes.

The CHAIRMAN. Well, same memo, "Tennyson—Lasater."

Who is this fellow, Mashburn? Do you know Mashburn?

Mr. MITCHUM. Yes.

The CHAIRMAN. Was he on the committee?

Mr. MITCHUM. Yes, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. The memo says, "Mashburn—probably Lasater." Probably. Then there's this fellow, Gene Raff, do you know him?

Mr. MITCHUM. Yes, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. "Gene Raff—probably Lasater." The last one is "Rockefeller" and he is the only one with a question mark.

Senator Sarbanes.

Senator SARBANES. Was the controversy over the interpretation of the law a public controversy in Arkansas at the time?

Mr. YOUNG. Having to do with this letter?

Senator SARBANES. Yes, and generally how this law was to be interpreted, and the objections that one of the bidding parties made.

Mr. YOUNG. Well, I think it was reported in the newspaper, but frankly it is my recollection there was really little controversy whatsoever. This was a position or a question raised by one of eight bidders. Nobody else had this view.

Senator SARBANES. But that question was known publicly?

Mr. YOUNG. Correct.

Senator SARBANES. I yield to Mr. Cole.

Mr. COLE. Just to follow up on that, Mr. Young, the legislation that was enacted that authorized this bond issuance, that was passed by the State Legislature, as I understand it?

Mr. YOUNG. Correct.

Mr. COLE. So irrespective of what law firm did or didn't play what role in the drafting, the final legislation was a public law that was passed by the Arkansas State Legislature?

Mr. YOUNG. That is correct.

Mr. COLE. Did the other groups, the other eight underwriting teams that submitted proposals, did they have that legislation available to them, as well?

Mr. YOUNG. They certainly did.

Mr. COLE. What they had to base their bids on was the same law that your group had?

Mr. YOUNG. That is absolutely correct.

Mr. COLE. Did your group have any special advantage or special information as a consequence of having previously retained the Mitchell firm in interpreting the law?

Mr. YOUNG. We did not.

Mr. COLE. And if I understand what you are saying correctly, you are telling us that of the eight underwriting groups that submitted bids for the financing of this Police Radio System, seven of the eight interpreted the legislation in the same way?

Mr. YOUNG. That is my recollection.

Mr. COLE. The one firm that interpreted it in a different way is the first that complained and that later occasioned the letter that Senator Sarbanes referred to?

Mr. YOUNG. That is correct. It was an out-of-state firm, or a group of out-of-state firms, and frankly I think they just simply did not understand the legal issues that we were dealing with.

Mr. COLE. Is it unusual in these situations if a firm doesn't get the bid that they may—or it doesn't get the selection, I should say, that they may look for reasons to raise objections or try to reopen the selection process?

Mr. YOUNG. It is not unusual.

Mr. COLE. So basically you had a disappointed group here—

Mr. YOUNG. Right. Right.

Mr. COLE. —looking for a reason—

Mr. YOUNG. Right. Absolutely correct.

Mr. COLE. —to second-guess.

Turning to you, Mr. Mitchum, I think, Mr. Chertoff has placed a very heavy responsibility on your shoulders because he has suggested that all of the other members of the Commission relied primarily or largely on you in this selection process. So I think we should spend a little time looking more carefully than has been done so far as what you actually did and why you did it. Just for background information, what is your professional training, if any?

Mr. MITCHUM. CPA.

Mr. COLE. You are a Certified Public Accountant?

Mr. MITCHUM. Correct.

Mr. COLE. Did you undertake any financial analysis on your own of the various proposals that were submitted?

Mr. MITCHUM. Correct.

Mr. COLE. So on your own time as a CPA you looked at these proposals and tried to determine which one was the best proposals for the State?

Mr. MITCHUM. That's correct.

Mr. COLE. Did anyone direct you to do that?

Mr. MITCHUM. No.

Mr. COLE. Is this something you did kind of outside of normal business hours, outside of normal Commission meetings?

Mr. MITCHUM. I felt it was my fiduciary duty as a public servant.

Mr. COLE. Did anyone from the Governor's office tell you that you should do any kind of analysis, or do any kind of comparison that would favor Lasater & Company or their group?

Mr. MITCHUM. Absolutely not.

Mr. COLE. So this was something that you undertook on your own in an effort to evaluate the proposals.

Mr. MITCHUM. That's correct.

Mr. COLE. Leaving aside the Governor's office, when you began this process did you have any pre-conceived bias or favoritism toward any of the bidders in the process?

Mr. MITCHUM. No, I did not.

Mr. COLE. Did you have an open mind?

Mr. MITCHUM. Yes, sir.

Mr. COLE. What exactly did you do when you compared the various bids that had been submitted?

Mr. MITCHUM. I think the first thing I looked at was the concept. Then I ran the numbers of the various proposals that more or less corroborated that.

Mr. COLE. I take it that these proposals were fairly complex, at least as to the financial details of what each bidder was proposing?

Mr. MITCHUM. Fairly complex.

Mr. COLE. Did your expertise and training as a CPA help you in evaluating them and comparing, I would say, apples to apples rather than apples to oranges? Is that what you tried to do?

Mr. MITCHUM. It helped some, but at that time nor now am I an expert in bond financing.

Mr. COLE. So I take it that, even though you performed your own analysis, you wanted to backstop that with someone else's view, and that is why you turned to Mr. Myers and retained him?

Mr. MITCHUM. That is correct.

Mr. COLE. Again, is that something that someone directed you to do? Or did you do that at your own initiative?

Mr. MITCHUM. I asked my lawyer if he knew of someone, an enrolled actuary, who could run the numbers, and he recommended Mr. Myers.

Mr. COLE. If I understand what happened here, you would have wanted an actuary because what we were dealing with would be a series of financial events that would occur over a period of many years as these bonds were issued and then repaid, and what you wanted to do was bring them all back to what I think professionals call "present value" and compare the present value of each bid?

Mr. MITCHUM. That is correct.

Mr. COLE. You turned to Mr. Myers for that?

Mr. MITCHUM. That is correct.

Mr. COLE. Did you have any reason to believe that Mr. Myers would favor one firm over another?

Mr. MITCHUM. Absolutely not. I had never met Mr. Myers before this.

Mr. COLE. I guess there's some confusion or difference of recollection, which I think is not surprising considering the fact that we are dealing with events of 11 or more years ago, that although you do remember that you had made up your mind, or in your preliminary analysis you had come to the conclusion that the Raney/Hutton/Lasater group had the best bid, and you had reached that preliminary view at the time you retained Mr. Myers?

Mr. MITCHUM. Say that again, sir?

Mr. COLE. Based on the preliminary analysis that you performed before you retained Mr. Myers, had you come to a preliminary view that the Raney/Hutton/Lasater group seemed to have the best proposal?

Mr. MITCHUM. That is true.

Mr. COLE. Now as I understand your testimony, while you do not recall telling Mr. Myers you had come to that conclusion, you do not dispute the fact that that was the view you had when you retained him?

Mr. MITCHUM. We have a slightly different memory on that. I don't recall telling Mr. Myers how I had rank-ordered the——

Mr. COLE. The various bids. I guess, Mr. Myers, your recollection is that Mr. Mitchum did indicate that he had preliminarily concluded that the Raney/Hutton/Lasater bid was the most favorable?

Mr. MYERS. I believe so.

Mr. COLE. But what I think is the important question here, and I guess this goes more to you, Mr. Myers, is: Did Mr. Mitchum direct you to come to any particular conclusion in your analysis?

Mr. MYERS. No.

Mr. COLE. So even though he may have mentioned that as he had run the numbers it looked like this bid was the best deal for the people, he didn't tell you that you should come out in the same place?

Mr. MYERS. No, he did not.

Mr. COLE. In fact, although to me the difference seems to be negligible, when you did your present-value analysis you didn't put the Raney/Hutton/Lasater group as first? Is that correct?

Mr. MYERS. Yes, that's correct.

Mr. COLE. The difference, I think, was $28,000? Am I recalling correctly?

Mr. MYERS. It looks like that. It's not clear here, but it looks like $28,000; $101,000, $73,000, $28,000 difference.

Mr. COLE. And that difference proportionate to the entire transaction that we are talking about, how material was that?

Mr. MYERS. $28,000 was de minimis. It had no actual bearing upon the outcome.

Mr. COLE. So essentially from a mathematical perspective, at least, these bids were practically identical? Am I understanding you correctly?

Mr. MYERS. The top two bids; yes, to the best of my recollection.

Mr. COLE. Just to close this out, Mr. Young, when you had an opportunity to review the analysis that Mr. Myers had done, did you feel that it had failed to take into account a particular aspect of the bid that your group had submitted?

Mr. YOUNG. Actually, I did not feel like it gave us the advantage that I thought that we had. I had reviewed all the proposals myself and had looked at this particular proposal, and I don't think I really felt like it was as close as he presented. We had in our structure some funds that were invested that would generate a benefit that frankly I thought were not adequately weighed in his analysis.

Mr. COLE. Oh, so you had actually done your own comparison of the eight bids?

Mr. YOUNG. Right.

Mr. COLE. Well, I know Mr. Chertoff dismissed what your view would have been because he seemed to think that it was a foregone conclusion that you would have felt that your bid was the best, but let me ask you this. If you had seen something in one of those other bids, a concept, a financing method that you didn't have in your bid that made someone else's bid better, I take it that is something you would have sat up and taken notice of?

Mr. YOUNG. Right. I had them all ranked, as well. I had us as number one, and I had the other bid as number four, of the four that made presentations.

Mr. COLE. So your analysis then confirmed Mr. Myers' analysis?

Mr. YOUNG. Well, to the extent that his reflected that any other bid was better than ours, it wasn't consistent. Mine would have shown a much greater advantage. But at any rate, to the extent that his analysis supported ours as the best bid, I certainly agree with it. And I think he did some other calculations with the different interest assumptions that actually showed that our numbers, present-value wise, were even better than theirs. It really just depended on what assumptions were made in that analysis.

Mr. COLE. Mr. Mitchum, under these circumstances where you have two bids that from a financial perspective are identical or practically identical, would it have been within the discretion of the Commission to choose either bid that they thought was best?

Mr. MITCHUM. Yes.

Mr. COLE. I take it that there would have been nothing wrong with the Commissioners considering the involvement of two local firms in one of the bids?

Mr. MITCHUM. That's correct. In fact, we liked the idea of having more than one firm involved because of the diversity.

Mr. COLE. So the issue that has been raised about whether there was a $28,000 difference between these two bids is probably not something that would have affected the final selection process?

Mr. MITCHUM. That is correct.

Mr. COLE. What was the final vote on this among the Commissioners?

Mr. MITCHUM. I do not recall. It was a split vote. I think it was 4 to 3.

Mr. COLE. Who voted for the proposal, if you can recall? Obviously, I think, you said that you did.

Mr. MITCHUM. Correct. Commissioner Wyn Rockefeller.

Mr. COLE. Mr. Rockefeller is the son of the——

Mr. MITCHUM. The former Governor.

Mr. COLE. Former Governor who was a member of the Rockefeller family?

Mr. MITCHUM. That's correct.

Mr. COLE. Rockefeller Center in New York, et cetera?

Mr. MITCHUM. That's correct.

Mr. COLE. So one would assume he had some financial acumen?

Mr. MITCHUM. That's correct. He's also a Republican—very much a Republican.

Mr. COLE. And an appointee of Governor White, the Republican Governor?

Mr. MITCHUM. That's correct.

Mr. COLE. So he voted for the proposal?

Mr. MITCHUM. Yes.

Mr. COLE. Who were the other two who voted in favor?

Mr. MITCHUM. I don't recall right now.

Mr. COLE. What about the Commissioners who voted against the Raney/Hutton/Lasater proposal?

Mr. MITCHUM. I believe those were Commissioner Raff and, let's see—I'm sorry. I don't recall.

Mr. COLE. Was it Commissioner Mashburn? Did he vote against?

Mr. MITCHUM. It was Commissioner Mashburn. Thank you.

Mr. COLE. Who had appointed those two Commissioners?

Mr. MITCHUM. Those were Clinton appointees—no, let's see. I don't know, I don't recall.

Mr. COLE. You think it was maybe the Clinton appointees who voted against the proposal, and the Governor White—

Mr. MITCHUM. Yes, I have heard someone say that. I have never stopped to think about it, but I believe the Republican appointees all voted for the Raney/Hutton/Lasater proposal, and all of the Democratic appointees did not.

Mr. COLE. That would suggest there was not a unified front among the Clinton group. On that point, Mr. Young, did you have contacts with some staff members of the Clinton Governor's office before you actually submitted your final proposal?

Mr. MITCHUM. Early on in the process I think I met with Sam Bratton back in 1984. You're talking about—the question was, did I meet with anybody on the Governor's staff?

Mr. COLE. Yes, when the legislation was first being contemplated and the idea of bond financing?

Mr. MITCHUM. Right. Right. I met with Sam Bratton, I think, in connection with work at the Legislature when the legislation was going through the State Legislature, there were some meetings, at least one meeting, where there was a Governor's staff representative there.

Mr. COLE. Do you recall a gentleman named Bobby Roberts?

Mr. MITCHUM. Bobby Roberts was a fellow that worked for the Governor up until I think the end of 1984, and he actually was the person that first mentioned this particular transaction to me.

Mr. COLE. So your first knowledge of this transaction was from Mr. Roberts?

Mr. MITCHUM. Right. As I understood his role, he was involved with coordinating Criminal Justice matters for the Governor's office, a matter that was taken up by I think maybe Mr. Gaines.

Mr. COLE. What about a gentleman named David Mosley?

Mr. YOUNG. David Mosley was the State Police Fiscal Officer, the finance person at the—

Mr. COLE. Did you talk with Mr. Mosley about this financing at some point?

Mr. YOUNG. Yes, I did. As I recall, when I became aware of it by conversation with Bobby Roberts, I met with Mr. Mosley shortly thereafter.

Mr. COLE. Last question, if I could, Mr. Chairman?

The CHAIRMAN. Certainly.

Mr. COLE. In any of your discussions with either Mr. Bratton, Mr. Mosley, or Mr. Roberts, all of whom were on Governor Clinton's staff, did any of them indicate to you that this work should go to the Lasater group?

Mr. YOUNG. No, they did not.

Mr. COLE. They did not express any preference for one underwriter or another?

Mr. YOUNG. No.

Mr. COLE. Thank you.

The CHAIRMAN. Senator Bennett.

OPENING COMMENTS OF SENATOR ROBERT F. BENNETT

Senator BENNETT. Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

I find this last exchange very interesting because there's a piece of information I hadn't had before that came out; and, you know, I have to comment on it.

Mr. Mitchum, you tell us it's a very clear call. You make the call entirely on the basis of its merits, but to double check, you give it to Mr. Myers. Mr. Myers, you examine it and say it's a very clear call. Mr. Young, you tell us you're number one and everybody else is number four, and the final vote is four to three?

There's a sudden disconnect here. If this is so clear and so obvious, why isn't the final vote unanimous? Why isn't it seven zip? The final vote is four to three.

Obviously, from the memo that Mr. Chertoff talked about, the Governor was concerned about the outcome and about the vote. Why else does the Governor have a legislative liaison or a liaison man send him a memo telling him where things are going?

Now the guy did not count very well because according to his memo, "Simpson—appears to have switched from another vendor to Lasater. Mitchum—solidly behind Lasater. Dennison—Lasater. Mashburn—probably Lasater. Raff—probably Lasater." Rockefeller is the only one he doesn't know about. And they don't vote that way. It's four to three. It's a very close issue.

The Governor's personal secretary says we have a real problem because the street talk is that Lasater's buying his way in here.

Mr. Chairman, I just find a disconnect in all of this that doesn't fit the picture. If indeed the vote had been seven to nothing, I'd say, yes, Mr. Young, you won it entirely on the basis of the merit. You convinced everybody. Mr. Mitchum, you saw that it was clearly that way from a completely unbiased fashion. Mr. Myers backed you up and the Commission all went along with you.

Then the case would be, was it that much better because Mr. Lasater was able to move some things around so you had some inside help in putting together a better proposal. But there are at least three out of these seven Commissioners that didn't think you had the better proposal and went some place else.

I'm just completely surprised to discover that, as a result of this last information. Can anybody help me understand why three Commissioners voted for somebody else, given what you've told us is the obvious superiority of your bid?

Mr. Young, I'd be happy to hear your comments.

Senator SARBANES. Before we get too far down that path, I understand from records we have that the vote was four to two. I mean, you can still make the general point, but I think we at least ought to get that particular fact——

Senator BENNETT. Obviously, I want the vote to be accurate, and I appreciate the Senator's making—let's have it accurate.

Senator SARBANES. I understand it was four to two.

The CHAIRMAN. Mr. Mitchum, were you the Chairman of this selection committee?

Mr. MITCHUM. No, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. What was your role?

Mr. MITCHUM. Just a member of the committee.

The CHAIRMAN. Just a member. Do you recall why the other two, or what the indications were? Did you have discussions about this? You didn't just all come in there and vote one after the other. You talked about this, didn't you?

Mr. MITCHUM. You mean previous to the vote?

The CHAIRMAN. Sure.

Mr. MITCHUM. Of course.

The CHAIRMAN. So, can you enlighten us? Can you give us some information as to how it was that the other two members voted against, and what happened to the seventh member?

Senator BENNETT. Well, four to two, there are only six names listed here, and I think four to two is better, someone's memory was wrong in four to three and that's fine. But I'm glad to have that clarified because in all of the exchange between the Counsel for the Minority and the group, it was always four to three. I'm glad to have Senator Sarbanes make it clear it's four to two.

The CHAIRMAN. Could you answer the question?

Mr. MITCHUM. Yes, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. The Senator brings up a very interesting point.

Mr. MITCHUM. Commissioner Raff, if I recall correctly, had an objection to the Raney/Hutton/Lasater group because of the national negative publicity that the E.F. Hutton firm had received in recent months.

The CHAIRMAN. Who was the other Commissioner, if you recall, who voted no?

Mr. MITCHUM. That would have been Commissioner Mashburn.

The CHAIRMAN. Do you recall what his feelings were?

Mr. MITCHUM. No, sir, I do not.

The CHAIRMAN. I don't know whether staff has interviewed the other Commissioners. I think they should make an effort to ascertain, whether by informal inquiry or by deposition, but I certainly think they should have ascertain what the——

But you don't recall speaking to Mashburn, or what if anything he said?

Mr. MITCHUM. No, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. Mr. Goodwin, do you?

Mr. GOODWIN. Yes, sir, I recall it.

The CHAIRMAN. Could you share that with us? I'd appreciate it.

Mr. GOODWIN. I think from the beginning, from the time we received the proposals, both Raff and Mashburn were against the proposal, as Mr. Mitchum said, because of the publicity that E.F. Hutton had gotten in the past. And they stayed with that throughout the entire period. The seventh vote was the vote of the Chairman, which was not necessary, since it had already passed.

The CHAIRMAN. Who was the Chairman, if you recall?

Mr. GOODWIN. It was Willie Simpson.

The CHAIRMAN. Do you have any idea how Mr. Simpson felt?

Mr. GOODWIN. No, nothing other than what I read on this.

The CHAIRMAN. On this memo?

Mr. GOODWIN. On this memo.

The CHAIRMAN. This is the first time you're aware of this memo.

Mr. GOODWIN. That apparently was my opinion.

The CHAIRMAN. Senator Bennett, if you have any more?

Senator BENNETT. I don't have the data to pursue it further, but I just was struck by the difference between the impression that was built in the first round that says this is all done entirely on the merits, and then an obvious concern on the part of the Governor to the point that a memo is submitted to the Governor and added to by the Governor's personal assistant, stressing the concern about Lasater to the point that the Governor himself says Lasater has to be told this thing must be kosher.

Then the fact that the Commissioners vote against Lasater says to me that the suggestion that everything was wonderful and entirely on the up and up and without any political influence or even concern is simply not an accurate summary of where things were here. I think we have a legitimate reason to be concerned.

I thank the Chair.

The CHAIRMAN. Mr. Chertoff.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Colonel Goodwin, the answer you just gave actually raises a question in my mind because I gather that there was discussion on the Commission about the integrity of the character of the various bidders. In particular, you mentioned Hutton, they were concerned because there was publicity about a problem with checks I think at Hutton; right?

Mr. GOODWIN. Yes, I believe that's right.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Was there discussion about Mr. Lasater's cocaine activities?

Mr. GOODWIN. I don't recall any discussion about Lasater. Gene Raff was a prosecuting attorney and he and Mr. Mashburn, James Mashburn, both, as I said before, from the beginning opposed Hutton, and I don't think they opposed any other part of the—they just did not want Hutton's name there because they had been prosecuted and I think found guilty of a fraud charge involving check kiting or some such thing.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Yes, but if I remember back in the days when I prosecuted, if there's one thing prosecutors hate more than financial fraud, it's drug activity. You know from your own experience in the State Police and certainly Mr. Raff had to know as a prosecutor, you don't get drug distribution if people don't buy the drugs; right? I mean, that's what drives the whole thing. And you've testified that it was kind of common knowledge that Lasater used drugs and, contrary to the suggestion made earlier, he wasn't just some guy working in the firm. He owned the firm.

So I guess my question is, since we now know, at least in the minds of two Commissioners, the turning point, the critical issue was whether there was a check problem an integrity issue at Hutton, you didn't bring up or no one brought up the question of well, yes, but the other guy in the package, you know, he's using cocaine, and we are wondering whether he's in fact going to get arrested. Wasn't that exactly the kind of issue that these two Commissioners would have wanted to know about?

Mr. GOODWIN. You know, I don't know. I know that if I had been a Commissioner in a Commission meeting like that, I may have not brought up Mr. Lasater's name, and I think the difference to me, at least, would be that Hutton was charged and convicted, and I still say that's what Mr. Raff was going on, and Mr. Mashburn was with him.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Yes, but you knew, you knew, and there was testimony in Federal Court, 6 miles down the road that Lasater was involved with this stuff.

What I am getting at is that there's not any, although you are asked, not to find out is the guy using drugs or distributing drugs; and he was, by the way, for the record, eventually convicted for distribution, conspiracy to distribute drugs; right?

Mr. GOODWIN. Yes, but not the way I know it. Very few people give it away. That was the distribution.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Yes, he gave it away to business associates and to women because it helped him with whatever he was doing; is that right?

Mr. GOODWIN. And employees, yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. He gave it to his employees, kind of like a drug bonus.

Mr. GOODWIN. That's right.

Mr. CHERTOFF. It's a felony and he got 30 months in jail, and it's called conspiracy to distribute narcotics; right?

Mr. GOODWIN. Yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. All right. You're asked by the Governor, find out if Lasater uses drugs because we don't want a guy who is using drugs, who is buying cocaine, let alone distributing it, who's buying cocaine to get a contract? You're asked is he going to get arrested, is he going to get caught using drugs?

Now we find out that there's two other Commissioners who were so concerned about integrity that they actually weren't going to vote against Hutton which is a nationally-known firm that does business all over the world because of this check thing, but nobody, despite this trial going on and all the knowledge about the drug use, nobody ever says in a meeting, let alone you, Colonel Goodwin, "I have to tell you guys, you know, Lasater has a reputation about drugs. At least let's check it out. Let's check out whether it's true that he uses drugs." None of that came, you didn't feel the need to bring that up?

Mr. GOODWIN. I think it probably was brought up but not in open meetings.

Mr. CHERTOFF. If it was brought—

Mr. GOODWIN. I think that Commissioner Simpson and I had a conversation about that.

Mr. CHERTOFF. What was the conversation?

Mr. GOODWIN. The conversation's real fuzzy. I can't remember except that we discussed it.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Now, we are getting somewhere because now we know that the Chairman of the Commission did have some kind of a conversation with you about Lasater's drug activities.

Mr. GOODWIN. If I am not mistaken, and I don't think I am, I believe in the open meeting, that he did discuss it.

Mr. CHERTOFF. He discussed Lasater's drug use in an open meeting at the State Police Commission?

Mr. GOODWIN. That's what I think I remember.

Mr. CHERTOFF. What was the discussion?

Mr. GOODWIN. I don't know. What else could you discuss, he's a cocaine user. That's what everybody says. He's never been caught. In everybody's mind, they know that he, that he's a user.

Mr. CHERTOFF. I have to tell you, you have just told us that one of the Commissioners was a prosecuting attorney and at an open meeting, the conversation was, "yes, he's a drug user but he's never been caught." These guys are absolutely adamantly against Hutton and they have, like the drug stuff just totally not an issue.

Colonel Goodwin, was there a doubt in your mind at that time that the reason there was a drug distribution problem in Arkansas, like in everyplace else in the country, was because people buy the drugs. If people buy drugs and if they are wealthy people and they can buy alot of drugs and they use money that they earned to buy drugs, they are promoting drug activity. Was there any doubt in your mind that that was the case in Arkansas in 1984 and 1985?

Mr. GOODWIN. You are talking about—concerning Lasater in particular?

Mr. CHERTOFF. I am saying concerning in general your understanding.

Mr. GOODWIN. Generally, yes, I'd say—

Mr. CHERTOFF. You understood that people who buy a lot of drugs are promoting drug activity; right?

Mr. GOODWIN. Sure.

Mr. CHERTOFF. In this discussion at the meeting about Lasater as a person who buys drugs and uses drugs but he hasn't been caught, you're telling us that the people who raised the issue about Hutton and the checks, nobody ever raised a peep about Lasater. Can you tell us why that is? Why that just was of no interest to anybody?

Mr. GOODWIN. No, I can't.

Mr. CHERTOFF. I can't either.

The CHAIRMAN. Senator Sarbanes.

Senator SARBANES. Mr. Mitchum, were these hearings open hearings of the Commission?

Mr. MITCHUM. Yes.

Senator SARBANES. Well, I'm looking at the minutes of the meeting of May 10th, it said, during the presentation of Raney/Hutton/Lasater, they were questioned concerning the Federal charges of fraud against the Hutton firm.

Mr. Steve Clayburne, a Senior Vice President and Manager of Hutton's Houston, Texas, Public Finance Division told the Commission that the practices which resulted in the charges occurred 3 years ago and were stopped immediately when discovered. Then he went on and said, you know, he stated the company's reputation had not been damaged by the publicity, told of two large bond issues in which they had recently been involved, and that the companies had more than enough money allotted for restitution payments in relationship to their capital base. So that was a matter of some discussion, I take it, at this meeting, is that right?

Mr. MITCHUM. Yes, sir.

Senator SARBANES. Commissioners Raff and Mashburn were the ones who were questioning this bidding group because of the Hutton presence. Is that correct?

Mr. MITCHUM. That's correct.

Senator SARBANES. And in the end, they were the two who voted against it?

Mr. MITCHUM. That's correct.

Senator SARBANES. Now were representatives of all of the firms present there at this meeting?

Mr. MITCHUM. I assume they were, yes, sir.

Senator SARBANES. Well, it says, after all proposals were presented, they were presented by the bidding groups, it says the Commission entered into a discussion of the proposals with representatives of all firms present.

Mr. MITCHUM. Yes, sir. I have not read these minutes in a few years.

Senator SARBANES. Yes. Were you there, Mr. Young?

Mr. YOUNG. Yes, I was.

Senator SARBANES. Is that the way it took place?

Mr. YOUNG. Yes. Everybody that made a presentation was at that meeting.

Mr. COLE. Mr. Portnoy.

Mr. PORTNOY. Mr. Young, do you have a copy of the legislation that authorized the sale of the bonds?

Mr. YOUNG. Do I have a copy?

Mr. PORTNOY. Did the Majority provide you with one? If not, we can.

Mr. YOUNG. Let's see. Yes, yes, I do.

Mr. PORTNOY. If you could look at the fifth page of the legislation and the first full paragraph, or the first paragraph beginning on that page, there's a sentence beginning "Payments to cover . . .?"

Mr. YOUNG. Yes, I see that.

Mr. PORTNOY. I take it, sir, that that's the phrase in this legislation that's been the subject of some discussion here today?

Mr. YOUNG. That's what I understand.

Mr. PORTNOY. I'll read it for our audience, the legislation states that: "Payments to cover the costs under the lease agreement shall be paid from the lease fund on a monthly basis." And you stated that the First Capital proposal misunderstood that language?

Mr. YOUNG. Yes, I think they did.

Mr. PORTNOY. Could you explain the manner in which they misunderstood the language of the act?

Mr. YOUNG. In their proposed structure, as I recall, the State Police would make monthly payments that didn't involve another step through which they would go through to ultimately get to the bond holders.

In our particular proposal, for example, the monthly payments would have gone into a bond fund, or a fund that would accumulate the monthly payments for payments to bond holders on a 6-month basis, every 6 months.

Mr. PORTNOY. Let me ask that question in reverse. Could you explain perhaps in a little more detail how it is that your proposal complied with this provision without making actual monthly payments to bond holders?

Mr. YOUNG. Well, the legislation simply didn't require any particular way that payments were made to bond holders. The legislation dealt with an issue that's important under Arkansas law and that simply is the flow of the funds, how do the funds get from where they are collected by the State to the designated purpose. It wasn't intended in a way to ultimately control the structure of the financing that was offered to bond holders.

Mr. PORTNOY. You testified just a moment ago that your proposal made payments semiannually, I believe?

Mr. YOUNG. That's right.

Mr. PORTNOY. Whereas, the First Capital proposal made payments monthly?

Mr. YOUNG. That is correct, and you're talking about payments to bond holders. Ours also required monthly payments to a fund that ultimately would go to bond holders.

Mr. PORTNOY. Now that fund to which your proposal required monthly payments was a fund controlled and owned by the State of Arkansas, was it not?

Mr. YOUNG. That is correct. I think that's the lease fund that's referred to in here.

Mr. PORTNOY. So the State of Arkansas retained control of the moneys for longer under your proposal?

Mr. YOUNG. That is essentially correct.

Mr. PORTNOY. And the State could invest those moneys?

Mr. YOUNG. That is correct.

Mr. PORTNOY. And the State could receive a higher interest rate on its investment than it was paying to bond holders?

Mr. YOUNG. It could.

Mr. PORTNOY. Is that a concept known as interest rate arbitrage or debt arbitrage? Have you heard those terms?

Mr. YOUNG. Arbitrage generally refers, at least in the bond sense, to the opportunity to invest moneys at a yield that's higher than what the cost is.

Mr. PORTNOY. So would it be fair to say that your proposal made use of essentially arbitrage to lower the State's borrowing costs?

Mr. YOUNG. That's essentially correct.

Mr. PORTNOY. The First Capital proposal failed to take advantage of that for a basic investment banking concept?

Mr. YOUNG. That was my view of their proposal.

Mr. PORTNOY. Was it common to structure a deal in this fashion?

Mr. YOUNG. In 1985, it certainly was.

Mr. PORTNOY. My understanding is that there was a provision in Federal tax law which permitted the State to invest funds that it received in the issuance of tax exempt securities and that those provisions later changed?

Mr. YOUNG. That's correct. Federal law changed in 1986 that required that if, for example, a municipality or a State borrowed it at an 8 percent rate and they couldn't turn around and invest at 10 and keep that additional 2 percentage points.

Mr. PORTNOY. So would it be fair to say that this practice was sufficiently common that the Federal laws governing it were changed shortly after this deal closed?

Mr. YOUNG. Well, of course, even in 1985, you couldn't—there weren't unlimited opportunities. You just couldn't go out and issue debt and put it in a bank and make a profit. But there were certain things that you could invest it in unrestricted yield, particularly at least the construction fund until it was spent, or the reserve fund that was established or, for example, as you mentioned the bond funds used to accumulate the payments.

Mr. PORTNOY. Was it also common practice at the time for bonds issued by State agencies to provide for semi-annual interest payments?

Mr. YOUNG. Yes. In my experience, most bonds do require, provide for semi-annual payments to bond holders. In the leasing business, it is not unusual if, for example, a borrower wants to finance, or a State borrower, municipal borrower wants to finance an item, they may do so in a lease transaction that might ultimately provide for monthly payments to the investor. But as I said earlier, that was not required in this particular legislation, and I think that is why the other bidder was confused about what this might involve.

Mr. PORTNOY. So there was nothing unusual about the payment schedule in your proposal?

Mr. YOUNG. Absolutely not.

Mr. PORTNOY. In fact, if anything, it was the First Capital proposal that was unusual?

Mr. YOUNG. In my recollection, it was the only one that required that particular structure.

Mr. PORTNOY. Thank you, sir.

Mr. MYERS, what's an Enrolled Actuary?

Mr. MYERS. An Enrolled Actuary is someone who has met the requirements imposed by ERISA. The Employment Retirement Income Security Act of 1974 imposes certain education and experience requirements so that you can be certified. You sign off on the actuarial statements that cover the funding for qualified retirement plans.

Mr. PORTNOY. Maybe you could explain in a little more detail, what an actuary does?

Mr. MYERS. The actuary calculates your insurance premiums, how much you're going to pay, based upon statistical analysis, mortality, he calculates the cost of your automobile insurance premiums, based upon what statistics indicate the ratio of accidents are in your given locale and sex and age, et cetera.

In the pension case, you calculate the contribution amounts that the employer needs to put into the plan to pay for the benefits that have been promised to his employees under the terms of the plan.

Mr. PORTNOY. Would it be a fair summation to say that actuaries do statistical analyses?

Mr. MYERS. Yes.

Mr. PORTNOY. Is that what you did in this instance, sir?
